25 YEARS AHEAD—AND WHAT?

(The following is reprinted from five years ago because it is VARIETY*'s belief that it is the most remarkable editorial ever written for an amusement trade paper. It was written by Sime Silverman, founder of* VARIETY*, on the occasion of this paper's 25th anniversnumber, Dec. 31, 1930).*

Within the life of VARIETY, 25 years, the show business of America has performed a complete somersault. So instead of talking about 25 years or of what has occurred since then, which everyone knows more or less, it may be better for the show business of today to look forward 25 years. That will be something which events have brought out the show business of 25 years ago failed to do. Then or at any time thereafter, up to now.

Of course, VARIETY is naturally appreciative that it has lived for 25 years, and it hopes it may for 25 more, and more. It hasn't much to say for itself. Hobbling along during those 25 years, it's still trying to go along in the best and only way it knows. That is to print the truth about the show business it represents, as it finds it. For no other reason than, as has been said before, a trade paper can't fool its trade, which knows more about that trade than any trade paper possibly could. Therefore, to print the truth as it is found, located or gathered, appears to be the best, if not obvious to all, policy. And it's much easier without 'politics.'

In the 25 years to come, contemporary showmen must avoid the stage errors of the 25 years behind. Those errors have been plentiful. They have been the cause of the decline of every branch in the show business excepting pictures, and pictures, on top now, should be the most assiduous in avoiding grave mistakes of the future.

Perhaps vaudeville and the legit will come back. The legit will have a future when the picture business assumes charge of it. Otherwise the legit will linger on the Broadways of say five big American cities, and then but feebly, unless legit's greatest detriment, its ruination in fact, is eliminated. That will likely happen if pictures takes over the legit. Vaudeville will have its chance when there are more managerial believers in vaudeville. The picture and vaudeville hook-up in chains is all wrong for vaudeville. The weight lies with pictures, because the controllers of the chains are firstly picture men, who don't know vaudeville and have no faith in it. Burlesque is negative and immaterial. But the same reasons exist for its present condition as with the others which have been shell-shocked.

The two greatest errors committed by the stage have been the abuse of its producers and their own power. If the picture business will remember that brief statement covering a great deal, it may save itself the headaches those errors cost so many others of the stage.

This abuse started with Klaw & Erlanger. It made the Shuberts possible and impossible. Stair & Havlin tried it and passed out. Keith and Orpheum vaudeville did it, per E. F. Albee, and passed out. The Columbia Amusement Co. (burlesque) did it and passed out.

Producers as employed here do not contemplate merely the men who stage the show or pictures. Producers as a term, embraces everyone concerned in the making of a show or a film. The producers were abused and driven away from the stage, from K. & E. to the Shuberts, from the Shuberts to their own independency or back to K. &. E., or from Stair & Havlin to oblivion. While the producers of vaudeville were given the needles by the Albee crowd even as those producers were feeding vaudeville with its life blood. And they are starved out.

Abuse from power for 25 years developed from the K. & E. days until it became so common in the latter years it almost was accepted as a part of stage operation. Of the two, the picture heads should avoid the abuse of power for, when that starts, the abuse of producers follows.

Another highly important matter the stage leaders of the past overlooked, although the entire show business to date has overlooked it, was good will. They neither cultivated good will with the public nor in their own organizations. They never had it with either. And it was important—it is important, most important. Past events have proven how valuable it would have been to K. & E., the Shuberts and Albee, who couldn't get it when they wanted and needed it. Because good will cannot be purchased, only cultivated and in good faith.

There was never one man of the stage big enough to dictate what the public must take. To be remembered by the picture men. For the public may not take. No one man in pictures is big enough to disregard talent. Those of the stage who thought they were all lived to regret it.

It's talent that makes pictures, from the writer to the director and the actors—all the essential talent of the studios. That talent must be conserved and preserved, if the picture business is to be preserved. The picture business cannot afford to commit the faults of the stage, for it knows the faults of the stage, and thereby has the best guide for its business future by simply avoiding them.

If the picture business is so new that it has bragged over its profit last year, without knowing what it is going to be this year, that should be the lesson for that. Nor should the picture man be obsessed with the erroneous belief the general public depends upon him for entertainment. This country thrived before pictures.

In short, if the picture man will run his business for the next 25 years without abusing it or the people in it, he will probably find an enduring prosperous business under him, for then his people will work with him instead of against him; he will have located the best talent and held it; he will have found the foundation for success—team work and good will. With that good will also fostered with the public, now, tomorrow, every day, week and year.

And all of this goes exactly the same for theatre operation.

Perhaps if at home the leaders of the film industry will hang in their bedroom the following card, seeing it night and morning, they never will go wrong in the operation of their organizations:

REMEMBER!
Klaw & Erlanger.
The Shuberts.
E. F. Albee.

By Sid Silverman

Since which time, five years, radio has grown in importance, and in its relation to show business, to the point where it may be said to have stepped into the niche formerly held by vaudeville. And with a fair share of vaudeville's assets and liabilities. For radio is now feeding its people into Broadway shows (mostly musicals) and pictures, after which they generally return to the air at more money. Vaudeville found out about that. It also is just as hard for an act to break into radio as it was to get a 'showing' in vaude five, 10, 15, or 30 years ago. When acts with air ambition look for those who have an 'in' with the bookers, those who keep track recognize a familiar ghost. As for the chiseling and kick-backs, vaudeville knew about that too. Of course, radio has no cut weeks, and vaudeville did not exhaust material and people so quickly, but the line of demarcation between the air and vaudeville is not so wide despite that radio is really only 15 years old. How old was vaude? Not old enough to have succumbed to age. Vaudeville was murdered. And with vaudeville no longer the spawning ground for talent, where will pictures and the theatre find new faces and personalities? Who can say radio will not be the answer?

Radio has become significant in show business mostly because it is the common denominator. It has opened the field so that no longer does a performer restrict himself to one branch of the business. They all want a crack at the air and if they get over the end seems much further away. Radio has become the stream down which most actors must sail to the real big money whether the journey be short or long. The salaries on the air for the successful are terrific. The publicity is tremendous—and fast. Too fast. For radio's circulation is such that it breaks as quickly as it makes. Hence, the performer who clicks over the air is like the man who comes into a million dollars and goes crazy trying to take care of it. Boiling down to the fact that radio is the financial joy and mental despair of its performers. It's a wise actor who can gauge his radio limit, but who can blame those who stay on too long? In vaudeville they couldn't resist the applause. In radio they simply cannot resist the money.

But radio has that matter of circulation as both a benediction and a curse. It devours material at a staggering rate, and that's its own problem. The other factor is that radio will always be limited by the clock. Even the networks can't get more than 24 hours into a day. Meanwhile, radio men are slowly coming around to the realization that they're in show business. It will be better for radio and its listeners as that idea spreads.

On the other phases of show business the history of the past five years needs no recounting. It's been tough sledding and it now looks as if there's a chance to get out of the woods. Pictures, having gone through a series of refinancing and reorganization, was the first to feel the upbeat. Pictures has also found out that if product isn't good business can be awfully bad. Yet the fact that a picture with merit can go out and roll up a solid gross is, and should be, enough. The legitimate theatre is having its best season in five or six years both in and out of New York, night clubs making an effort for and deserving business are getting it, while the outdoor men (circus and carnivals) concluded a satisfactory season last autumn. The public wants to be entertained and is willing to pay for its amusement. How well show business rises to that demand will be reflected on the only thermometer this same show business recognizes, the boxoffice.

For itself the fact that this is VARIETY's 30th birthday is about saying the most in the least number of words. This is the first anniversary number in four years which has had a green cover. Simply because VARIETY didn't believe the three previous anniversary issues of sufficient size to warrant binding. So perhaps this anniversary edition is indicative of show business at the moment. It could be better, and a whole lot worse.

+ LEADING FILM NAMES OF 1935 +

By Arthur Ungar

wood, Dec. 29.

The year just past saw the ups and downs of many stars, but it also brought to the fore three solid box-office appeasers.

This trio consisted of Shirley Temple, who proved to be the top-per over the world, although actually running a close second to Garbo abroad; Clark Gable, in the second niche for world coverage, as Metro's best draw name the past year. Possible factor here is that Norma Shearer had no picture made of releases during 1935. Fred Astaire is third, having rushed to the front on the strength of two pictures, 'Roberta' and 'Top Hat.' Although so far always teamed with Ginger Rogers, Astaire is acknowledged within the trade as being the main draw member of this duo.

In checking over top-gross pictures on the year, one of the late releases, Metro's 'Mutiny,' is proving very big to the extent it is likely to eventually set the pace for the leading seven films, which rate as follows:

'Mutiny on the Bounty' (Metro).
'Top Hat' (RKO).
'David Copperfield' (Metro).
'Bengal Lancer' (Par).
'China Seas' (Metro).
'Curly Top' (Fox).
'G Men' (WB).

No attempt is made to list the seven leading pictures according to the amount of their gross. Further comment will be found later in the story.

The year's showing by directors, as individuals, was not so strong as formerly. That is to say, ace product was more evenly distributed among the directorial contingent. But the five who revealed the most aptitude in turning out box-office product were:

David Butler.
W. S. Van Dyke.
Henry Hathaway.
Roy Del Ruth.
John Ford.

As in the case of the rating of the pictures, this listing of the directors is not in the sequence of the biggest money films. These five, however, individually had pictures which, when combined, rolled up the best b.o. figures among the directors. They lead on the basis of the following pictures:

David Butler directed 'Bright Eyes,' 'Little Colonel,' 'Doubting Thomas' and 'Littlest Rebel,' all for Fox and 20th Century-Fox. John Ford handled 'Judge Priest' (Fox), 'The Informer' (RKO), 'Whole Town's Talking' (Col) and 'Steamboat 'Round the Bend' (Fox). Roy Del Ruth was in charge of 'Kid Millions,' 'Bulldog Drummond' and 'Folies Bergere,' all for United Artists; 'Broadway Melody of 1936' (Metro) and 'Thanks a Million' (20th). Henry Hathaway did 'Bengal Lancers' and 'Peter Ibbetson,' both for Paramount. W. S. Van Dyke turned out 'Naughty Marietta' and 'I Live My Life,' both for Metro.

Stars

A number of stars who occupied high spots in 1934 either skidded or stepped from the star class. To counteract the fickleness of the public in doing an about-face on a number of names, the customers found quite a few new favorites and many of these went up the ladder fast. Among this latter group is Claudette Colbert, who is giving promise of becoming close to head girl during 1936. The late Will Rogers, who had been spotty in his popularity around the country prior to 1935, also clicked in great style the past year. His main b.o. weakness was in the foreign market. Otherwise he might have rated even, and possibly ahead of Shirley Temple.

Numerous film performers not under contract to major plants proved important during the year. Among this group can be included Henry Fonda, under contract to Walter Wanger, and Robert Donat. There are others from the stage who did single films and are in the free lance field.

Star importance increased over the previous year but the story still remains more vital than the star. This was demonstrated in many instances.

Leading boxo ce stars number about 12, an increase over 1934. But the decrease was greater among the femme names than in the male division. Some of the girls were unquestionally hurt by the way they were handled, while others tried to outsmart their studios by dictating, and so climbed the scaffold on their own.

There were more real gross films during 1935 than distribution organizations have had in a few years. Metro's 'Mutiny' is figured out here to hit $3,000,000, maybe more, on world wide gross. But one of the best of the profit makers, basing latter on amount of investment in comparison to intake, seems to have been 'Curly Top' which cost a little over $300,000. This also goes for 'G Men' (WB), which cost under $300,000 and did plenty as the first of the G-Men cycle. These two films should really be bracketed.

Topical and Biographical

The studios went pretty heavy on topical and biographical subjects over the year. Warners started the 'G Men' cycle, made plenty along that line, with other studios also jumping in, the market finally being deluged with this formula. In the biographical field 'Diamond Jim' (U) proved a neat money getter but 'Barnum' (20th) did not fare so well. Hollywood was also threatened with a Shakespearian epidemic but the key pic, 'Midsummer Night's Dream, was held up for road show release and the jury is still out, although Metro intends to do 'Romeo and Juliet' with Norma Shearer and Leslie Howard, and is also preparing 'As You Like It.'

In the costume division the outstanders were 'Crusades' (Par), which cost around the $1,000,000 mark but promises doing better than breaking even, while 'Les Miserables' and 'Cardinal Richelieu,' rank well. Eddie Small, for Reliance, turned out a good b.o. entry in 'Count of Monte Cristo' which brought Robert Donat to the fore.

Musicals

Musical field was not so forte on the whole. Radio got off to a flying start with 'Top Hat,' which made it tough for the films which followed. 'Big Broadcast' was Par's main musical effort while 'Broadway Melody of 1936' (M-G) did well in this country and is reported very good in the foreign market. Warners turned out a number of musicals, majority being profitable for the company but none of sock dimensions.

The westerns perked up considerably on account of the predominance of double bills, and the horse operas all seemed to bring in coin for their producers whether they were from the indies or majors. Demand for them continues as the current year arrives.

In the short field Mickey Mouse still holds the leadership, with the Pete Smith shorts not far behind.

Operettas

On operettas Metro had the top with 'Naughty Marietta.' Columbia repeated with Grace Moore in 'Love Me Forever' which did well but not up to her 'One Night of Love.' Radio has launched Lily Pons in 'I Dream Too Much,' and Paramount has two films with Gladys Swarthout ready.

Jesse Lasky was also in with 'Here's to Romance,' starring Nino Martini, reported as doing fairly well. All of the studios have a number of top chanters under contract and no doubt their usage in 1936 will be heavy.

Radio field contributed to the screen during the year with Nino Martini, James Melton, Fred Allen, Frances Langford, Jane Froman and Phil Regan. Also returning to screen on radio popularity rep was Jack Benny, Burns and Allen, Ben Bernie and Joe Penner.

Few New Stars

Studios were stuck for new starring material. To retain interest, as well as obtain publicity for what they deemed potential name talent they elevated a number of featured players to stardom. Many of the people who have this top billing will have a task in living up to it as most of them are incapable of attaching real importance to a picture unless surrounded by topnotch support. Selection of some, especially among the women, seemed almost ridiculous with producers even smiling at their own selections, shrugging their shoulders and hoping for the best. Few pics through the year had those dynamite all-star casts figured to carry most any kind of a story.

Currently there is feeling on the part of the big stars to relax a bit on work during 1936 due to the income tax. This, however, has also been true of the free lance leaders who have been big earners. Stars and contract players seem to talk the same way, but none are turning down 40 or 52-week contracts when offered.

Paramount

Paramount still has Mae West as its leading coin getter but again her grosses were not as startling as the previous year. Bing Crosby had a struggling year and, though rated below Miss West last year, now gives way to Claudette Colbert and also falls behind Gary Cooper. Cooper's showing in 'Bengal Lancers' helped greatly to increase his company value.

What looks like a strong combination for the fir is the team of Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray. Latter seems to be best among the coming bets on star material for the firm. Marlene Dietrich holds her spot due to the foreign market, while George Raft suffered a bit from poor films, as did W. C. Fields and Sylvia Sidney.

MacMurray unquestionably leads the Par feature group. He was in only one starrer. In this feature division company is short of promising personalities who may rise quickly.

RKO-Radio

RKO-Radio went to town with Fred Astaire. Plus Ginger Rogers, the duo, listed last year among those just featured, hopped to the star rung and are the 'golden' children of the lot. Showing of Katharine Hepburn was not entirely to the liking of the producers, due to her films coating tops and not being startling grossers.

provincial following, as well as a foreign draw, hold in same groove as in 1934, while Ann Harding eased off somewhat. Story material counted in her case. However, expected that Miss Harding can be brought back to her former place the current year.

William Powell, though under contract to Metro, is also listed because of the pic he made here. Irene Dunne had only one, being out on loan elsewhere most of year, while Richard Dix wound up a long association with this firm last summer. Barbara Stanwyck is looked upon as future b.o. timber and, of course, Lily Pons.

This company relies heavily on featured aid for stars and has rounded up what it feels is worthwhile b.o. support. Gene Raymond heads this contingent with Preston Foster showing promise of becoming important. Studio also figures Fred Stone a bet for 1936 and will bring him into the starring class. James Gleason is another who is considered valuable. Ann Shirley, Heather Angel and Margot Graham, with Harriett Hilliard, recent addition, are figured as most important of the supporting women players.

20th Century-Fox

20th Century-Fox is shown here as a combine, analysts being based on Fox alone until the merger last August. Top players are three of the Fox favorites, Shirley Temple being the leader by a good margin. Will Rogers improved greatly in draw power around the country during the year. Janet Gaynor, though ranked third, was considerably off in strength from the previous year.

Warner Oland, in the featured group last year, was brought into the star division and showed solid value with his 'Charlie Chan' films. Also boosted into the star class were Jane Withers, John Boles, Rochelle Hudson and Claire Trevor. Their value in the spot must be shown in 1936. Loretta Young, though in this group, is not listed, as she did not work for the combined concern. George O'Brien, who works under the Sol Lesser banner, is classed here due to release of his western and action pics by the firm.

Victor McLaglen heads featured group but in '36 will be in star contingent. His outstanding effort the past year came at another studio, Radio, on 'The Informer.' Best development among players in the featured group during year concerns Alice Faye while Irvin Cobb, Bill Robinson and Fred Allen, new, show promise of doing things. Gloria Stuart is new here and she, with Cobb, may hit the star column before the 1936-37 season starts.

Twentieth Century, prior to the combine and with product released through United Artists, had Clark Gable and Loretta Young as a combine in 'Call of the Wild.' Miss

Metro

Clark Gable heads the Metro contingent, taking the spot formerly held by Norma Shearer. Miss Shearer made no films for '35 release, but she remains most important. Greta Garbo, though slipping in this country, still has that powerful foreign draught. New combine of Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy also looked upon here as a box office tonic.

Wallace Beery, right at top of the list last year, is down considerably on past year with studio deciding to use him in future with other names. Marx Brothers, with one pic now on release, have placed themselves in the running for company, and it is figured that with their next one they will be a strong magnet.

Fading in the star division at this studio on the year were Helen Hayes and Constance Bennett, while Ramon Novarro and Maurice Chevalier did not hold over from '34.

Metro has an outstanding group of support personnel. Robert Taylor and Luise Rainer jumped to the fore and there is the former attractive contingent of featured people.

Universal was not so forte on star power for the year with Margaret Sullavan being the topper and Edward Arnold, a new recruit, running about even on popularity. In the feature class promise is shown by Binnie Barnes, Valerie Hobson and Pinky Tomlin, while Sally Eilers still is important here, with Gloria Stuart, who headed this group, having gone over to 20th-I ox.

Warners

Dick Powell stands as the Warner top man. He went along at a fast pace on his home lot and increased his value with 'Thanks A Million' (20th). Jolson ranks next here with the Powell-Keeler combine in third place.

James Cagney, who was next to top last year had one pip picture, 'G-Men,' was also combined with Pat O'Brien and had a good year with some of the spots formerly antagonistic to him won over due to toning down his treatment of women on the screen.

Joe E. Brown holds his own with the hinterland continuing loyal and key centers war ing up a bit to him. Kay Francis has come to the fore, with Marion Davies showing value to company on her first pic under that banner. Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell team proved fair enough.

Two new stars added to the WB roster during year will get their chance in 1936. They are Gene Raymond and Jean Muir. Four names that disappeared from the list are Richard Barthelmess, Ruth Chatterton, Barbara Stanwyck and Leslie Howard, though latter will be on 1936 listing.

Featured group does not change any from previous year with George Brent topping this contingent. Few new ones are Wini Shaw, James Melton, Jane Froman, Olivia de Haviland, Margaret Lindsay, Sybil Jason and Dick Foran.

Columbia

Grace Moore continued as the outstander at Columbia. Other name draws this studio had in star group were outsiders such as Claudette Colbert, Edward G. Robinson and Edmund Lowe. Jack Holt held his own with the few pictures he made during year, while Buck Jones did well in the western division. Company has not yet released a picture with Ruth Chatterton.

This studio has a number of contract featured players with Leo Carrillo, Walter Connolly and Jean Arthur heading the group. Miss Arthur may get into the star class for 1936.

Independents

The independent field during the year was rather hectic with Monogram, Mascot and Liberty merging into Republic and Chesterfield, and invincible continuing to get moderate priced product over the line to a profit in the state right field. These firms used free lance players during the year, but Republic gives indications of building up a stock company of talent in 1936. Also in the indie field is Harry Sherman who is making action pics for release through Paramount. Bill Boyd and James Ellison are under contract to star in these pictures.

GROSSES IN 1934 AND 1935

By Sam Shain

During 1934-35 there was around $30,000,000 in new capital provided by Wall Street to the film business. This is invariably a sure sign that grosses are rising and that the film industry is on the mend.

Under intelligent manpower the grosses in the business should continue to rise. Bankers can't make the grosses rise. Showmen know how. Some bankers have learned this.

There are deals pending presently in the trade with financiers involving upwards of $40,000,000 in new capital. Without the rising grosses such deals couldn't be considered.

It has been a period of reconstruction for the trade during the past three years. Costs and operations were overhauled. While the overhead was being reduced and inflexible items such as mortgages and rents were being adjusted, grosses kept apace.

There is no doubt that the grosses, today, are not as high as those of peak-times, but the adjustment in operating overhead which has been made almost everywhere in the theatre end of the business has cut down the risk of loss.

Talent and manpower are the biggest items in show business. That's because the business is not only a personality business but also a creative business.

Against reform movements, legislative tax drives and all kinds of outside criticism, the film business has come through three years of the toughest kind of reconstruction.

The higher grosses show that the film business has earned public confidence in 1934-35. That public confidence can grow because good showmen will appreciate it, nurture it and try to deserve it increasingly.

ramatists Guild has started fight to the finish against Hollywoo financing of Broadway plays. First result is a notification to all members (all recognized playwrights in the U. .) and all producers of legit that the standard minimum basic agreement and contract for production of shows will not be enforced beyond Feb. 1. Instead, the writers are now working on a new agreement and contract which will give the producers of legit no percentage of accruing film coin.

Dramatists complain that Hollywood shadow on Broadway, made so obvious during the past and current seasons, is a distinct menace to them. According to the current minimum basi agreement (which ends its five-year course in February) the producer of any legit play is entitled to 50% of the film rights after the play runs a minimum of three weeks. otherwise, with a shorter run, the rights revert 100% to the author.

In the past, scribblers say, this was equitable and fair enough, the film percentage acting as a spur to producers. However, now that Hollywood is financing so many plays, authors claim, the film rights values are being shot way down. Hollywood picture companies can now afford to go up to high figures, it's pointed out, since they only have to pay half, really. That would be fine for the playwrights if it weren't for the fact that it discourages bidding, they argue.

'Three en' Exception

'Three Men on a Horse,' produced on a Warner Bros. bankroll, was an exception, allegedly being bid up to $110,000 last season through Sam Goldwyn wanting it for Eddie Cantor. Warners could afford to go to that high figure since, owning half of the production, it only needs pay 50%, or $55,000, the Dramatists point out. Thus it becomes almost impossible for any picture company to outbid any other picture company which has a pre-production (legit) interest in a play. Therefore there are no real play bids any more, as there used to be when producers put plays on with their own coin and then turned the gates open for ollywood bids.

Instance of this, Dramatists claim, is that not one of the plays produced

YEAR IN PICTURES

By Roy Chartier

For the picture industry the year that has passed has been one of restoration. A particularly active year, and one which held much news from a trade point of view.

What impresses picture men the most is the advances made during 1935. Five years ago the picture business faced a crisis, along with other industries. Geared up as it was the film business was in a very nervous state. Bankruptcies and receiverships resulted after fruitless efforts to keep the proverbial wolf from filmdom's door. But during 1935 virtually all of these bankruptcies and receiverships were discharged or are close to being overcome as 1936 peeps around the corner.

For instance, it took Paramount a long time to reorganize and the job of restoration continues. Wall Street entered the Par reorganization scene early in the year and in March the stockholders voted approval of the plan which had been worked out after months of preparation and bickering. In June Par reorganization was effected and John E. Otterson, then president of Electrical Research Products, Inc., became president of the new company, Adolph Zukor becoming chairman of the board. This reorganization also marked the entry into the film picture of Atlas Corporation, and bankers associated with Atlas as regarded Par included Lehman Bros. Later Atlas and Lehman bought Radio Corporation of America's interest in RKO for $11,600,000, and further reports have been that a downtown syndicate would buy Chase National Bank's interest in Fox. This report has also met with some skepticism.

But the point to showmen within and outside of Par, is that the company seems once more on its way even if the bill was tremendous. Last estimates, with final fees of $1,045,000 allowed, were that this total would run to around $2,500,000. What the bill will add to in the case of RKO and other receiverships, or bankruptcies, isn't yet known. The Rockefellers will play an important part in final reorganization of RKO, it is conceded, due to the large claim of $8,200,000 allowed by the courts during the past year. Meantime, downtown interests in RKO have placed Leo Spitz, former Balaban and Katz attorney, as president of the company, and although the same interests figure in Paramount no merger of these two major firms is looked for at the present time.

While recently experiencing trouble through allegations that its bankruptcy was not justified, Fox-West Coast has been free from the trustee yoke since last February when National Theatres Corp. took it over for $15,500,000. Upon the start of '35 the way was cleared for other reorganizations, including Pathe and Fox-Metropolitan. Deal covering the latter, under which Joseph M. Schenck and associates in United Artists Theatre Circuit took over Fox-Met 90%, was closed late in the fall. A Pathe reorganization is expected shortly, and in October a reorganization plan for General Theatres Equipment was filed. During the past year one of the most important of the Paramount subsidiaries, several of which went into receivership or bankruptcy, was also cleared up when the Finkelstein & Rubin theatres in the northwest resumed on their own. The last of the Par subsidiaries to be reorganized, with the date near at hand, is the vast Olympic Theatres holding company in New England on which satisfying progress has been made recently. Various minor reorganizations within major, as well as independent, ranks have passed through the courts, inevitably foretold by the lean years attendant upon economic stress. But what is important at present is that the courts are about to be vacated as regards these film concerns.

Unquestionably more genuine optimism prevails currently than might have been expected a year ago. General conditions, and an increasing tendency on the part of the public to support amusements has figured. However, while there have been miscellaneous factors of a favorable character, the industry itself has made every bid and effort to attain this position. Product from the studios has been better and distribution companies have made every effort to take advantage of the improved merchandise. Theatres, seeing a brighter outlook, also have been coaxing the public.

Year's Big Pictures

An appreciable increase in the money spent on advertising pictures has occurred the past year. Even in conservative circles, budgets have been raised and extensive campaigns to push the bigger pictures have become common. Notable among these was the program on advertising and publicity for 'Midsummer Night's Dream' (WB) and so recognized by the trade at large.

This picture was a daring undertaking on the part of Warner Bros., and whatever its final result at the boxoffice, it stands as an example of effort. 'Dream' was, and is, a gamble that wouldn't even have been thought of a few years ago.

A representative number of other big pictures have run through projection machines the past 12 months; pictures on which generous bankrolls have been invested. Among these was 'Mutiny on the Bounty' (M-G) advertised as costing $2,000,000 to make. And so many films finally ran in around the $750,000 mark they are well nigh uncountable; justified, for instance, in the case of 'Top Hat' (RKO) by grosses but too much in many other cases. Meanwhile, Warners had the cheapest smash picture of the year in 'G Men,' a film which cost less than $300,000.

Rentals

On this season's product the distributors set out to get '29 rentals and have succeeded. There hasn't been so much bickering as to whether deals should be percentage or flat. The distributors are trying to furnish better pictures, something even the exhibitors admit, and the accounts, in turn, are paying for what they will get. The fact that there are always a certain number of 'dogs' doesn't alter the situation. Top rental for the year at one house was rung up by RKO on the N. Y. Music Hall engagement of 'Top Hat.' Rental figured around $100,000 for the three weeks the picture played there.

Labor Day week was unusually big over the country and on Broadway movie films grossed $378,600.

Theatre Problems

In the exhibition field, the year also had its disconcerting features. Aside from the usual exhibitor-distributor problems there were new matters to grapple with upon the nullifying of NRA codes. The radio free show menace caused much concern and as late as September bobbed up again. It was checked once but may come up again almost anytime via the big advertising firms sending touring units on the road.

Early in the year giveaways by theatres were causing considerable havoc and out in Chicago operators conceded the fight against their practice a losing one. Efforts to stem the flow of the ticket premium fever, as boxoffice stimulant, were fraught with difficulty. Toward the end of the winter giveaways were spreading rapidly and getting beyond control. In Denver autos were being given away. When NRA stopped, premiums, bank nights, screeno and the like became legion. Picture solons could do nothing about it and finally the circuits have gone for it, as witness Loew's in the New York area with screeno.

Just so did the circuits go into double featuring despite it being an open admittance of weakness. Duals had a marked tendency toward confusing the exhibition system and recently exhibitors have started sounding out patrons on the two feature bills. As the trend toward duals increased the number of stage show houses decreased. This situation remains unchanged at the present writing.

Before the code went out the film reissue evil had been under attack. Revival of old hit pictures came into practice shortly after the depression but now is going the way of all temporary business lures.

The first six months of 1935 under the Blue Eagle brought problems and complaints as well as support. Some exhibitors liked and profited under the code. Others disliked it and claimed anything but profit. A satisfactory clearance schedule was something that took a long time to perfect but it was finally approved by the Code Authority in February for the Los Angles territory. This schedule was to serve as a model for the rest of the country but whether or not other territories would agree to it, without much more delay, was some-

'35 Space-Grab In Fan Mags

Hollywood, Dec. 29.

The 1935 derby of fan magazine space-grabbers was won by Shirley Temple in the woman's division, while Clarke Gable won by two points in the male division.

Survey of individual space, exclusive of production or advertising tie-ups, contributed to screen personalities during the year 1935 by 11 leading national fan magazines shows that out of approximate 2,500 established featured screen players, only 330 found their way into the fan magazines in the proportion of commanding covers, full page and semi-full page photographs along with individual interviews and feature stories.

It is surprising to learn that out of the 132 issues involved in this survey, all of the covers have been given over to the fairer sex and not one contributed to the male favorites. Of the 132 covers, which is the most desired spot of all fan publications, Claudette Colbert received 10; Shirley Temple, 9; Ginger Rogers, 8; Carole Lombard and Jean Harlow, 7 each; Janet Gaynor, Joan Crawford, Myrna Loy, Ruby Keeler, 6 each; Miriam Hopkins, Mae West, Greta Garbo, Katharine Hepburn, 4 each; Kay Francis, Dolores Del Rio, Alice Fay, Ann Sothern, Marion Davies, Bette Davis, Loretta Young, 3 each; Marlene Dietrich, Gloria Stuart, Virginia Bruce, Merle Oberon, Jeanette MacDonald, Margaret Sullavan, Joan Bennett, Grace Moore, Ann Harding, 2 each; Irene Dunne, Lillian Harvey, Anna Sten, Madge Evans, Mary Carlisle and Elizabeth Allen, 1 each.

First 10 runners-up to Shirley Temple for total amount of space grabbed during the year in the woman's division are Crawford, Colbert, Ginger Rogers, Garbo, Harlow, Lombard, Hepburn, West and Dietrich. First 10 trailing Gable in the men's division are Fred Astaire, Gary Cooper, Bing Crosby, Dick Powell, Will Rogers, Franchot Tone, Nelson Eddy, William Powell and John Boles.

Out of the 228 full page photographs donated to individual personalities, 84 were given to actresses while 144 were apportioned to actors. Of the 91 full page photographs where only one other personality appeared, 42 were shared by the women and 49 by the men; 694 individual interviews or features were given to the women while 546 were apportioned to the men, making a total of 1,891 individual positions contributed to the 330 particip nts, with the women sharing 1,152 and the men 739.

This survey, which takes in 12 monthly issues of Photoplay, Picture Play, Silver Screen, Screenland, Motion Picture, Classic, Screen Play, Screen Book, Hollywood, Movie Mirror and Modern Screen is only confined to space given to individuals in cover, full page and feature story positions. It does not include other space where participants appear in group production stills or shared with other personalities.

Those Hollywood Contracts

By George McCall

ollywood, Dec. 29.

Though the word 'contract' is an integral part of the motion picture jargon, few precious pieces of paper are handed out in Hollywood considering the number of people daily employed in turning out the nation's entertainment.

Press agents announce their people as contracted but studios are careful how they hand out the documents. Of the approximate 25,000 people employed in pictures there exists only around 1,300 contracts and that includes players, writers, directors, executives and music and lyric writers. These people only have to worry about their jobs twice yearly when option time rolls around. Rest have a daily headache, and twice daily when executive operation changes, for it seems to be an unwritten law in Hollywood that when major studios change their operating regimes, most employees who worked for the previous execs are dismissed.

Topping the list of contractees in Hollywood are the players who hold collectively 472 contracts. Universal keeps 30; 20th-Century Fox, 70; Metro tops this list with 90; Warners has 88; Paramount, 77; Radio, 51; Roach, 13; Columbia, 46 and Goldwyn, 9.

Executive Contracts

Next in number of contracts is the executive groups which also includes department heads though few of the latter have yearly tickets. Toppers here are Paramount and Metro, both with around 60 executives each. Columbia and Universal have each 30 though the latter should increase shortly. 20th-Fox has 50 contracted execs; Warners has 60; Roach, 2; Goldwyn, 15; Radio, 45.

Next in important numbers are the writers who collectively hold 258 contracts in the major studios. Largest number of scriveners are, as usual, at Metro with some 70 pounding typewriters there. Paramount follows with 59; Warners, 46; Universal, 5; Columbia, 19; 20th-Fox, 38; Radio, 23. Goldwyn and Roach do not hold over writers, preferring to engage them on the picture and week-to-week basis.

Smallest group of contractees are the directors, a total of 121 being on exclusive contracts. Paramount is high with 21; Metro and Warners each have 20, Radio has 18; 20th-Fox, 19; Roach, 4; Columbia, 12; Universal 7. As with writers, Goldwyn engages his directors by the picture.

Though musical pictures are currently hot copy, only 37 songwriters are contracted by the major studios. In addition to those enumerated, around 67 executives are contracted among Selznick International Pictures, Pioneer, Republic, Reliance and Technicolor.

Others

Outside of those mentioned, around another 100 people, including cameramen, music department heads, sound and photographic department heads hold contracts.

Everyone else must depend on ability and pull to retain jobs the year through. Many have been in one spot for a number of years but those usually are submerged berths in studio operation.

In pictures when one becomes important, the sharpshooters usually sharpen up their guns. Only way to eliminate this possibility is to hold a job that is either inconspicuous or mysterious. In this way, an employee can remain at a studio indefinitely. All studios have their quota of silent mysterious people whose assignments are lost in the maze of red tape.

Big Yuletide Trade Hits L. A.; But the Ponies Top Payoff

Los Angeles, Dec. 29.

Biggest Christmas trade since 1929 showed up around the first run and nabe picture houses. However, it was 25 to 40% under the biz of Thanksgiving, except the Paramount.

Legit houses, El Capitan and Gerard's Playhouse, also hit capacity trade.

Santa Anita race track had biggest draw with 45,000 at $3.30 top. Handle was bit short of $500,000.

The Indies' Bull Season

By Walter Greene

Hollywood, Dec. 29.

Producers operating in the independent field are well-satisfied with general all-around conditions of the market and outlook for the coming year. Consensus indicates that the independent market hit its greatest peak in 10 years during 1935, and if present momentum increases, the indie producers and distribs are in for greatest prosperity of two decades during the next five years.

Financing, toughest thing in the indie field for some time past, loosened up considerably. Money was going around without takers, only requirement being assurance of exchange contracts with state right distribs who had past record of lifting pictures and meeting commitments on time.

Highlight of past year was the successful maneuver of Herbert Yates to combine the Monogram, Liberty and Mascot producing units into Republic; tieing up the outstanding indie exchanges, most of which were Monogram franchise holders, on contracts to distribute the Republic product exclusively.

The Republic combination, instead of retarding the market as was expected during the spring, injected new life into the field, with several newcomers popping up with proposed features to replace those swung over to Republic.

Newcomers

Among the newcomers to toss their productions into the independent field are Ben Ziedman, E. B. Derr and Charles Sullivan, Halperin Bros.—all of whom plan groups of features hitting $30,000 and up to the $50,000 and $60,000.

Majority of product from the independents for next year indicates split-up into two groups—westerns or action melodramas and exploitation features. Most of the former going through the state right exchanges will carry production costs ranging from $4,000 to $20,000, while the exploitation pictures will hit from $15,000 upwards.

Independents have discovered that regular product depending almost entirely on interiors cannot successfully compete with B product of the majors unless negative costs hit above $40,000. Pictures turned out below that figure, and down to around $15,000, show general quickie technique evidenced in much of production that compels them to slide into lower brackets.

Chaps Stars' Comeback

This deduction by smart indie operators has resulted in the large groups of western and action dramas being turned out in comparison to a year ago. Such features require large proportion of exterior work, giving chance for photography to be acceptable, and preventing comparisons with higher priced product that is shot inside the studios to a great extent.

Growing demand for western and outdoor melodramas among the state right exchanges has proved a bonanza for the cowboy stars and rough and tumble guys. Practically every westerner who has been starred or featured during the past 12 years finds himself in demand for the first time in moons. Good cowboy names command as high as $5,000 a picture for a series, tops of all time in view of distribution on the state right market.

Keen indie producers continually scour the literary field in their search for sure-fire name authors.

Writers such as Peter B. Kyne, James Oliver Curwood, Jack London, Zane Grey and others of similar ranking are cinches on which to finance and sell series of features for the market.

Influx of new producers, combined with merger of Republic units on the Mascot lot and decision of RKO Pathe that major independents can keep its plant to capacity, has resulted in shortage of studio space for the independents. Rental studios, nearly starved out in the past five years and glad to accept any customer who had an idea he might produce a picture eventually, are now sitting back looking over credit rating of each applicant and asking for cash advance.

Withdrawal of Consolidated Laboratories from the financing field due to its present tieup with Republic, looked like a serious setback to the indie producers who were depending on money at this end. Tightened coin outlook suddenly broke wide open, with four Coast sources bobbing up to extend assistance to indies with qualified releasing deals, and eastern labs and distributors coming forth with coin even up to 100% financing on deals that they were anxious to tie up.

Prosperity of the indie market can be attributed in a large way to the fast and furious spread of dual bills in top percentage territories. But one of the most important factors in favor of the indie producer was the upswing of selling conditions throughout the south. Exchanges below the Mason-Dixon line, which struggled along for years with only a small proportion of total amount of state right product handled, suddenly burst forth in a wild splurge of selling to theatres that gave many of the producers unexpected returns for their pictures.

Previously, many indie producers were glad to get their pictures into the south on straight percentage deals without advances, taking their chances of getting something out of a territory which would otherwise remain unsold. Cycle of prosperity in the south during the past 12 months is giving the indie producers a chance to get some money out of the exchanges in that territory in the form of advances on pictures.

Foreign condition is the most perplexing problem confronting the independent producers. Many pictures made never hit Europe, and languish on the shelves of exporters. The British market, which at one time was good for at least half the negative cost on a picture, is practically lost to the indies. So much cheap and quickie product is now turned out in England for quota purposes, American pictures of similar type have no market.

FLAT RATE YARNS

Lesser Considers Plan to Put Scribe On Straight Coin Basis

Hollywood, Dec. 29.

Sol Lesser would hire his authors on flat rates. Producer says he believes indies operating with mandatory release dates should follow the method prevalent in writing plays for the stage.

Lesser figures writers with originals or story ideas that might be acceptable for producers' needs will go for the plan.

Par Gets Around Holiday Slump, 14 Pix in Mill

Hollywood, Dec.

Fourteen picture sked, seven in active production and a like number on the boards for an immediate start, enables Paramount to hurdle the holiday slump this year.

Group currently in work are 'Give Us This Night,' 'Timothy's Quest,' 'Preview,' 'Sky Parade,' 'F-Man,' 'Desert Gold,' and '13 Hours by Air.'

Pictures down for start are 'Too Many Parents,' 'Turn of the Wheel,' 'Cocktails for Two,' 'Border Flight,' 'Florida Special,' 'Poppy' and 'Concertina.'

Sydney, Dec. 29.

E. Harkness, Under-Secretary of New South Wales has told VARIETY that the new film quota goes into effect on Jan. 1 whether American filmers like it or no, and they will have to go into production here within the next few months or stop distributi local . The government, he said, is determined, and there is no way out.

Questioned on the American production angle, the specific question put to him was, 'Will Americans have to produce films in Australia?'

He replied that, according to the act, distributors' duty is to 'acquire and make available for distribution not less than the proportion of Australian quota films specified in the schedule.'

Cornered for a definition of the word 'acquire,' he explained that it 'includes production or obtaining possession of films for the purpose of hiring or selling.'

In other words, he feels, speaking for the government, that if there are not sufficient local films available for Americans to purchase for quota purposes, they will have to either manufacture them or order them to be manufactured.

Americans' Aspects

That doesn't make things easy for the Americans down here. They must have pictures, but if there aren't any they must make them. And, of course, the majority of American distributors don't want to go into local production. They feel that it is unnecessary expenditure and will tie up a lot of money which may or may not be returnable to them.

Fox has a production arrangement with Hoyt's in which it owns a big chunk), and United Artists has a tentative deal with Cinesound for some pictures. Other American firms are waiting to see what will happen, and some are even waiting to see what the government will do if and when they fail to go through with the provisions of the law.

What makes it even tougher from the standpoint of Americans down here is that even the production of a local film for quota purposes isn't enough. After a film is produced it must be submitted to a governmental jury which rules on its quality and has the right to reject it for quota or any distribution purposes if it doesn't figure the film 'good enough.' In other words, after spending coin for the production of a local film, the film might be thrown on the scrap heap and still not qualify for either coin-return or quota law satisfaction.

Another angle that distribs here point out as 'inequitable' is that films acceptable in England for quota purposes there are not acceptable here. England, of course, will accept locally made films for the quota in England, but Americans are afraid that if they switch their production of British quota productions down here, England will reciprocate with some sort of tougher quota in London and complicate the problem even more.

Meantime it is impossible for local film studios to produce sufficient films for quota purposes, even if the Americans were minded to purchase them. No pictures are completed or ready at all. Three are in production, a high mark locally, but nowhere near enough for the needs.

An Xmas Total

A Coast production executive, in New York for the holidays, took a pencil and wrote out the following on a Hotel Astor tablecloth. His estimate of the negative cost of eight feature films which had their premiere on Broadway Christmas week:

'Tale of Two Cities' (M-G)	$1,100,000
'Captain (W-B)	850,000
'Ah, Wilderness' (M-G)	750,000
'Littlest Rebel' (20th)	400,000
'Bride Comes Home' (Par)	400,000
'Dangerous' (WB)	350,000
'If You Could Only Cook' (Col)
'Fang and Claw' (RKO)	125,000
Total	$4,275,000

RKO'S RADIO COMEDIENNE

Patricia Wilder, radio comedienne with Bob Hope's programs is set on an RKO film contract. She left Thursday night (26) by plane to report to the studio.

Pandro Berman signed Miss Wilder while on his recent visit to New York.

RATING THE CAMERAMEN

Hollywood, Dec. 29.

Many new faces came up during the past year to the front ranks of the camera craft, giving the old-established craftsmen plenty of competition. Survey of 1935 shows that topnotchers of previous years maintained photographic standards on the whole, but pacemakers from way back in the field sprinted through the entire year to pass several of those who had been coasting on past performances.

Charles Lang of Paramount, George Folsey of Metro, Victor Milner of Paramount and Charles Rosher of 20th Century-Fox, rate four top spots at head of first 10 cinematographers of the year in general checkup.

Newcomers this year to the ranks of the 10 best include Ernest Haller of Warners, Ernest Palmer of 20th Century-Fox, Joe August of Radio, Hal Mohr and Peverell Marley. Latter moved up from second 10 on last year's list. Ray June maintained position gained in 1934.

Mohr gained recognition in the top group through his photographic work on Warners' 'Midsummer Night's Dream' and 'Captain Blood.' Others slipped into their respective spots on general all around excellence of their pictures during the year.

First Ten

Charles Lang.
George Folsey.
Victor Milner.
Charles Rosher.
Ernest Haller.
Ray June.
Ernest Palmer.
Joe August.
Peverell Marley.

Folsey's Standout

George Folsey stands out as being the greatest single influence on photography during the year. He set a new style in lighting sets, making lighting a definite and pictorial part of his composition. This has resulted in presenting the sets just as interestingly as the players —without having the set overshadow action. Folsey's technique was extensively imitated by other cameramen who recognized its value on production work.

Concede Lang Tops

Charles Lang is generally admitted in cinematographic circles to be the most consistent photographer of outstanding work in the craft. Henry Sharp, victim of an air crash early this year while going east for Paramount, would likely have landed in the select group if he had been able to continue during the year, as he was coming along at a fast clip.

Of the second 10 best in rating, Arthur Edeson, Byron Haskins, and Gregg Toland slipped into favored spots on the list. William Daniels found heavier competition than anticipated, and dropped down from the first 10 bracket of 1934.

Following close on the heels of the top 20 is a large group who just missed getting in under the wire. Several dropped off the top brackets from 1934, while others are making strong bids for recognition and a number may break through during the coming year.

Runner-Ups

Those in the runner-up classification, with one minute shading separating them from inclusion among the second 10, include Karl Struss, James Wong Howe, George Barnes, Arthur Miller, Leo Tover, George Schneiderman, Sol Polito, Leon Shamroy, Joe Valentine and Theodore Sparkuhl.

Shamroy came along particularly fast. Under personal contract to B. P. Schulberg, he photographed the Sylvia Sidney features, and has been loaned out to other producers for several class A pictures.

Keeper of the B's

Unsung heroes are the cameramen who swing along handling photography for class B product on the major lot. With fast shooting schedules to maintain, they turn in some remarkable accomplishments in view of restrictions in time placed on their camera and lighting setups.

In this group will be found the future top men of the craft. Len Smith has carried the burden of second units and smaller pictures on the Metro lot, and is rated as a dependable craftsman under any conditions. Fred Fishbeck has been hitting consistently on the Paramount lot, and Archie Stout is coming along fast to compete with the top rankers on exterior work.

Nick Musuraca, on the Radio lot for the past 10 years, is oldest cameraman in point of service at that studio. In addition, he turns out as many pictures as any other cinematographer at Radio, closely followed by Roy Hunt. David Abel, in handling camera work on the Fred Astaire and other filmusicals at Radio, is fast gaining a rep as a top lenser, and may slip through to favored ranking next year.

Forward-Comers

Year saw greater number of second cameramen moved up to first ranking in the craft. William Mellor, promoted to first during tail end of 1934 after seven years with Victor Milner, made good on several productions in 1935.

Robert De Grasse, second for the late Henry Gerrard on the Katharine Hepburn features at Radio, was moved up on the star's productions, reportedly at her request, and earned a permanent spot at that studio.

Tieup of Karl Struss on Bing Crosby picture at Paramount, with Mae West putting in requisition for the photographer, finally ended with assignment of George Clemens, Struss' second cameraman, to handle the West starrer, 'Klondike Lou.' La West expressed approval of his work on the picture and Clemens looks set for continuance in post of first cinematographer on the lot.

Other seconds who were given chance at first jobs included Henry Freulich at Columbia; Lucien Ballard, pushed forward by Josef von Sternberg; William Skall at Technicolor; Loyal Griggs in Paramount transparency dept.; Robert Tobey at Columbia; Warren Lynch at Warners; Joe MacDonald at 20th-Fox; and Harold Marzorati, now a first on projection backgrounds at Metro.

Showing London How

American cameramen have been greatly responsible for the improved camera technique and photography of English productions. Among the large number of cinematographers from Hollywood now in London for various British companies are Glenn MacWilliams, Charles Van Enger, Phil Tannura, Lee Garmes, Harry Stradling, O. H. Borrodaile, Hal Rosson, John Boyle, Lloyd Knetchel, Harry Zech, Edward Cohen, and George Benoit. Several more will go over early in 1936 to handle Technicolor photography for Alexander Korda when he gets rolling with the tinters.

Top Specialists

Process and trick work: Fred Jackman, Warners; Vern Walker, Radio; Farciot Edouart, Gordon Jennings, Paramount.

Aerial photography: Elmer Dyer, Charles Marshall.

Exteriors: Clyde De Vinna, Dan Clark, Sid Wagner.

Second Ten

Arthur Edeson.
Tony Gaudio.
John Seitz.
William Daniels.
Byron Haskins.
Gregg Toland.
James Van Trees.
Oliver Marsh.
Joe Walker.
Bert Glennon.

PAR MAY FILM SOME LEGIT SHOWS IN EAST

With a view to producing several pictures at the Astoria studio this season, Par is discussing deals for the filming in the east of some legit shows. These may include 'May Wine' in which Par has an interest.

Although there is talk at present on legit shows which would lend themselves to filming, and in the making of which their legit sponsors may have a hand in a supervisory way, so far Par has agreed on no very definite plans nor if Astoria also would be used to turn out regular program material and musicals.

Oscar Serlin, of the Par home office, is in charge of deals being negotiated with legit sources and may be placed in charge of Astoria production if present plans carry. Boris Kramer would succeed him at the h.o. as talent scout.

Amusement Stocks Up In '35

By Mike Wear

Picture company stocks and radio issues enjoyed greatest movement since 1929 duri the past year on the New York stock exchange. Ability of several leading fil companies to set their neial affairs in order, wise moves by various managements and considerable improvement in business, which in turn was reflected in increased dividends, had much to do with this better attitude towards amusement issues by average trader in the Street.

This sentiment w mirrored in a tremendous rise in the value of leading amusement issues. The 12 stocks carried in VARIETY's Am ment Group increased in worth $228,200,622 from their lows registered in first week of January, to the closing prices on Dec. 24. Most of these high quotations for year were made in final quarter though the final month did not see any vast material change.

As with the general run of stocks on the exchange, greatest single factor to contribute to rise in amusement values was voiding of the NRA code. U. S. Supreme Court made Blue Eagle legally dead effective June 16 though so-called benefits of its operation ceased some 30 days earlier.

Amusement Group, which generally suffers a sharp set-back during summer months, continued moving ahead into higher ground nearly every succeeding week after the Indigo Bird was out of the picture. This was only natural because numerous picture and radio companies showed better earnings as the year wore to a close, with resulting melon cutting and extras. And in this respect, they were not unlike hundreds of other industrial firms.

After having been neglected off and on for several years, traders suddenly became aware of the worth of many radio and picture issues. They translated this into action by buying a wide range of stocks.

Radio's Advance

Manner in which Radio common came to fore as active leader in market and nearly doubled its value in a short space of time is typical of this changed sentiment in Wall Street. A sensational favorite back in 1929, Radio had been ignored for years as a prominent issue. Excellent buying in Columbia Picture certificates, Radio Preferred B, Warner Bros., 20th Century-Fox and Universal preferred all contributed their share towards arousing interest in the amusement shares.

Year was marked by appearance of new and disappearance of old picture stock issues, release of Paramount from receivership, perfection of reorganization by Pathe, the 20th Century-Fox combination, and new deals for Radio-Keith-Orpheum and Universal.

Loew's, Inc. doubled its dividend rate and paid a cash extra; Eastman Kodak hiked its divvy disbursement to $5 annually on common besides paying several cash melons; Columbia Pictures declared a 50% stock dividend, in addition to its $1 cash annual, and then fixed a 5% stock dividend for payment in 1936 while maintaining old cash payment; Consolidated Film Industries paid $1.75 on its preferred; General Electric boosted its rate to 80c.; Westinghouse restored its old $1 rate on the common; Madison Square paid 30c, uch higher than the previous year; Trans-Lux declared 20c on its stock; RCA cleared up all arrearages on its Preferred A and paid $3.50 on this issue during year; Columbia Broadcasting paid $1 cash extra near close of year; and Pathe maintained its customary payments on the preferred.

Par Out of Receivership

Emergence of Paramount from receivership was rated outstanding achievement in Wall Street for the picture industry. With Atlas Corp. doing underwriting job, company reduced liens to an issue for Paramount Pictures and one for Broadway Corp., and removed its stock from Over-the-Counter trading and certificates from big board. In place of these latter two were issued a new common stock, and first and second preferred stocks. All three were listed on N. Y. stock exchange. Expense of reorganization and period of readjustment under new management in recent weeks has been reflected in Street's attitude towards the stock.

Pathe Exchange, Inc., reorganized under title of Pathe Film, supplanted two issues on big board with new common stock. Old preferred (Over-the-Counter) replaced by new preference stock. Company also set up First International, a financial holding company designed primarily to keep contact with First Division. This close relationship and sw which Pathe holds over First Division perhaps is best typified by its interlocking directorates. All three companies are now headquartered in same offices.

Street rated realignment of Fox Film interests with 20th Century as a big improvement. Fox removed its Preferred A stock from trading and exchanged it for issues of common and preferred. Attitude of Wall Street towards 20th Cent-Fox perhaps was reflected by steady rise of both stocks in closing weeks.

Atlas and Lehman Bros.

Another move that was viewed as indicative of trend was Atlas-Lehman Bros. purchase of RCA's Holdings in RKO. Two companies already have bought half of this In-

SAY BERMAN MAY QUIT RKO

ollywood, Dec. 29.

Pandro Berman is reported as possibly resigning as RKO-Radio producer. He's been dissatisfied since appointment of Sam Briskin as v.p. and production head of the studio.

Berman has a covenant running until March, studio holding renewal options.

Since Merian C. Cooper left the studio, Berman has been top man at the plant.

It is said that regulation of Berman's costs would be a certainty in future.

JOHN GOLDEN ON PAR B'D; LEGIT AFFINITY

Election of John Golden, legit producer, to the board of Paramount may mean a closer alliance with the Broadway play field than Par has had in recent years, or since it was hooked up with Charles Frohman, Inc. and Gilbert Miller. The Par board on Thursday (26) appointed Golden member of the directorate. It increases the board to 16, its size prior to the recent resignation of George J. Schaefer.

At present Golden is producing two legit shows, 'Tommorow is a Holiday,' and a road company of 'Three Wise Fools' (revival),. which will star William Gillette.

STARS AROUND THE WORLD

By Wolfe Kaufman

The biggest money stars at the b. .'s around the world for the past year (excluding the United States, and in order of draw strength) were:

Greta Garbo
Shirley Temple
Eddie Cantor
Clark Gable
Charles Laughton
Astaire-Rogers
Marlene Dietrich
Maurice Chevalier
Claudette Colbert
Martha Eggerth

VARIETY's correspondents around the world, plus reports from the foreign sales departments of all the major companies, checked in each geographical locality.

Several names on the list were not present in a similar compilation a year ago, most prominent being Shirley Temple and the Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers team.

Charting the stars around the world brings out some curious highlights, most important of which is the growing strength of local talent. Almost everywhere around the world today there are native stars of real box office strength who frequently equal and better the great American names. Only one of them made inroads enough in countries outside of her native stamping ground to get into the 10 best list, Martha Eggerth, now in Hollywood for Universal but not having made her first American film as yet.

No Longer Universal B. O.

Stars are no longer universally popular, it seems. At least not the way they once were. Greta Garbo is the nearest to having all around world appeal, with Shirley Temple a close second during the year. But there it stops, with all the world's countries listing their preferences differently.

Thus, in Rio de Janeiro, the best b. o. names, in order are: Martha Eggerth, Jeanette MacDonald, Laurel-Hardy, Maurice Chevalier, Eddie Cantor, ing rosby. In Buenos Aires, on the other hand, a few hundred miles down the coast line, the list reads: Shirley Temple, Clark Gable, Astaire-Rogers, Maurice Chevalier, Joan Crawford, Greta Garbo.

France is, today, a good example of the fading Hollywood name world lure and the growth of local talent. In France during the past year, the biggest b. o. names were Harry Baur, Maurice Chevalier, Charles Boyer, Bach, Greta Garbo and Gaby Morlay.

Madrid sticks by the U. S. names: Garbo, Charles Laughton, Dietrich, Martha Eggorth, Cantor, Laurel-Hardy, Temple, Chaplin.

Germany is another strong native-conscious country. Stars' strength there is listed as Emil Jannings, Hans Albers, Garbo, Carl Ludwig Diehl, Paula Weesely, Anny Ondra, Willi Fritsch.

In Sydney, the list for the past year reads: Shirley Temple, Cantor, Gable, Colman, Astaire-Rogers, Robert Donat.

Countries like Japan, China, etc., have a different problem. There is a distinct line between the native and foreign films. Orientals, naturally, have a distinct yen to see their own folk in pictures. Thus, in Japan, for instance, two lists of b. o. draws would have to be made, since there is no basis of comparison. Certain theatres play foreign (white) pix, others play natives. Different exchanges handle each. Different companies for distribution, production and all the rest. In this country, then, one list would read: Gary Cooper, Gable, Temple, Colbert, Dietrich, Garbo, Miriam Hopkins, Fredric March. While the other would read: Chojiro Hayashi, Denjuro Okochi, Sumiko Kurishima, Hiroko Kawasaki, Takako Irie, Tsumasaburo Bando and Kinuya Tanaka.

An insight on choices is given by the check with companies. Foreign offices of the American companies list their stars differently than do the domestic sales departments.

Thus Metro lists its stars as Crawford, Gable, Garbo, Charles Laughton, Jeannette MacDonald and Norma Shearer. The fact that Crawford and Gable are listed ahead of Garbo here surprises, but is probably explained by their being in more films.

Par's Directors Also

Paramount lists names rather than stars, figuring some of its directors of equal or greater sales import than actors. List reads: Dietrich, Gary Cooper, Ernst Lubitsch, Colbert, Cecil B. De Mille, Sylvia Sidney, Pauline Lord, W. C. Fields. Figured that Jan Kiepura will be one of the first two or three here, but his first pic for the company is not completed yet. Mae West doesn't sell any too well abroad, although strong in spots. Same with Bing Crosby.

Warners lists its stars in the foreign mart as Kay Francis, James Cagney, Paul Muni, Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Bette Davis, Joe E. Brown. Figures that Marlon Davies should be in there at the head, or near, but hasn't had more than one Davies pic yet and hasn't decided just what her sales pull is.

Radio rates them: Astaire-Rogers, Katharine Hepburn, Victor McLaglen. Believes that Lily Pons will be there next year and is in doubt whether to list William Powell.

Fox has no doubt about Shirley Temple being tops. After that the list reads Warner Baxter, Janet Gaynor, Jane Withers, Rochelle Hudson, Warner Oland.

Universal, too, has a surprising foreign sales rating: Karloff, Margaret Sullavan, Irene Dunne, Henry Armetta, Buck Jones, Bela Lugosi.

United Artists (including past year's 20th Century pix) lists them as Eddie Cantor, Ronald Colman, Charles Laughton, Robert Donat and Leslie Howard.

Columbia figures them as Grace Moore, Peter Lorre, Frank Capra.

ROUBEN MAMOULIAN

Director of the original "Porgy," "Marco Millions," "Wings Over Europe" and other stage productions. Also directed the current Theatre Guild operetta, "Porgy and Bess."

Director of "Applause," "City Streets," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," "Love Me Tonight," "Song of Songs," "Queen Christina," "We Live Again" and "Becky Sharp," on the screen.

U DENIES FORD AD IN 'AFFAIR OF SUSAN'

St. Louis, Dec.

R. H. Cochran, v. p. of Universal Pictures, advises Fred Wehrenberg, pres. of Motion Picture Theatr Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, that use of closeup shot of a Ford automobile in 'The Affair of Susan' was not in any sense a 'deliberate advertisement,' as Wehrenberg complained in letter sent to Cochran and others recently.

Wehrenberg's complaint was also sent to execs of other producing companies who allegedly were advertising nationally known products in feature films. Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, augmented Wehrenberg's complaint by laying the matter before the Hays office.

Boland-Ruggles First for Harlan Thompson at Par

Hollywood, Dec. 29.

First for Harlan Thompson as associate producer at Paramount will be a Mary Boland-Charles Ruggles comedy.

Goes to work in March, when Miss Boland washes up with 'Jubilee' in New York.

LAEMMLE DEFERS N. Y. TRIP

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, has cancelled his projected trip to N. Y. for the opening, Dec. 30, of 'Magnificent Obsession' at Radio City Music Hall.

Now plans to journey eastwards shortly after New Year's and will remain here until decision has been reached on matter of the C. Rogers-Standard Capital buy-i for U.

It Pays to Play a Paramount Picture!

Hollywood's New Faces, Metro, Par Top Lists

By George McCall

Hollywood, Dec. 29.

Year's end finds Hollywood busy tabulating its investments in talent for the past twelve month. As a farmer computes his accumulated wealth of the year by the amount of storage in his bins, major studios can evaluate their starring possibilities for the coming year by what was developed in talent during the previous year.

Unusually productive has been 1935. Despite the cry that Hollywood shows little interest in new faces, unfamiliar personalities have come to the front in larger numbers during the past year than in any similar period since the screen became audible.

There have been a few cases where players stepped into stardom on one picture such as Nelson Eddy, Fred MacMurray and Eleanor Powell. Most of the 1935 crop of discoveries, however, have managed to get as far as featured players within the year. How far they will go in 1936 is another question; sufficient is the fact that they have at least a good footing on the success road but there's plenty of gumbo ahead.

Metro's Roster

Metro feels particularly proud of its achievement in bringing new faces to the screen last year. Outside of Eddy and Miss Powell, studio has offered and seen accepted Buddy Ebsen, Fredie Bartholomew, William Henry, Sid Silvers, Allan Jones, Edward Norris, Cecilia Parker, Luise Rainer, Rosalind Russell and Robert Taylor. Studio, however, can claim little credit for the forward surge of the Misses Russell and Rainer. Both were considered poor investments until Myrna Loy decided to walk on her contract. 'Escapade' was ready and Miss Rainer was shoved in as a sacrifice to release dates. Same for Miss Russell in 'Rendezvous.' Both hit the ball and are now the subjects of ambitious studio plans.

Metro made an interesting actor of Bruce Cabot after several other studios had failed. Robert Benchley became a featured player through 'China Seas.' Eric Linden, who had become disgusted with pictures and left Hollywood, returned with a bang in 'Ah Wilderness.' Cecilia Parker had been doing bits on the lot until Clarence Brown, over the protests of studio officials, gave her the ingenue lead in the same picture. Both are under term contract to the studio now.

Par's Newcomers

Paramount's list of newcomers who have made an impression is also larger than usual though hardly as potent in possibilities. Outside of MacMurray, none has tipped over the fans. They still have some distance to go before they approach stardom. Paramount, however, concentrated on youth and has developed several personalities who, if not impressive for ability, certainly command notice for freshness.

Best bets are Eleanor Whitney and Robert Cummings, both young Americans. With Johnny Baker, Marsha Hunt, Johnny Downs, Wendy Barrie and Glenn Erickson, studio hopes to have a stock company of young stars who will appeal to the rising generation.

Par's canaries, Mary Ellis and Gladys Swarthout, are still unknown quantities. Miss Ellis' first picture, 'Paris in Spring,' could hardly be considered a fair criterion on her future boxoffice possibilities. The moppet, Virginia Weidler, takes her place among the screen kids getting close to the Temple-Withers combination at 20th Century-Fox.

That for Blackstone!

Other Paramount offerings of the year are Samuel S. Hinds, the Pasadena attorney who forsook Blackstone for grease paint. After two years as a bit player, studio contracted him and hopes he will become an important featured player. Ernest Cossart, imported from the stage, also bids for character honors. Fred Stone is hardly a discovery but he's new to present generation of picture-goers. He's another studio hope, on the Radio lot.

WB Coasted

Warner Bros. who during the two years previous to 1935 introduced more new faces to the screen than all other studios combined, hit a snag last year, coasted along with its now familiar players. Towards the end of the year, studio picked up a few players who have hardly had time to develop. However, there there are several indications of material, which properly shaped, should t to something before long.

James Melton in his first pictures showed considerable ragged edges but should iron out all right. Eddie Acuff looks like a good featured player bet. Sybil Jason, the eight-year-old, should go places if the public does not tire of kid thesplans. Dick Foran, after a r at Fox in which he did nothing, is an important personality in the western field after six months and three pictures at Warners.

Male Leads Coming Through

Anita Kerry, from the stage is getting a slow buildup but the studio has confidence in her personality and ability. Errol Flynn and Ian Hunter are both good possibilities as leading men, something sorely needed by all studios. Marie Wilson, though having made only two pictures, is already in the recognizable class through her ability to handle comedy. She's the sole pickup from Hollywood little theatres during the past year who has managed to get screen credit. Jane Froman, as yet, has to be proven, although WB deems her highly promising.

io's 9 Bets

Radio, for several years needing personalities, brought nine of them to the screen during 1935. Eric Blore and Erik Rhodes were worked overtime with the former in danger of wearing out his welcome unless the studio switches his characterizations. Rhodes, who was forced to use dialect in his first three pictures, switched a straight role in his last which should help this competent player considerably.

Studio does not know what to do with Ray Mayer, comedi So far he has been cast as a heavy. Margot Grahame got away to a good start in the 'Informer.' Margaret Callaghan has had several leads in 'B' pictures, should gather a fan following shortly. Anne Shirley and Moroni Olsen look like possibilities.

Tall end of the year revealed Lily Pons as the studio's best personality offering. Miss Pons, if properly handled, should be potent boxoffice material, but opera singers, as far as story material is concerned, are one of Hollywood's major production problems.

Cobb Among Discoveries

Administrative changes have retarded 20th Century-Fox's developing of players. So far studio brought only Irvin S. Cobb, Rita Cansino and William Benedict to the screen. Late year development was Arthur Treacher, English actor, who has been doing bits for two years. Studio has signed him for a series of pictures based on the P. G. Wodehouse stories.

Samuel Goldwyn has brought to the screen David Niven and Walter Brennen; has also under contract Frank Shields, the tennis player. On his first start, Niven looks good as a leading man. Brennan should go places as a character man on the strength of his work in 'Barbary Coast.' Shields is still known as a rankin tennist.

Columbia, to the roster of possible screen importants, contributed Michael Bartlett, Peter Lorre and Raymond Walburn. Lorre, established as a European star, has the best possibilities of coming to t front.

ASHER ON 'DRACULA'

Hollywood, Dec. 29.

Carl Laemmle, Jr., has transferred production reins of 'Dracula's Daughter' to E. M. Asher. Laemmle is concentrating on 'Lucky Baldwin' and 'Phantom of the Opera.'

'Daughter' skeded for early January start.

FILM THEATRE SETUP IN 1935

By SAM SHAIN

St. Louis trial rocked the trade in 1935.

The RFC has stalled apparently on a loan for the reorganization of the Roxy theatre, N. Y.

With Skouras operating the Rivoli, on Broadway, now for Metropolitan Theatres (formerly Fox Met), the situation of the Roxy theatre, for the coming season, may be one of those things. As the flagship of an important chain in metropolitan New York, the Rivoli's purchasing power and its first-run chain position could replace the Roxy theatre in the scheme of supply and demand on Broadway.

With the Rivoli now of the Metropolitan chai , and under Skouras, the former Fox Met circuit takes on the robes of a major first-run chain, third in this area. Loew and RKO are the others.

Fox Theatres Corp, disposed of its 50% equity in Metropolitan for $150,000 to the United Artists Theatre Circuit, now principal owner. Keith-Albee-Orpheum is a minority interest in Met. Joseph M. Schenck, is head of Met. He also is chairman of the board of 20th Century-Fox film.

Paramount has accepted definitely the principle of decentralized operation.

A marked forward step in the operation of theatres, in 1934, was Herbert Bayard Swope's administration of the affairs of Keith-Albee-Orpheum. Swope, as chairman of the board of KAO, established, with the consent of the directors, a profit sharing plan for the KAO theatre operators and officers. That circuit which lost money in 1934 will show an estimated net of $600,000 for 1935.

Warner's 'Midsummer Night's Dream' relighted the Hollywood, N. Y., on a two-a-day policy. Lower Times Square will have two new theatres soon—a new Rialto on site of the old theatre, Arthur Mayer to operate, and B. S. Moss, who shadowed-boxed for control of Fox Metropolitan, returning to the business as prospective operator of the theatre which is being erected on the site of the former Loew's N. Y.-Criterion. Loew's runs the Mayfair as a grind with the passing of the old New York and its famous Roof.

In Radio City, the Center, smaller of the two Rockefeller houses, is on a diet of straight films, after almost a year in legit with 'The Great Waltz.' The RKO Palace is struggling on double feature policy, changing weekly.

In Chicago

In Chicago, some exhibs howled about Metro's rentals. Felix Feist visited Chi, the hue and cry faded.

Balaban & Katz and RKO flashed swords in Chicago; didn't last very long.

The NRA Code disappeared and how quickly it was forgotten! The business ceased to argue about ethics.

Premiums and giveaways still hold the trade's interest. Radio is full of premiums and the theatres in the trade are getting more of these. The problem exists and becomes more perplexing. This is in addition to dime admission places which have sprung up.

Industry now beset with the ancient problem of double bills. About one-half of the country's theatres twin-billing.

Heaped to other dilemmas of the theatre industry is the penchant of legislators to harass the film business. 'Spokesmen' of the trade compiled 50 'anti-film' tax bills pending in various state legislatures.

Free Shows

But if these were not sufficient obstacles to hurdle. Standard Oil and other sponsors of the radio, where premiums are rampant, decided to route free shows around parts of the country, in direct competition to established theatres and amusement places. By concerted action the film biz was able to stop this competition from the industrial firms.

If anything, therefore, the 1934-35 period was not a rose path for the theatre end.

40-Min. Featurettes Circumvent Double Billing Ban in Chi

Chicago, Dec. 29.

A number of 40-minute pictures, too long to be classified as shorts and too short to be figured as a featurc, are hitting the midwest. Fact that the doubling of regulation features is outlawed in this territory has brought this about. In order to get around this double-feature ban several of the exchanges slice down their regular-length features to 40-minute length, which is not classed as a regular feature and therefore okay to tie in with a standard feature. Featurette and regular picture are sold by bulk of the local theatres as a twin bill.

Example of this new practice is 'Little America' (Par), cut to 40 minutes at the Roosevelt, with 'Collegiate' (Par). Paramount also cut down 'Wings Over Ethiopia'. 'Dealers in Death' (Indie) i another 40-minute featurette.

RKO Operating the R. C. Houses Another 90 Days

Very likely that there will be an extension for 90 days, until March 1, 1936, of the presently existing arrangement between the two Radio City theatres and the RKO theatre end (RKO Service Co.), whereby for certain advisory services which may be performed from time to time the RKO end is paid a nominal weekly fee by the Radio City theatres.

The arrangement is one which has been in force right along and which was previously extended until Dec. 31, 1935, between the parties. It has no real effect on the operation of the Radio City theatres (the Music Hall and Center).

Actual operation of the Radio City theatres is under the direction of Rockefeller appointed representatives, headed by W. G. Van Schmus.

Republic's Realignment

On his return from the Coast and conferences with Nat Levine, Republic's new v.p. over production, Louis S. Lifton will be stationed in New York as eastern story editor. He left for the Coast Christmas day. Levine also is now back on the Coast.

Along with the new setup in Republic, which has Walter Vincent, theatre operator, as chairman of the board, other appointments have been made of a less important character. William L. Pelrce, formerly on the Coast, has joined the publicity department at the h.o., while Bernard Bernbaum has been appointed Hollywood advertising director.

Naming of Walter Vincent (Wilmer & Vincent) as chairman of the board of Republic is viewed by some industry leaders as constituting a complete reversal of policy by this company on dual bills. Following closely on heels of Eddie Golden's departure from company's ranks accentuates this belief.

Vincent not only is active head of a circuit, operating largely in Pennsylvania and Virginia, that always has leaned towards the single picture policy but he personally has been an ardent opponent of double-feature programs. Whether or not he will carry this attitude into Republic is not definitely known but it is rated a logical development.

'May Time' a Special

Hollywood, Dec. 29.

'May Time' is being groomed by Irving Thalberg as a Metro special. Gets a 'Cavalcade' pattern, running through from Revolutionary War to current times.

Dwight Taylor is scripting.

'Little femme fatale, have you been?'

'Scaring kiddies who-dun-its. Stooging around for laughs.'

'Dear, How terrible. So they don't let you get your man any more?'

'Get him! Even Harpo Marx has quit chasing us. That Mae West!'

'Why do you say 'that West?' '

'She did this to us, the Upperoffer.'

'Pr

'Mae takes our game out of the boudoir into the joint, that's what she ris used to hold our cards close to our bosoms, mysterious like. So Mae puts hers on the table, plus a laugh.'

'What'll you do with all your old slinky black satin dresses?'

'Cut 'em up and make 'em over into costumes of a past era. They may still believe us if we claim that's the way it went in the classics. Though what's happened to us in history has been pretty sad lately, too. Look what happened to Marlene in 'The Devil Is a Woman.' They laughed when she put a flower between her teeth. Garbo was a good mother in 'Karenina.' Think of it. Oberon got out from under just in time, the double-crosser. Went over to the enemy, joined up with the modern girls. Those modern girls. In fact, modern girls, phooey.'

'What is the matter with the modern girl?'

'Too skinny.'

'Continue.'

'Skinny, frank, upright, honest, bright, regular, capable, self-possessed, resourceful, decent, fine, splendid. And they've all got a sense of humor. Hideous qualities in a woman. Myrna Loy, Ginger Rogers, Kate Hepburn—the tennis players! And in shorts, yet.'

'Maybe they play good tennis.'

'That's the trouble. Companionable. They want to be pals. Don't they know sometimes it's more companionable to let the champagne get you, that sometimes it's more pally not to know what you're doing? Not them. They know all the answers, can't wait to blurt 'em out. No mystery, no subtlety, not an undulation in the pack of 'em.'

'They seem to be doing all right.'

'With what? William Powell? Edmund Lowe? Franchot Tone? Smart alecks. It takes Harlow or Joan to get Gable, please notice. Harlow's not skinny. Joan's sense of humor will never tear her down. Goo'-by.'

'Where you going?'

'To my tap lesson.'

LOEW'S HAS CHAPLIN 1ST RUN OUTSIDE N. Y.

New Charles Chaplin picture, 'Modern Times' has been obtained by Loew's circuit for first run in some 46 cities outside of New York. Deal was closed by J. R. Vogel for Loews. Contr ct includes Poli circuit, under Loew operation, in New England, and some 38 other spots extending from Providence to Houston, Tex.

Though exact terms were not divulged, deal is reported to have set a new high for a single feature, making '. odern Times' one of most expensive attractions to play Loew's circuit houses in years. Deciding factor in granting first-run privileges to Loew's said to have been manner in which 'City Lights,' last Chaplin pix, was handled.

Reported that picture is in on 40% of gross percentage, which is customary. In the past Chaplin always held out for that percentage from chains, and 50-50 fro indie houses.

'Mary Burns'-SMU Band Big $20,000 At L. A. Par; 'Rebel' $31,000, 2 Houses, 'Scarlett' $15,000 in Day-and-Dater

Los Angeles, Dec. 29.

(Best Exploitation: Chinese-State)

Xmas brought cheer to all of the first run contingent here. Best Yule week houses have had since 1929, with Paramount leader of pack where 'Mary Burns' and the Southern Methodist University band on stage are the draw. 'Littlest Rebel' at Chinese and State got the kiddies and grownups from Christmas day on. Pic in here for six and half day week to allow successor to get New Year's eve start.

'Mister Hobo' at the Four Star only so-so. 'Mutiny' held over for fourth week at United Artists will continue to keep house out of the red for fourth consecutive stanza.

Chinese and State worked every possible stunt on 'Littlest Rebel.' They sold L. A. Times to sponsor Orphans' Xmas showing for 2,500 kiddies, first time that paper had gone back of such an idea. Street railway and auto services carried kids to theatre, with local department store giving away 41 Shirley Temple dresses. Houses also went strong on window tieups besides doubling daily newspaper ad budget of previous week. Result was obvious by way kiddies have been frequenting the two houses.

Estimates for This Week

Chinese (Grauman) (2,028; 30-40-55)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th). House handling more youngsters than has had since current policy, geared for a cinch $14,000 on 6½-day run. Last week 'Whipsaw' (MG) and 'Red Salute' (UA) came through limper than stride expected to $7,600 finale, but oke.

Downtown (WB) (1,800; 30-35-40)—'Dangerous' (WB). Holiday will give house neat $7,000, oke. Last week 'Pay Off' (WB) and 'Personal Maid' (WB) not so good, $2,700.

Four Star (Fox) (900; 30-35)—'Mister Hobo' (GB). Moderate grosser, around $4,000. Last week 'Monte Carlo' (20th), third and final, faded out to $2,300, which gave house even break for blowoff.

Hollywood (WB) (2,756; 30-35-40-55)—'Dangerous' (WB). Not particularly a holiday attraction, but grossing neatly and will wind up with around $8,000. Last week 'Payoff' (WB) and 'Personal Maid' (WB) a little better than estimated but not good at $3,600.

Orpheum (Bdwy) (2,270; 25-30-35-40)—'Paddy O'Day' (20th) and vaude. With corking stage show to help, gaited for a cinch $8,500. Last week 'False Pretenses' (Ches) and 'Lucky Legs' (WB). With good stage show, just got nowhere, shy of $4,000.

Pantages (Pan) (2,700; 25-35-40)—'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO). Hepburn fits better here than downtown, so for 6½-day run will bring in around $8,000, which is oke but under expectations. Last week 'Rainmakers' (RKO) and 'Another Face' (RKO) brutal at $3,000.

Paramount (Partmar) (3,595; 30-40-55)—'Mary Burns' (Par) and stage show. Off strong with the S.M.U. band credited for plenty draw power; surely hit $20,000, big. Last week 'Coronado' (Par) and 'Nevada' (Par), six days, bit disappointing in finishing up $11,800.

RKO (2,950; 25-35-40-55)—'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO). Not a typical Yule attraction for this downtown house which will have to struggle along with a $7,000; much more expected. Last week 'Rainmakers' (RKO) and 'Another Face' (RKO) only $3,100.

State (Loew-Fox) (2,024; 30-40-55)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th). Temple pic a sure $17,000 for 6½ days. Last week 'Whipsaw' (MG) and 'Red Salute' (UA), $9,800.

United Artists (Fox-UA) (2,100; 30-40-55) — 'Mutiny' (MG) (4th week). Finish up around $5,100. Last week (third) a big $5,700, is outstanding for holdover.

N. H. REBOUNDS

Post-Xmas Biz Up—Par, Poli, Sherman in 7G Brackets

New Haven, Dec. 29.

(Best Exploitation: Poli)

Okay rebound from pre-holiday slump. Roger Sherman getting nice word-of-mouth on 'Dangerous' and 'Hobo,' with draw even. 'Two Cities' off to slow start, but comment favorable.

Poli's rates bally blue ribbon this week on big campaign for 'Cities.' Tie-in with auto dealer giving away two prize autos, serial story in news columns; book marks in library; roto heralds inserted in Sunday papers; free Libertys with corner envelope; heralds in laundry packages; half hour air show; lecture by prep school dean to pupils; bookstore window display; clothing store stills of Colman in full dress; extra news space.

Estimates for This Week

Paramount (M&P) (2,348; 35-50)—'Collegiate' (Par) and 'Nevada' (Par). Big opening points to nice $7,000. Last week 'Great Life' (Par) and 'Scrooge' (Par) scratched out a light $3,600 on five days.

Poli (Loew) (3,040; 35-50)—'Two Cities' (MG). Not too good as a single, despite heavy campaign; around $7,000. Last week 'In the Air' (MG) and 'Kind Lady' (MG) rated the usual low pre-Xmas $4,100 on five days.

Roger Sherman (WB) (2,200; 35-50)—'Dangerous' (WB) and 'Hobo' (GB). Ropes up for opening and holding steady for good $7,300. Last week 'No Mercy' (20th) and 'Rainmakers' (RKO) weak, as expected, at $3,800 on six days.

College (Loew) (1,565; 25-35)—'Musketeers' (RKO) and 'Too Tough to Kill' (Col). Headed for oke $4,000. Last week 'Devil's Island' (Col) and 'Navy Wife' (20th), drew action fans for surprising $3,200 on five days.

Coogan, Grable, With 'Wilderness' $26,500 in Wash.

Washington, Dec. 29.

Town came out of the dumps with a bang Christmas Day, and it has been clear sailing ever since. All but two vaudfilm spots are opening new flickers on the holiday, idea being to run 'em seven days and change again New Year's Eve.

Despite flock of good celluloid and lavish stage bills, nobody pulled any unusual bally. Just plenty ad space and holiday mood. It worked.

Estimates for This Week

Fox (Loew) (3,424; 25-35-60)—'Ah Wilderness' (MG) and vaude. Jackie Coogan and Betty Grable on stage. Swell $26,500. Last week 'Chan's Secret' (20th) and circus on stage took kids for oke $18,000.

Earle (WB) (2,424; 25-35-40-70)—'Captain Blood' (WB) and vaude. Should see big $20,000. Last week 'Miss Pacific Fleet' (WB). Light $14,500.

Palace (Loew) (2,363; 25-35-60)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th). Should get good $17,500. Last week 'Kentucky' (20th). Weak $11,500 when whole town was in doldrums.

Keith's (RKO) (1,830; 25-35-60)—'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO). Opened big and holding up adequately, despite round panning by most critics. Hoping for good $12,000. Last week 'Another Face' (RKO). Died in five days with floppo $2,900.

Met (WB) (1,853; 25-40)—'Nevada' (Par). Only western on main stem taking kids for good $4,500. Last week 'Man of Iron' (FN) flopped in five days with $1,800.

Belasco (Radin) (1,100; 25-35-50-70)—'New Gulliver' (Serlin-Burstyn). First Russian flicker of season, and puppet angle getting by with average $3,000. Last week 'Mimi' (FD) milked five extra days for weak $1,500.

Columbia (Loew) (1,263; 25-40)—'Thanks a Million' (20th). Third week downtown shooting at good $5,000. Last week 'Gay Deception' (20th). Light $1,800 for five days.

Wallaces Didn't Forget Par Plane Crash Near K.C.

Kansas City, Dec. 29.

The country folk in the vicinity of Barnesville, Mo., who aided the dying and injured when the TWA liner crashed last May with a load of motion picture (Par) people, enjoyed a 'Christmas' provided by Richard Wallace, Paramount picture director, and Mrs. Wallace. He is one of the survivors of the accident.

Celebration was at the home of William Jenkins and Bland Gentner, first to reach the scene of the accident, who distributed the gifts.

Seattle's Many Duals Mostly Oke; Shirley And 'Millions' $10,000

Seattle, Dec. 29.

(Best Exploitati... Fifth Ave.)

Whole town goes dual starting Christmas day. Hamrick-Evergreen combo used opening full page ads in two leading papers, all houses grouped, telling the glad tidings of big value, with no advance in prices.

Ideas is to impress public that duals doesn't mean two weak ones, but all major product, one naturally topping the other, but with plan to have both features of ace rank. Duals are new for the ace Fifth Ave. of the circuit.

As counter-attack the usually dualed Liberty, (Jensen-von Herberg) comes into the fold with a singleton, the only one in the burg, in any kind of a theatre, downtown, nabe or subsequent. Lib is using 'If You Could Cook,' (Col) and plenty of shorts to balance the fare. Christmas day openings helped takes.

Best exploitation at Fifth Ave. for the Shirley Temple opus, with tieup with leading dept. store, display of S. T. dolls and 300 'courtesy' ducats to kiddies as Xmas gift.

Estimates for This Week

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (900; 27-37-42)—'Musketeers' (RKO) and 'Stormy' (U). Held over 3 days on this week, for $2,500. Dionne reel added Xmas day helped; Last week $4,300, big.

Coliseum (Evergreen) (1,800; 21-32)—'Barbary Coast' (UA) and 'Tunnel' (GB), dual. Big at $4,200 on six days. Last week 'O'Shaughnessy' (MG) and 'Little America' (Par) four days, $1,200, slow.

Fifth Ave. (Evergreen) (2,400; 27-37-42)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th) and 'Millions in Air' (Par). Duals getting gasps at this spot. Looks to reach heavy $10,000 with matinees especially good. Last week 'Monte Carlo' (Fox), six days, $4,500, terrible.

Liberty (J-vH) (1,900; 16-27-37)—'If You Could Cook' (Col). Only singleton in town, playing with shorts, getting $7,000, fine. Last week 'Bar 20' (Par) and 'Scrooge' (Par), five days, $2,100, slow.

Music Box (Hamrick) (900; 27-37-42)—'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) and 'Great Impersonation' (U), dual. Big $4,000. Last week, 'Whipsaw' (MG), six days, $2,200, slow.

Orpheum (Hamrick) (2,700; 27-37-42)—'Collegiate' (Par) and 'No Mercy' (20th). Dandy dual, en route to $10,500. Last week, 'Miss Pacific Fleet' (FN), five days, $3,700, fair.

Paramount (Evergreen) (3,106; 27-37-42)—'Kids and Queen' (U) and 'Chan's Secret' (20th). Former renamed locally 'The Old Battleax.' Strong at $5,500. Last week, 'Storm Over Andes' (U) and 'Broadway Hostess' (FN), dual, bad, $2,300.

Jack Little with 'Collegiate' Nice $28,000, Detroit; 'Rebel' Big $35,000

Detroit, Dec. 29.

(Best Exploitation: Fox)

Biz pretty strong everywhere despite snow and cold, with 'Littlest Rebel,' held over at the Fox, headed for a terrific $35,000. New Year's Eve shows, ranging from 55c. top at the State to $1.50 tops at the Fox and Michigan, will up grosses considerably.

Shirley Temple's film at the Fox is still getting a big press play, with Molasses 'n' January plus the Human Ford on the stage serving as good tieups with General Foods and Ford Motor Co. Fox also holds local amateur winners.

Estimates for This Week

Fox (Fox) (5,000; 25-35-55)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th) (2d week) plus amateurs, Molasses 'n' January and Human Ford on stage. Headed for big $35,000; first week showed $26,000.

Michigan (United etroit) (4,000; 25-35-55) — 'Collegiate' (Par) and Little Jack Little's Revue. Should do excellent $28,000. Last week 'Stars Over Broadway' (W) and Whitey- ild $13,000.

Adams (Balaban) (1,700; 25-40)—'Fang and Claw' (RKO). Good for big $7,000. Last week 'Remember Last Night' (U) and 'Grand Exit' (Col) delivered neat $5,000.

State (United) (3,000; 25-40)—'Coronado' (Par) and 'Man of Iron' (WB). Exceptional $7,000 pace. Last week (four days) of 'Mutiny' (MG) wound up with $3,000, good.

Downtown (RKO) (2,500; 25-35-55)—'Scarlet' (RKO). Opened Xmas, headed for okay $10,400. 'Dance Band' (FD) and 'Spanish Cape Mystery' (Rep) wound up weak $3,500. 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) moves in New Year's Eve.

United Artists (United) (2,000; 25-35-55) — 'Two Cities' (MG). Looks headed for smash $14,000. Last week 'Last of Pagans' (MG) hit by pre-holiday slump delivered $3,500.

Europa (475; 25-40)—'Waltz ime in Vienna.' German-made holding over for second week, doing $800. Last week film exactly half, $400.

'2 Cities' Raves Good For $25,000 In Philly; Openings All Mixed Up

Defective Film Causing Fire Not 'Change's Fault

Minneapolis, Dec. 29.

If defective film starts a fire in a theatre operating booth it is due to the operator's negligence and no liability attaches to the film exchange furnishing it, according to a decision handed down by the district court at Fergus Falls, Minn., in a $2,500 damage suit brought by M. L. Sondegaard, Parkers Prairie, Minn., exhibitor against RKO's Minneapolis exchange.

S. P. Halpern, of Minneapolis, counsel for RKO, contended that defective film in itself could not cause the fire which necessarily must have been brought about by the booth operator's negligence. The court sustained this contention and found in the defendant's favor.

Philadelphia, Dec. 29.

There will be a general change of schedule in the downtown picture houses Tuesday (31). Some houses will shove in their new films at the regular morning opening time, others start with the New Year's midnight show. Stanley changes at 5 p. m. Exceptions to the Tuesday change rule are the Boyd and Aldine, where 'Tale of Two Cities' and 'I Dream Too Much' hold over, and the Earle, which keeps its regular Friday change policy unbroken.

All of which means a number of odd-sized weeks.

'Two Cities' got the best collection of rave notices recorded here in Philly in many moons. It opened Christmas Day and in its first full week should get $25,000, not figuring the New Year's midnight show which should properly belong to the second week. Dickens' picture should stay at the Boyd for three weeks unless bottom drops out after the holidays, and that is not expected.

'I Dream Too Much,' which also opened Christmas Day, should get a nice $15,000 at the Aldine, and holds over. Earle with 'Miss Pacific Fleet' on screen, and N. T. G. show on the stage ought to get between $19,000 and $20,000.

Estimates for This Week

Aldine (1,200; 40-55-65)—'Dream Too Much' (UA). Will get a fine $15,000 on first full week and a holdover. 'If You Could Cook' (Col) got $7,000, a little more than expected.

Arcadia (600; 25-40-5)—'Wilderness' (MG), second run. Most disappointing, maybe $2,800. Last week 'Mutiny' (MG), second week of second run; fine $4,500.

Boyd (2,400; 40-55)—'Two Cities' (MG). Biggest thing in town and figuring for $25,000 with chance for more; run indicated. Last week 'Whipsaw' (MG) $5,500 in four-day, second week.

Earle (2,000; 25-40-50) — 'Fleet' (WB) and vaude. Not switching weekly change date; $19,000 or $20,000 indicated. Last week 'Broadway Hostess' (FN) and vaude. Fair $14,500.

Fox (3,000; 40-55-65) — 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) and stage show. In five-day second week, looks for $19,000. 'King of Burlesque' opens New Year's Eve (Midnight). Last week 'Rebel' soared to swell $31,500.

Karlton (1,000; 25-35-40)—'Crime and Punishment' (Col), second run. Only six days and won't get over $2,200. Last week 'Freckles' (RKO) only four days; sad $1,500.

Keith's (2,000; 30-40-50)—'Cook' (Col). Second run, $3,000 likely. Last week 'Mr. Hobo' (GB), second run, for $2,800.

Stanley (3,700; 40-55)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par) getting three-day second week for probable $4,000. 'Captain Blood' in Tuesday. 'Bride' got $15,000 in first week.

Stanton (1,700; 30-40-50)—'Fang and Claw' (RKO). Getting considerable juve play; getting $8,000 and no holdover, although that's a good figure. 'Riff Raff' Tuesday.

'Opera,' $6,000, 'Cities,' $7,000, 'Rebel,' OK, Port.

Portland, Ore., Dec. 29.

(Best Exploitation: Brdwy)

With most pix opening Xmas day all grosses soared to boom heights. Odd freak b. o. twist was second week of 'Littlest Rebel' at Paramount. Pre-Christmas opening week of that pic suffered but the holiday rebound on the second lap is big stuff.

UA and Broadway turned on high steam exploitation for 'Two Cities' and 'Night at Opera,' both spots answering with heavy trade. 'Cities' will undoubtedly hold for two or more weeks following a six week record breaking run of 'Mutiny' at the UA. 'Mutiny' now goes to the grinds with nabes and others eager for subsy runs of that pic.

Practically no competish in the burg, and general biz on the up and up. It looks like clear sailing ahead with good product rather than gag stunts getting the best b.o. response. This week midnite matinees at most major spots swelled the local holiday grosses.

Signs of better pic biz at the b.o. evident in J. J. Parker's undertaking to build new house at Pendleton, Ore. House will cost about $75,000 and is first theatre construction in these parts for several years. New spot opens latter half of Jan.

Estimates for This Week

Broadway (Parker) (2,000; 25-40)—'Night at Opera' (MG). Getting a big play on the holiday trade and should close for a good $6,000. Last week 'Whipsaw' (MG) ran 12 days altogether for total of $7,700; suffered last six days from pre-Christmas slump.

United Artists (Parker) (1,000; 25-40)—'Two Cities' (MG). Great Xmas biz, answering exploitation, first week $7,000, corking, and will hold. Last week 'Mutiny' (MG) closed its sixth stanza for okay $2,600; first five weeks ran up a record total gross of $31,000.

Paramount (Evergreen) (3,000; 25-40)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th) (2d week). Getting bigger returns than first, holiday trade responsible for this freak b.o. twist; second week getting good $5,500, with first fair $4,600.

Orpheum (Hamrick - vergreen) (2,000; 25-40)—'Collegiate' (Par) and 'No Mercy' (20th). Fair combo profiting from general b.o. upturn, and okay at $5,000. Last week 'Monte Carlo' (20th) and 'Guard That Girl' (Col) another pre-holiday sufferer with disappointing $3,300.

Mayfair (Parker - Evergreen) (1,400; 25-40)—'Couldn't Take It' (Col) and '$1,000 a Minute' (Rep). Fair combo getting fair results at $2,000. Last week 'Powder Smoke Range' (RKO) and 'Payoff' (FN) got a better than average play on the horse opera and nicely for $2,600.

'2 CITIES,' 'SCARLETT,' TEMPLE OK IN OMAHA

Omaha, Dec. 29.

(Best Exploitation: Omaha)

Christmas day openings at all houses brought in a bevy of stellar films the like of which picture fans haven't been offered in weeks. Weather the only element handicapping houses with blizzard and sub-zero temperatures. May dent entire week.

Vying for leadership are 'Tale of Two Cities' and the Shirley Temple's latest. Brandeis, with 'Sylvia Scarlett,' will have to look on, but set for a nice dip into black ink.

Last week's weakies both in film value and gross returns up to usual poor average. Epidemic of scarlet fever made slight returns a certainty. Mercury slump likewise cut in last week as it is doing currently.

Exploitation credit is rather acknowledgment for commanding ads. Omaha dominated the amusement page all week on the strength of cooperative ads. Orpheum which last week took first place with its 'City of Dreams' in the lobbies for the kiddies still in the notice with a holdover on the special lobby for the current week.

Estimates for This Week

Omaha (Blank-Tri-States) (2,100; 25-40)—'Two Cities' (MG). Brought in with the national Christmas Day break behind some large ads and other heavy plugging. Off to a good start despite zero weather. Holiday makes it virtually two weekends of business within the seven days, and $10,000 very likely, fine money due entirely to the Dickens story. 'Little America' (Par) makes it dual. Last week 'Red the Rose' (Par) dualled with 'Music Is Magic' (20th) held six days for very light $5,000.

Orpheum (Blank-Tri-States) (2,976; 25-40)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th) and 'Uncle Dudley' (20th). Whole show will bring money here that hasn't been seen in weeks. Holds full week and should near $11,000 with the holiday opening and a weekend tossed in for good measure. Last week 'Mr. Hobo' (GB) with 'Kids and Queen' (U) flickers for five-day stretch to allow for the Christmas opening, weak at $4,000.

Brandeis (Singer-RKO) (1,250; 25-35-40)—'Scarlett' (RKO) and 'Devil's Island' (Col) dualled with the Hepburn film and the Dionne's 'Xmas Party' tossed in as added attraction. May approach $6,000 in the full week, very good money. Last week 'Baldpate' (RKO) with 'Dan Matthews' (Col) less than so-so at $3,500.

Palace, Chi, Back to $2 Reserved Seats, but Don't Get Excited—It's Only for N.Y.E.; 'Kid' $44,000

Chicago, Dec. 29.
(Best Exploitation: Chicago)

Boom times are here. tarting lth the day after Christmas, despite the snow and zero weather of the early winter season, the town showed immediate transfusion of new blood with the start of generally new shows on Friday.

Palace went novel by changing its show Christmas day and will send in a new one Tuesday (31) for two special reserved-seat performances at a top of $2.20. House is already well sold for the two performances, which should garner about $8,000.

New Year's eve and day business looks like a cinch throughout the town and will mean zoom takes on the week. Bulk of the houses are turning on plenty of box-office pressure, with only the United Artists preparing to go past New Year's day for any length of time with a so-so attraction, 'Splendor' is doing only a fairish trade there. It sticks until Jan. 8 to be replaced by 'Captain Blood.' On New Year's day the Roosevelt switches from 'Collegiate' to 'Rose of the Rancho' (Par).

Chicago, Oriental, State-Lake and Palace are all showing fine strength currently. Apollo brought back 'Midsummer Night's Dream' for additional two-a-daying, figuring on the kids out of school. Chicago with a triple wallop of 'Frisco Kid' plus Milton Berle and Paul Lukas on the stage is on a big spurt, going into its biggest money in months. House is pounding away at present on all exploitation angles by Archie Herzoff, on a powerful line of attractions.

Estimates for This Week

Apollo (B&K) (1,200; 55-83-$1.10-$1.65)—'Dream' (WB) (4th week). Brought back to loop after week layoff and school kids are responding for good $9,000 on repeat. Will stick one more session. Last week 'Metropolitan' (20th). Weak $2,100.

Chicago (B&K) (4,000; 35-55-75)—'Frisco Kid' (WB) and stage show. Milton Berle and Paul Lukas on stage and adding to the general cheer. House rides to forefront with walloping $44,000. Last week 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) bucked the Xmas slump to okay $25,100.

Garrick (B&K) (900; 25-35-55)—'Monte Carlo' (20th). Ronald Colman drawing the femmes and title getting the trade and generally upping to big $8,000 on holiday gallop. Last week 'Stella Parish' (WB), $2,200, fine for the Xmas nosedive in its second loop stanza.

Oriental (B&K) (3,200; 25-35-40)—'One Way Ticket' (Col) and vaude. Strong vaude in expectation of New Year's trade and started off Friday to best start in weeks, which means $22,000, zowie. Last week sad for 'Pay Off' (Par) at $12,800.

Palace (RKO) (2,500; 35-45-65)—'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) and 'Round the Town' unit. Opened on Christmas day (25) and will snag powerful $22,000 for the session in between the two holidays. Goes out Tuesday (31) to be replaced by 'I Dream Too Much' (RKO) and vaude, which starts two shows at $2.20 top. Last week's five-day session should be quietly and quickly forgotten for 'Great Impersonation' (U) at hopeless $8,900 in face of pre-holiday toboggan.

Roosevelt (B&K) (1,500; 35-45-65)—'Collegiate' (Par). Also 'Little America' (Par) as a 40-minute featurette. Doubtful picture from the start and goes out Tuesday (31), after 11 flabby days to be replaced by 'Rose of Rancho' (Par). Maybe $15,000 for the 11 days, soggy.

State-Lake (Jones) (2,700; 20-25-35-40)—'Music Is Magic' (20th) and 'Band Box' unit. Will garner $16,000 easily. Last week half-and-half for 'Ship Cafe' (Par) at $9,800.

United Artists (B&K-UA) (1,700; 35-55-65)—'Splendor' (UA). Public passed this up from the bell, and it will go just two weeks after its opening on Xmas day. Will hit around $12,000 for first week, aided by the holidays. Last week 'Mutiny' (MG) finished four weeks' stay to $8,100. 'Captain Blood' (WB) Jan. 8.

Birmingham, Dec. 29.

Coldest weather of year has kept folks around radios but 'Top Hat' doing exceptionally well considering weather and Christmas hangover. Not set for holdover as would likely have been case had been played other than at present.

'Mary Burns' only fair at itz. The old fires at home feel too good.

Estimates for This Week

Alabama (Wilby-Kincey) (2,800; 30-35-40)—'Top Hat' (RKO). For eight days ending Tuesday, good for around $7,500, very good considering. Last week ld' (WB), five days, $3,000.

Ritz (Wilby-Kincey) (1,600; 25-30)—'Mary Burns' (Par) through Tuesday. 'Splendor' (UA) coming in then. 'Fugitive' $9,000 for week. Last week, 'Remember Last Night' (U), $2,000 on short week.

Strand (W-K) (800; 25)—'Rainmakers' (RKO). Ended Saturday, getting $1,600. 'Whispering Smith Speaks' (20th) for two days with 'Keeper Bees' (Mon) opening New Years, latter two pix for one week $2,400.

Empire (Acme) (1,100; 25)—'Stella Parish' (FN). Christmas through New Year's gives good break, $3,000. Last week, 'Dance Band' (FD) on six days $1,400, poor.

'Cities' $15,000, Shirley $12,000 In Providence

Providence, Dec. 29.
(Best Exploitation: Loew's)

The boys are smiling again; biz is up. Natives slowly but surely turning from the spirit of the holidays to the theatres. In some instances grosses are climbing close to records. Most of the stands downtown got an early start this week, bills being switched on Chrismas Day.

Best bets so far look like 'Tale of Two Cities,' 'Red the Rose' and 'Littlest Rebel.' Latter opened as usual on Friday at Majestic, but others got their start on Christmas and most of the coin is in the till by this time.

'Two Cities' seems headed for $15,000 gross, and more if the breaks are right. 'Rose' will be over $9,000, and 'Rebel' should wind up the week with a nifty $12,000, Shirley Temple ranking high in these parts. Katharine Hepburn's 'Sylvia Scarlett' at Albee got poor start, despite Christmas opening, but things look brighter now.

A little more activity this week among the p. a. boys, practically every stand making a stab for holiday biz. Loew's took the nod by virtue of several well executed stunts designed to attract every type of fan. Stuff mostly routine, but job very thorough, Chris Wilbert, Loew p. a., having a tough time in taking attention of department store heads, and the like, away from the holiday rush.

Estimates for This Week

Strand (Indie) (2,200; 15-25-40)—'Red the Rose' (Par) and 'Spanish Cape Mystery' (Rep). Off to nice start and keeping pace; made best showing in town Christmas Day, despite opening later in day than any other stand in Providence; house gave staff half-holiday on Christmas, upsetting all precedent, but attracting plenty attention: pace augurs for $9,000 gross, and more if there's no deuces in the deck. Last week 'Coronado' (Par) and 'Scrooge' (Par). Old customary pre-holiday biz at $5,000 for six days.

Loew's State (3,200; 15-25-40)—'Two Cities' (MG). Bally okay and critics kind, but start rather poor; picking up, and if the breaks are right, house can figure on at least $15,000 with chances of bettering. Last week 'If You Could Cook' (Col) and 'Kind Lady' (MG). Off at $5,300 on six days.

Majestic (Fay) (2,200; 15-25-40)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th). One of the two stands not jockeying opening to get the holiday breaks, sticking to regular Friday change: picture will be well past the $10,000 mark, and probably $12,000. Last week 'Stella Parish' (WB) and 'Society Fever' (Chest). Took it on the chin at $5,000.

RKO Albee (2,500; 15-25-40)—'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) and 'Seven Keys' (RKO). Start not so good, but pickup indicates close to $7,500; oke. Last week 'Melody Lingers On' (UA) and 'Another Face' (RKO). Plenty off at $4,000.

Fay's (2,000; 15-25-40)—'Iron Man' (WB) and stage show. Plenty forte and should come out of the fog for first $7,500 gross in weeks. Last week 'Whispering Smith' (20th) and vaude. Off at $6,000.

'PETTICOAT' ASSIGNMENTS

Hollywood, Dec. 29.

Metro assigned George Fitzmaurice to direct 'Petticoat Fever,' with Robert Montgomery heading the cast.

Bernie Hym n produces.

LINCOLN BULLISH

Sharp Post-Xmas Recovery—'Rebel' Strong for $4,000

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 29.
(est Exploitation: Lincoln)

Sharp recovery is being shown here as result of the Xmas holiday opening all around town, after a bitter pre-Xmas week of worse than doldrums. Hardest of the climbers is 'Littlest Rebel' at the Stuart which will see $4,000 in all probability. Lily Pons, hindered by a sluggish previous operatic week with 'Metropolitan,' is not doing as well as expected at the Lincoln, although the pace is satisfactory.

'Two stage shows are in line—at the Orpheum; Jackie Heller and the 'International Follies' on first—at top price of 40c, and getting plenty of play.

Exploitation for Pons pic the only stunt in town.

Estimates for This Week

Colonial (LTC) (550; 10-20)—'Fang and Claw' (RKO), four days, and 'East of Java' (U), three days. Although biting cold here, pair is expected to get near $1,000 in a marvelous after-Xmas recovery. Last week 'Swifty' (Div) and 'Man of Iron' (FN) in for 6 days on a split, a mere $550, n.s.h.

Lincoln (LTC) (1,600; 10-20-25)—'Dream Too Much' (RKO). Heading for a likely $2,400, good enough. Pic was given the talk by an invite preview three days ahead of the opening. Last week (6 days) 'This is Life' (20th) very good in the face of coming Xmas, $1,600.

Orpheum (LTC) (1,200; 10-15-20-25-40)—'Uncle Dudley' (20th) and 'International Follies' featuring Little Jackie Heller in for two days with top price 40c. Three days following is Hilton Sisters unit and 'Coronado' (Par). Gross likely to hit $3,700, mighty good. Last week 'Navy Wife' (20th) and stage show, followed by two days of 'Scrooge' (Par), finished with $1,900, good considering.

Stuart (LTC) (1,900; 10-25-40)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th). Ideal Xmas picture and in this top-priced house where it'll cost mamas to take their young. This holiday command performance sure of $4,000 for the stretch. Last week 'Metropolitan' (20th) died miserably on five days, a bare $1,000.

Varsity (Westland) (1,100; 10-15-20-25) — 'Dan Matthews' (Col). Steering for probable $1,500, not very good. Last week 'Dictator' (GB) was shied from in this Republican town and not even investigated to a weak $800.

'BLOOD,' $15,000, STANDS OUT IN BALTO.

Baltimore, Dec. 29.
(Best Exploitation: Stanley)

After the b.o.'s trudged through one of the toughest pre-Xmas sessions in recent years, down roared a snowstorm and spell of severe weather on the Yule. Cut into the take all around, and as yet the blustery blasts have not abated and consequently hurting biz.

One outstanding exception is 'Captain Blood' at the Stanley. Clicked right from start and will spear an easy $15,000, smash, and biggest take in about two years at the house. Will h.o. Century started nicely with 'Two Cities' and neat stage-show.

Stanley led the publicity push this week. With 'Capt. Blood' a WB-Cosmop release, local Hearst rag gave long, wide-range buildup.

Estimates For This Week

Century (Loew-UA) (3,000; 15-25-35-40-55-66)—'Two Cities' (MG) and vaude. Climbing to grand $20,000. Last week 'In the Air' (MG) and 'Hollywood Secrets' unit got good $16,000.

Hippodrome (Rappaport) (2,300; 15-25-35-40-55-66)—'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) and vaude. Pic panned and that factor hurting, though Hepburn name keeping it in running and abetted by good stage show. Nice $15,000. Last week five days of 'Fang and Claw' (RKO) and Frank Buck on stage in person heading vaude, down near $7,000, poor.

Keith's (Schanberger) (2,500; 15-25-30-35-40)—'Invisible Ray' (U). Strong $5,000. Last week, five days of 'Night after Night' (Par), three-year-old hauled off shelf, weak $2,400.

New (Mechanic) (1,800; 15-25-30-35-40-55) 'Littlest Rebel' (Fox). (2nd week). Second session started Sat. (29) and should grab very good $4,000, with still much strength showing in Temple tug. First week, nifty $5,100.

Stanley (WB) (3,450; 15-25-35-40-55) 'Capt. Blood' (WB). Soaring to smash $15,000 and will stay added stanza. Last week 'Coronado' (Par) $2,200 in six days, poorest biz house ever had.

Santa Public Presents Big B'way B. O.; 'Cities,' 'Bride'-Casa Loma Each 55G, 'Blood' 43G, 'Cook' 60G

(Best Exploitation:

The downtown New York operators hung up their Christmas stockings in a hopeful mood and their most fervent prayers are being answered. They addressed an appeal to a public Santa and the latter is coming through with a bagful of cheer. It's the best Yuletide, taking all first run theatres in the Times Square sector as a whole, that has been enjoyed since '

Not a single theatre is doing badly among the 12 on which grosses are recorded. And that's something, even at Christmas time. Leader over Xmas is the Music Hall with the Shirley Temple picture, 'Littlest Rebel,' a natural for this time of year, booked for an 11 day stay. On its first seven days it got a big $91,800. Four final days around $64,000 for a total run of around $155,000, a heavy reindeer load. 'Magnificent Obsession' opened Monday (30) for 10-day tenancy or longer.

Paramount may hit a fancy $55,000 with 'Bride Comes Home' and the Glen Gray Casa Loma orchestra which brings life back into the theatre. This business vindicates those in the Paramount organization who long have been urging a return to something living in the Par de luxer. House has the Case Loma band in for two weeks with 'Bride' but may keep it an extra two weeks with 'Rose of Rancho,' beginning Jan. 8 and then on Jan. 24 move to the stage for unit shows.

Although the Par now becomes new opposition to the Roxy and State with stage shows, both are holding their own tremendously well. With 'If You Could Only Cook' as Roxy's attraction, on a nine-day stay the hope is for a $60,000 take, smash business. State may get around $35,000 with 'Night at Opera' and the Ed Sullivan unit.

Two other unusually strong pictures which opened their runs on Xmas morning are 'Captain Blood' at the Strand and 'Tale of Two Cities' at the Capitol. 'Blood' may mount to $43,000, some shekels, while the Cap looks a cinch to snare $55,000. 'Ah, Wilderness' at the Center brought that house strongly to life, and the chances are good to hurdle an excellent $35,000. At the new Rialto, which opened Xmas afternoon at 1 o'clock, 'Fang and Claw' is getting close to capacity, despite opposition of stronger attractions against it on street, and may pan out on first week at $12,000.

The Rialto goes to a 99c top New Year's eve, while all other houses, even including the State, will tap $1.50 a seat. This will help make up for the fall-off in business Thursday night in the face of bitter cold, but matinees that day were unusually potent. Mats between Xmas and New Year's are always better than nights, however. Kids are out of school and people in town for the holidays give pictures a play in the afternoon, while a certain percentage turns to the niteries in the evening.

Rivoli, with 'Dangerous,' is the poorest among the new pictures brought in for Christmas, but at $26,000 it is making a satisfactory profit. 'Annie Oakley,' which came into the Astor two days ahead of Xmas, landing good notices, gets that house the best business it has enjoyed since reopening a few months back, $20,000 first week. All pictures hold over for New Year's except 'Rebel,' which totals its run at 11 days ending Sunday night, and Roxy, which brings in 'Just a Girl' on Friday (3). 'Magnificent Obsession' the Monday (30) entry at the Music Hall for stay of 10 days.

Paramount out-advertised the street on its 'Bride' picture and return to flesh, giving plenty of pressure to selling the show. House put up a front that could be seen for a long distance with marquee ends higher than anything ever seen on Broadway.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (1,012; 25-35-55)—'Annie Oakley' (RKO) (2d week). Very strong and over the Christmas week nudged $20,000, big, holding for a second week through New Year' .

Capitol (4,620; 25-35-55-85-$1.25)—'Tale of Two Cities' (G). With New Year's eve and $1.50 prices easy for $55,000 and stays over. Final five days on third week of 'Night at Opera' (MG) under $20,000.

Center (3,525; 25-35-55-85-$1.10)—'Ah, Wilderness' (MG). Ending its first week last night (Tues.) at over $35,000, handsome and sticks by. 'Perfect Gentleman' (MG). In ahead, couldn't fight the opposition and Xmas shopping, hitting new low of around $6,500.

Hollywood (1,553; 55-$1.10-$1.65-$2.20)—'Dream' (WB) 13th week). Last week (12th), with Christm shopping hurting, under $7,000. New Year's holiday should help business considerably.

Palace (1,700; 25-35-55)—' Dream Too Much' (RKO) and 'Another Face' (RKO), dual. Might rope around $11,000 with the New Year crowds thrown in. This doubleton opened Friday (27), regular opening day here, previous pair having the benefit of Xmas, 'Frisco Kid' (WB) and 'Baldpate' (RKO), over $9,000.

Paramount (3,664; 25-35-55-85)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and Casa Loma orchestra in pit. From an insignificant $8,500 on 'Coronado' (Par) week before Xmas, this house leaps for a possible $55,000, big profits, on its current show and holds over. Casa Loma band may stick two additional weeks for a total of four, but with 'Rose of Rancho' (Par) coming in Jan. 8.

Radio City Music Hall (5,989; 40-60-85-99-$1.10-$1.65)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th) (2d week) and stage show. On first week a fine $91,800 and on final four days of holdover week, around $64,000 for succulent total of $155,000 on 11-day run. 'Magnificent Obsession' (U) in Monday (30) for a run of 10 days through Jan. 10 or longer.

Rialto (750; 25-40-65)—'Fang and Claw' (RKO). Frank Buck picture opened house Christmas afternoon (25) and though only moderate as entertainment is drawing close to capacity for small house with chance of hitting $12,000 first week, holding over. 'Dr. Crespi' (Repub) next.

Rivoli (2,092; 35-55-75-85-99)—'Dangerous' (WB). Brought in Xmas morning (25) and on first seven days including New Year's eve around $26,000, not big but okay. Stays second week. Final five days on third week of 'No Mercy' (20th), $9,000.

Roxy (5,836; 25-35-55)—'Could Only Cook' (Col) and stage show. Opened Christmas day and on nine days galloping for a mighty $60,000, but won't stay for another week. 'Just a Girl' (G-B) follows in. On five days of '$1,000 a Minute' (Rep), up to Xmas, house got close to $20,000, profit, anything but a kick coming.

Strand (2,767; 35-55-65-85) — 'Capt. Blood' (WB). Another Yuletide entry which started off like a house afire and may get up to a fancy $43,000 on first week. Probably gets at least two more weeks. Under $12,000 for 11 days of 'B'way Hostess' (WB), the one they put up against Christmas shopping.

State (3,150; 35-55-75)—'Night at Opera' (MG) and Ed Sullivan unit. Something alive at the Par after many months may cut into the State, plus fact the Marx picture played two weeks and five days at Cap, but at possible $35,000 house is still making plenty of money. Gets $1.50 top New Year's eve. Last week 'Mary Burns' (Par) and stage bill headed by George Jessel and Joe Morrison, just under $25,000, new Xmas shows around town cutting in.

HAMRICK'S 27-CENTER

His Tacoma Downtowner — Blue Mouse Reopens to $3,000 on Dual

Tacoma, Dec. 29.
(Best Exploitation: Music Box)

John Hamrick's Christmas gift to Tacomans is another first-run house with duals, and reduced prices. Blue Mouse his week reverts to first-run policy, with 27c., including the state tax, the top nick. This gives Hamrick three indies on the same policy, in downtown Tacoma, although prices at Roxy and M. B. top at 37c.

Cab Calloway last week offset usual pre-Christmas blues at the b.o. for Music Box, putting record in Sunday biz, and grossing $4,500 for five days.

Best exploitation is at Music Box for 'Littiest Rebel' (20th) which opens next. Limerick contest is underway in co-op with News-Tribune, with life size doll (Shirley Temple) as top prize, and ducats for others who land among the best.

Estimates for This Week

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (750; 16-27)—'East of Java' (U) and 'Calm Yourself' (MG), dual. Starts new first run at this remodelled house. Anticipating $3,000, good.

Music Box (Hamrick) (1,400; 16-27-37)—'Frisco Kid' (WB) and 'Broadway Hostess' (WB), dual. Looks like big $5,000. Last week 'Annie Oakley' (RKO) and Cab Calloway band, great $4,500 in five days.

Roxy (Hamrick) (1,300; 16-27-37)—'Thanks Million' (20th) and 'Couldn't Take It' (Col), dual. Good $4,000 likely. Last week 'O'Shaughnessy' (MG) and 'Grand Exit' (Col). Slow $1,700 in five days ton, Dec. 29.

(Best Exploitati Par-Fenway)

Hefty grosser looks like 'Collegiate' at the Met, with Dave Apollon drawing from the stage, aiding for $35,000, including idnight holiday show. Way ahead of figures for past several weeks.

'Ah, Wilderness' on dual bill with 'Could Only Cook' at the Orph and State, will hit around $32,000 for total. 'Wilderness a bit disappointing in view of fact that stage play had successful run here last season; and that many scenes were shot in Grafton, Mass., not far from Boston. Audience reaction to these semi-local scenes indicates that tremendous newspaper buildup here when scenes were shot had a telling effect.

'Captain Blood,' on a day-and-dater at the Paramount and Fenway is socko, indicating $17,000 or better at these twin stands.

Keith Memorial opened New Year's Eve with 'Dream Too Much' and ad department has started doubletruckin' as a feature of a $26,000 newspaper campaign subsidized by RKO's national office. Biggest newspaper flash seen here since way back. 'Sylvia Scarlet' current at the Memorial is n.sh.

Keith-Boston doing okay with 'Devil's Island' on the screen and 'International Scandals,' with Everett Marshall and Mary Small on stage, around $21,000, without midnight show.

Par and Fenway exploiteers (Harry Brown, Jr., and Paul Levl) had a natural thrown into their laps on short notice, but they didn't nap when Errol Flynn, star of 'Captain Blood' landed in town. Towed Flynn all over the Hub, with police escort, posed him in Post Santa Claus and Boston Christmas Basket Fund offices, interviewed him over WEEI, and planted him in the audience of the Par. Wound up at a home office Xmas party at M&P, wrapped him all up in a swell package of publicity that was unfolded for the balance of the week.

Estimates for This Week)

Met (M&P) (4,200; 35-50-65)—'Collegiate' (Par) and Dave Apollon's 'International Varieties' on stage. Looks hot, at $35,000, including midnght show. Charging $1.10 all over the house, carrying over some of Apollon's unit, plus added acts and 'Pacific Flight' (WB) on the screen, for the one show. Last week, $23,500 for 'Littlest Rebel' (Fox) and stage show. Temple pic not quite up to expectations, allowing leeway for Xmas slump.

Keith Memorial (RKO) (2,900; 25-35-50)—'Sylvia Scarlet' (RKO). Would be heading for something considerably lower than the indicated $14,000, but for a smart incidental booking of Edward MacHugh (gospel singer from radio) along with it. Matinee biz on this freak booking has been outstanding, surpassing easily 'Alice Adams' trade. Afternoon customers are mostly femme radio listeners who come to ogle the psalm singer. Lily Pons pic opens 8:30 New Year's Eve, at 55c. Last week 'Crime and Punishment' (Col) let down sadly to tune of $6,000 on six days.

Keith-Boston (RKO) (2,300; 35-50-65)—'Devil's Island' (Col) and stage show. Going to $21,000, okeh. Holiday eve show will feature Jane Froman in a new stage show, and Everett Marshall and Mary Small held over from this week's, at $1.65, biggest ducat tap in town. 'East of Java' (U) and 'Freckles' (RKO), dual, last week, soft at $4,700. N. Y. Eve pic will be 'Another Face' (RKO), and this will carry through with new stage show for rest of week.

Orpheum (Loew) (3,000; 25-35-40-50)—'Ah, Wilderness' (MG) and 'Could Only Cook' (MG), double. Good at $16,000. N. Y. Eve will bring in 'Two Cities' (MG) at 55c all over house. First week 'Whipsaw' (MG) and 'Perfect Gentleman' (MG), dual, off at $9,000.

State (Loew) (3,200; 25-35-40-50)—'Wilderness' (MG) and 'Only Cook' (MG), dual. Okc at $16,000. Midnight show, 'Two Cities' at 55c. Last week 'Whipsaw' (MG) and 'Perfect Gent' (MG), dual, disappointed at $8,500.

Paramount (M&P) (1,800; 25-35-50)—'Capt. Blood' (WB). Very rugged and best film bet on the street, $10,000 at least. Par and Fenway will play 'Dangerous' (WB) and 'Broadway Hostess' (WB), dual, midnight show, at 75c. Last week 'Millions in Air' (Par) and 'Scrooge' (Par), dual, sagged to $3,600, six days.

Fenway (M&P) (1,600; 25-30-40-50)—'Capt. Blood' (WB). Sailing pretty at $7,000 pace. Opening day house opened two hours early to care for initial throng. Last week, $2,200, off, for 'Scrooge' (Par) and 'Millions In Air' (Par).

Scollay (M&P) (2,700; 25-35-40-50)—'Splendor' (UA) and 'Chan's Secret' (20th), dual, both 2nd run. Around $5,200, fair. Midnite films, 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) and 'Stars Over Broadway' (WB), dual, at 50c and 75c. First time in some 23 years that this house has not played vaude for New Year's Eve. Last week 'Frisco Kid' (WB) and 'Coronado' (Par), double, swerved to $3,900.

STAGE SHOWS BOOM ST. L., ALL O.K.

St. Louis, Dec. 29.

(Best Exploitati : Loew's)

With Fox showing 'Littlest Rebel' for second week and Ambassador putting on 'Dan Matthews,' with Olsen and Johnson stage unit running another week from Saturday (30), rest of first runners here reverted to single celluloid features Xmas day. Loew's, indulging in fast stepping exploitation campaign, put 'Wilderness' on screen; Shubert-Rialto is offering 'Captain Blood' and Orpheum is screening 'Collegiate' on same day. Near zero weather which started early Christmas Day put a crimp in b. o. grosses and until natives become accustomed to frigidity to atmosphere all houses will suffer lack of patronage.

All houses here will have shows New Year's Eve. Loew's is putting a new policy into effect. After last regular show is ended house will be cleared and tickets sold for new show, 'Tale of Two Cities,' that will carry on until almost 2 bells. Warner houses, Shubert-Rialto and Orpheum will show preview of new feature at end of last show at no added cost to patrons. Fanchon & Marco's Fox will break straight sound policy existing over a year by putting on 10 acts of vaudeville and two new feature pictures at 90c plus tax, an advance of 40 after 6 p. m. Ambassador will have usual night prize midnight show with Olsen and Johnson. Missouri starts permanent vaudeville with six acts, 15-piece orchestra and feature New Year's Day picture.

Estimates for This Week

Fox (F. & M.) (5,038; 25-35-55)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th) (2d wk). Big New Year's Eve show at 90c plus tax will enable house to enjoy a very good $16,500 week. Last week, coldness held take to $8,200.

Ambassador (F. & M.) (3,018; 25-40-55)—'Calling of Dan Mathews' (Col) and Olsen and Johnson on stage (2d wk). Midnight stage show and new picture points to $18,000. Last week, 'One Way Ticket' (Col) and Olsen and Johnson finished with good $12,400.

Shubert-Rialto (WB) (1,725; 25-35-55)—'Captain Blood' (WB). Set for a good $8,700. Last week, 'Man of Iron' (WB) and 'Powdersmoke Range' (Par), ragged to a sad $4,500 end.

Orpheum (WB) (1,960; 25-35-55)—'Collegiate' (Par). All indications to a swell $11,500 week. Last week, 'Scrooge' (Par) and 'Hi Gaucho' (RKO), didn't click, finished $5,100.

Loew (Low's) (3,162; 25-35-55)—'Ah Wilderness' (MG). With new show for New Year's Eve should finish week with $12,500, okay. Last week, 'Kind Lady' (MG), $6,100, one of worst weeks in months but expected it and isn't complaining.

Missouri (F. & M.) (3,514; 25-40)—'Metropolitan' (20) and 'Navy Wife' (20th). With vaudeville moving in Jan. 1 and New Year's Eve preview theatre will close with $7,300 for best in moons. Last week, 'Old Kentucky' (Fox) and 'His Night Out' (U) could only count $5,400 at end of week, fair.

H-McA's 2d Starts Jan. 14

Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, now at Nyack, N. Y., are at work on their second production for Par this season, 'Murder at 21.' Expect to go into work at Astoria, L. I., Jan. 14.

H. & M.'s first this year, 'Soak the Rich,' is set for Par releasc Jan. 17.

Pitt's Bliz Chills B.O.'s; 'Cities' 16G, Stanley's $30,000

Pittsburgh, Dec. 29.

(Best Exploitation: Penn)

Worst blizzard in years, hitting town on Christmas day and continuing for another 24 hours, put terrific crimp in holiday trade and sent grosses cellarward all along line. Looks like the worst Yule session here in some time. Started to pick up everywhere by Friday—most of first-runners switched to Wednesday openings, also doing the same thing this week—but damage apparently has already been done.

Stanley getting best break of all, holding off inaugural until regular day (Friday) and opened to biggest single day since Bowes troupe ran up a $30,000 gross. Bang-up combo with 'Whipsaw' on screen and Ed Lowry, always a fave here, on stage, plus Fifi Dorsay and Stepin Fetchit. With special New Year's Eve show and holiday in addition it should sail into pretty close to Bowes figure with any sort of break at all from weather.

Otherwise, however, town easing off, betting, of course, last few weeks but still nothing terrific. Of remaining sites, Penn and Fulton getting best breaks, former with 'Tale of Two Cities' and latter with 'Littlest Rebel.' Latter heading for around $6,500, all right, and will hold over for second week while 'Cities' should pick up around $16,000, comparatively all right but losing proposition in face of terrific newspaper campaign. Christmas and day following cooked goose of this one and even remarkable recuperative powers weren't enough to recover from opening debacle.

Davis still going practically nowhere, with maybe $3,200 for 'Pursuit' and 'Frisco Waterfront,' while Warner is heading for light $5,000 with 'Mary Burns' and 'Stars Over Broadway.' Alvin has 'Uncle Dudley' and stage show, headed by Eddie Stanley and Ilomay Bailey and Lee Sims, but for four days only, and may get around $9,000 on brief session. Another new stage-screen bill opening Monday (30) also for four days, with house going back to regular opening and straight pictures Friday (3) with 'King of Burlesque.'

Exploitation for 'Two Cities' at Penn started breaking week ahead of opening, with biggest newspaper budget in years and tie-ins with department stores, special shots on transportation lines and out-of-town newspaper plugs for suburban holiday trade. Dickens societies also contacted as well as civic and literary clubs.

Estimates for This Week

Alvin (Harris) (2,000; 25-40-55)—'Uncle Dudley' (20th) and stage show with Eddie Stanley, Sims and Bailey, Joe and Jane McKenna. In for four days only. Opened Xmas, but not week; weather break possible first two days and eased off to practically nothing. Maybe $6,000, but doubtful. Bill closed Saturday night (28) with house previewing 'King of Burlesque' Sunday (29) before regular opening Friday (3) and shooting in 'Navy Wife' and Ray Perkins and his amateur winners Monday (30) also for four days. Last week, 'Feather in Her Hat' (Col) and 'Sweet Surrender' (U) in five days under $2,300.

Fulton (Shea-Hyde) (1,750; 15-25-40) — 'Littlest Rebel' (20th). House reopened Xmas day after shutdown of two weeks, and Temple flicker drew flock of kids despite stormy weather. Would have been plenty better with any sort of break, but looks to build into around $6,500 and expected to hold up well enough to last through New Year's week as well. 'Professional Soldier' (20th) skedded to get under way for run Jan. 3.

Davis (WB) (1,700; 25-40)—'Pursuit' (MG) and 'Frisco Waterfront' (Rep). House getting nowhere fast with class B duals. Just a downtown filler and unable to make a dent in stiff downtown competish. Not more than $3,200 looked for this week, just about the breaking-even point, and at a time when house ought to be turning in a neat profit if it's ever going to show any. Last week 'Scrooge' (Par) and 'Hot Tip' (RKO) in the dumps at $1,700 for five days.

Penn (Loew's-UA) (3,300; 25-35-40)—'Two Cities' (MG). Big flicker drew raves everywhere and would have been a pushover for terrific holiday trade but skidding mercury cut in plenty. As it was, 'Cities' got best Xmas biz in town but at that just about two grand under last year's take at same time, which is something of an idea. Closing in high $16,000 is enough to level enormous nut, chiefly on advertising. Last week 'Crusades' (Par) in five days miserable at $4,000.

Stanley (WB) (3,600; 25-40-55)—'Whipsaw' (MG) and Ed Lowry's stage show with Fifi Dorsay and Stepin Fetchit. Had Friday (27) opening all to itself and got off to biggest start around here in years. Topped even terrific Bowes inaugural of couple of months ago and with New Year's eve special and the holiday still to come should clock off pretty close to $30,000, great. Management giving plenty of credit to Lowry, m.c. for six months once at this site and great fav locally. Last week 'Red the Rose' (Par) and 'Hit Parade' unit never got started and when expected Xmas trade failed to develop eased off to blah $14,000.

Warner (WB) (2,000; 25-40)—'Mary Burns' (Par) and 'Stare Over Broadway' (WB). Good dual but, like the others, doing all of its business closing few days and not enough to overcome freak getaway. Maybe $5,000 or a trifle better but that's n.s.h. everything considered. Last week 'Man of Iron' (WB) and 'Without Regret' (Par) in five days down under at $2,600.

'CITIES,' $9,500, 'DREAM,' 9G, K.C. NICE

Kansas City, Dec. 29.

(Best Exploitation: Mainstreet)

Picture openings still pretty well mixed up as managers jockey for holiday play. Big Loew's Midland swung open Xmas day with 'Tale of Two Cities,' and is going strong. Mainstreet also opened Christmas with 'Dream Too Much' and is going nicely.

At the Newman, 'Bride Comes Home,' held until New Year's Eve, is getting a nice play as is 'Littlest Rebel,' held over at the Uptown.

Mainstreet management shot both barrels for 'Dream,' using thousands of extra lines in the papers, radio plugs, and other publicity.

Estimates for This Week

Mainstreet (RKO) (3,200; 25-40)—'Dream Too Much' (RKO). Great newspaper campaign given the Pons musical, paced for a nice $9,000. Last week, 'Baldpate' (RKO), $4,500, blah.

Midland (Loew;) (4,000; 25-40)—'Two Cities' (MG). Picture given a lot of advance newspaper publicity; Jack Moffitt, picture editor of the Star, now in Hollywood, took a three-day week to tell of its merits and magnitude. A followup of dignified display ads seemed to hit the right class and picture will show a swell $9,500. Last week, 'In the Air' (MG), six days, $6,500, just fair.

Newman (Par) (1,900; 25-35)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par). Will be held until New Year's eve, when 'Rose of Rancho' (Par) opens. First seven days $10,000, good; final four days corking $6,000.

Tower (Rewot) (2,200; 25-35)—'Remember Last Night' (U) and stage show. Nice play and with New Year's business to help should show close to $9,000, okay. Last week, 'Dan Matthews' (Col) and stage show $6,300.

Uptown (Fox) (2,040; 25-40)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th) and 'Uncle Dudley' (20th), dual (2d week). Clicking nicely, probably $4,000, good after a nice $5,400 the first week.

$10,000 B.&A. Stage Show with 'Bride' Hitting Hefty $30,000 in Minneapolis

Minneapolis, Dec. 29.

(Best Exploitation: inn-Orph)

Judging from current appearances it would seem as though local entertainment emporiums have resolved to provide bigger and better shows for 1936. Certainly, with Burns and Allen in person topping a stellar stage array at the Minnesota where 'The Bride Comes Home' holds forth on the screen, and with Ada Leonard and Hal Sherman and their 'Cocktails of 1936' supplementing 'Sylvia Scarlet,' the New Year is off to a flying start here.

It's the first time this season that there have been two stage shows opposing each other at local film houses and takings, helped by the Minnesota's boost from 55c. to 60c. for its top and special New Year's eve midnight shows all around, promise to hit the biggest total so far this winter. With 'Tobacco Road' at the Metropolitan and stock burlesque at the Gayety, and a record number of night clubs offering elaborate entertainment, a big dent will be put in the public's purse.

Most important development here is the reopening of the 1,600-seat de luxe Century, formerly the Publix circuit's ace No. 1 house, as a second run theatre at 25c. top. With its reopening the 1,100-seat Grand will close.

Minnesota and Orpheum divided exploitation honors. The former promoted a full page display ad by a local radio distributor welcoming Burns and Allen to town, radio broadcasts and chain store tie-ups. Orpheum put through Journal roto pictures and a chain store tie-up, among other things, for 'Cocktails of 1936.'

Estimates for This Week

Innesota (Publix) (4,200; 35-40-60)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and Burns and Allen, Stone Vernon Foursome, Ben Blue, Cardini, Jacques Renard and Gene Marvey, show costing $10,000, on stage. All-around fine entertainment and good selling job and New Year's eve midnight show, with all seats reserved at 75c., sending gross to enormous $30,000. Last week, 'Thanks a Million,' (20th), $7,000. Okeh.

Orpheum (Singer) (2,890; 25-35-55)—'Sylvia Scarlet' (RKO) and Ada Leonard and Hal Sherman in 'Cocktails of 1936' unit. Whale of a show and well exploited. Pointing in direction of the $14,000. Last week, 'Could Only Cook' (Col), $5,-200, good.

State (Publix) (2,400; 25-35-40)—'Ah Wilderness' (MG). Heavily advertised, but opposition too powerful. Even with midnight show New Year's eve will do well to hit $6,000, fair. Last week 'Coronado' (Par), $2,500, bad.

World (Steffes) (350; 25-35-40-55)—'La Maternelle' (French). French dialogue a detriment. About $1,500, fair. Last week, 'Scrooge' (Par), $900, light.

Time (Berger) (290; 15-25)—'Gay Divorcee' (RKO), revival, and 'Remember Last Night' (U), first run, split. Good at $1,100. Last week 'High School Girls' (Foy), $1,000, okeh.

Lyric (Publix) (1,300; 20-25)—'It's In Air' (MG). Absence of meaning names a drawback. Maybe $1,500, fair. Last week 'Music Is Magic' (20th), $1,200, light.

Uptown (Publix) (1,200; 25-35)—'Mutiny' (MG). Big $3,500. Last week 'Live My Life' (MG), $1,400, light.

Century (Publix). (1,600; 20-25)—'Broadway Melody' (MG). This beautiful house reopened as second-run. About $2,600, good for second loop run.

Aster (Publix) (900; 15-25)—'O'Shaughnessy's Boy' (MG), second run, and 'Ship Cafe' (Par), first run, split. Around $1,000, okeh. Last week 'Gay Deception' (20th), and 'Dr. Socrates' (WB), second runs, and 'Eagles Brood' (Par), first run, $900, okeh.

Grand (Publix) (1,100; 15-25)—'Crusades' (Par), second loop run. Light $1,000. Last week 'Shipmates' (FN). Second loop run, $1,200, fair.

MOTION PICTURE DAILY

MOTION PICTURE DAILY'S HOLLYWOOD PREVIEW

"The Story of Louis Pasteur"

(Warners)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 20.—So absorbing is this theme that the film is sure to win terrific word-of-mouth endorsement.

Chemist Louis Pasteur was one of the first men to discredit the then incredible idea that "wee beasties" discernible only under the microscope were responsible for human ailments. Paul Muni lends intensity to the role of a man whose fight against careless doctors and unsterilized instruments brought first laughter, then hatred, and then persecution from orthodox medicos.

Muni is convincing as the fanatic searcher into the secrets of murderous maladies. Josephine Hutchinson is telling as his understanding wife. A slight thread of romance is carried on by Anita Louise as Pasteur's daughter and Donald Woods as a young researcher.

The excellent cast, deserving special commendation, includes Fritz Leiber, Henry O'Neill, Porter Hall, Raymond Brown, Akim Tamiroff, Halliwell Hobbes, Frank Reicher, Dickie Moore, Ruth Robinson, Walter Kingsford, Herbert Corthell and Iphigenie Castiglioni, under the direction of William Dieterle.

"SIGNIFICANT"

DAILY VARIETY DAILY

From the life of a great scienti .
Warners-First National has made a truly great picture. As a production, as entertainment, as a film document, it stands among the significant works of the screen—important and impressive because of its inspirational treatment of things and a figure tremendously significant in the upward climb of the human race, told in such fashion as to grip every audience it will reach. 'The Story of Louis Pasteur' deserves, and is headed for, big money and acclaim.

Scientists have been regarded as dubious heroes for films. The dramatic posing of Pasteur as the great healer through conquest of infection, in a picture profoundly stirring as sheer drama, will disperse this taboo and widen the range of picture venturings.

Muni is superb in a quietly powerful interpretation of the Frenchman who has left his name as a label of surgical cleanliness and the emergence of medicine out of the dark ages. Every member of the cast lives up to Muni's performance pace.
William Dieterle gives splendid account of his directorial powers. He drives to his objective surely, without trickery, with obvious conviction in the high human interest of the material and with the technical mastery to make it live and shine from the screen. In every detail of character and incident, homely and heroic, Dieterle reveals a sure sense for the stirring mass appeal of the medical pioneer's life and labors.
Seldom has a picture preview shown so strongly shared interest of men and women. Men were openly in tears of emotional response throughout the audience, not so much in tribute to players but for simple heroism of a man unselfishly battling great odds and jeering bigotry for a cause more precious than his life—a moving theme for men.

"SOMETHING TO CHEER ABOUT"

THE Film DAILY

"THE STORY OF LOUIS PASTEUR"

DISTINGUISHED AND GRIPPING DRAMA WITH ACTING, DIRECTION, SCRIPT AND PRODUCTION ALL DESERVING HIGHEST PRAISE.

This blazes a new trail in pictures. Warners have made cold science dramatic, and, with Muni as the French scientist, have fashioned a story that grips from the start. Muni's performance is something to cheer about, while William Dieterle's direction deserves lavish praise. Pierre Collings and Sheridan Gibney, who wrote the story and screenplay, turned in one of the best writing jobs of the year. Henry Blanke, who supervised the picture, rates bows. Josephine Hutchinson, Fritz Leiber, Porter Hall, Donald Woods, Anita Louise, Raymond Brown and Halliwell Hobbes are among the important players.

LOS ANGELES EVENING HERALD AND EXPRESS:

By HARRISON CARROLL

I am moved to recommend to you an extraordinary picture, "The Story of Louis Pasteur." Out of so unlikely a subject as a man's fight to combat germs, Warner Brothers have built one of the most fascinating films of recent years. It is Paul Muni's greatest, and he could stand on it, as an actor, for all time. This screen biography of Pasteur is as suspenseful as a G-man picture and, while dealing with exact science, it is crowded with emotion. The play-goer who can witness Pasteur's final appearance before the French Academy of Medicine, and not feel a lump in the throat, a tingling in the spine, had better have himself examined. Here, my friends, is a great picture out of Hollywood.

A "MUST SEE"

JIMMY FIDLER'S RADIO REVIEW

A three bell picture. Strikingly highlighted by a supreme performance by Paul Muni. This is one of the most intriguing motion pictures of the year. The picture is a personal triumph for Muni. You'll forget that he's an actor, and you'll suffer and rejoice right along with him . . . The human drama is injected so forcibly—that you'll be left breathless . . . put on your "must see" list this newest Paul Muni vehicle—"The Story of Louis Pasteur."

SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW

THE STORY OF LOUIS PASTEUR

(Formerly "Enemy of Man")

THIS OUTSTANDING HIT WILL SEND PATRONS AWAY TALKING; MUNI IN BEST ROLE

SUMMARY: A powerful production, impressive entertainment and a stand-out characterization by Paul Muni make this a prestige picture of importance with world-wide appeal. It is an excellent pictorial biography of the great scientist, Louis Pasteur. Sheer drama of Pasteur's fight for recognition, including his overcoming of innumerable obstacles and countless disappointments until victory at last is his, builds to a great climax. Muni gives his finest performance with the quiet restraint of realism. Hutchinson is excellent as the wife, understanding, sympathetic, loving. Others excellent are Louise, Woods, Leiber, O'Neill, Hall, Hobbes and Reicher. Splendid direction and screenplay. Story in less capable hands might have gone astray. Strong adult appeal and should win favor with women audiences everywhere

Foreign Films in U. S.

By Wolfe Kaufman

Another year has come and gone for the film importers without much actual light. Year saw 190 films imported and distributed from foreign marts, as against 147 in 1934. That's considerable i rove-, but in number only. Actually, coin it doesn't figure. there were only 113 imported pictures distributed in the U. S., but 1934 wasn't an improvement, either. Seventy-three more pictures were shipped around last year than in 1933, but in 1933 there were profits made that counted, and in 1935 there weren't.

From a numerical standpoint, there are some surprising coincidences and paradoxes in the figures. Both Germany and England sent over exactly equal amounts of films during both years, yet England, in grosses, progressed during the year and Germany diminished even more than it had the year before, new low year (in take) for that country.

Also, numerically, Spanish imports almost doubled. In grosses they didn't change much. There still are but very few spots available for Spanish language pictures in the U. S. Too, Spanish film figures are somewhat inaccurate, since, for purposes of compilation, all Spanish language talkers are called imports, despite the fact that a goodly share of them are actually produced in America.

Hungarian releases increased to a new high mark, 12 films. Doesn't mean that Hungarians are producing more films now, but that the pictures had piled up and were brought over more or less at once.

Figures on Italian films, too, are likely to be isrepresentations. There are a constant flock of Italian films being shown in the Italian nabes, most of them not seeing the light outside of the nabe houses. But the films are practically entirely in the hands of small one-picture distribs who carry their product around in cans and play it wherever possible under those circumstances. Frequently the same picture appears in the hands of two or three different persons, each claiming distribution rights. It is the most disorganized branch of a disorganized business. Frequently the titles are changed and booted around second and third times. Or more. Sometimes, it has been known, two or three pictures, out-played in the little available territory, have been clipped together, melded and formed into another film. As far as can be learned from governmental figures, the number of Italian pix listed in the adjoining box is an accurate one for actual imports.

France's Real Progress

French pictures are the only foreign-tongue films which made any real headway in the American market during the year. That is not only in the number of imports but in actual returns and results.

When the Nazi regime got going it ruined the entire German film trade in the U. S. German pictures at that time, about two years or so ago, were doing well here and had established an American market. There were nearly 200 cinemas in the U. S. playing them. It has dropped to nothing. But the market, potentially, remained because a great portion of it did not consist of Germanic people but of so-called 'arty' customers, cosmopolitans, etc. These customers were willing to switch to another language but there weren't any films of quality being made in another language. France had a great opportunity but muffed it for a year or more. Late during the past year they got started with a bang.

'La Maternelle' did fine business and is heading for more. 'Crime et Chatiment' got a lot of attention and is a potential big b.o. film in this country for the coming year (the word 'big' being used, of course, from the moderated standpoint of foreign-language films). 'Dame Aux Camelias' ('Camille') did well. 'Maria Chapdelaine' did, and is still doing well. At the time of this writing (first week of December) both 'Crime et Chatiment' and 'La Maternelle' are concurrently in New York in their sixth weeks and going strong. Also both are being booked aro d the country; seven prints of 'Maternelle' are out, six of 'Crime'. That's the best any foreign language films have done in the U. S. since 'Maedchen' and the fact that there are two such pictures concurrently 's encouraging. 'Crime', of course, benefited considerably from the fact that it was released in the U. S. at the same time as was a picturization by Columbia of the same subject, with critics giving the Frencher the benefit of double reviews and the break in comparisons.

For ign pictures imported and shown in the U. S. during the 12 months ending Dec. 1, 1935, totaled 190, as against 147 for the same period in 1934. Picture imports for the two years, by country of ori in, follow:

	1935	1934
German		59
Spanish		20
British		33
French		7
Russian
Hungarian		4
Swedish		4
Polish		4
Italian		1
Yiddish	1	3

Russians, after a slow year in 1934, and a slow start on 1935, got going towards the end of the year. Two, 'Chapayev' did fine business and got a lot of good breaks. 'Moscow Laughs' was fair. Then came a real sock in 'Gulliver,' a film acted entirely by puppets which got high critical attention at its New York premiere and is sailing towards big profits. It is still at its first New York stand at time of writing, in its eighth week and the one date has paid back to the distribs the original print investment.

That is, of course, the big lure in foreign language films. It is so much more of a big gamble than any other kind of film biz in that the investment figure is low but the profits (when and if they come) can be tremendous.

Importers and foreign language distribs switched around considerably during the year. With German films nebulous in market value, it spread out and a lot of small fellows with minimum or no investments appeared in the field. Only one of the regulation German film distribs to make any headway is General Foreign Films (Arthur Ziehm) which, however, also imports Frenchers.

DuWorld Pictures, which started about two years ago, dropped German pix completely and took some time getting lined up with others, but as the year waned had interesting alliances with French, Hungarian and other producers, and a couple of click potentialities.

Jean Lenauer, a new firm, is concentrating on French and Viennese films. First release, 'Crime et Chatiment,' should set the company.

Metropolitan ictures, headed by Martin Lewis, formerly in the German language field, got going with a few weak Italian pictures but managed a tieup with John Tapernoux which looks good for the future. Tapernoux, a weak distrib group handling French films only, hadn't been able to click for the past two or three years. First picture the amalgamated group sent out is 'Maternelle,' a click.

France Film, another new form specializing in French talkers, and with more solid backing than most of the others, has the pick of the Pathe-Natan pix, but hasn't any strong pictures yet. Headed by J. Herron, who has handled most French films in Canada for some years nd who is on very strong friendly terms with French producers, giving the firm a distinct advantage for the future. lso has a tieup with the Fifth Ave. Playhouse, N. Y., as a showcase. DuWorld operates the Westminster, N. Y., as its showcase. The others merely rent where possible.

Another new association during the year is Osc Serlin-Joe Burstyn-Arthur Mayer, which bought from Amkino, the American rights of 'Gulliver,' and should, on the strength of profits from it, spread.

BLASKOS DIVORCED

Chicago, Dec. 29.

Albert Blasko, manager of the westside Symphony theatre for Warner Bros., was divorced last week by Katharine Blasko.

Divorce granted on grounds of cruelty.

AMEND COMPLAINT IN $1,797,000 SUIT

Lincoln, Dec. 29.

Amended petitions were filed in Federal court here in the conspiracy action against a string of exhibs and distribs by the State Theatres and Independent Theatres, totaling a damage demand of $1,797,000. Of this total amount, $1,353,000 is asked for the Indie group, which at one time controlled the operations of lalto, Orpheum and Liberty here.

Amendments of the original petitions which were filed in early summer are in line with the recent St. Louis trial decision, and will constitute another delay in the ultimate trying of the case, when and if.

The charge is that the defendants —Fox, United Artists, Par, RKO, Metro, Universal, itagraph, Lincoln Theatre Corp. of Delaware and Nebraska, Bob Livingston and J. H. Cooper, conspired with control of 90% of the features and half the houses to cause the ultimate financial ruin of both corporations owned by the plaintiffs.

Trial originally expected in January will probably be moved over now until the spring session.

306-Allied-Emp. Operator Unions Merger Still On

Merger of New York operator unions, Local 306, Allied and Empire, is expected shortly after the first of the year. Proposed combination of the three boothmen unions progressed slowly in effecting it, as originally planned, but indication is that remaining details will bring no hitches. Allied and Empire men are to be taken into 306 at a $500 initiation rate and all will retain the various jobs they now hold.

Joseph D. Basson is president of Local 306, membership now standing at over 1,800. Proposed absorption of Allied and Empire will add 700 more.

Kennedy's RCA Chore

Joseph P. Kennedy, former chairman of the Securities Exchange Commission, has been retained by Radio Corp. of America for the special purpose of making a study of problems relating to its capital structure. This announcement was made Friday (27) by David Sarnoff, president, following regular monthly meeting of corporation's directors.

Kennedy is to start this study at once, and will advise the board just as soon as it is completed. He has left for Florida and will work on the matter there.

Wall Street opinion is that a heavy task confronts Kennedy in working out a re-capitalization plan that will meet with the approval of the three classes of RCA stockholders. Company has about $20,000,000 available at once with more than $5,000,000 expected shortly through disposition of remaining holdings in RKO.

Plan to retire Preferred A issue also will come under eyes of Kennedy. Outright retirement is not considered likely because it would involve outlay of nearly $26,000,000, figure which company does not feel inclined to meet at present. What is more probable is that the present Radio A would be retired in favor of a new preference stock paying less than the present $3.50 annually.

Cash position of RCA now most favorable it has been in years. Company has received approximately $17,000,000 in the last two months from the sale of half its holdings in RKO to Atlas-Lehman Bros. and disposition of its common stock holdings in Electric & Musical Industrials, Ltd., of England. Nearly $11,000,000 was paid into RCA early this month when 29% interest in EWI was sold together with interest due before actual sale. When company sells its remaining 50% interest in RKO, it will have an additional $5,000,000 or ore.

Total amount of money going into company's treasury is further swelled by manner in which securities held by RCA have increased in value since evalued at close of 1924. Figured that value has been enhanced more than $2,000,000.

The Newsreels

By Roy Chartier

Five leading newsreel companies, Fox-Movietone, Hearst-Metrotone, Paramount, Pathe and Universal remained in the field during 1935 to supply the one kind of filler all theatres, big and small, demand. Double featuring hasn't knocked out the newsreels. For a long time newsreel manufacture and merchandising was profitable. The busines years and maintenance has finally become lucrative.

The answer is that the newsreels have moved with the times. High-salaried commentators and editors have come into the field, departures have been made in numerous directions, and consistent skill now characterizes the output.

While competition has always been keen among the newsreel producers, it has probably been sharpest during the past year. New competition, indirect rather than direct, has been brought by the March of Time two-reelers, put out by the publishers of Time magazine. The March of Time issues, released once a month, have not displaced the standard newsreels, but they have brought about audience comparison and has had the tendency of sharpening the news editors.

The Time reel sells at a fancy rental, getting about 10 times what the regular newsreels cost. It is bought as supplemental filler, usually in the place of shorts, and does not supplant issues of whatever newsreels are bought by the account. All newsreels are marketed on a basis of 104 issues yearly, so if any theatre should toss out its regular issue of the reel it takes, the maker isn't out anything.

Fewer 'Dont's'

In its unique monthly reel, March of Time deals at length with various matters of topical interest. It has a daring that is little by little being approached by the other reels in their handling of highly controversial subjects. For years the standard newsreels were guided by many 'don'ts' for various reasons, but mostly through fear of censorship. The Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, Inc., over which Will H. Hays presides, has always been conscious of dangers, real or agined, which lay within the power of the newsreel. Many editors were afraid to try to duplicate in film what newspapers put into print or pictures, but within e past year or so restraint has distinctly lessened. The March of definitely acted this direction.

Such clips as the showing of inger'. body, and as close southern lynchin as cameras could get, helped break the ice. Pathe's clip on Communism is a strong case which might be cited. Its editor went down the line in taking po shots at Communism and also at Russia. Strikes and other riots, in which actual fighting was not cu from the negative, was blamed quite bluntly on Reds. The Hearst reel also went to bat when it started its expose of Russia. And there was picketing of theatres showing the Hearst reel including the Embassy, N. Y., all-news house. Picketing by socialistic element also figured in connection with one issue of Time. The picketing, however, never caused any serious trouble although a Huey Long episode also in Time, caused quite a furore down the home state of the late Kingfish. Industry belief was that Long ultimately pushed through his film censorship bill in Louisiana from anger on March of Time's treatment. This was eventually squared.

Hauptmann Tri

Earlier in the year the newsreels got into something of a jam over release of actual testimony during the Hauptmann trial in New Jersey. This was, of course, hot newsreel material and it immediately became potent boxoffice.

Charged with a breach of faith, all newsreels were ruled out of the courtroom following this incident and the companies were notified that if the Hauptmann testimony wasn't removed from circulation action would be taken against them. Some got cold feet, but Universal and Pathe refused to eliminate these Hauptmann clips. And that was the end of that. Little expense has been spared in getting prints to theatres as rapidly as possible on hot stories. On one occasion, when prints of the assassination of King Alexander were being rushed here, Fox-Movietone sought to beat competitor by sending a plane 200 miles out to sea to pick its negative off the incoming boat. Fox failed because its plane fell into the water, but there were no casualties. The job in Ethiopia has also been no cinch. A few weeks ago one of Par's cameraman, Edward Genock, was seriously beaten up by Ethiopians.

overing the Italian-Ethiopian conflict was one of the major problems of the year for newsreel companies. Units worked under difficulties and the cost of keeping them on the job, plus shipment of negative, reached the point where there was, and is some consideration of pulling out together.

Paramount claimed the scooping of all competitors by being first to get film across after the war had begun. This company had made preparations months in advance and got out a special three reeler on the subject.

An Executi

An exclusive during the past year, which was figured for sensational reaction, didn't come up to hopes. This was the actual picture of a Cuban rebel being executed near Havana. U iversal photographed the firing squad mowing down its victim, and Cuba put U' Havana branch manager, plus the cameraman, in the oosegow. They finally got out. Meantime, where the gruesome clip was shown, it aroused considerable comment but brought about no faintings or hysterics.

During the fall, football provides boxoffice lure for the news producers. The games are expensive to get but this past gridiron season, excellent coverage has been given the major ames. Outstanding example of fine game footage wa. Pathe's stuff on the Ohio State-Notre Dame battle.

Taste in film fare may change, but the newsreel has long since become a fixture. Exhibitors know there will be squawks if they don't give 'e their picture

NED EDRIS PARTNERS WITH HAMRICK, TACOMA

Tacoma, Dec. 29.

Ned Edris, for 12 years manager of Hamrick theatres, mostly in Tacoma, became a partner of John Hamrick here with the announcement of the purchase of the Jensen & Von Herberg leasehold and equipment comprising the Roxy, downtown first run deluxer. This gives Hamrick and Edris here the Music Box, first run deluxer; oxy, Blue Mouse and Temple, family duals. Consideration of deal with Jensen & Von Herberg interests, Seattle operators for newly acquired house, reported at over $50,000.

Hamrick said this is first time in his 25 years of showmanship he has formed a partnership. By this deal Edris and Hamrick have the Metro, Warner, Universal, Columbia 20th Century-Fox, United Artists, First National and RKO product.

Metro achieves in 'A Tale of Two Cities' a screen classic which for sheer dramatic force excels in thrills the various horror stories which the country has profitably absorbed. This being so, there seems to be little reason why the terrific grip of this tragic story of renunciation should not fare very well.

Technically it is about as flawless as is possible. The story is carefully dragged from the mass of literature in Dickens' three-volume day. It has been assembled with intelligent skill and then turned over to a lengthy cast almost without exception capable of realizing, in the flesh, the quaint characters of the novellist. It has been made with respectful and loving care.

Even the two yawning pitfalls of spectacle and dialog have been adroitly evaded. The fall of the Bastille is a breath-taking screen picture, but it is given no greater valuation than its influence on the plot warrants.

The rabble at the guillotine is blood-chilling in its realism, but not for a moment does it overlie the principals, waiting in the shadow of the bloody platform for their turn to come. In the dialog the lines are neither too often stilted phrases of the book, nor yet the colloquial language of today. It is a happy compromise which always fits and only once does a scene bring a laugh when it should not. This is in the fight between Edna May Oliver and Blanche Yurka. The fall from the table draws an ill-timed chuckle. It may have purposely been planned to break the horror of the scene, but from an artistic point of view it is regrettable.

On the other hand, in spite of the deep sadness of the theme, there is a distinct and non-intrusive comedy thread, mostly contributed by Miss Oliver, who does valiant service in keeping the tension at the breaking point. Possibly as a sop to the desire for happy endings, the execution of Carton is softened. The boom camera rises above the top of the guillotine on a panorama of Paris, with a title closing in, and Carton's famous lines spoken as the title runs. The device is effective. Another matter for which the spectator has to be grateful is the omission of any farewell between Lucie and Carton, which must inevitably have spoiled those splendid fine moments.

The production is outstanding, not alone for the skill with which the major action has been handled, but for the adroitness with which director Jack Conway has managed the background accurately, is never intrusive, yet there is none of the bare stage effect that too often is shown in some other pictures. The cameraman rates mention for his appreciative use of angles, and a nod also should go to the scene constructors.

With so long and so excellent a cast it is impossible to give credit wherever it is due. Ronald Colman makes his Carton one of the most pathetic figures in the screen catalog. Gone are his drawing room mannerisms, shaved along with his moustache. He makes the drab likeable, pathetic and intensely sad while going through most of the picture with a smile on his face. Basil Rathbone is an effective pirate captain (French brigands, this time), he and Flynn engaging in an arresting duel in the course of events. Alexander (with a Frankenstein tone personality), Barrett, Klibbee, George Hassell as the former gov. with the sad, Vernon Steele, a very reasonable King Jame. (really a bit, but Steele makes it important). Henry Stephenson and others contribute handsomely.

Camera work is excellent and the special E. W. Korngold score (he also did the 'Midsummer Night's Dream' musicalization) helps enhances the technic, in which the Forbstein baton is prominent.

The swashbuckling rapier and brigandery of 'Capt. Blood' are undeniable for the male fan appeal. Selling should project the romance aspects to good purpose and, in toto, combine for okay box office.

This story was originally pictured in 1924, and silent, by Vitagraph.

'Captain Blood,' from the Sabatini novel, is a big picture. It's a spectacle which, had it a bit more romance, and marquee values, could well be a smash. And it is, it will do very well and establish both Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland.

Director Michael Curtiz, in mounting this cosmopolitan production, hasn't spared the horses. It's a lavish, swashbuckling saga of the Spanish main.

This engaging Irishman, Flynn, who has appeared in but two relatively unimportant WB releases, is the titular Peter Blood, erstwhile physician, later sold into West Indian slavery, to emerge thereafter as a pet among Caribbean pirates, Capt. Blood, only later to be pardoned, his crew of runaway slaves likewise granted their freedom, and sworn into the King's navy. To cap the Sabatini saga, Capt. lood becomes the governor of the colonial W. I. possession, as reward for his bravery in conquering the two attacking French battleships, displacing Lionel Atwill, his enemy, for the major portion of this two hours' footage.

'Blood' is a spectacular cinematic entry which, while not flawless, is quite compelling. Its sundry little discrepancies, however, count against a picture satisfyingly tally. The inconsistencies, while not frequent, are rather prominent and at times irritating.

As, for instance, the climactic sea battle of the lone pirate ship (Blood's), now a volunteer in the cause of England, against the two French vessels, One French frigate seemingly stands idly by until Blood's ship conquers one and then directs its attack on the other. The finale with the discomfited governor, in whose place Blood is appointed, is rather tent-tweht-thirt.

And underlying it all, as a prodding distraction, is the whole premise of the titular Capt. Blood. Here is a gallant, engaging, young blade who, under pirate's colors, rejects the very aspects which first cements the governor's love.

Flynn impresses favorably from the start. One lives with him in the unfairness of a tyrant King Charles which causes him and his fellow Englishmen to be sold into slavery. The stuff with which he builds the audience roots with them in their ultimately fruitless plot for escape from the island. And then he is catapulted into leadership of a pirate ship.

In the popular conception, for all the ingratiating qualities of Ross Alexander, Guy Kibbee, Robert Barrat and others in his crew, pirates have a million strikes on the covenants how the spoils should be divided, women not molested, etc., these provisions in the honor-among-thieves don't quite jell with any pirate crew.

Yet, despite the scripting, it's an impressive work. Chiefly it's to the histrionic credit of all concerned that its effectiveness is what it is.

Flynn is impressive for future big marquee values. Miss de Havilland, who, as Titania in Warner's 'Midsummer Dream,' is romantically beauteous as the unsympathetic plantation owner's (later governor's) niece. This supplies a modicum of romantic interest, though all too paltry. It's really one of the prime shortcomings of the production. Lionel Atwill is sufficiently hateful as the uncle. Basil Rathbone is an effective pirate captain (French brigands, this time), he and Flynn engaging in an arresting duel in the course of events. Alexander (with a Frankenstein tone personality), Barrett, Klibbee, George Hassell as the former gov. with the sad, Vernon Steele, a very reasonable King Jame. (really a bit, but Steele makes it important). Henry Stephenson and others contribute handsomely.

Camera work is excellent and the special E. W. Korngold score (he also did the 'Midsummer Night's Dream' musicalization) helps enhances the technic, in which the Forbstein baton is prominent.

Miniature Reviews

'A Tale of Two Cities' (MG). Outstanding production of Dickens story.

'Captain Blood' (WB). Swashbuckling spec of the Spanish main pirates. Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland successfully projected for future marquee honors.

'Ah, Wilderness' (MG). Eugene O'Neill's play excellently produced. Should do good biz where introduced by extra exploitation.

'The Bride Comes Home' (Par). Breezy light comedy that should do nicely.

'Dangerous' (WB). Bette Davis-Franchot Tone in well acted and directed drama with femme appeal.

'If You Could Only Cook' (Col). Plenty chuckles in this smartly directed romance. Herbert Marshall and Jean Arthur in top roles.

'Kind Lady' (Metro). Aline MacMahon and Basil Rathbone in new variety of crook drama. Leisurely pace cramps effectiveness.

'Another Face' (Radio). Fairly amusing gangster comedy lacking names and other b.o. properties.

'Fang and Claw' (RKO). Third Frank Buck wild animal picture, mild as entertainment.

'Forced Landing' (Rep). Familiar mystery yarn, with part of action aboard transport plane. For dual billers.

'Gun Play' (FD). Action western with some slight comedy starring Big Boy Williams. Okay supporting fi

AH, WILDERNESS

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release of Hunt Stromberg production. Stars Wallace Beery; features Lionel Barrymore. Directed by Clarence Brown. Based on play of same name by Eugene O'Neill; adaptation, Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich; musical score, Herbert Stouthart. Photography, Clyde deVinne. At Center, N. Y., week Dec. 25, '35. Running time, 101 mins.

Sid	Wallace Beery
Nat Miller	Lionel Barrymore
Essie	Aline MacMahon
Richard	Eric Linden
Muriel	Cecilia Parker
Tommy	Mickey Rooney
Essie Miller	Spring Byington
Mr. McComber	Charles Grapewin
Arthur	Frank Albertson
Wint Selby	Edward Nugent
Mildred	Bonita Granville
Belle	Helen Flint
Miss Hawley	Helen Freeman

A splendid example of picture making. Principal credit probably belongs to Hunt Stromberg, the producer, because of its general excellence, but Clarence Brown, the director, can be proud of his contribution. It is distinctly an outstanding film which should do well at the boxoffice upon the condition that it is liberally and properly exploited. With Lionel Barrymore and Wallace Beery cast lacks feminine marquee balance.

Adapted from Eugene O'Neill's play of the same title, produced two years ago by the Theatre Guild with George M. Cohan as Nat Miller, father of a New England family of the period of 1906, the story improves in entertainment interest in its transfer to the screen. Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich wrote the screen play and their work shows an enthusiasm for the characters and dramatic and emotional points. Although the film is a bit long there was no indication of restlessness at this house.

Although the picture is back 30 years the characters, the plot and the theme are as timely as a new Christmas tie. While the play devived on the stage a certain charm from its setting of a generation ago, adherence to the same period created di culties for the film producers which were excellently handled. The story would have been as effectively told (and probably even better accepted by present day audiences) if it were laid in the present.

By one of those studio exigencies Wallace Beery is starred in the billing of the film. His role, of Sid, uncle in the family, is distinctly third in importance in the picture. Lionel Barrymore gives one of his best performances as Nat Miller, which was also splendidly played on the stage by Cohan in New York and by Will Rogers on a Pacific coast tour.

That the adapters and the director retained the balance of the original story through this strange bit of starring and casting is to their credit. They have also brought to the front with emphasis the part of the son, Richard, played by Eric Linden, effectively. The film story is chiefly about the young love affair of the boy.

The entire cast has been carefully chosen with excellent performances by Spring Byington and Aline MacMahon. Cecilia Parker plays Muriel capably opposite the very young lover who is mentally all-dwisted up with smatterings of Swinburne, Oscar Wilde and Omar. Important and well act-1 parts are handled by Mickey Rooney, Frank Albertson and Charles Grapewin.

Best comedy sequence in the film is a highschool commencement. Starting with the glee club singing, and through the brief but very funny recitations, the episode gathers humor right to the finish when Linden rises to deliver the valedictory. It is a dutiful and farcical representation of a characteristic American incident. As such, it rates high among the best things which Brown has directed.

As in the play, however, so on the screen. The climax is reached when father and son have their heart to heart talk about life in general and women in particular. Scarcely a human passage has not appeared in the theatre for many years. Barrymore is properly embarrassed, hesitant and sympathetic in this scene. There is a fine moment when the elder and younger men reach an understanding and a new affection. The emotional quality of this episode carries for some minutes through the last part of the film, finally to be capped by paternal humor.

This picture will put pressure on the Metro distributing and exploiting forces. That it is a fine artistic effort will not be denied anywhere, but for the public at large it will need all the boosting it can get.

BRIDE COMES HOME

Paramount production and release. Stars Claudette Colbert; features Fred MacMurray, Robert Young, Wesley Ruggles. Story by Elizabeth Sanxay Holding; adapted by Claude Binyon; camera, Leo Tover. At Paramount, N. Y., commencing Dec. 25, '35. Running time, 83 mins.

Jeanette Desmereau	Claudette Colbert
Cyrus Anderson	Fred MacMurray
Jack Bridewell	Robert Young
Alfred Desmereau	William Collier, Sr.
The Judge	Donald Meek
Frank	Richard Carle
Otto	Johnny Arthur
Painter	Bob McKenzie
Operator	Eddie Dunn
Waiter	Jerry Mandy
Cop	Harry Bowen
Henry	Edgar Kennedy
Emma	Kate McKenna
Len Noble	Thomas Jackson
Cab Driver	Edward Gargan

Another galloping lithograph off the boy-and-girl-always-fighting wood-block. 'It Happened One Night' is the spiritual pappy of this type of entertainment. Claude Binyon has written an adroit scenario; Wesley Ruggles has given it life and pace; Colbert, MacMurray and Young supply the personalities. Together the trio of assets whip up a meringue in the modern taste that should do okay at the pay window.

Preaching the philosophy that a good fight (between the sexes) never hurt anybody and that a strong masculine ego is the proper consort for a snippy female ditto; the 'Bride' runs from Colbert to Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray over a not-too-serious steeplechase of minor frictions and clashes. It's a breezy story, but with occasional give-lay passages to vary the pace and season the pudding. To supply the missing apex of the triangle is Robert Young, a likely aggressive part, beaming son of $3,000,000. He is almost too charming for the best interests of the story, especially as he consistently gets no sympathy whatsoever from the heroine but a lot from the audience.

It's a made-to-measure framework for Miss Colbert, presenting her in the dual-character role position of a young lady beset by two lovers, both fascinating and both collapsible at her slightest whim. Several bit parts are played for maximum values: Edgar Kennedy and Willie Collier, Sr.

Principally because the action fails for an elopment to Crown Point, Indiana, the story is laid in Chicago. It could as well anywhere. Assortment of laughs scattered through the production come fast enough and often enough to carry the picture over any minisvere particular criticisms of its essential artificiality.

DANGEROUS

Warner production and release of Harry Joe Brown production. Stars Bette Davis; features Franchot Tone. Director, Alfred E. Green. Story and adaptation, Laird Doyle; film editor, Thomas Richards; camera, Ernie Haller. At Rivoli, N. Y., commencing Dec. 25, '35. Running time, 78 mins.

Joyce Heath	Bette Davis
Don Bellows	Franchot Tone
Gail Armitage	Margaret Lindsay
Mrs. Williams	Alison Skipworth
Gordon Heath	John Eldredge
Teddy	Dick Foran
Roger Farnsworth	Arthur Walker
Phil Hardee	Richard Cartis
Charles Melton	George Irving
George Sheffield	Pierre Watkin
Elmer	Captain Wood
Reed Walsh	William Davidson

Laird Doyle knows his romantic dialog. Better than he knows his plot, but with the former carrying the latter, he has banged out an appealing scenario for the women in 'Dangerous.' It has been sensitively directed and competently acted. As a picture it is lacking in ordinary elements of boxoffice appeal, but its femme drag is an antidote for that and the returns should satisfy.

Script is the kind that might have made a moderately successful legit play, and for which Hollywood would have paid plenty. It's an original. The triangle involves a successful young architect, a society girl and an actress. Miss Davis loses the man to the other girl, but she has the closing sequence all to herself, and while the sympathy is distributed equally among all three characters, it's unquestionably Miss Davis' picture at the conclusion.

The actress has been famous but has hit the skids and is soused when the architect first meets her in a cellar joint. He takes her to his country place, sobers her up and falls in love with her. But she has always been a jinx to her men and to the shows she's been in, and she jinxes and ruins him like the rest.

There is a series of complications, including the reappearance of an almost forgotten husband and an automobile crash. Society girl hovers in the background after the architect breaks off their engagement upon falling for the actress. The production of a show on his money is also worked in. Ending is bittersweet, with the society girl grabbing off the lucre and the domestic tug o' war and the actress making amends.

Laird's dialog is adult, intelligent and has a rhythmic beat. Is love passages in the film where the architect and actress alternately struggle against and surrender to the attraction for each other, are clever. But his story is not altogether strategic and a little humor here and there would not have been amiss.

Miss Davis' performance is fine on the whole, despite a few imperfect moments. She called upon to reach an intense dramatic pitch without hysterics, Miss Davis is capable of turning the trick. Yet there are moments in the hysterous when a lighter acting mood would be opportune, and when a negative piece of business might have been turned into a welcome comedy situation through less pressure.

Miss Davis should acquire a change of pace. But that she has plenty on the ball is evident through her work opposite Franchot Tone in this picture. Tone is splendid as the architect. Margaret Lindsay has a sit-'n'-wait assignment that didn't call for exertion. Other parts are comparatively short, with Alison Skipworth's the one among the supports. But leave it to Miss Skipworth to make anything she's given to say or do important.

If You Could Only Cook

Columbia production and release. Stars Herbert Marshall, Jean Arthur; features Lee Kasmel. Director, William A. Seiter. Story, F. Hugh Herbert; adaptation, Howard Green, Gertrude Purcell; camera, John Stumar. At Roxy, N. Y., week Dec. 28, '35. Running time, 70 mins.

Jim Buchanan	Herbert Marshall
Joan Hawthorne	Jean Arthur
Mike Rossini	Leo Carrillo
Lloyd	Donald Meek
Bob Reynolds	Alan Edwards
Evelyn Fletcher	Veda Ireescourt
Al	Gene Lewis
Swig	Ralf Harolde
Pete	Herbert Mckinley
Chesty	Richard Powell

In this far-fetched bit of whimsy there's a generous dash of humor and heart-tugging that should appeal to any class of audience. Neatly blended performances are turned in by Herbert Marshall and Jean Arthur, while the direction has all that it takes to keep them absorbed in a Cinderalla theme. What the Marshall name can't effect, the satisfied customers should finish as far as the picture is concerned. 'If You Could Only Cook' offers particularly strong promise for the nabes.

Brought together for this fanciful combination of events are a successful automotive engineer (Marshall), the daughter of an ex-college professor who's ready to try anything so as to save herself from starving (Miss Arthur) and an exracketeer who is also addicted to squeamish tastes in food (Carrillo). Narrative swings into a lively fanfare of laughs and romance when, as a result of a preliminary lunch meeting, neither knowing the identity of the other, the girl induces Marshall to pose as her husband so that they get the cook-and-butler job on the millionaire's yacht.

Punchy comedy moments are contrived out of the efforts of the couple to keep their employee and his bodyguard (Lloyd Stander) from getting privy to the masqueraders' real status. Also scoring plenty in laugh fare are the scenes which have Carrillo and his mob kidnapping Marshall from a church wedding as a society girl and attempting to bring about a reconciliation between the rich young man and the cook. Among the episodes which are bound to tell on the fear-ducts is the one that entangles Miss Arthur with the

Hadji Ginsberg Peeks Into '36

By JOE BIGELOW

Hadji Ali Ginsberg, the seer with the X-ray eyes who can read your mitt with your gloves on, went into a trance with one ear cocked for a phone call from his agent, and did some ground and fancy prognosticating for the benefit of the show business. Hadji is the guy who, for instance, picked the south to win the Civil War. In 1936, says Hadji, the following headlines will appear:

'Will Hays makes rastic changes in his all-weather dedication speech.'

'John Paine, of MPPA, resolves not to call any more meetings.'

'Sitting on Abraham-Lincoln's-Knee, started by Shirley Temple, becomes new screen cycle. Jean Harlow the next sitter.'

'Palace, New York, revives two-a-day.'

'Von Sternberg's new method is realism, not symbolism. Dietrich will be walloped with a custard pie.'

'Minskys and Izzy Herk ban stripping.'

'Mae West's next for Par, 'Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm.'

(Berlin dateline) — pick Willie Howard as th vorite comedian.'

'Vamery finishes last in its own critics' boxscore.'

'Broadway niteries order waiters not to count the drinks. Placing customers on honor system.'

Although he covers most of the field thoroughly, there are a couple of things Hadji can't figure out:

1. Who is Countess Dorothy di Frasso?

2. Where does Hadji Ali Ginsberg go next week?

Balaban & Katz-Great States has voted an appropriation of $183,000 to be spent within the next four months on new seats, marquees, lighting, cooling systems where necessary, additional carpeting and general redecoration.

This rehabilitation drive is now reaching the smaller cities of the midwest, following the general spruce-up campaign which has practically completely redecorated the indie and circuit houses in the city of Chicago where the rehabilitation drive was led by the bigger local circuits such as Essaness, Harry Balaban, Schoenstadts and the key indie exhibitors such as Ludwig Sussman.

Long Beach, Cal., Dec. 29.

In face of ruling by appellate division of Los Angeles superior court that bank night is not a lottery, Deputy City Prosecutor Howser of Long Beach has filed a test suit against the Fox-West Coast theatre here on legality of practice.

Court ruling asserted that bank night, as practiced, with any registrant eligible for drawing prize, whether patron of show or not, is not gambling within meaning of state law. Attorneys indicated that an adverse decision in either case would be carried to a higher tribunal.

St. Louis, Dec. 29.

Old controversy of whether the $5,000,000 tax free Municipal Auditorium and Community Center Building should compete with motion picture theatres in this city in presentation of films is in eruption. Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, through its pres., Fred Wehrenberg, protested to Auditorium Commission against use of building by Community Music School Fundation for showing of pictures.

Wehrenberg said that New Grand Central and St. Louis Theatres, both dark and paying taxes, were available for rental purposes and Auditorium Commission should not deprive these and other houses of an opportunity to obtain revenue to help pay their taxes. He also stated use of Autorium for purposes, under guise of charity, was objectionable to theatre owners.

with film financing has been brought by any film company other than the the original investor, despite the fact that allegedly anyone could bid and buy it in. Also, it is emphasized, since Goldwyn pushed the Warners up to $110,000 on 'Horse,' there hasn't been a single instance of bidding on a play, and that was a season ago.

Dramatists insist they are serious about the matter and intend to be arbitrary about it. They met twice last week in New York and have another meeting scheduled for this week. Actual demands they will make is not being made public, since they point out that their idea is not to discuss the problem, but to present their demands, and the managers can take them or leave them.

Compromise?

Nevertheless, it is believed that there will be a meeting between dramatists and managers late in January to discuss the new demands and work out a workable basis of procedure.

Miami, 29.

Winter season, especially in this town, has gotten off on the wrong foot. Weather has been particularly unpleasant so far, too chilly. The natives, however, are expecting a big year, having added some 11,000 new rooms to the town's available housing accommodations.

But very little come-on yet with the theatres, niteries and race track all suffering and splitting up the meagre coin. Play has been particularly light at the track, Tropical Park. On the opening day, the handle was only $124,000, which included both the seven-race scheduele and the daily double. One day it was as low as $92,000 from an attendance of 3,500, despite the fact the days have been so chilly that the beach is practically deserted.

Theatres on the beach are waiting hopefully for the new year to get them going. The two Paramount houses are doing brutal biz, with the Colony open only on Saturday and Sunday.

Most of the niteries expect to have gambling as their only hope for real coin this season. Railroads, however, are very optimistic an plannin special trains on new schedules to take care of the expected rush. Illinois Central is making a play for midwest business and is putting its crack Flori trains on a regular daily run.

Beaver, Pa., Dec. 29.

Two Pittsburgh theatre men have filed a $5,000,000 breach of contract suit against Mrs. Jean Patterson Dawson in connection with the new Granada theatre building in Beaver Falls, near here. House was erected five years ago.

Archie Fineman and Jacob Richman, of Pittsburgh, and the estate of Alfred J. Karp ask damages of $496,510 from Mrs. Dawson, on the ground that her promise to put up a $30,000 caused them to lose the building and other considerations.

HOLLYWOOD'S STUDIO PROPERTIES

By Bill Swigart

Hollywood, Dec. 29.

Last minute check-up on studio properties and buildings in Hollywood for the year ending Dec. 31, 1935, shows a decided increase to the capital investment of $95,000,000 reported as of first of the year. More than $3,131,674 was expended for studio improvements and expansion during the year with present plans of nine studios budgeting $5,305,000 for further expansion during the year 1936. This will bring the total capital investment up to $103,436,674 by the end of 1936.

Survey of existing studio properties and buildings shows 26 active studios with a total of 174 enclosed stages covering an area of 2,428,605 square feet on which to build sets and record pictures. In addition to this there are 70 administration buildings containing 1,802 offices; 68 dressing room buildings housing 1,697 dressing rooms, many arranged in suites of two and three rooms. Added to this, there are 590 other studio buildings required to house various technical departments such as laboratories, cutting rooms, power plants, film vaults, planing mills, plaster shops, wardrobe, property, scene docks, projection rooms and garages.

These buildings are spread over an area of 710½ acres with an additional 2,979 acres maintained as separate location units where permanent outdoor settings can be built and used from time to time. These units are, in many cases, located several miles away from studio sites and are used frequently by outside companies.

Warners Biggest

Position of studios as to size and facilities is headed by Warners with a total 629,795 square feet of stage space contained their three plants, Burbank, Sunset and Vitagraph. Metro rates second largest with a total of 315,965 square feet of stage space. RKO Radio and RKO Pathe comes third with a combined footage of 297,321 square feet; 20th-Fox is fourth with combined footage of its Westwood and Western Ave. plants, amounting to 281,131 feet. Universal has 172,655; Paramount, 170,756; United Artists, 125,102; Columbia, 79,030; Hal Roach, 96,000; Republic, 53,400; Darmour, 15,000; Disney, 3,750. Combined footage for 11 rental studios totals 183,700 square feet.

Warners expended the most during the year 1935 for studio improvement and expansion, to the extent of $1,500,000 for construction of several stages and studio operating buildings at its Burbank plant. This is almost half of what the balance of the 26 studios spent. Metro was the second largest spender during the year with an outlay of $325,000; 20th-Fox (Westwood) spent $264,674; 20th-Fox (Western), $25,000; RKO Radio, $250,000; RKO Pathe, $50,000; Universal, $190,000; Paramount, $30,000; United Artists, $180,000; Columbia, $70,000; Hal Roach, $190,000; Republic, $42,000; General Service, $10,000, and Prudential, $5,000.

Still ore Building

Studios, according to present plans aim to increase studio facilities during the year 1936. 20th-Fox is set to spend $2,500,000 for expansion of its Westwood plant. Columbia runs second with a budget of $1,000,000. Paramount will spend $650,000, United Artists, $275,000; Republic, $240,000; General Service, $250,000; Hal Roach, $190,000; Prudential, $100,000, and RKO Pathe another $100,000.

This same survey shows an average of 18,002 regular employees engaged the year round to operate this gigantic studio structure. Figure does not include contract players, directors, writers, extras and other persons on a picture to picture basis, but consists of the following classifications:

Average number of employees hired the year round in all technical branches, totals 13,265. Administration operating forces such as executives, accountants, clerks, secretaries, janitors, and miscellaneous white collar jobs, totals 2,232; laboratory, cutting and projection departments employs 1,752; transportation, drivers, mechanics and helpers, totals 610; police departments show a total of 516; publicity writers, secretaries, still men, et al., total of 363; reading and research departments hire on an average of 164 persons the year round.

The following table gives a complete description of studio properties, buildings and employee classifications maintained by each of the 26 studios taken into this survey.

This table shows estimated number of regular studio employees hired the year round to operate studios. It does not include contract players, extras, directors, writers and others employed from picture to picture basis.

Going Places

Cookery On the Bias

The trouble with cooking in this country is the cooks. They have a low standard of beauty and a wretchedly undeveloped sense of style. They don't look like Jean Arthur, whose cooking melts the icicle hearts of gunmen in 'If You Could Only Cook'; they don't seem to realize that it isn't what you put into lobster thermidor that makes it neat, it's what you wear.

Now for a truly glorious lobster ther idor, Miss Arthur suggests a fitted deift blue satin uniform with short puffed sleeves and a sensibly low V neck, collared and cuffed with fine organdy, for it gets hot in a kitchen and a cook doesn't want to have herself all harassed with a lot of clothing. Whipping up a seven-layer cake is different. That takes an evening uniform of black satin, also fitted by an expert dressmaker, with long sleeves softly gathered into a high shoulder line and caught at the wrist with delicately fluted white ruching. This cake-baking costume must have a high neck finished bewitchingly with a fluted ruching ruff, so that when a cake-baking cook takes off her gossamer white apron, she may be all dressed—save for slipping into her sable coat and little nonsense hat, to knock 'em dead when she arrives at the Colony for her own lunch.

Miss Arthur believes, moreover, that a cook's morale depends on the proper lingerie, and she herself sleeps in a flesh satin robe de nuit with cap sleeves made of the same sheer lace that bands it lavishly at the hem. In fact, according to Miss Arthur, good cooks should wear satin all the time, save on their day off, when they can get arrested in an amusing suit, Schiaparelli inspired, with a double-breasted short velvet braid-bound jacket that's got high, wide lapels and leg o' mutton sleeves. This way they don't stay in jail long.

The Boys Get It

There have been a lot of pictures released of late with Anita Louise in them, which is enough to make even Miss Louise a cycle starter. Therefore, leading lady in 'Another Face,' Phyllis Brooks. In the Louise pattern, but—since there is to be a Louise type—with more range to her voice.

Miss Brooks plays a picture star, for 'Another Face' has a Hollywood studio locale, and so she's been granted a couple of silver foxes to toss haughtily about her throat. But that's as far as 'Another Face' will go about Miss Brooks' wardrobe, maybe because it doesn't seem to have much confidence in itself as a whole, so anyone who persists in yearning for extravagant Hollywood fashions after thrilling to Miss Brooks' silver foxes, will have to content herself with noting the little original touches in the wardrobes of the men.

The way the tops of the sleeves of Alan Hale's sports jacket are gathered in little ripples into the shoulder seams, for instance. The massive pleats that bound its broad back. The extraordinarily fine, long points of his shirt collar that closes in a round line at his neck, as compared with the great long points of Brian Donlevy's shirt collar, which closes at the base of his throat in a V neckline. The vertical tucks in Mr. Donlevy's gabardine jacket, springing to sudden release above the waist, suggesting the chest of Hercules and the hips of Clifton Webb.

Of all the men in the cast, Wallace Ford's clothes alone are humdrum pants, shirts and coats, without flair or imagination. Mr. Ford plays a press agent.

Chicago Aristocracy

When an actress is acclaimed an actress—well, she acts. Being a winner of the Academy award, Claudette Colbert sinks her lovely teeth into 'The Bride Comes Home,' and acts. Though it may not be rugged enough to take a heap of fine femme histrionics, it's had the pluck to enlist the services of Miss Colbert, and by the little gold statue, that's what it's going to get.

So Miss Colbert registers something every minute, and it's always terribly clear exactly what. Miss Colbert's vast and loyal following shall not puzzle its soft little heads over subtleties. Furthermore, the masses have ordained her their dream girl; so she shall remain steadfast, forever one of them. Though the script repeats she's as aristocratic as aristocratic can be, it points out, of the Chicago aristocracy. Everybody knows what the Chicago aristocracy is like.

Miss Colbert's large brown eyes roll to splendid effect, her voice goes down low and throaty in search of charm and comes back with unction, and she wears flowers—masses of organdy petals—at the neck of her costumes. It's hot in Chicago during the picture, and Miss Colbert's hot weather street frock is a high-necked, long full-sleeved chiffon dress over a beautifully fitted slip. She's got it in both black and white, and they say people do wear things like her white one in Chicago.

Pompadours—Three Sizes

'Ah, Wilderness' is a sweet and decent picture. Everybody was sweet and decent in 1906. Fancy ladies were happy with $5. Girls obeyed their fathers, and wore flat wide ribbon bows at the napes of their necks, and curls, and little pompadours, like Cecilia Parker. Wives minded their husbands and wore big pompadours, like Spring Byington. Maiden ladies were docile and wore middle-sized pompadours, like Aline MacMahon.

The sweetness of womankind was proved in various ways. Miss Byington did it with her voice, Miss MacMahon with her giggles, Miss Parker with the shy way she hangs her head. Also, womanking got her man in 1906 and kept him, all except the fancy lady, for that was 1906.

Amusement Stocks

terest with option to purchase remaining 50%. Coincident with this transaction were moves to carry through reorganization of RKO, expected shortly.

Big increase in earnings for Columbia Pictures prompted directors to declare a 50% stock dividend. This was accompanied by remarkable rise in company's certificate and stock, both virtually doubling in value. Columbia Pictures also retired its 17,261 shares of convertible preferred (listed on Over-the Counter) and issued 75,000 shares of $2.75 cumulative preferred, which it listed on N. Y. stock exchange.

With earnings of Radio Corp. of America showing big upturn, two financial transactions by officers set off sweeping advance by Radio B and common issues. First was deal whereby company will get $10,000,000 to $14,000,000 for its holdings in RKO, while other was disposition of 29% stock holdings in Electrical & Musical Industries, Ltd., a British company. figured that these two give the company something like $24,000,000 in cash. The street believes that part of this would be used either to pay off accumulated ($20 per share) dividends on Radio B, or to retire the Preferred A. In either case, value of both Radio B and common would be considerably enhanced, in the opinion of market observers.

In addition to boosting its dividend payments, Loew bettered its financial position by retiring the Metro-Goldwyn preferred issue, thereby saving $1.89 per share in annual dividend payments. Similarly, RCA pulled in an issue of debentures in order to save interest outlay.

No definite trend was discernible in Amusement Group during the first three months of 1935. In fact, group hit low point of year during this quarter. Made a high mark that stood for several weeks as measured by averages for 12 representative issues in first week of January but hovered between the 25 and 26 mark most of remaining portion of quarter, with volume never reaching the 200,000-share mark.

Second quarter (April, May and June), however, showed decided trend upwards. Group climbed for eight successive weeks, hitting 32¼ in the averages for week ending May 20. After brief period of consolidation, the stocks again forged ahead, reaching 32% as transactions also hit upgrade.

The Third Quarter

During July, August and September, quarter in which Amusement Group generally sells lower, this year the group continued to soar and reached a new high for two years at slightly above 37. This mark was hung up in September with number of shares changing hands getting above 500,000.

Universal stocks, particularly the preferred, advanced in remarkable fashion during November, move being predicated on belief that Standard Capital Corp. and Charles R. Rogers would buy into U through option which runs three months. Universal preferred made an 18-point gain in one week. Established new 1935 high at 73, which is exactly 36½ points above low of year. U common, on curb, advanced to new peaks on successive days.

This quarter as well as last three-month period of year were featured by concerted full drives by cheaper priced issues. Warner Bros. common came out its $5 trading range to jump forward to $8.50. Then near the close of November, same stock established new 1935 high at $9.50. Radio common, which had been selling around $6 per share, pushed up above $8 and then crashed through, on enormous volume, to 13⅜ in final quarter. American Seating, after seemingly establishing its peak price around $8, in these last two quarters soared to more than 21½ per share. Third quarter also saw the advance of Columbia Pictures certificates to 81.

Final quarter of 1935 (October, November and December) witnessed some of highest quotations of year. Amusement Group climbed to 43, highest mark in more than two years, after a healthy shakeout in first week of October. This final quarter featured brisk advances by both 20th Century-Fox issues to best 1935 prices.

As with RCA stocks, Columbia Broadcasting A and B issues (listed on Over-Counter mart) forged ahead in steady fashion in last six months of year. After 50% stock dividend early in year, CBS stocks sold off to around 22¾. From this low mark, both issues spurted to $49 level. Company pays $1.60 annually on both shares. Directors declared extra $1 cash disbursement, payable in December in addition to regular 40c quarterly.

Tremendous rise in stock exchange transactions into 3,000,000-4,000,000 share class aided Trans-Lux, though company also naturally benefited from improved biz in general. Stock which is dealt in on curb went from 2⅛ to 4⅜, with 20c paid to stockholders during year.

Bond market early in year was highlighted by sensational performances of Paramount liens. Paramount-Famous-Lasky 6s and Paramount-Publix 6½s soared from $59 to $97 and $99 before being supplanted by the single issue of Paramount obligations. Similarly, the old Paramount-Broadway 5½s rose from around $42 to above $60. Pathe 7s were redeemed during year at par as part of company's plan of reorganization.

Announcement of agreement on reorganization plan for General Theatre Equipment enabled liens and certificates of same to go from low of $6 to $19.75. Other gains in amusement bond list compared favorably with advances on stock exchange. Keith 6s climbed from 67½ to 94¾; and Warner Bros., from 60½ to 89½. New Paramount liens had narrow range.

Among the Women

By The Skirt

est Dressed Women of the Week:
FRAZEE SISTERS
(State)

When Ed Sullivan, the columnist, stepped down to the footlights and invited standees at the State to come down and seat themselves in the orchestra pit, that spelled business in any language. Seldom have so many people tried to get into one theatre as for the Friday afternoon (27) show at the State. Sullivan's Dawn Patrol starts off with the Lathrop Brothers and Virginia Lee. Miss Lee changes costume four times. A black and gold lame gown is discarded for pale yellow pajamas and then comes a dark blue satin dress of the backless variety. The finale has her in a silver gown.

Frazee Sisters are in lovely gowns of crystal fishscales. There is no trimming, the closely fitting princess model requiring none. The sisters' brunette hair is coroneted with a single braid. Ella Logan sees fit to be identified with a white tailored suit with red bow.

Nice Performance

Bette Davis comes to the Rivoli in a character not unlike her 'Of Human Bondage.' The new picture, called 'Dangerous,' again places Miss Davis in the gold statue class.

Picture starts with Miss Davis as a down and out actress, much the worse for liquor. In a simple cloth suit, with print blouse and small hat, she is rescued by Franchot Tone. Taking her down to his country estate Miss Davis meets Allison Skipworth, and that's where the picture begins. For the most part slack and sweaters are worn by Miss Davis, but she is seen at a rehearsal in a lovely taffeta frock. The material is dotted in velvet and has a white collar effect. The hat is off the face. Tiny puffed sleeves end in points. With this costume silver fox is worn. A wolf trimmed coat is of the swagger model.

Margaret Lindsay, as a society miss, is well gowned in a white dress with inserts of sequins at the top of full sleeves with a sequin belt. A rakish outfit consisted of a large plaid skirt and white jacket that had a unique lacing of cords and buttons at the throat. Another dress was of an unusual material, which couldn't be determined. It glistened like jet but seemed to be too soft. There was a pointed bertha under a white yoke.

ice Holiday Lineup

The Grand Opera House couldn't have picked a better holiday show. An 'Our Gang Comedy' helped. Opening act pleased a houseful of kids, Ganglers Dogs. Lydell and Gallagher has the girl doing taps in black moire slacks and lemon colored blouse. A change is made to red velvet pajamas with a greenish gold tunic. Over this outfit, for a minute, is a diamond studded scarf in the shape of a cape. Will Aubrey does some old time singing with the aid of his guitar.

An act called 'Dance Portraits' consists of five people, two boys and three girls. Two boys and a girl are in smocks. Underneath a mustard colored smock the girl is wearing blue satin trousers. Discarding the smock a backless bodice of green is revealed. This same miss does some acrobatics in a short white satin outfit trimmed with red. A girl at the piano is introduced as Frances Pepper. Her impression of Grace Moore is done in a white chiffon gown. The artist's model is a ballet dancer in white tulle with diamond bodice. The finale brings her on in a short black dress with diamond trimming.

The Old Days

The 'Annie Oakley' picture, at the Astor, isn't as colorful as expected, but Barbara Stanwyk does a fine job. She comes down from the mountains in checked gingham, and after joining the Buffalo Bill show for her arena work divides between black and white outfits of the cowboy type, short skirt and jacket trimmed with fringe and huge western hat. Other costuming includes a neglige of velvet over a lace petticoat. A series of street dresses are mostly of cloth with velvet trimmings. In a restaurant a fluffy white dress is shown.

Pert Kelton, with hair a mass of curls, wears some flashy clothes of the bustle type.

Beautiful Elizabeth

'Tale of Two Cities,' at the Capitol, is a splendid picture. Elizabeth Allan is so beautifully photographed that almost every shot of her is a painting. An array of Dolly Tree gowns follow in rapid succession. In a garden Miss Allan is in a white gown and large leghorn hat and is particularly beautiful.

The scenes at court have t high wig effects.

thing which was never to be known.

The code was terminated in May, by the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court and in July the film Code Authority closed shop, refunding a surplus in funds of $23,873. Administration of the film code interested official Washington to the extent that at a later date the NRA review board studied it for possible future use. There has been considerable talk of a voluntary film code, or some set-up by which the highly complicated industry can govern itself, but to date not much progress has been made in this direction. That some such regulation as codism provided is to be desired is openly admitted in the trade. Perplexing question is how to set it up so that it will be enforceable. Meantime, distributors are handling their various problems direct with exhibitors.

Legislation

The industry had the usual adverse legislation, both in Washington and throughout the states, to meet. A total of more than 50 anti-film bills were introduced at the last session of Congress, while in virtually every state one or more ills, many of them tax measures, were brought out. In their various states exhibitors had to take time out to help fight bills inimical to their interests.

In California the code and other developments caused much worry, including state legislation. Bitterness against efforts of California to tax the industry finally reached the point where it appeared the threat to move film production out of that state was serious. The studios made surveys of some eastern and southern states with particular interest in North Carolina. Film manufacturers didn't move their plants, excepting Walt Disney who journeyed to Nevada, but a few months ago the matter of California taxation burdens reechoed when William R. Hearst wrote DAILY VARIETY explaining why he was pulling stakes as a resident there.

At the Studios

Coast news was also created during the past 12 months by friction between the actor and producer committees on the code. The film actors girded for a battle against the film makers and finally got a charter through Equity and the Four A's (Associated Actors and Artists of America), the Screen Actors' Guild finally lining up for closer cooperation with the legit Equity. Writers and producers also had their troubles, the scribes finally filing lengthy demands with NRA in Washington. While this was happening on the Pacific front, indie exhibs were threatening to bolt the NRA if Fox-West Coast wasn't bridled.

The Coast, as well as the east, was more or less alarmed through efforts in Washington to limit big salaries during the last Congressional meet. One bill wanted to fix salaries in any industry at a maximum of $25,000. Meanti , salaries were becoming official information to Washington through the Securities and Exchange Commission and other official mediums such as questionnaires. The SEC as well as other Federal agencies made probes common during the year, and in addition to bankruptcies which came under Federal scrutiny there was the Congressman Sirovich probe, into American Telephone & Telegraph, which was felt in the picture business through executives called to testify.

Anti-Trust Suits

Anti-trust suits against picture companies had been a scarce and not very disturbing factor until suddenly last January U. S. Government agents served subpoenas in the St. Louis case brought by Fanchon and Marco and which was fought to a favorable conclusion by Warner Bros., Paramount and Radio. These three majors were made defendants and six of their executives indicted on a U. S. criminal anti-trust action Jan. 11. A jury acquitted all exactly 11 onths later.

Since NRA explred, agents of the Department of Justice have been active looking into scores of complaints from exhibitors, but no other action has been brought. In addition to the complaints flowing into Washington, the Hays office and other quarters also receive their quota, but in most cases there is no means, especially within picture circles, to handle these complaints.

There has been considerable shifting of personnel. In February Emanuel Cohen resigned as Par's producing head. As the year closed it would have caused no surprise if he had announced affiliation with RKO in a production capacity. In May Joseph M. Schenck resigned from United Artists, and together, with Twentieth Century and Darryl Zanuck moved into Fox, that company becoming Twentieth Century-Fox. In October Al Lichtman resigned as president of UA, in which office he had succeeded Schenck, and h now associated with Loew's as executive assistant to Nicholas M. Schenck. While it probably has no connecting significance, this followed resignation of the Loew boys, Dave and Arthur, from the Loew and Metro boar Later, Dave Loew quit that firm altogether to join the Hal Roach organization, but matters between Arthur Loew and Metro have been patched up.

Winfield R. Sheehan, for more than a decade with Fox, reached a settlement of his unexpired contract in July and stepped out, going to Europe for a vacation. He recently returned, but reports that he would become an associate producer in Par have so far not been confirmed.

David Selznick disconnected with Metro early last summer and in the fall for ed his own company backed by John Hay Whitney, Dr. A. H. Glannini and others. Selznick is now part of the UA producing system, and Mary Pickford moved up automatically as the company's president, following Lichtman's departure. Considerably after Fox's settlement with Sheehan, the compa y settled the contract of his brother, Clayton P., who has been foreign distribution head of Fox for many years. Schaefer quit Par more recently.

Other features of the year in tures, in brief, were:

Some activity in building of theatres and reopenings.

Survey revealing adapted stories exceed originals by 50%, based on a census of 360 pictures.

Gaumont-British's satisfaction with its first year in distributing its own product in the U. S.

Rising prices for stage shows as film buys and increased angeling of plays by film companies and Hollywood individuals.

Discovery that the first U. S. amusement census was wrong and determination to do another that will be correct.

Little increase in admission scales during the year.

Studio complaint of shortage of male leads, and some worried as to the source of future talent.

Protest of indies and foreign distribs over necessity of sending films to L s Angeles for May r purity seals, resulting in transfer of that function to New Yo k.

Warner Bros. suit against National Screen Service because it produced trailers on WB pictures. Still to be decided.

WB's bid for Universal and deal more recently on $750,000 loan and option to buy for $5,500,000 by the Charles Rogers-Standard Capital Corp.

Longer contracts from studios for talent against shorter options.

William Fox lost his Tri-Ergon patent claims in U. S. Supreme Court.

Talk of a thir national exhibitors' organization, not yet on the horizon.

Republic Pictures formed to group several indie producers.

Chicago exhibs who held out against playing Metro pictures for several years, ended their resistance.

Slight benefits under copyright revisions for pictures under bill which goes over to the next Congress.

Distribs cut deliveries on 1934-35 programs in order to get fresh start on current season's pictures.

Year books on new rams abandoned by distributors.

General Talking Pictures-Duovac suit against Erpi, A. T. & T. and Western Electric on patents and monopolistic practices up, but put over for further argument at an indefinite date.

Par extends theatre partnership deals on short options pending final decisions as to policy.

Extension of the Federal 10% tax on admissions for another two years—to July, 1937.

Total of 450 to 475 features from nine majors , nounced for 1935-36 season, record number.

ce when, believing that Marshall is a genius whose genius isn't appreciated, she tries to dispose of his automobile designs to a car manufacturer.

Carrillo delivers an effective characterization, playing the part straight and adding much to the juicy laugh material that is allotted. Stander, who made his hop to the screen from stooging in the air for such comics as Eddie Cantor and Fred Allen also registers. But the standout performance is that of Miss Arthur. Where she doesn't fetch 'em with that fine flair for comedy, the charm she lends to the romantic episodes will do the trick. Odec.

KIND LADY

Metro-Goldwyn-Moyer release of a Lucien Hubbard production. Features Aline MacMahon, Basil Rathbone. Director, George B. Seitz. Adopted from play by Edward Chodorov taken from story by Hugh Walpole; screen play, Bernard Schubert; musical score, Edward Ward; camera, George Folsey. At Metropolitan, Brooklyn, week Dec. 23, '35, on double bill. Running time, 70 mins.

Roubet	Frank Reicher

ind Lady,' which had a moderate run as a legit show in New York this year, has been transferred to the screen with Aline MacMahon and Basil Rathbone in prime roles. Stands out as one of Miss MacMahon's best acting contributions, with Rathbone running her a close second.

Chief flaw is the tedious build-up to a fairly intriguing plot. Requires more than half an hour, much of it comprising irksome English palaver, to reach real thread of yarn —that of blackmail via doping route. Result is a film that is overboard for best dual spot of situations.

Implausible basic idea has been made digestible by skillful direction. Auditors are asked to believe that an English lady, disappointed in her love affairs, would invite a strange man, his wife and baby in as guests of her palatial home while it is rather apparent that he is up to no good.

Once these three are firmly implanted in house, their aides join them and soon the 'kind lady' finds herself drugged daily and kept prisoner in her own home. Eventually she is rescued and the blackmailers captured.

Director George B. Seitz stressed the suspense over the efforts of this English lady to quietly obtain aid from the outside. And in this he constructed the most powerful elements of picture.

To adapt herself to character of an Englishwoman was no mean job, but Miss MacMahon has done it with skill. Rathbone makes a suave villain. Dudley Digges adds some lighter moments as his cockney aide. Though in somewhat subordinate character, Nola Luxford contributes a neat bit. Frank Albertson is good in a youthful American role. Wear.

ANOTHER FACE

RKO-Radio release of Cliff Reid production. Director, Christy Cabanne. Story, Ray Mayer and Thomas Dugan; Garrett Graham and Jack Cowles, film editor, George Hively; camera, Jack MacKenzie. At Palace, N. Y., week Dec. 27, '35. Running time, 72 mins.

Joe Haynes	Wallace Ford
Dawson (Dutch)	Brian Donlevy
Sheila	Phyllis Brooks
Asst.	Erik Rhodes
Mary	Molly Lamont
Keller	Alan Hale
Tex	Addison Randall
Director	Paul Guilfoyle
Cameraman	Edward Burns
Capt. Spell	Charles Wilson
Maid	Hattie McDaniel
Janitor	Cy Jen's
Doctor	Oscar Apfel
Manicure	Dorothy Granger
Sheila's other	Emma Dunn
Aunt Hattie	Ethel Wales
Muggsie	Frank Mills

It might have been worthwhile to bolster this one with a drawing name in the cast. Picture has a bright and novel comedy-gangster theme which, with a dash of dynamite rating and a dil cult one to sustain for full footage, is amusing enough. Story itself isn't box office, so the picture isn't, but a name in the billing could have made it more potent.

Story starts off like an exciting bing-banger but quickly goes comic and stays that way up to a shooting climax. It concerns an ugly gangster who has his kisser raised to more classical heights and then yearns to be a picture actor. e's discovered in Hollywood by the one remaining living person who can identify h , and his capture is framed by an enterprising studio press agent.

Romance between the p.a. and a femme star is soggy and could have stood some hypoing. The gangster business is written in a monotone, but somehow doesn't tire, probably because the basic idea is thoroughly humorous. The mugg making a sissy of himself on the set and turning strictly ham is always good for a laugh whenever needed, which is often.

Brian Donlevy carries the gangster role so well he could qualify for a Dewey investigation. Wallace Ford squanders a lot of capital trooping on stuff that isn't always worthy. Phyllis Brooks, Erik Rhodes and Alan Hale all okay, with the latter playing a film producer and quite good looking for that assignment. After good looking producers, there's only one more untouched character in the backstage story casting field, and that is a 'popular' supervisor.

FANG AND CLAW

RKO-Radio release of Van Beuren production. Photographic record of Frank Buck safari, his expedition into Asiatic jungles. Narrative by Frank Buck; photography, Nicholas Cavallero and Harry S. Squire; film editors, Irving and Horace Woodward. At Rialto, N. Y., week Dec. 26, '35. Running time, 75 mins.

This is the third Frank Buck picture based on wild animal expeditions into the jungles. It is far less exciting than the two which preceded it, ' ring 'Em Back Alive' and 'Wild Cargo.' It also is more or less routine and includes too much that is similar to material in the two previous Buck expedition features. Entertainment value being mild, accounts will have to push to get fair grosses.

This time Buck is in the Asiatic wilds but he's in quest of many of the same animals he has been photographed catching in the pictures made of this. In addition to the more familiar wild life caught by Buck, he snares a rare bird of paradise and a baby rhino.

There is no real element of drama in 'Fang and Claw,' although efforts are rather obviously made to try to inject both into the footage that was exposed. Ncarest to a thrill is the attack upon a baby rhino by a man-eating tiger and the treeing of a native by another of the big striped cats. A total of three pythons are caught, one after he has slightly injured one of Buck's helpers.

There are no mortal combats between animals such as figured in the other two Buck pictures. The Hays office has, in all likelihood, insisted upon this type of thing which attitudo may explain its absence. Mostly tiresome about 'Fang and Claw' is the routine of building camps, preparing traps and tidy up animals that have been captured.

Buck's narrative is satisfactory and well delivered, while in the recording a good job has been done. Camera work excellent all the way with a fine print obtained, something that isn't always easy in view of the handicaps under which cameramen must work on a job like this. Monkeys and a little honey bear provide some comedy.

FORCED LANDING

Republic Pictures release of M. H. Hoffman production. Features Peter Ralston, Onslow Stevens, Toby Wing and Eddie Nugent. Directed by Melville Shyer. Story by William Boehnel and M. Helprin; adaptation, Scott Darling; camera, Harry Neumann. At Rialto, N. Y., week Dec. 24, '35, as half of double bill. Running time, 61 mins.

Ruby	Esther Ralston
Farraday	Onslow Stevens
Bercher	Sidney Blackmer
Amelia	Toby Wing
Redfe.n	Eddie Nugent
Nancy	Elizabeth Pepper
Byrd	Willard Robertson
Tolcott	Hedley Power
Jimmy	Kane Richmond
Burns	Ralf Harolde
Talcott	Arthur Aylesworth
Danny	Julin Griffith
Mrs. Byrd	Barbara Bedford
Warden	Lafe McKee
Jolly	George Cleveland

Mystery thriller using be-whiskered formula of taking all principals in a crime and putting them in one room but given a new setting—aboard a transcontinental transport plane. However, 'Forced Landing' still remains quite familiar material, not heightened much here by any originality or logic. Cast does just fair by the story, and director could have made it more if have been strongest points by overstressing details of how an airplane crew operates. Educational but cramps later footage.

At Talcott, who took a 15-year rap for part in kidnaping, is finally released. Fellow conspirators in snatch are waiting to grab him as soon as he reveals hiding spot of money. With him is babe, Esther, Ruby, a former sweetie; a banker, now in love with her and attempting to shake her; the kidnaped child, now a grown man; his sweetheart, another gangster, and the inevitable G-man are introduced and placed aboard a plane headed for N. Y. Forced down by storm, this motley crew have to wait overnight in a farmhouse.

Aside from familiar territory covered, chief weakness of this whodunit are lines and the way some are handled. Onslow Stevens, as the Justice Dept. operative, neither looks nor acts like one. Sidney Blackmer more resembles a G-man but here is the tough gangster. Toby Wing as the romance in the former kidnaped youth's life has too little to do, but does it well. Esther Ralston contributes greatly to sincerity of production as the gangster's former sweetheart, while Eddie Nugent, in subordinated role; Willard dy or humor, or even heavy drama. Robertson, the banker, and Arthur Talcott give smooth performances. Story is joint effort by William Boehnel, picture critic of N. Y. Telegram, and M. Helprin. Scott Darling adapted it to the screen. Production value is plenty in evidence, and Harry Neumann's camera work is tops. Wear.

GUN PLAY

First Division release of Beacon production. Stars Big Boy Williams. Features Marion Shilling. Directed by Albert Herman. Scenario, William Nolte; camera, William Hyer. At Arena, N. Y., half of double bill two days, Dec. 25-26. Running time, 59 mins.

Bill Williams	Big Boy Williams
Frank	Frank Yacenelli
Madge Holley	Marion Shilling
George Holt	Wally Wales
Old John Holt	Charles French
Meeker	Tom London
Cal	Roger Williams

As per the title there's plenty of gunplay in this action picture. There is also plenty of horse flesh. The picture should satisfy the fans and make a okay supporting film.

Big Boy Williams is a tramp rider of the plains. With his comical pal, Frank Yacanelli, he bumps into unlooked for adventure, a pretty eastern girl and her brother. The kids have come to take over their late father's ranch. Neighboring outlaws harass the pair in search of buried gold on the ranchland, ruled by an old-time Mexican revolutionist and friend of the late owner of the place. Williams saves everything and wins the girl.

Perhaps not a brilliant plot, but good enough for this calibre picture. There is a sincere effort to project some humor, and although the romance is pretty light, it's pleasing.

The backgrounds keep revolving before the camera and may look familiar to the very discerning kind of fans. Williams does a good job as the hero. Shan.

MAZURKA

Berlin, Dec. 10.

Tobis-Rota release; Cine Allianz production. Directed by Willi Forst. Starring Pola Negri. Story by Hans Rameau.

(In German)

That, with some slight modifications, is the venerable 'Madame X' theme could again be brought to honor today, was the canny judgment of Forst. That it would prove successful is due to Pola Negri whose superior acting makes palatable even this oldest of chestnuts.

Pola's comeback into the Teuton film arena is a victorious re-entry. No one had been able to fill that niche which has stood vacant ever since her departure for Hollywood some years ago. And sound only rounds out her success. Her Polish accent augments her exotic quality and, speaking or singing, she uses her mature voice with infinite variance. After this, the unsatisfactory co-operation Negri-Hollywood remains more of a mystery than ever.

Debut of 16-year-old Ingeborg Theek was watched with a double ration of eagerness, the extra portion because of the hard luck that almost tripped it up. In the midst of study work the girl became very ill. Picture was held up for months and completed under great difficulties. There is no doubt about it, Forst has made a real find. But the greatest surprise is the girl's uncanny likeness to the Greta Garbo of several years ago. Her unquestionable ability should give her a pretty good chance to develop a personality quite the identical man that of her great Swedish confrere.

Story stimulates the tear ducts with calculated preciseness. An opera singer marries an officer. While he is away at the front, she is persuaded to spend an evening with her old colleagues. She drinks more than is good for her and finds next morning that she has spent the night with a stranger. Forced by conscious sidestep breaks up her marital happiness. After 15 years she comes upon her daughter, who has never known her, in a similar situation but the identical man who had ruined her life. To avert the danger from her child she shoots the man but refuses to speak at the trial.

Only when the public and witnesses, among them her daughter, are excluded from the proceedings, does she divulge her motives. Her silence was to protect her daughter from finding out that she is her mother. Court, profoundly moved, decrees the minimum punishment with the hope of a complete pardon later.

This is one of the very few German pictures which will not only amortize its investment but clean up considerable profit within the fatherland's bordors. Trask.

MERLUSSE

(FRENCH MADE)

Paris, Dec. 14.

Written, directed, produced and distributed by Marcel Pagnol. All scholes boys in east. At Marivaux, Paris. Running time, 70 minutes.

(In French)

Pathos of the life of boarding pupils in a French government high school is the theme of this picture. Without exaggeration of tragedy or the hokum kind of tear-jerking, Pagnol has made of it a film worthy of comparison with 'Maedchen in Uniform' and 'La Maternelle.'

It's an unvarnished, simple, naked story of schoolboys who in spite of teachers because they think he hates them. It turns out, logically and plausibly, that he was really full o. kindness for them, and the picture ends on a note of human love.

Success of the picture is due in a large measure to Pagnol's method, which is unique. Ho has no studio. He builds no sets, but uses actual interiors, with a sound truck. The picture is nearly all taken in what seems to be an actual high school building, bare and dilapidated to an extent which will strain the credulity of American audiences, but which truly represents the facts in France. There are no camera tricks, and just enough lighting to make it possible to shoot. Actors, except the kids, are in no sense amateurs, but unknown professionals, carefully directed. All Pagnol pictures are made in his native South of France, and most of the cast speak with the accent of the country.

He works on the 'slice of life' theory—unvarnished truth. Sometimes this means just dullness, but not in this case, for the kids are real and real kids are never dull. Picture has a real story, although a simple one.

Merlusse is the nickname the kids give to a bearded, one-eyed teacher whom they hate and fear. They tell the most fantastic legends about him and ride him without mercy.

On Christmas eve he happens to be left in charge of the dormitory of the boys who have no parents, or whose parents have been unable or unwilling to call for them for the holidays. After falling asleep under conditions which for kids are tragic, they wake up next morning, each one to find a gift at the foot of his bed, given by the terror. They realize what was really in his heart, and in return each gives him his dearest treasure. That's all.

Curious and deeply interesting revelation of boy and teacher, in a dozen phases, is masterfully painted throughout. Pagnol was himself a teacher before he became a name playwright with 'Marius,' 'Fanny' and 'Cesar,' so has a whole whale of writing about. And he's gone deep into the feelings of schoolboys.

Although essentially as worthy, the picture probably will not have as wide an appeal as the continental talkie which preceded it. It hasn't the ambiguous love interest of 'Maedchen' nor the terribly dramatic pathos of 'La Maternelle.' Moreover, the Marseilles dialect in which it is played is against it, and the profusion of dialog will make titling tough.

But it is intensely interesting for America, not only for itself but as an example of the method of film making which could be applied by independents in the United States.

This is the second version of 'Merlusse' which Pagnol made. He was dissatisfied with the first and scrapped it. Stern.

Treasure of the Wrecked Vessel

(RUSSIAN MADE)

Moscow, Dec. 15.

Lenfilm production. Scenario, V. Lipatov. Honored Artist Batalov as Panov, main character.

(In Russian)

This film dramatizes the work of EPRON (Soviet Ship Salvaging Trust). Obviously, of course in Soviet and the plot often ingenious.

Alyosha Panov, one of EPRON's best divers, a former thief, meets Tanya, a girl student, on the shores of the Black Sea. She is raising an English ship wrecked there 20 years before. After a brief courtship the pair plan to marry.

In the meantime Panov meets a former thief who proposes that he rob the safe of the sunken ship. Border is only 300 miles away. Panov, imagining a life of ease for himself and Tanya, consents. Panov tries to do so, but of course he eventually comes through all temptations and difficulties with his skin whole —even to recovering the love of Tanya.

Lenfilm Trust has accumulated a mass of naturalistic detail as a foundation for its realism in this film. Acting is excellent, with Batalov adding another role to his long service in the Soviet cinema. Bennett.

Mr. Cohen Takes a Walk

(BRITISH MADE)

London, Dec. 22.

Warner production and release. Stars Paul Graetz. Directed by William Beaudine. Story by Stuart Roberts Rinehart; screen play Brock Williams. At Trocadero, Elephant & Castle, London, Dec. 13, '35. Running time, 80 mins.

Jake Cohen	Paul Graetz
Rachel Cohen	Violet Farebrother
Julie Levine	Chili Bouchier
Jack Cohen	Mickey Brantford
Sam Cohen	Ralph Truman
Joe Levine	Harry Livesey
Abraham Levy	Sam Springson
Bob Wood	Kenneth Villiers
Sally O'Connor	Muriel Forbes
Pat O'Connor	George Merritt

Although made here, this picture should have strong appeal in the American market—proportionately stronger than in the English houses. It is the story of a self-made Jewish business man who started life peddling his wares and became the head of a big department shop. His two sons and a son-in-law, the 'new generation' with modern ideas, install all sorts of efficiency systems and gadgets, which annoys the simple old peddler.

His home life is depicted with the utmost wisdom, as is also the kindness and consideration he displays for his employees. The eldest son goes to America, and on his return journey meets Sally O'Connor, a girl of Irish descent. They fall in love, which interferes with the plans of the parents, who had fondly imagined he would marry a Jewish girl whom he had known since childhood, and who had playfully pledged their troth when children.

Wife dies suddenly of a heart attack and, annoyed by the efficiency methods, the old man dons cheap clothing and sets out on the road once more, not to peddle, but merely to tramp the fields. He hasn't been gone long when he reads in a paper that the 3,000 employees of his retail emporium have gone on strike because the sons won't concede things to them which the old man had previously agreed to. He dashes back in a lorry conveying pigs to London, settles the matter and declares that henceforth he will once more assume the reins of management and conduct the business in his own way.

Only problem left is that of the younger son's wish to marry the shiksa, and this film ends with two wedding ceremonies, one in a Catholic church and the other in a synagogue.

A first rate picture for neighborhood houses that good entertainment for second feature in the oils. Jolo.

Alles Um Eine Frau

('Everything for the Woman')

(GERMAN MADE)

K. U.-Delta-Film production and release. Features Paul Hartmann and Charlotte Susa, with Gustav Diessl, Harry Frank, Hans Kettler, Willi Schur, Olaf Fjord and Herbert von Mayerinck. Directed by Alfred Abel. Music by Gert von Bestenbostel. At the Casino, N. Y., week Dec. 20, '35, as half of double bill. Running time, 81 mins.

(In German)

Fair sort of a German-language talker made in Berlin which permits Charlotte Susa to shine and Paul Hartmann does well through picture. He's supposedly the hero but Gustav Diessl shares acting honors. Presumably will do well received in most German-language spots, though not done in typical light Teutonic mood.

Befriended by an Englishman whom he had saved from death during world conflict, Heinrich Droop, German author, succeeded to business success in London under his friend, Fred Keyne's, guidance. He is named chief engineer at Keyne's airplane factory and welcomed into his family circle. Love at first view at first sight when he meets Keyne's wife, who at one time was a dancer.

Story moves swiftly to climax when her dancing partner attempts blackmail by threatening to expose Heinrich's supposed affair. Slaying of blackmailer first involves Blanche and then Heinrich. But whole thing is straightened out at finish, with German depicted as foreign office of friend's company.

Better than usual production has been accorded this film. While it is far overboard in running time for American consumption and too long for any dual program, director has displayed considerable ability in sustaining interest. Even a flashback depicting how the German ace rescued the Englishman is effectively done.

AEROGRAD

Moscow, Dec. 15.

Mosfilm production. Scenarist, Ivanov; producer and director, A. Dovzhenko. Music, D. Kabalevski. Cast, A. Utkin, V. Pantelcyev, and non-professionals.

Heralded as a 'defense film,' this picture is interesting in itself, but more important because it reveals a new trend in Soviet films. It is nationalistic propaganda with no bones about it, something that wasn't tolerated here a few years ago. Big idea, however, is defense, without capacity for war. Well-written English titles, film ought to draw the class market in America, because of good aviation and scenic shots.

Scene of the film is Siberian Far East. Population decides it needs a new city, Aerograd (Air City), for defense purposes. They have found an agent provocateur (very Japanese looking) in their midst.

First scene shows a 'Daniel Boone' type Soviet trapper coming across a band of Japanese-looking soldiers in the forest. He gives them a chase, shooting one down. Dying Asiatic asks leave to speak a few last words. Request granted. He takes a little book from his pocket and reads aloud a kind of creed, the burden of which is that 'we (no further identification) want the gold, forests and wheat fields of Siberia.'

Post shot is Montage; hundreds of planes in the air. Bennett

THE BOX-OFFICE CHECK-UP ON RKO-RADIO

Eight of the thirty-six box-office champions covered by Motion Picture Herald's "Box-Office Check-up"—just published—were delivered by RKO-RADIO . . . In other words, almost one-fourth of all the top-grossing pictures produced by the whole industry—came from the company whose year-in year-out performance stands solidly behind the promise:

PRODUCTIONS ...NOT PREDICTIONS!

RKO RADIO PICTURES

JEFFERSON, N. Y.

Vaudeville is back at the Jeff. Vaudeville booked, billed and routined in the old style. Not camouflaged as something else and not 'produced,' backgrounded or embellished by the house.

That the public in the 14th street sector was glad to see vaudeville was unmistakably attested by the heartfelt welcome to the pit orchestra and the generous rewards apportioned to all the acts, in a couple of cases in excess of what seemed the obvious values.

What is more important from the standpoint of whether vaudeville sticks at the Jeff (and if sticking it may have some slight influence as an example) is that business was quite good Friday (27) night on the first show which pulled up the olio at 6:40. In combination with Radio's 'In Person,' it was ample entertainment for anybody's 75c.

Highly competitive situation in this neighborhood. Academy has the jump on film product, supplies two features and umpteen shorts. Formerly the Jeff dropped vaudeville on a deal by which RKO booked acts into the Academy. But vaude was given the boot by the Skouras house some time ago and now RKO is forced into a split week policy at the Jeff to offset the bargain entertainment running up to four hours of show at the Academy.

With pop vaudeville in Manhattan just about down to the Grand Opera House on Eighth avenue, the opening of another five-act house becomes a rainbow. It's the material of which curbstone headlines are made along the beach.

When the spotlight picked up Joe Gershenson's stick in the trench there was scattered applause which grew in volume. Leader twisted around for a nod of acknowledgement. No trailer or other house announcement ballyhooed the return of acts. So the reception was spontaneous. It may or may not be serious enough to write detailed analysis of why it was so, but the show reached its applause peak after the second act and tended to coast down hill thereafter.

Herbert Lynn and Mitzi (New Acts) open. Smacko with a trapeze arrangement that reveals imagination in conception and finesse in execution. Sibyl Bowan deuces like a next-to-closer and climaxes with a take-off of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt that is slightly audacious and amusingly goofy. She parades five elderly female stooges dressed as Girl Scouts as a Barnumesque getaway. Her Beatrice Lillie opening sets her quickly and solidly and she's on safe footing from then on. When the lights went off they were making up their minds whether to demand an encore. Probably if the Jeff mob wasn't a bit out of the vaude habit the clamor would have been insistent. At that, it's something to push an unripe congregation to the brink of a show-stop.

Jerry Baker, not entirely new to stage work and yet not entirely at home on a platform, materializes out of the drapes carrying a microphone in his two hands. The microphone is both a pole behind which his face is partially obliterated and an anchorage to which he clings. If Baker's poise were on a par with his pipes he would rate better. He's the headliner on the strength of his WMCA radio appearances, but his manner is a bit brittle.

A framed quotation from a Broadway columnist outside the theatre contains the information that Baker used to be an usher at the Jeff. This fact was unmentioned from the stage, a muff of a swell human interest touch. Baker kidded a commercial credit to Sally's Fur Shop, his radio sponsor saying, 'I'm not allowed to mention that I work for Sally's, Number soandso West 44th street.'

Recently at the Roxy, an act called the Beau Brummels occupies the crucial fourth position. Occupies, but does not fill. Laughter is of the nervous-and-short species. They move about a good deal and shout even more. This, plus a miscellany of sight business, makes up the turn. It is noisy rather than funny and gets by rather than across. Got a big anticipatory welcome when flashing the hoke makeups, but departed with the vote divided. Unfortunate that the responsibility on an opening bill could not have fallen to more inspired comedy.

Final act has speed, but lacks class. That's not necessarily a criticism at the Jeff, where class isn't a must. Billed as Sheppard, Carlton and Hermann (a fine trick to play on an electric sign) this appears to be a Now Act and is covered under that division in more detail. Land.

RIALTO, N. Y.

(NEW)

A much smaller Rialto replaces the old Rialto, many years one of the Paramount theatres and the first which that chain had in New York. The new house, built for Arthur Mayer, who operates it independently, seats but 750. Old house accommodated 2,000 and covered a much larger amount of space than the one which has reared on the famous old Hammerstein's site at 42d street and Seventh avenue.

Mayer took over operation of the old Rialto under an arrangement with Paramount shortly after Par had gone into bankruptcy and operated it profitably as a first run straight sound house at 65c top. When the property was sold and plans laid for erection of a taxpayer building, Mayer signed a 20-year lease on the theatre portion. Par is not associated with him on the new Rialto.

Mayer opened Christmas afternoon with 'Fang and Claw' (RKO) as his first picture. He follows this with 'Crime of Dr. Crespi' (Repub). Policy is first run pictures on a weekly change basis except where justifying holdover, with scale 25, 40 and 65c. House is capable of doing $12,000 by jamming.

New Rialto is modernistic in its architectural scheme, with simplicity the keynote. Lobby is small and the inner foyer also limited in space. There is no balcony, all of the seats being on the main floor, but the auditorium is of pretty good length and at least enough width to escape 'shooting gallery' proportions. Downstairs is a compact lounge and later on when an arcade underneath the building connects with the subway entrance, there will be a boxoffice at that level with entrance to the theatre.

Theatre has an attractive marquee and entrance. Willie Kurtz, who was over at the Criterion when Mayer had that in association with others, is house manager. Char.

PARAMOUNT, L. A.

Swingology with a lot of capital letters—that's the stuff bleated out by the Southern Methodist university Mustang band in for a week before the New Year's football game between the Texas school's aggregation and Stanford at Pasadena.

Combo of 25 pieces, which had a preview here before football crowd when school played U.C.L.A., appears right at home before a theatre audience and gives out plenty. Gang has youth, enthusiasm and the old rah-rah spirit which makes for a great show. Henry King, leader, even delves in a bit of magic by producing a few hen-fruits from the pockets of a deadpan sax player.

Tunes run gamut from a hotcha 'Tiger Rag' arrangement to the classical overtures of yore. Betty Baily, campus yell leader, handles the baton during the 'rag' number. King sings 'I Found A Dream.' Nice voice.

Fanchonettes, house precision chorus, on for two numbers, both deftly handled. One is during King's song and pads out the show to proper length.

'Mary Burns, Fugitive' (Par) and newsreel complete bill. House three-quarters filled at second show. Hane.

ROXY, N. Y.

Stage show which is linked to 'If You Could Only Cook' (Col) has Paul Ash doing the introducing and cueing the applause but otherwise it's cut to the now easily identifiable Roxy pattern. Particularly noticeable about this week's bill is that it has a few more professionals than amateurs. In either case the element of quality runs thin. Rating as the two standout items of the proceedings are the acro-ballroom exhibits of Jack Holland and June Hart and a slick military routine on roller skates by the Gae Foster Girls.

Ash functions with a minimum of obtrusion and patter, hopping from pit to stage and vice versa. He can still lend the light and expert touch at building up the successive turns and at keeping things moving smoothly, with his services coming in quite handy in stimulating interest in Charlotte Lamberton, titian-haired fan dancer, and Howard Reed, a colored lad with a passable knack for the buck and wing. Ash described Miss Lamberton as being unable to hear or speak but depending on her rhythm for the sound she absorbs through the floor. The girl has distinctive grace besides beauty and should have no difficulty getting by, even if the dual impediment were not mentioned. Furthermore, a deaf-and-dumb fan dancer is something of a novelty in itself.

Before Holland and Miss Hart (doubling from the Hotel Ambassador) are brought on for an eye-tickling layout of ballroom gliding at its best, there's Torelli's Circus with the pooches and ponies engaging in the accepted collection of jumping and prancing stunts, and Roy Campbell's Royalists making mixed harmony over a fetching conceit, titled 'Who Killed Cock Robin.' The Royalists, composed of a girl trio and a male quartet, derives from radio where it fills in as the choral background for several network commercials. The combination looks good and sounds better.

Three Fonzals Bros. precede the fadeout number of the house line, the drill on roller skates which toward the end has the women in the audience screaming with anticipated tumbles. Fonzals interlard their acrobatic clowning with bits of harmony, drawing enough laughs at Friday's early evening performance to make them a happy pick for the spot.

Balance of the screen fare comprises newsclips and a Barney Google cartoon (Col). Business exceptionally good. Odec.

PARAMOUNT, N. Y.

(CASA LOMA ORCHESTRA)

Quietly bobbing up out of the orchestra pit at the Paramount theatre and continuing for a few mildly deceptive minutes the Casa Loma orchestra stays long enough to turn the gentle calm into a wild tumult. Not to labor the point, the boys have what it requires.

A first stage appearance and an immediate hit is the record on this soviet of syncopation in which all the members are equal partners on a co-operative basis with the exception of the Rockwell-O'Keefe office, which trades in its salesmanship in lieu of a saxophone and gets so many shares of stock at par. A song develops the story of the band and winds up by introducing Commisar Glen Gray, who is revealed, to most people's surprise, as one of the tooters and not the guy with the stick at all.

By the time the repertory had reached Pee Wee Hunter's collossally cute conception of 'The Music Goes Round and Round' the Paramount customers, long out of the stage show habit, were putting red spots on the flat side of their mitts. 'Round and Round' had to be encored twice with the audience finally joining in. This constituted high delight for the customers. Such enthusiasm has been rarely seen and pretty well forgotten at this house.

Casa Loma booking is an advance reintroduction to stage shows for the Paramount and the unmistakable expressions of pleasure from the cash giver-uppers was a sermon in itself. Long celebrated among the worldy for the hot sweetness of their music, the Casa Loma crew has brought finished ease, slick routining and upward-zooming acceleration to the theatre. Comedy touches, ideas in showmanship uniquely their own, the one-man glee-clubbing of Kenny Sargent, and clean-cut, good looks are all on the credit side. So, too, is their sole feminine assistant, Deane Janis, red-headed and stately torcher from Chicago and a lady who knows how.

Prior to the orchestra which entertained on the pit platform the audience responded well to Organist Ken Baker, who ran through a few Christmas ditties. 'Popeye' cartoon, brief newsreel and Paramount's 'The Bride Came Home' fills out the show. Biz okay Thursday night. Land.

EARLE, PHILLY

Philadelphia, Dec. 27.

N. T. G. brought flock of girls to the Earle stage this week for one of longest shows house played since way back when. At opener it was also dullest in some time.

Strange that a showman with Granlund's rep should offer such mediocre talent, clumsy staging and poor arrangement of acts. Even before he finally announced bill had not been rehearsed, it must have been obvious even to those in the house. But rehearsals or not, there's no reason for running one singer on after another, and ditto with dancers.

In many cases lengthy line-up could be scratched without being missed. And several girl singers, having troubles enough with unrehearsed house band and opening audience, were just about wrecked by Granlund's kibitzing during their acts. If they have some talent hidden by the confusion, he ought to give them a chance. If they're as bad as he implied, they don't belong on the Earle stage at all.

By and large, bill is much too long and full of yawns. But there are a few bright spots. Three Slate Brothers are funny comics, though press too hard and linger too long. Sylvia Reed is a looker with neat costume and nice on the accordion. Nan Blair probably could sing if permitted. Florence Herbert and Grace Parivini have good pipes and some skill. Burns and Farney are cut kid hoofers. Beehee and Ruby-atte troupe are agile tumblers. Hobe.

KEITH'S, BOSTON

Boston, Dec. 26.

Re-opening of vaude policy after pre-holiday stage shutdown here brings a show locally produced and bolstered by two topsters in the vocal field, Everett Marshall and Mary Small. Latter, from radio, is a new face for this town, and that's a novelty these days. Marshall a stranger here since last season, and then in a $3.30 show, is another refreshing note.

Dance flash is provided by the Manhattan Steppers, mixed group (12) who wham with their finale of adagio throws and catches. Hold the pace of the unit capably with rhythm and tap routines.

Dance specialties by Helene Denizon in her ace bubble number and Roy Royce's acro-drunk dervish supply commendable contrast. Unfortunate, however, is Miss Denizon's prelim spot in an opening scene under glaring lights that do not harmonize with her lilting type of work. Obviously not her idea.

Art Frank in his rube turn helps matters along mid-way in the show, his eccentric hoofing contrasting sharply with his femme partner's efforts in the dance department.

There's a Frenchy gesture now and then in the background, notably in a bosomly 'wheat field' tableau, and the living atmosphere of Miss Denizon's scene.

Bert Walton as m.c. grinds out his stuff mechanically and because of his thankless chore throughout the unit has to overcome his self-established personality as scene-shifter when his own turn comes late in the frolic. This is a generous slice of biz with a pasty faced stooge who, after buffeting a breeze of buffoonery batted at him by Walton, vocals with the m.c. doing the gesticulating from behind. Walton and stooge easily earn an encore and a flock of bows, but valiantly deflect the duke din to push the show forward to the finale.

Deuced are Nellie Arnault and Brothers in their standard bird whistling novelty.

Miss Small wins over easily with a straight pop, a sobby one, and a timely one about 'keep the war over there' sung under red, white and blue lights. Sells the last two extremely well. Facially oversold personality is more than balanced by a priceless mike personality that has made the kid a radio name. Fox.

Century, Baltimore

Baltimore, Dec. 27.

Leader of the Loew fleet in this town has graced the griddle with virtually an all-laugh show to tickle the holiday show goers. The vaude, pared down to four acts with aggregate running time of 45 minutes because of lengthy film, 'Two Cities' (MG), has guffaws in every turn, and three of the four are totally devoted to comedy. Show sums up into bright divertissement that offsets sombre aspects of the pic.

Great Yacopis step up at start and regale with their fine teeter-boarding. Alternate plenty laughs by antics between stunts. Stone and Lee, mixed comedy team, follow and fish for laughs with agglomeration of crossfire chatter, musical instrumentation, singing and hoofing. Some of the gags employed near start are risque for the local family trade and other material crecks with age, but on whole they get in some nice licks. Girl in act is an adept foil.

Nice, Florio and Lubow, two men and a maid, open as straight, strict tap dancing trio, but break into slambang slapstick and knockabout before audience can get adjusted, and from then on it's mad mayhem. Hurl each other against the drop, down into the pit, into wings and on the floor. Punishment apparently meted out for laughs assumes somewhat incredible proportions at times, especially as regards the chimerical lacing absorbed by the femme. And when the threesome have about run the gamut of all past knockabout stuff seen here before, they dust off their duds and do a straight hoofing routine just to prove they can take it—four a day and five on Saturdays.

The Radio Rubes, hillbilly quartet oft seen here, close to rousing reception. Backwoods minstrelsy of type doesn't always click in Balto; but these boys always hogtie the natives. Rufe Davis is now getting billed over act, and deserves the upped rating.

HIPP, BALTIMORE

Baltimore, Dec. 26.

This indie house started off the holiday stampede by breaking out with a new bill Xmas Day. 'Sylvia Scarlett' (Radio) on the screen and gets main mazda position out on marquee. The vaude consists of four acts which found favor with overflowing house when caught. Noteworthy that there isn't so much as the indulgence of a single toss of a tootsie in the dancing line all through the show. It has plenty of novelty, snap and variety.

Royal Swedish Bell Ringers, five men in mess jackets behind semicircular table upon which reposes at least 100 bells of finely varying sizes, open. Harmonize through gamut of pops, quasi-classical, old Southern airs and military marches to a stout reception. To circumvent any chance of monotony, at one interval a chap steps forward to mike and warbles a pleasant piece, accomped by the other tinklers; and at another time all but two of the boys scamper into wings and permit the duo to sidle over to a side table full of glass goblets from which resilient music is drawn by flicking tops of glasses with finger tips.

Gypsy Nina follows and displays heaps more showmanship since she last bowed onto Balto boards about year and half ago. Wears sort of toga, color-scheme of which blends with the finish of her accordion.

In the penultimate, Marty May. Still the same arid humor done in nonchalant manner interspersed with occasional hoke flecks at the fiddle, but when caught wasn't quite up to scratch. Much of his material has been used for years in vaude, and he could probably rely more successfully on some of the stuff he ladled out recently over the ether. Carrot-topped Carol Dee folls well and warbles an okeh song. Incidentally, that bit of business dealing with 'smells' is vulgar and certainly not funny enough to warrant its place in the act.

Closing, that corking only-one-of-its-kind Willie, West and McGinty, the madcap foursome turn of building wreckers. Bounced mob right out of the benches as usual

EMBASSY, N. Y.

(NEWSREELS)

Length of March of Time, issue No. 9, and a review of events of the past year by Fox-Movietone, reduces to a probable record minimum the number of clips on this week's show. The regular newsreel bill, except for the F-M summary of highlights in the news during 1935, includes only 117 clips. Show runs close to an hour and is entertaining, however, but nothing scalding hot in the way of news.

The F-M news review of '35 has been particularly well produced, with certain outstanding events of the year effectively dramatized, such as the wrecking of the Macon by a storm. Fox produced, through medium of miniatures, a picture of how the ship may have looked as it was torn to pieces.

The same reel cops attention this week with an exclusive on the Italian-Ethiopian conflict in which the Laurence Stallings expedition photographs actual bombing of Dessye and care of the wounded. There's blood in what F-M rushed over here ahead of competitor reels, many Ethiopian soldiers being caught by cameras before and after wounds have been treated. The bombing itself is from a distance and mostly smoke and fire. Stallings flew the negative across Africa to France where it was shipped on the first boat.

Forthcoming session of Congress and speculation as to what would be issues this year by Speaker Byrns in a brief (Pathe) address opens. No other Congressmen, nabbed, though it shouldn't have been hard with several already in Washington.

Pathe, which has an exclusive newsreel contract on the Dionne quins, visits them at a little Christmas party in which Dr. Dafoe plays Santa Claus. It is a rather brief clip but very cute, with the Dionne kids now walking.

Fox presents results so far in the Literary Digest poll on the New Deal; Pathe covers the pool championship with Clem McCarthy doing the narrative; Fox nabs Pres. Roosevelt delivering his Xmas message; Par digs into chemical discovery that plants can be grown without use of soil, and Fox handles the selection of Capt. Anthony Eden as Britain's new foreign secretary.

Rest of the bill is made up of minor items, including development of new settlements in northwest; NYU-California basketball game in New York; skiing and tobagganing trials in preparation for Olympic games; restrictions against motorists passing through an entire county in Oklahoma which has been quarantined; efforts of Brazil folk to rid dammed waters of alligators; plane flight from France to Brazil; gown fashions from F-M again, and a comical clip with Lew Lehr. The Fox comedian-dialectician celebrates New Year's, putting on a amusing drunk routine. Char.

STATE, N. Y.

Ed Sullivan, N. Y. News columnist, who is becoming the State's perennial headliner, is back again for the third time in '35. He's coupled with a superb array of stage talent and 'Night at the Opera' (Metro). The combination drew a heavy house Friday night.

Comedy is one of the chief ingredients of this layout, provided mainly by the Three Ritz Brothers, but the dancing and the singing are quite as important in setting up a snappy and wholly entertaining 55 minutes. Sullivan is becoming quite an m. c. and general handyman on the stage, introing the various turns in nice order and milking ingratiatingly when necessary. His own 'Water Under the Bridge' newsreel is spotted dead centre in the show and he's brought portions of it up-to-date via Jack Dempsey-Joe Louis fight shots and a recollection of Will Rogers. He spotted only two celebrities in the audience at this viewing, Dick Merrill, flier, and Johnny Dundee, former lightweight fighter, who always shows up at the State for Sullivan.

The hoofing is brought in by the Lathrop Brothers and Virginia Lee, the latter an s. a. blonde who dresses and dances (in her solo) on a par with her looks. The boys are still nifty twin-precision hoofers. Miss Lee is a replacement for Betty Jane Cooper, who left the act to go in 'Scandals.' Frazee Sisters, doubling from the Hollywood Restaurant on Broadway, provide excellent harmony, but the hot-cha Ella Logan, who was forced to do five numbers, grabs the vocal honors. She swings from rhythm to torch to character songs with ease, and her delivery is equally good in each.

Russell Swan, intimate magician doubling from the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, does nicely with three switch tricks preceding Miss Logan, working on the platform over the pit. Latter is deserted this week.

EXPLOITATION ✣ ✣ ✣ By Epes W. Sargent

In a Hurry

When 'Dangerous' was booked into the Rivoli in a hurry the house publicity staff and the Warner crew went into a quick huddle. Not much time to plant involved stuff, but they whooped it up in brisk fashion and made the town aware of the danger.

Outstanding stunt was a float rigged to represent a studio. Circulated the populous spots with an offer of $50 for the most dangerous smile. Any woman who thought she could make the grade—and it was surprising what a lot of optimists there were—were photographed free while the crowd gaped at the signs which stressed the picture, the theatre and the date.

A girl was planted on the WHN amateur hour to do an imitation of Bette Davis with some remarks about the pending engagement. Sounded to the air audience as though she had put one over, but she hadn't. It was pre-arranged. This was followed by a frequently repeated contest on the Milkman's Parade over the same station (1 to 7 a. m.) with tickets for the best slogans phoned in while the session was on. A gold buying firm on WINS was tied to announcing that it was dangerous to deal with unrecognized dealers.

The 50-foot lantern projection on the Godfrey building was used and Davega's responded nobly with ads showing Bette Davis on skii and theatre mention. Franklin Simon also made room for a Davis coiffure in the beauty shop ad and 400 florists were persuaded to come in for 14x22 posters in their windows. For a rush order it was all a definitely good job.

Unusual

Something different in the way of a co-op is sent in by Frank K. Shaffer, of the Virginia, Harrisonburg, Va. It was worked on 'So Red the Rose' in conjunction with the local chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, which got the profit, but supplied the house with 2,000 heralds of unusual value.

It is a sheet 10x12, folded once. Appropriately Confederate grey. Inside is mostly for the picture with a dedication to 10 local men still living who saw service. There is also the endorsement of the Chapter.

It is the outside pages, printed as a whole, which marks the departure. Carries the autographs of all who paid for the privilege. No advertising and no formal arrangement, just the signatures. But those signatures meant something to the town under the circumstances; probably more than formal ads. It's the ultimate in cashing in on local sentiment without seeming to do so.

In a Hurry

C. J. Russell, of one of the M. & P. theatre Bangor, got notice of a change in the date of 'Top Hat' the afternoon of the day before the picture was due in. His advance work had taken care of the selling, but it was a tough problem to notify everyone of the switch. This was important as the film was due in a nearby town and Russell knew that several parties were planning to drive over.

He got word at 5:20 and 10 minutes later sent out his first announcement over the radio, following with three other announcements through the evening. Announcements were put into the lobbies of sister houses and the head usher was sent around town to drop in wherever a crowd was apt to congregate to announce the coming, while the cashier put over several hundred phone calls. Half sheets were posted the next morning and the picture was put over in a large way.

Sonosky Gets It

A. J. Sonosky, Granada, Minneapolis, is the winner of the recent letter contest arranged on 'Red Salute' by United Artists on the Reliance picture.

Runners up were Ray Englander, Poli Palace, Meriden, Conn.; D. O'Brien, Shea's, Fitchburg, Mass.; Arthur D. Black, Riviera and Pine Grove, Port Huron, Mich., and Milton J. Brotman, Avaloe, Chicago.

Award was held up a couple of weeks due to the absence from town of one of the judges. Not an ad contest but for best letter on 'Are Superlatives Necessary in Ads?' Brought some decidedly good letters.

Freak Fronts

Freak fronts for theatres have changed in recent years from the elaborate built up front to an ornamental design flat against the wall. The flat designs are better, since they reduce the risk in a possible panic, but they require a lot more thought.

Back when it was permissible to mask the lobby opening with a castle front, a jail, a log cabin or whatever would suggest the picture, it was possible to attract attention without great effort. Now the effect must be gained through careful planning.

One always good depature; provided that it is a departure and not the regular thing, is a checker board pattern of alternating squares in black or white or in contrasting colors. This supplies the back design for the posters and stills.

Recently the Roxy, N. Y., got all sorts of attention by putting in a waterfall of real running water into a corner still frame. A small pump drew water from a tank at the bottom to a reservoir at the top, the water spilling over the edge of this back into the bottom tank. It was comparatively simple and not at all difficult to construct, but it was an attention-getter extraordinary.

Just as easy to animate an entire set of displays set into the wall frames if the house has plenty of frame space. In another instance where the display fitted there was a large cutout of a horse and rider in the lobby. Probably would have gotten the attention anyhow, but the builder put a rubber bulb auto horn on the saddle, weighted the rider at the proper point and each time he touched the saddle, the horn honked. The result was that there was a crowd all day.

Work in motion and sound and the house front will sell double.

In the Coin

Louis Charninsky, of the Capitol, Dallas, gets the first prize in Universal's 'Fighting Youth' contest. Others were A. W. Sobler, New Spreckles, San Diego; Larry Cowan, Fox, Brooklyn; Joe Ryan, Grand, St. Cloud, Minn. There were several other campaigns that were outstanding, but there were but four prizes and so the others get honorable mention.

These are: Ed. J. De Cosmo, Strand, Amsterdam, N. Y.; Robert Blair, Tudor, New Orleans; Fritz May, Strand, Birmingham; John Wendel, Express, Decatur; F. G. Nutting, Paramount, Grand Forks, N. D.; H. F. Borresen, Strand, Minot, N. D.; Charles Winchell, Tower, St. Paul; Matt O'Keefe, Ritz, Scranton, and Morton Levine, G. O. H., Wilmington, Del. They are not mentioned in the order of their merit, all were good.

Revivals

About every so often a stunt seems to die away and lie dormant until some one remembers it and brings it back. Just because it is old is no reason why it cannot be new after a couple of years.

For example, the street car perambulator with the sides bannered for a current picture and the windows peopled by a score of picture stars has gone into limbo. Now and then a bannered car, usually carrying sixes or 24 sheets, will be run over a route, but the passenger car has not been reported in a long time. It's merely an old car with the sides bannered and a head from an old one sheet cut out for each window. It gets plenty of attention. Even more desirable these days for the bus lines, since they run closer to the sidewalk. Used to be a band inside in the old days. Now it can be a phonograph and a loudspeaker.

Bill Yearsley's sleeping in the graveyard stunt has been made over into sitting through a horror show all alone in a dark theatre, but Yearsley's giant candle stunt, developed about the same time, has almost disappeared. Idea was a large candle, burning in a show window for some apt title (we think 'The Eternal Flame' was the first) with estimates as to just how long the candle will burn. Candles can be bought from church supply stores in almost any size, or can be home dipped. One exhib made his from the broken candles left in a dimery after the Christmas rush. Got them for very little and melted them into one large taper.

There was not a single chariot reported for 'Pompeii' though chariots are easily made from a front wheel of a truck and a little pasteboard. Same goes for the jinricksha made from an old racing sulky or pair of buggy wheels.

The masked dancer in a show window at 15 minute intervals with a prize for her identification, the girl who spends the week in a furniture store window, the girl who is put into a store window to call up the town on a picture, with a loud speaker relaying her chat to the outside are all more or less forgotten, though they are still sure fires. So is the gag of the deaf man with the ear trumpet whose friend is trying to tell him about a current picture.

The 'no bull' stunt seems never to die, but the blind man whose sign proclaims that he would give $1,000 to see the show named, has gone into the dusk of the gods along with the yokel who asked everyone where the Ritz theatre was, because his Maw told him to be sure and see that picture before he came home.

It isn't the stunts that are dead. It's the exhibs with short memories.

Enlarging Device

Some years ago an exhibitor, Albert Nadeau, then of Anaconda, kicked in with an enlarging device for small theatres. It is simple and can be worked with the stereopticon lens from the projector, if economy is essential. Better results can be had from a variety of lenses, but the stereopticon lens will do. It works on the principle of the balopticon, to be seen in any toy store.

In any fairly large room a box is made, virtually a booth, large enough to take a 3-sheet. In the front center of this booth a hole is made for the lens, which carries a tube which in the original was made from a milk can with the bottom cut away. It can be made of other material, the sole purpose being to shield the optical path from side lighting from the illuminants.

These latter are two strong nitrogen lamps, place one in either front corner of the box. In line with the lens and exactly parallel to it is a movable easel for the copy, preferably upside down, to yield an upright image. Tracks made of roofing slats will permit the easel to be moved backward or forward to determine the size of the reflected picture. The closer to the lens, the smaller the reproduction.

The light from the picture is gathered by the lens, reflected by a mirror at an angle of precisely 45 degrees, from which it is reflected to the sign material which is at right angles to the lens. The room must be completely dark to permit the proper projection of the attenuated light rays. The result will be a faint image on the sign material which can be traced in pencil and later filled in under full light. It requires a room approximately 30 by 20 feet, but Mr. Nadeau suggests that the apparatus can be made demountable and used in the theatre after show hours.

Not as handy as a direct stereopticon, but it does not require a slide and dispenses with the purchase of special apparatus. Where only an occasional blow up is required, this will give good service.

Crack Down on Banners

Birmingham.

No more banners, and flags for exploitation purposes across the city streets. A city ordinance has been passed turning thumbs down on the practice which had been taken up by automobile dealers, utilities and so on.

Nutty Exploit

Washington.

Bally artists are always pulling stunts with critics but both Warner Bros. and Loew offices turned tables last week with gags aimed at critics. Ideas gave scribes plenty of paragraphs and, in one stunt, at least, tangible profit.

Warners began bombarding criks with postcards with inscriptions which carried thoughts like 'It is slated for the Academy Award. Watch for it Dec. 5.' Cards, each hand-drawn and with critic's name, mentioned no pic on theatre. Had boys guessing for three days and even after they caught on they kept up the mystery. Cards went out daily over period of week and got mention in print daily. Pic was 'Crime and Punishment.'

Loew's plan began with delivering bag of almonds to each scribe with note reading 'Nuts to You from Us.' Scribes suspected gag centured around Marx Bros. and 'Night at the Opera,' but their speculation took several sentences. Same idea was repeated daily for five days with brazil nuts, walnuts, peanuts and mixed nuts. One columnist took three inches to explain he caught a Loew usher putting the nuts on his desk.

Circus Stuff

With a couple of circus pictures in the offing it might help to remember an old-timer which can still work if the lobby is not too close to the auditorium. This is the calliope gag, with the box office built up with ornamental pipes similar to an organ front with the dummy pipes. Lower part of the structure is masked in with vermilion and gold panels. Pipes are against gauze, back of which a phonograph plays a calliope record. Working in time may get this record on order from the factory. It probably will not be carried in stock these jazz days. There is also an occarina record which is better for the top of the marquee unless it is played with a fiber needle. It is exceedingly shrill. The pipes can be made of pasteboard tubes gilded. They should be tapered at the lower end with a slot for the reed space. It will give a better circus atmosphere than red lemonade.

In another operation the manager, whose lobby was large, let a ladies' aid society set up a cane rack in the lobby. Winners drew tickets to the show. Even paying full price for the ticket prizes, the women still netted a handsome profit. That cane tossing stunt isn't as easy as it looks, so there is plenty of coin in the operation.

Peanuts and popcorn are poor accessories, but all right at the exit. In one recent stunt the maker of caramel popcorn, operating a store close to the theatre, was permitted to distribute glassine bags with a half a dozen kernels. Created a taste for more, which was quickly gratified, and the stand sold out for three nights as well as building a good trade. But no samples to incoming patrons. Bad for the carpets.

Local Angles

Comparatively few exhibs seem to realize the value of the local angle. Possibly this is because there are so many circuit owned houses where the managers do not stay put long enough to become part of the town. This does not always hold good. A great deal depends upon the man. Edgar Hart used to make the local rounds his first order of business when he was shunted into a new town, and in a couple of weeks he was a leader in community spirit. Most chain managers, however, seem to feel that it is no use wasting time.

Some years ago Gerald Gallagher pulled a nice one in connection with a local movement. Towners bewalled their inability to obtain an audience to listen to details of a new municipal project. The papers did not seem to be able to put it over. Gallagher offered to get a new picture at least a month in advance of its regular local showing, and project it at a meeting without admission charged. Admission was had by ticket, however, to hold the attendance to those most desired. He not only got the crowd for the localities, but he sold a feature a month in advance.

Comparatively few managers in recent years have reported leadership in local Christmas celebrations, and fewer still seem to connect with other local movements, and yet there is no better advertising for any theatre than participation in public projects.

That doesn't mean a money contribution. It means the more important contribution of showmanly ideas to the amateurishly fr med local angles. The whole business of pictures is selling the public. Town movements can be sold on precisely the same lines, and hooked to ticket sales at the same time.

- The 39 Steps, Transatlantic Tunnel, Mister Hobo, First a Girl. Four in a row. A box office record unmatched this season.
- Rhodes, The Empire Builder, King of the Damned, Secret Agent, It's Love Again, are on the way. They'll speak for themselves.
- GB Productions have been stepped up to keep pace with the productions made by anybody, anywhere. That takes in a lot of territory. But GB has always taken in a lot of territory.
- The GB family tree was planted way back in 1898. In Europe, we're one of the pioneers. In the U. S. A., we're one of the youngest. Experience and youth. An unbeatable combination.
- We are interested in production, distribution, theatre operation —sound apparatus, theatre supplies, newsreels, educationals, radio sets, 16 mm. equipment, television, and many more enterprises.
- We are the largest employers of labor in the entire industry. Outside the U. S. A.—our circuit is the largest—and gives more money to American producers—than any circuit in the world.
- With this background—this production record in one season—exhibitors may definitely look to GB for product second to none, by every box office standard. GB is in America to stay.

Fiction and Films

By WOLFE KAUFMAN
Decadent South

Grace Lumpkin is one of the few American women writers with any conception of the masses and the spirit of the times. Her previous novel, 'To Make My Bread,' won her the Maxim Gorky award. In play form it is current in New York as 'Let Freedom Ring.' Her newest work is 'A Sign For Cain' (Furman; $2.50), a story of the decay of aristocracy in the south. It is a novel that is not easy to read and even harder to forget once read. It is brutal, stark, unrelenting.

The pictures of the Negro tenant farmers, share croppers, plantation workers, poor whites, the not-so-poor whites who hold the reins, all seer. When Miss Lumpkin, towards the end of the book, arrives at her tragedy, the outbreak of lust, murder and rebellion, she convinces the most arcened.

The book, however, has no film value.

Critic's First

Harry Hansen has been the book critic of the New York World-Telegram for some time now, and for a long time previous he held the same job in Chicago. He is a good critic, a discerning critic, and frequently a tough critic. He has panned many books in his time, so he probably won't mind an awful lot when his first novel, 'Your Life Lies Before You' (Harcourt Brace; $2.50) is panned in turn.

It is a charming little book, completely harmless, completely unpretentious, completely meaningless. One of those quiet little rambles of the small-town boy, who wanted to be a reporter and who fell in love with a beautiful girl who died.

The various maiden aunts in Dubuque, Toledo, Kalamazoo and points East will like it. Not for films.

F. D. R.' Gum-Shoer

President Roosevelt, it seems, had an idea for a detective story but didn't have the time to finish it, so he told his idea to Fulton Oursler, and Oursler, being a smart editor, immediately got to work on the idea. He called in a half dozen name writers and said, 'Let's finish this detective story and I'll publish it.' Now it emerges in book form as 'The President's Mystery Story' (Farrar and Rhinehart; $2.00), by Rupert Hughes, Samuel Hopkins Adams, Anthony Abbott (Oursler), Rita Weiman, S. S. Van Dyne and John Erskine.

A surprisingly good thriller it is, too, considering the fact that the six writers involved each wrote only a hunk and left it up to the next man to continue, not worrying much about logic, or build up for the future. It could be filmed.

Omnibus of Crime

The miser was locked in and starving, yet he washed his hands in goldust. He lived indoors for two years, but when he was found his face was sunburned. That's the base of the yarn. C. St. John Sprigg tells it, in 'The Corpse With the Sunburned Face' (Crime Club; $2.00). It's incredible, but has a considerable amount of excitement. Not for films.

One of the goriest books ever is 'Death on the Bridge,' by Royce Howes (Crime Club; $2.00). Laid on a tramp steamer, with no regulation cops around, it spins merrily along in actiony manner. One of the best whodunits in some time.

Not for films.

By EPES W. SARGENT
Spare Parts

Allene Corliss discovers no new factors for her 'Smoke in Her Eyes' (Farrar & Rinehart; $2), but she assembles her story interestingly, if not engrossingly, from standard spare parts.

Her heroine is the starry-eyed country mouse who nibbles at the city cheese while spending a winter with her married sister and a somewhat boring brother-in-law, who has mental convulsions when he slips with his secretary. Too much straining for effect and the over-use of cer in situations robs the book of its chance for appeal. Not for pictures, even if it were cleaner.

Grinde's $50 Reprint

Nick Grinde, film director, received $50 check from Readers Digest for permission to reprint his article in the December issue of Esquire.

Literati

Jewish Papers In Reich

Newsvendors, kiosks and newsstands all over the Reich must not handle Jewish papers or periodicals any more, according to a new order of the authorities.

Curious fact is that numerous cafes and restaurants in Berlin now have one or two Jewish dailies on file. These papers seem to be plenty in demand, judging from the long list of visitors waiting their turn to obtain one from the crowd.

Circulation, it is learned, has not diminished now that the order stopping street sale has been put in force, while the number of ads has tripled.

Authors League Treasury Low

Members of Authors League received statement from Louise Silcox, treasurer, that the fund treasury is bare and there is little hope of replenishing it in the near future.

According to Miss Silcox, receipts from last appeal to members was low, due perhaps to announcement that government funds were to give work relief to authors under WPA. Federal Writers' Project has done nothing towards relieving burden on the fund, as it only uses authors who are on public relief rolls. In addition, many authors have problems employment under WPA could not solve, even if rules were so modified as to make work obtainable for them.

Merrick Out, Grahame In

Sheilah Grahame, Hearst-King Features writer here, has been made Hollywood rep for North American Newspaper Alliance. She succeeds Mollie Merrick, who held the post for eight years, and resigned when NANA refused to permit her to broadcast.

Ias Merrick keeps her copyrighted column; Hollywood in Person; which will be serviced by another syndicate. Under the new job she goes on the air.

India Protests Book

Hamish Hamilton, who recently published Katherine Mayo's new book, 'The Face of Mother India,' in England, has received word that the book has raised a storm of protest in India. Report says that protests have been made to Secretary of State for India and to the Viceroy, and that effigies of the author are being burned.

British Prime Minister has also received a protest.

Harper's New V.P.'s

Lee Foster Hartman, ed Harper's Mag, and Frank S. MacGregor, head college department, were made vice-presidents of Harper Bros.

Ordway Tead, head of the economic book department, was made director to fill vacancy caused by death of John Larkin.

George W. Buckley Dead

George W. Buckley, 85, author and retired minister, died Dec. 23 in Los Angeles. Burial in Michigan.

Graduated University of Michigan in 1873 and, after touring Pacific states as newspaper man and magazine writer, he edited paper kn .n as 'Sunday-Weekly Spirit of the West.' Was ordained in Unitarian church in 1887. Among his writings was 'The Wit and Wisdom of Jesus.'

Hearst Reported After Kent

Reliably reported that Frank R. Kent, vice-prexy of the Baltimore Sun, whose daily column out of Washington is syndicated in 40-odd newspapers, has turned down a $50,000 a year offer from William Randolph Hearst. Understood the publisher wanted Kent's column for his string of dailies exclusively. At present the strip appears in most towns in papers that are rivals to Hearst properties.

Kent has from its very beginning opposed vigorously the present administration in Washington. Hearst's sympathies currently lie opposite Roosevelt also.

GARDEN GOES BLACK 'N' RED IN SAME EVENING

By JACK PULASKI

Couple of seasons ago Madison Square Garden tried the screwiest show set-up on record, that of a colored choral assemblage of 1,000 voices plus motor-paced bike races, all for one admission. It flopped and so did last Friday's (27) all colored fight card. There weren't enough people present to fill an average size picture theatre and most of the 12 four-round bouts were dull.

The show was the idea of the Garden's matchmaker, J. J. Johnston, who lifted the Golden Gloves amateur boxing idea originated by Paul Gallico for the N. Y. Daily News and the Chicago Tribune. Contestants in loud satin bathrobes entered the darkened ring and were alternately spotlighted while the names, age, occupations and ring records were announced over the loud speaker.

Also following the Gallico idea, the backs of the robes were lettered 'Black Diamond Gloves.' Microphone announcement was that the best man, as judged by the scribes would receive 'a black diamond stickpin.' To stir action a bonus of $25 went to the fighters who scored knock-outs. There were three kayos but in each instance the loser was outclassed and there was no exictement. Only applause noticed during the evening was when Joe Jeannette entered the ring as a second. What gallery fans there were whiled away the time by making wise cracks.

There were several fighters on hand who are known to be fairly good men. Among them was a 168-pound Newark waiter who adopted the name of Ray Miller. His win was accomplished in less than two minutes. Present, too, was Roy Williams of Chicago, a light heavyweight who has been in the training corps of Joe Louis. Roy lost a decision to Gene Mickens, although the latter was tagged twice and almost went down.

Some comic scrappers included Dewey 'Doodad' Anderson, who is blacker than black. Announced that he had 68 fights and won 67. He managed to get the decision but it was no cinch. Then there was Bob Ice Cream of Norfolk, who tried to smack his opponent with the first swing—and missed. He lost.

The little or less known men were paid $50 and the others got $100. Even so, what with the operating expense and other costs it was apparent that the Garden's poor stunt was quite in the red.

30 Years of Mugging

When VARIETY started exactly 30 years ago, the office in the Knickerbocker theatre building, New York, consisted of three desks, two typewriters, one telephone, an office boy, Epes W. Sargent (Chic) and Sime. Also, but not on salary, a sheriff who sat outside the door. In fact, he sat outside the door so long he became part of the place, and when VARIETY moved from the Knickerbocker to the St. James building he moved right along.

VARIETY, along with the show business it covers, has changed since December, 1905, but one thing unchanged is the doorway prop. At VARIETY's present building on 46th street a sheriff still sits outside the door. The lives of the paper and the sheriff became so fused the paper was made a family tradition—and the present sheriff is the grandson of the first sheriff. His attachment is even greater than his grandpa's—six pages.

The first thing VARIETY saw when it opened its eyes 30 years ago was an opening act at Hurtig & Seamon's. The paper was never dropped on its head when a baby, but that experience at Hurtig & Seamon's had practically the same effect. In its first 12 years VARIETY saw more opening acts, at Hurtig & Seamon's and elsewhere, than it could count, if it could count, which it couldn't.

Then came the war. Then came the NVA. wasn't built in a day. But 'A Night in Venice'

In its 30 years VARIETY has been first more often than the proverbial opening act. It was first to print New Act reviews, first to print Bills Next Week, first show paper to print cable news, picture reviews (trade or dailies), foreign picture reviews, picture house reviews, legit boxoffice grosses, picture boxo grosses, nite club department, radio news, radio reviews (trade or dailies), phonograph disc reviews (trade or dailies), legit critics' boxscore, film critics' boxscore, out-of-town legit reviews, Times Square department, news from the dailies (so headed) and 95% exclusive news matter.

But these distinctions are generally known to the trade, and when asking questions VARIETY's readers usually inquire about other things. 'How does VARIETY get all that news every week?' or 'Why don't you guys learn to write English?' or 'What's holding you up?'

So, for the first time in its 30 years, VARIETY's insi modus operandi exposed:

Getting the News

VARIETY has around 40 foreign correspondents in about 30 foreign nations and 200 in the United States, besides about 40 staff (editorial) men and women in its four o ces—New York, Hollywood, Chicago and London. These 280 people walk around all day asking, 'What's new?' You know the type.

Writing the News

Writing the news on VARIETY is a comparatively simple matter. VARIETY reporters are limited by office rules to a vocabulary of 130 words, including three variations of 'and,' four of 'but' and six of 'lousy.' The idea being that anybody who can't remember 130 words doesn't belong on VARIETY. In that manner much time is saved.

Editing the News

VARIETY's copy readers are also limited as to vocabulary, but not as stringently as the reporters. Editors are permitted to know 132 words, but are not permitted to look in a dictionary. An editor caught looking at a dictionary is penalized by being sent to see the show at the Grand Opera House (G.O.H.). But there isn't a dictionary in the office. If a reporter spells a word wrong, it's a horse on him. Anyway, no word is ever so badly misspelled that the reader can't figure out what the reporter intended to say.

What advertising?

Going to Press

For its first 20 years VARIETY never went to press. It went to the cleaners. It still doesn't go to press like other papers of its size. It goes to press in the subway, because the print shop is 'way down town. This outburst, occurring every Tuesday afternoon, is known as 'the weekly miracle.'

The past 30 years of the show business are mirrored in the pages of VARIETY, and 30 years of VARIETY are mirrored in the show business. From Hurtig & Seamon's to Radio City Music Hall, from Bowery honky-tonks to the French Casino, from John Drew to Clark Gable, from Billy Watson's 'Beef Trust' to Billy Rose's 'Jumbo,' from the buggy whip to the stream-lined car, from booze to prohibition and back to booze again, from the 100-seat store show to the 10,000,000-seat radio broadcast. That was and is show business. That was and is VARIETY.

So it's been 30 years of mugging.... side.

Now It's Bowling Denting Show Biz

Salt Lake City, Dec. 29.

Ancient pastime of Rip Van Winkle has captured the fancy of Salt Lakers to such an extent that other local amusements are beginning to notice the tremendous popularity of bowling.

Everybody's become an ardent fan, it seems, from the debutante to the dowager, and father-son combinations are numerous. A new bowling plant, which has 15 alleys, was recently constructed by Verne McCullough, local wrestling impressario. Impetus is gained daily with the formation of leagues divided into four groups: industrial, business men, women and youngsters.

McCullough has done very little advertising. It's mostly by mouth (he's a lawyer by profession).

PRODUCTIONS

Now the new year comes blazing in with "THE TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE," first great outdoor picture produced in the new three-color Technicolor process! It's nearing completion! Soon ready to go! With nine big pictures to follow! Truly, the company that in less than a year acquired the most brilliant array of stars, writers and directors ever assembled by an independent producer, that gave you six great attractions in the few short months since its inception, may well exclaim:

What a glorious year looms ahead!...

NOTICE TO ALL THEATRE EMPLOYERS

We will play the new MARCH OF TIME No.9 shortly. Exploitation possibilities this month are better than ever. And this theatre is going to sell it harder than ever!

One episode in the new issue covers the Townsend Plan. So keen is the interest in this that Townsendites around town are already clamouring to see it... Remember the grosses we had on the G-Men pictures! This March of Time tells a true story of Secret Service smashing the biggest dope ring in history... And as for the Japan-China crisis! Watch the front page of any paper any day!

Between now and the time MARCH OF TIME No. 9 is played, will employees please call it to the attention of patrons whenever possible. They will be interested and it will mean box-office to the theatre.

PICTURES IN PARIS

By Robert Stern

Paris, Dec. 22.

A wise man said something once about happy th country that has no history. Film biz in France in 1935 had plenty history, nobody made much money.

Grosses nose dived in 1934, and in 1935 the take wasn't any better. The spring season, all over the country, was definitely bad. By fall a trifle of tax relief had come—just a spot—and admissions were lower. Paris business then held up moderately well, but the provinces—and Paris is only a small part of France—were terrible.

The French provincials hung on to their francs, except when a flesh show came to town, and as soon as it went they tightened up again, s if they had never heard of films.

But this didn't prevent the industry from making a lot of noise—much more, probably, than it would have made if it had been more prosperous.

It has been a year of struggle to preserve the industry from government control. Early in 1935 it became apparent that a strong movement was on foot to reorganize the trade by ukase and run it through bureaucracy. American distributors here figured that if anything like that happened they'd be sunk, especially since those in the move showed nationalistic tendencies and an inclination to make the Yanks pay for any improvement in the French trade.

Maybe the mericans, in fact, were a little more frightened than the actual situation warranted, and maybe they deliberately made more noise than the danger called for so as to be on the safe side. In any case, they lined up the French exhibitors, who always had been with them because they needed American pictures in order to defend themselves against the Pathe and Gaumont chains. Then they got to a roup of distributors, and finally just about the whole industry, which in the end got together, squealed and managed to stave off government control in the form of decree-laws just when everyone thought it was inevitable.

Just where the menace came from was mysterious at first. Previously the Americans could see clearly their enemies: the French trusts which were trying to fight their competition and which had control of the Chambre Syndicale. But this year the trouble came from a different spot, outside the fil industry, from French political elements of which the Americans had very little understanding.

Parliamentarians, honestly under the impression that they were helping the small theatre owner to fight the trusts, devised quota schemes that would have delivered him right into the hands of his enemies. The Confederation Generale de Travail—French A. F. of L.—began to take a hand, although what it had to do with the subject was hard to figure. As in all mysterious French movements, where the left wing in politics is concerned, lots of bogeys were raised.

G-F-F-A Bankruptcy

The government got its interest in the film trade through bankruptcy of Gaumont Franco-Film Aubert, which had been backed indirectly by state funds and which left the government holding the bag to the extent of many millions—just how many no one knows exactly. In order to try to get this money back, and see what was wrong, the finance committee of the Chamber of Deputies appointed a subcommittee on cinema, and this outfit took over the job of reorganizing the entire industry.

Cinema subcommittee's labors resulted in the adoption in June of a report by Deputy Maurice Persch, who would set up a nationnl fund for the improvement of the French cinema, organized in such a way that the Americans would pay the bill, via a levy on film imports. This report was successfully blocked during the year, but it still remains a threat, for the film question will come up before the French parliament in 1936 and Petsch's brainchild will be a natural point of departure for the debate.

A second threat to the Americans arose in the spring in connection with the move to give tax relief to the industry. With some thirty percent of all grosses going to the government, this relief was pretty important, but the interests outside of the industry, which were worried about protecting French films, managed to tie up with it a move to develop the home trade at the expense of the Yank imports.

Ernest-Lafont, a deputy and later a minister, of socialistic tendencies, stuck a rider on the tax relief bill to give the cut only to those houses which showed a certain percentage of local mades. It looked for a long while as if this would go through, but finally, just before the Parliament shut down for the Summer, the anti-Lafont fight was won and the tax relief bill was passed without his amendment. Relief to French theatres was not terrific but helped.

Meanwhile a third threat was developing. In the thrashing around of the interests which want to reform the industry, an inter lnisterial commission of bureaucrats was appointed to consider means of fixing films. This was necessary because the ministries of education, commerce, finance and foreign affairs all apply, in one way or another, to the film trade, and no general scheme could be adopted without the collaboration of all.

Under the leadership of one Gruenbaum-Ballin, who has a hookup with the Fine Arts department (traditionally hostile American films for cultural reasons) and also representing the Authors' League (which is a royalty-collecting institution and would like to get its hands on film-theatre receipts, just as it collects a percentage of the legit take already) this interministerial commission, in great seerecy, cooked up a plan for reorganization of the lndustry under government control, which was to have been issued as a decree-law.

The commission did its hard work during the summer, and then suddenly popped the decree-laws on the cabinet at a moment when nobody was looking, in the hope of slipping them through.

But vigilantes of the industry, notably Raymond Lussiez, head of the exhibs' organization, caught on. Distrib's leaders came tearing back from vacation, the alarm was sounded, and the issuance of the decree-laws postponed.

But that was just the beginning of the real fight.

Government Interest

The Minister of National Education and Fine Arts, a man from the south named Marlo Roustan, began to take a personal interest in the decree. He felt he was being slighted by those opposed to the project, who fought all around him rather than appealing directly to him, and he conducted his inquiry into the form of the decrees in private, concocting a new set not so tough as the first but still giving the government a bit of a hook on the industry and setting a maximum on the percentage of foreign films to be shown in French theatres.

Battle grew terrific over this decree, and finally the whole French industry was involved, all opposed to the measure. Still, it seemed about to go through with the last batch of decree-laws that the Laval government had the power to pass before the new session of parliament. On the eve of its expected issuance Colonel Frederick Herron, head of the Hays foreign department, arrived in France, and the next day the decree was killed.

Too much inference should not be drawn on the connection between Herron's arrival and the death of the decree. It really had already been decided, when he arrived, that the measure was to be dropped and put up to the returning parliament in the form of a bill. Moreover, it must be remembered that this was not the fight of the American interests here against the French lawmakers, but a resistance of the entire French industry, including the Chambre Syndicale (traditionally hostile to Americans) against an attempt at arbitrary reform from the top and government control.

It may be that the Americans had a keener sense of the value of organized resistance than the French, and thus were able to become the nucleus of the fight, but that's all. It was the French themselves who saved the day.

Industry Changes

Together with this fight came considerable changes in the organization of the French industry, in which the Americans had a hand. Previously the big French trade association was the Chambre Syndicale. Pathe-Natan and Gaumont dominated it, and the Americans belonged. Then Gaumont passed out of the picture, and Pathe-Natan began to use the Chambre Syndicale to push its schemes for resistance to American competition. In 1934, when the Chambre came out for a quota that virtually amounted to an embargo, the American companies all walked out on the organization and stayed on the sidelines.

Meanwhile a French deputy named Henri Clere, who also is an author and takes an interest in motion pictures, set up an organization in which he tried to group the Independent distributors and producers. This bunch made a heavy play to get the Americans in. Fortunately, the Yanks resisted, for the Clerc movement, although useful as a thorn in the side of the Chambre Syndicaté, was itself a flop.

Along about this time Georges Lourau, Frenchman at the head of the Tobis interests in France, launched a movement to unite distributors against the booking combines, of which the most important were a group in Alsace-Lorraine and the Pathe-Natan theatre chain. Lourau got the Americans in with him, and after long hanging fire this movement developed into an organization of distributors, the Union Syndicale des Distributeurs, to which most of the French and American independent distribs belong, and which is really a power in the trade.

This outfit got going in the spring, and American concerns control important official positions in it. It is closely allied with the exhibitors' organization headed by Lussiez, and in combination with this outfit Lourau formed, shortly before the outbreak of the deeree fight, the Comite du Film, which is supposed to represent the entire industry.

Producers' Group

There is a producers' group headed by Felix Gandera, but the distribs and exhibs organizations are much stronger.

Whether the Comite comes out of the decree fight strengthened or weakened is open to debate. In any case, the battle provoked a bid for an alliance between the Lourau group and the Chambre Syndicale, which flopped, and the Chambre is now trying a comeback on its own. It has changed its name, and is organizing subordinate syndicates among producers and distributors.

If this turns into a dragout fight, it will be just too bad, for there's going to be a parliamentary attack on the industry again, pretty soon, and in the interest of all concerned a united front is important.

Henri Klarsfeld, Frenchman who handles Paramount's distribution, made pointed remarks to this effect in a leading local trade paper in November, making it clear that the interests of all film people dealing with the French market, whether they are selling French or American films, are identical, and calling for a real French Hays organization. There's lots of similar feeling about; maybe the sense of danger will cause the boys to bury the hatchet.

And then again, maybe that's being too optimistic.

Changes

In the face of tough times, there have been some ch nges in the layout of American distribution in France during 1935. Two concerns, Columbia and Radio, which previously had been doing some sort of distribution in this territory on their own, put their interests definitely in the hands of Freneh distributors and took the position of mere watchers.

Columbia made a deal with Adolphe Osso, who once had a big chunk of the French industry in his hands, and then lost it. Osso is using the Columbia hookup to make a comeback, and he is distributing French films as well as American product. He's making nice progress. The Columbia office was shut in the fall, and Osso recognized as its official rep.

Radio had long been flirting with the idea of opening real distributing offices in Fr nee, but never got around to it. It seems definitely to have given up the idea. In 1934 it made a hookup with Radio Cinema, film subsidiary of the French equivalent of the RCA, for local distribution of films which the latter might select for dubbing, keeping the distribution of the rest of its product. In the fall of 1935 the contract was made all-inclusive, Radio Cinema getting exclusivity of the American output, and the RKO-Radio office here being duced to a mere checkup staff.

Others majors retain their French distribution. Fox, however, di considerable retrenching during th year. Bob Harley replaced Carlo Bavetta as the French chief, and hired Ernest Koenig, former sales chief for Warners, as his assistant. Together they got out the axe, and the Fox French employes are still trembling.

Universal

Universal remained as it was in 1934, under the control of a French-

COLOR LAB IN NEW LONDON FILM'S STUDIO

London, Dec. 22.

The new year will mark the opening of London Film Productions' new studios at Denham. Having a mile frontage, the estimated money outlay for the plant is $2,500,000. Included is a Technicolor studio and lab as L. F. P. will make at least one all color picture this year.

First release of London Films on the new program is Rene Clair's 'The Ghost Goes West' starring Robert Donat. This is also Clair's initial effort for the company. Picture opened here Dec. 17.

Second picture on the schedule, and due in January, is 'Things to Come' by H. G. Wells who will also supervise production. In February another Wells picture will be 'The Man Who Could Work Miracles'.

Other films listed are 'Elephant Boy', in production for some time in India. This is an adaptation of a Kipling story with Robert Flaherty directing. Benjamin Gigli's picture is in work under the direction of Zoltan Korda. 'Cyrano de Bergerac' with Charles Laughton, has Alexander Korda directing.

'Revolt in the Desert' will be this company's official screen biography on the late Col. J. E. Lawrence.

Pix in Reich

Berlin, Dec. 22.

An essential characteristic of the reformation of German films has been the effort to abolish the nuisance of exaggerated glorification of stars, although up to now a comparative shortage of box office names has again led necessarily to a forcing of the star system.

Figures recently published indicate that 20 leading actors have received 10% of all the capital invested in German film production during the current year—about $1,400,000.

As matters stand, a requirement of between 80 and 100 foreign fil ls counted on. This importation has been somewhat complicated by transfer difficulties.

Of 211 feature films shown last year, 129 were home products. Number of German producing firms has shrunk to 49 from 87. In pre-Nazi years. Larger majority's output numbers two pictures per year. Entire number of German film houses is 4,872, with 1,800,000 seats. Not all are wired, two have no installation for sound, one of them in Berlin.

Largest German ino is not in Berlin but in Dusseldorf, the Apollo, holding 2,880 seats, with the Ufa Palace, Hamburg, next with 2,685. Berlin's roomiest is the Mercedes Palace, Neukoelln, with 2,500 seats. Only two more in Berlin with more than 2,000 seats, the Ufa Palace and the Atrium. Smallest in town is the Fata Morgana, holding 124 seats.

Longest run in the past season was 'Maskerade,'' (Viennese) 71 days.

Smallest picture houses in Germany are on the Isle of Ruegen, in Gars and Gingst, with 75 seats each.

BRITISH LION JUMPS PRODUCT FOR REPUBLIC

London, Dec. 21.

The British Lion Film Corp.' deal with Republic Pictures last summer has resulted in a one-a-week picture schedule for Republic, with an increased output from British Lion's own studios. These are being enlarged in size at Beaconsfield, Buckinghamshire. Consisting now of one large sound stage, plan is to open another the end of March, and perhaps more by the end of 1936.

On the completion of the new studios British Lion plans to produce pictures for both the British and U. S. markets. Sam W. Smith, managing director, intends visiting the States early in the new year. He will be after 'names' and technicians for six features to be Internationally released.

INTERNATIONAL SHOW BUSINESS

By Wolfe Kaufman

As has been true for the past 10 years or , lms dominated show business around the world during the past year. But, for the first time in five years or so, pictures didn't have everything their own way. tage plays did fairly well in some spots and vaudeville had a definite awakening way from the U. It was, in fact, from a business and profit standpoint, vaudeville's year—somewhat of an incongruity in the face of the fact that in America vaudeville continued on its path toward oblivion.

Radio has also made progress around the lobe, but not in the commercial sense known this country.

Films' continuance at the head of world's show business is due to its bulk of trade. There were headaches, of course, and much worry for the American companies. This was because the Yankee companies tried to keep their fingers tight on the ever-increasingly slippery world market—and, in some cases, failed.

Despite the fact that the financial return to the home offices was as big, or bigger, than usual for American film business, on an international basis it was the worst year since sound. Paradox comes through the fact that foreign exchange was highly favorable, giving Americans a break. Where they could continue in business and show profit, the profit increased by exchange to unusual heights. But, on the other hand, American films were slowly being swamped in a number of the more important markets of the world due to the rise of native production.

That native production angle, so little watched, understood, or cared about in Hollywood, is not to be sneezed at. It's important. Two years ago American films averaged 60% of their net from the foreign markets. At one time it was higher, for some companies being as high as 75%. But this has been badly cut by native production, and now the race is on in earnest.

England to Fore

England started things by getting a grip on itself a couple of years ago. Now it turns out pictures that, in the English-speaking markets, frequently have no trouble competing with Hollywood, and, in odd cases, outgrossing them. France and Germany followed suit, France really getting its hands on the throttle the past year.

But in France and Germany political strife is hindering real film progress. Germany was the first foreign country to make real cinematic progress after the coming of sound, and was beginning to hurt America's export trade. Then Hitler arrived. France might have jumped at the chance, but couldn't because of internal disruption. France during the last year turned out a half dozen pictures which impressed around the world, but it was accident more than anything. If it can straighten out internal bickering, it can go places. If not, Americans have that much more time.

England mushroomed all over the lot. Not only productionally but in theatre construction. A race was started between British International and Gaumont-British to build up bigger chains around the country. ith fear expressed in some corners that this might eventually lead to over building. Meantime several indies, notably Union Theatres, also began building and adding theatres to its chain. Money is cheap in England currently and financing easy.

In production, too, there was much mushrooming, a number of independent companies being started with ambitious plans. On almost every side new production plans were (and are) being announced. Money bars seem definitely down, with producers and prospective producers willing to go the li it on expenditure. Thus far nothing really definite has resulted except for a rush start by C. M. Woolf. Latter quit G-B during the year and started on his own. He's about to start now. As for the many little fellows, time will have to tell.

America's main battle during the year was for a foothold in the French market. It started early in the year with quota law bickering, and is still going on. The situation there got all mixed up with that of importers. Theatres were desperate because they were allegedly choked by taxes. Politicos saw a chance to make the 'foreigners' the scapegoats. Tax relief bill for theatres was introduced into the Chamber with the difference in coin to be made up by Americans. Considerable battling succeeded in getting the bill through without foreign (mostly Yanks) interests paying off. Then it started from another corner. And another corner. And another. Eventually, it looked really black; the Americans were licked; the French were going to get their pound of flesh.

Decree laws were framed which would have practically ruined American interests, so they claimed. All the battling in the world didn't seem to do any good. This time it was a tough one, so much so that the Americans even managed to stir up local interest against the proposed decrees. The Chambre Syndicale, nti-American for years, came out openly against the decrees. Major Frederick Herron, of the New York Hays office, jumped a boat and rushed to Paris. It may be coincident that he arrived two nights before passage of the bill was set. It may be coincidence that those in France the night before passage was scheduled, had given up hope. And it may be coincidence that, immediately after Major Herro talked to a few people in the French and American diplomatic service in Paris the win suddenly went out of the bill and it disappeared into thin air.

That was a full year's struggle and three days afterward some interests in France began immediately working on a new law along similar lines to be taken up at the Chamber. The Chamber has troubles enough of its own; it's likely that films can sneak .

Other headaches in France came from the fact that some persons in the government tried in every way to get the entire film industry controlled by the politicos. Gaumont-Franco Film-Aubert had gone bankrupt the year previous owing the government something like $20,000,000. The government tried to reorganize it but didn't get far. Meantime, the other big French company, Pathe-Natan, got into trouble through too high holdings of real estate. Finally was forced into partial bankruptcy with government again attempting to step in. Attempt is now being made to knit the two together into one large national institution.

Australian Strife

Australia was another country which suddenly developed importance because of strife. The Anzac market is one of the finest plums in the American world mart basket. For some time the localities felt that they should be getting a bigger proportion of the profits. There was a long and complicated government probe into the situation, which cleared American firms of the charge of trying to dominate the field, but which also resulted in the framing of a quota law. Early in December another law was passed in Victoria along similar lines, making it practically effective throughout Australia.

Means Americans will have to go in for some production Down Under. Fox was the first to grasp this and make a deal for a few pictures through its allied company, Hoyt's. Fox owns a considerable piece of this company. United Artists followed suit with a deal with Cinesound for some production. Other American companies haven't moved yet and seem waiting for results.

insound, headed by Stuart Doyle, moved quickly. Realizing that the making of quota pictures for local consumptions isn't enough, it sent Ken Hall to look over New York and Hollywood. Then decided to import some talent and get going.

Mexi Taxes

Mexico developed a lot of trouble. Taxes again. Government wanted more money and pictures were the goat. Americans said 'nothing doing' and stuck to it. Much negotiation, many promises, but no lower taxes. So towards the end of the year the Americans decided to walk out. Government wanted to dicker some more, but the clerical help picked this moment to ask e American companies for more money. Nothing doing. So the help went out on strike. hat's the situation at the present time. No American films are being distributed in Mexico, the exhibs are squawking, customers are squawking, the American companies are waiting, and the government is embarrassed. Labor is important in Mexico; government doesn't want to annoy or anger it. If the Americans can come to terms with their help, the government says it will come to terms on taxes.

Italian Films Quiet

Italy was comparatively quiet. The government simply took over the picture business and nothing much happened. Pittaluga, main company, was reorganized. Il Duce ordered that he must look over all scripts. Heavy censorship set in. Import films were highly li ited. Local companies didn't turn out product of much consequence. An attempt was made to garner some American talent for one or two big pictures, notably Fredric March was wanted for 'Christopher Columbus,' but this didn't materialize. One film was made with Phillips Holmes but it didn't click. Italy had other things to think about.

Brussels, quiet for a long time, began shouting for a quota. Aimed mostly at France, but Americans would have been hurt so the Americans helped squelch it. For how long, of course, is problematical. Even Switzerland, most peaceful corner of the globe, suddenly became film conscious and began talking quota. This didn't last long.

Germany

Germany had one of those years. Nazidom was in full march. But film production (locally) improved and increased. Hindered by constant government regulations, the industry nevertheless managed to keep afloat and even produced a few money-making (local) features. Helped, of course, by the fact that German cinema patrons had become home-talent conscious, plus the fact that governmental edicts frowned on over-patronage of foreign mades. UFA and Tobis continued getting by, but UFA, biggest company, didn't make enough for a dividend pay-off on the year. It didn't lose any money, either. Sighs of relief all around. Business in general for German films on the year was called 19% up, although export trade was called 33% off. Both figures estimated by the Berlin boys and both somewhat, perhaps, colored by optimism.

One attempt made by the Germans toward regained interest in the world market was a political one of import. It organized a Berlin Film Congress to which all the world's filmers were invited. England and The Hague shied off, and Americans took only a cursory interest, but other nations showed up. At this meet in Berlin an International Film Chamber was proposed for mutual international working out of headaches. But the fact that the Americans and Britons were out, plus the realization that the Germans were maneuvering for control of this organization, stopped it from getting anywhere. Germans, French and Italians organized it, anyway.

Hungary went quietly ahead on home production, increasing the budget considerably, but not making much fuss with it. Fact that Universal produced several films in Budapest helped considerably. U's idea was to use up some of the talent, stories, etc., salvaged when the company had to quit production in Germany the year previous. Hungary played with the idea of a quota for a while, and toyed with a new law making home dubs a must, but did nothing about either officially. Preference seems to be first build up the home folks to a really substantial basis.

Russia had a rather quiet year, mostly spent in experimentation. Government decided that it must change its film tactics. Names of stars began cropping out and an attempt began to build up some personalities for the world marts. Also an attempt to inject story interest outside of the propaganda angles consistently adhered to in the past. At present it looks as though the film trade there has settled down to the manufacture of two distinct types of films which will be mixed for export. Propaganda will still go out, and frankly so labeled, but also there will be some pictures (mostly based on classics) with no political values.

Some attempt was made to bring in American films for general distribution but no real deals; Russians figured they couldn't afford the prices Americans asked. Americans figured they couldn't afford to set precedents by taking less—especially since the Russians w nt to pick and choose.

Egypt broke into the news for a few weeks by upping the tax on imported films by 500%. Importers went into a huddle immediately and unanimously decided on a strike, refusing to distribute under the circumstances. Ended in the usual concessions, government cutting the taxes down to a mere 100% raise.

The Hague also raised taxes during the year, a mere 100% this time. A compromise figure was reached here also.

Insul

Spain had too much inner political trouble to worry about films, but mixed in somewhat, nevertheless. First, a governmental industry was formed to investigate and study picture making. This resulted in a sort of code for film producers, taking in all branches of the business. Also Spain became worried about censorship and 'insults' in films. Made alliances with Mexico, Nicaragua and practically all the South American countries for mutual reciprocal action on films when 'affronted.' If any country anywhere makes a picture that any of the participant nations dislike, all of them mutually act against the offender. It's the first international film pact of the sort and affects all the Spanish-speaking countries of the world.

Censorship was increasingly tough around the world, but continued its curiously haphazzard way, making decisions for producers difficult. Thus a film which was banned in one spot was accepted with open arms in another. Hungary turned thumbs down on 'I Cover the Waterfront' (UA), 'Caravan' (Fox), 'Merry Widow' (M-G). Madrid didn't like 'Don Juan' (UA). Cuba objected to 'Rumba' (Par). China banned 'Bengal Lancer' (Par). Budapest also banned 'Whoopee' (UA) and 'Rain' (UA). Algeria banned 'Lancer.' Sydney wouldn't let in 'G-Men' (WB) or 'Let 'Em Have It' (UA). Copenhagen nixed 'Little Miss Marker' (Par). Capetown refused 'Let 'Em Have It' entrance. There were many more in many parts of the world.

It all wound up in one big scrap over 'Devil Is A Woman' (Par) which Spain resented to the point that it threatened Paramount with a ban from the country of all its product if this picture wasn't removed from the world market. Par held out until the last minute. This all broke heaviest as Major Herron (Hays office) was in France on the decree law trouble. He rushed to Madrid, but the matter couldn't be straightened out easily. Only way out was to give in, and Herron used the phone to convince Paramount in New York. Picture was withdrawn from the world market.

One somewhat humorous incident comes through all the welter of quota, censorship, and dubbing headaches. Alexander Korda had made 'The Scarlet Pimpernel' in London for United Artists distribution. Picture was consid red dangerous to French morale. So it was dubbed into French, but the dial switched in dubbing making the actual villain a hero and the actual hero a villain. Thus the French liked it and smiled. No offense there to anyone. Proving how important dubbing can be.

it Year

Legit was only fair around the world during the year. In England the stage did splendidly, a lot of good, and some bad, shows doing well. There were, surprisingly, few American shows on the list. Fewer than usual. 'Stevedore' didn't do, and neither did 'Accent on Youth' go over. On t other hand, 'Anything Goes' was a hit and is still current. ' ackbirds' revival did okay.

Americ cracked into a definitely English institution, however, by way of pantomime. Almost all of them a year ago had American actors and almost 'l of them did well. Outstanding were Will Mahoney and the Three Sailors.

'Roberta' was the big click of the year in Australia, although legit was fairly healthy there, too. Sir Ben Fuller imported a British opera troupe and tried to get away with grand opera, but couldn't. It was a costly venture. He asked for government subsidy for it and got a lot of thanks, promises and pleasant chatter. The troupe went home.

Germany didn't have much of a legit year, also because of governmental handicappin Government banned cut-rating, ticket speculating, etc., but accomplished little real good for show business there. Only thing that helped is that, through governmental organizing of legit patronage at low prices (through labor and military organizations) theatres were frequently occupied. No profits, perhaps, but no losses. And no really outstanding new plays.

Mexico called for legit tax relief, with the government interested but not knowing how to proceed. Same in Cuba and other variegated spots around the world.

In Russia

'Five Star Final' was a in Moscow. 'Waiting for Lefty' was played there to organization patronage. 'Stevedore' was considered too left. Legit in general was healthy in the Soviet with no outstanding play or productions. Again government aid in forced theatre patronage helped considerably. But the theatr festival, which, as usual, attracted a lot of international visitors, didn't have anything important to show.

French legit was upset. Few real hits and many flops. No American imports, but the perennial revival of 'Rose-Marie' at the Mogador. And to profit as usual. Noel Coward's 'Private Lives' was fine and 'Barretts' clicked. A new Bernstein play made good and a new Maeterlink play folded. A new Bourdet piece just opened. The musicals were best, Chevalier's reappearance at the Casino de Paris helping considerably there.

Vaudeville On Top

Vaudeville was the one branch which really showed progress all over the world outside America. In France it made good with a vengeance. It was the best vaude year there in many years. The A. B. C. and Alhambra, both two-a-day, are showing healthy profits. A half dozen other houses are doing well, too. Customers suddenly seemed to wake up to vaude in France, perhaps due to the lack of really good French films.

In England, too, vaude was very good, and still is. There is at least a full year of available playing time in England for vaude. Most American acts can't play all of this time, but it's there. Which contrasts with the half dozen or so weeks in the U. S.

Australia also woke up to vaude. Several American units were brought in and did good business. So much so that more were sent for and even some stars were contracted.

South Americ , too, began importing American acts. The casinos, in Brazil, especially, got hot for Yank acts. Paid nice money and under better working conditions. Unfortunately some of the acts prolonged their stays by going on further into Argentina, and some bumped into trouble.

Radi

roadcasting, in its international phase, seems on the threshold, but no more than that. Some interesting developments during the year, however.

In Canada, a change in government, from right to left centre, is certain to mean that during 1936 the existing regulations which hinge upon sponsorship will be removed or lightened. Practically interpreted this adds around 8,000,000 circulation to commercial American radio.

Over in England the mercantile interests are reported restless under the hammering of American and other advertisers using high powered continental transmitters to sell th ritish Isles. It is not impossible that advertising under limited conditio ay yet be seen on the little isle.

Franc , urred by political necessity (propaganda) has set about refurnishing its radio system, previously a sad ess. Efficiency o the German and Russian systems brought home to the Frenchmen the realization that however much the, might scorn radio artistically it is politically inept not to have such a sharp tool handy for opinion management.

The South American continent probably is the best prospect for future development. These markets are already being exploited by international advertisers using discs. Network, based on a shortwave link with the U. S. from which member stations would take program service and convert into regional long wave, has been proposed with the International Telephone & Telegraph Company as the money source.

8 Firms Have G-F Release; Wilcox String

London, Dec. 22.

The incomin year will see, on this side of the water, eight or more British filmr companies releasing through General Film Distributors, Ltd. This is the C. M. Woolf organization formed the past year and due to take office in a new Wardour street building. This firm's West End 'show case' is the Leicester Square theatre which has been acquired by Woolf.

Among the early pictures due for handling by General Film is Herbert Wilcox's 'On With the Show' with Anna Ncagle and Arthur Tracy. Besides being directed by Wilcox this film will have an unusual twist in having some cast members appearing in their actual capacities. These include Frank Boor, manager of the London Hippodrome; Ralph Reader, who stages the dances; Harry Woods, composer; MacQueen Pope, press agent, and Jimmy Campbell, music publisher. Tilly Losch also makes her screen debut in this feature. Miss Neagle is scheduled for another Wilcox musical, with Tullio Car inati, tentatively titled 'Neopolitan Love Song.'

Produced by Herman Fellner, 'Public Nuisance No. 1' is to be cast paced by Frances Day and Arthur Riscoe, from vaudeville, and is expected as an early '36 entry. Another picture is the Sabatini novel, 'The Marriage of Corbal,' which has Hazel Terry, Nils Asther, Hugh Sinclair, and Noah Beery in the lineup. Karl Grune is directing. Sydney Howard and the team of Wallis and Lynn will also have their series of comedies released by G-F, and during the winter Leslie Howard will be here to produce and star in 'Bonnie Prince Charlie.' Howard's production unit, formed in association with Eugene Frenke, is known as United Players Productions.

Marking another starring debut is 'You Must Get Married' which will revolve around Robertson Hare. This cast includes Betty Ann Davies and Douglas Montgomery.

Buchanan Film

Woolf is again associated with Wilcox as chairman of the latter's new company, Herbert Wilcox Productions, Ltd. Wilcox is managing director. Another of the Wilcox pictures will have Jack Buchanan in 'The Triumph of the Scarlet Pimpernel,' and a film known as 'The Blue Lagoon' is to be made in Hawaii. This scenario is based on a H. deVere Stackpool romance.

City's 'Tropical'

Also releasing through General Film will be City Film Corp., Ltd., which was formed 18 months ago. Harry Hughes is on the board but directing five films a year has much to do with his spasmodic visits to the board room.

City has just completed 'Tropical Trouble' with Betty Ann Davies and Douglas Montgomery. Cast names which have and will play for City include Yvonne Arnaud, Zelma O'Neal, Nataline Hall, Gene Gerrard, Hugh Wakefield, June Clyde, Billy Milton, Sybil Grove, Alfred Dayton, James Carew and Finlay Currie, latter by arrangement with Gaumont-British.

G-K's 2 Specials

London, Dec. 22.

Another fil company playing around with the idea of its own studio is Garrett Klement Pictures, Ltd. Company also owns a good sized theatre, Theatre Royal, at Manchester.

On the production end this firm has coming up the Anna Sten-Henry Wilcoxon 'A Woman Alone' and Cary Grant and Mary Brian in 'The Amazing Quest.'

Walter Reisch is listed to direct a pair as will Alfred Zeisler, latter also being on 'Quest.' The Sten-Wilcoxon picture is completed.

Heat Melts S. A. B.O.

Capetown, Dec. 6.

Real summer weather has started here, thinning out any 'rush' for the cinema box offices.

No Such Thing as Public Opinion, Reich Opines

Berlin, Dec. 22.

Hans Weidemann, vice president of the Reichs Film Chamber opines that there is no such thing as public opinion.

"It's about high time that a stop should be put to the wrong theory of that much strained p-b-l-i-c opinion. Not the public decides about good or poor fil but only the rendering of a performance in a film and in art, generally speaki ," he says.

Weidemann further holds that at least 20 'outspoken good films' should be produced annually in Germany. He does not expect that the entire output of about 160 pictures the Fatherland is making yearly could be of a supreme standard, but one might expect at least 20 excellent ones from the National Socialistic standpoint.

2-Character Play in S. A.

Capetown, Dec. 4.

Benedicta and Maurice Wax, brother and sister, who are South Africans and have been playing in London, are returning here to tour the play 'Close Quarters,' with a cast of two characters.

Original players, in London, were Oscar Homolka and Flora Robson.

OSCAR HOMOLKA

The Austrian star actor who took London by storm in "Close Quarters."

Now under contract to Gaumont-British.

Communications: Erich Glass, 41, West End Lane, London, N. W. 6.

Melbourne, Dec. 10.

Argosy Prod. intends producing 'Island of Exile.'

Pic will mostly be shot outdoors and leads may come from England.

Cutrates Help B.O.'s At Budapest Theatres

Budapest, Dec. 20.

Although new plays have flopped in several theatres, there is a good average of successful novelties, and on the whole theatres are getting along better than they have for several seasons here.

Public is getting into the playgoing habit again. This may be due to a slight improvement in the general trend of business, but is principally accounted for by the cutrate policy which has been adopted by all theatres.

Cut-rate agencies deliver tickets at home now in answer to a telephone call. All the important daily papers have established ticket offices of their own, with special reductions to subscribers. Theatres themselves issue cheap subscriptions, and find this policy quite satisfactory, although no one can figure out why they don't simply reduce prices and have done with it.

ENGLISH ACTOR IN SYDNEY

Sydney, Dec. 11.

Denis Hoey has arrived here from London to play the lead in 'Uncivilized' for Charles Chauvel at National.

Highlight of pic will be introduction of a tribe of real Australian aboriginals.

Pirandello's New Play Starts Off Italian Season

Rome, Dec. 20.

Programs of Rome theatres for the first week or 10 days of the season add up to a list about as formidable as that of the Sears-Roebuck catalogue. Rome isn't such a big city that plays can have long runs, and the theatres have to offer a lot of different bills to keep their public on the jump.

Newest opus of Italy's Number One playwright and Nobel Prize winner, Luigi Pirandello, will be put on at the Argentina theatre with Italy's Number one actor, Ruggero Ruggeri in the leading role.

During the days preceding this much-heralded artistic event, the Argentina has billed the following: Anouilh's 'Once There Was a Prisoner'; Sacha Guitry's comedy 'The New Testament'; 'Marionettes' by Wolff; and 'Felice' by Henry Bernstein.

The Eliseo opened its season with a Marchionne revue 'He Who Searches, Finds' and offered as its next attraction the first Italian presentation of Ladislao Szilag's Hungarian revue operetta 'I and My Little Brother', put on by the Nora da Rios Co. Then Paul Abraham's 'Victoria and her Hussar'.

'A Woman Did It' is the name of the de Flavis comedy in which Angelo Musco's company featured at the Valle. And the next attraction, still featuring Musco, was 'At the Lido.'

Old Manzoni theatre reopened, completely redecorated and modernized; opening attraction is a comedy put on by Erzsi Paal, Armando Fineschi and Co.

Other beginning of the season bills are: The De Filippos, Titina, Edoardo, and Peppino at the Quirino; Anna Fougez and revue co. at the Quattro Fontane; and the Riccioli-Primavera co. at the Gallerla.

Capitol Preparing 'Pagliacci' and Also Awaits Ann Harding

London, Dec. 22.

At the present moment Capitol Films is steamed up over transposing 'I Pagliacci' to the screen. Under no misapprehension as to the difficulties involved, company is concentrating on preparation. Richard Tauber heads the cast and Karl Grune is to direct. Adaptation will not deviate from the original story, with arrangement of the score of the opera in charge of Rutland Boughton. Script is in the hands of John Drinkwater and Roger d'Este Burford.

Shortly after New Year' 'His Majesty's Pyjamas,' which Alfred Werker left ollywood to direct for Capitol, goes into work. Clive Brook and Helen Vinson head the cast which will play this Gene Markey story. Also important is expected to be 'The Stars Look Down' the Dr. A. J. Cronin novel. Production in this case, however, is not anticipated until early summer.

Next June Ann Harding comes over for Capitol to make her first film away from the States. No final decision on story has yet been made but indications are that it will be a society drama.

In preparing this company's new program Max Schach maintains that if Hollywood can sell to the world, and n :e its stars universal favorites, England, in its own way, can do the same. He also mentions he is aware that this means spending money to get back more money.

New Hamlet

Berlin, Dec. 22.

Play depicts Hamlet's love with a gypsy girl.

COVERING THE ANTIPODES

By Eric Gorrick

Sydney, Nov. 21.

Year 1935 has been a swiftly-moving year in every branch of the amusement field here. To obtain a complete picture of various moves created by the moguls, some deep digging is necessary.

Year started off with N. S. Wales' quota tangle and animosity toward American distribs. End of the year still sees much animosity and very little brightening of the quota tangle. Jan. 1, 1936, is the deadline for American distribs to register with the government in regards to the quota.

Government here is bitter toward foreign (American) distribs and will force the present law to the utmost. Distribs notified the government they are ready to take whatever pix are offering, but the government believes it will force distribs to live up to the Quota Act completely or revoke their licenses.

Erection Bogey

Following the conclusion of F. W. Mark's film probe, theatre erection began in moderation, but toward the year's end it threatens to spread in every State of the Commonwealth. Paramount and Metro have been blamed for the erection bogey, but each denies any actual financial backing beyond the spotting of their product. Now, as the year comes to a close, a move is afoot to have the government prohibit further theatre erection in districts claimed to be already over-seated, and legislation is asked for.

Greater Union-Hoyts hookup has had everybody on tenterhooks over the past six months. While neither side will officially confirm a reported split before 1937, unofficially each side is said to be desirous of a breakaway. Both came out of the red during the year and are anxious to break from bankers' control.

Exploitation of Greater Theatres activities gradually subsided as the year grew older until today hardly any mention is made of the unit. A short while back both Union and Hoyts were at loggerheads with the various distribs. Today Americans are doing bigger business with both as separate units from G.T. than has been the case for a long while. Today newspaper ads do not carry mention of any theatre being under G.T. management; it's either G.U.T. or Hoyts.

Months ago tuart Doyle and Charles Munro made a complete o-o of their respective circuits and issued orders to bring each theatre right up to date. Doyle is spending plenty coin in renovations. Munro, too, has been watching the situation closely.

Now reported that Doyle is seeking British capital for G.U.T. in 1936. It is common property that G.T. has slipped away as a unit. Officially it is denied; unofficially it is desired by everybody—except, maybe, the bankers.

Visit of Joe Seidleman to reconstruct the Columbia distrib unit was the swiftest piece of work witnessed in many a day. Stated that had Seidleman stayed a little longer he would have made a deal with M-G on lines similar to those worked by M-G and Par in the Melbourne nabes. But that's guesswork.

Directly the N.S.W. government determined on a quota there was a rush to secure capital for pix production. Owing to public apathy, many fell by the wayside and the dream of a pic Eldorado failed to eventuate. Out of the chaos finally emerged Cinesound and National, with Cinesound the stronger.

These are the only studios ready for work right now. Cinesound is backed and trained by showmen, National by big business and newspaper interests. Former is importing Americans, latter mostly relying on British.

Only all-Australian is Charles Chauvel.

Year saw very little actual pic production work, but 1936 is looked upon to see Australia well started. Cinesound will start Dec. 8 with 'Thoroughbred,' featuring Helen Twelvetrees, and will follow early next year with 'Big Timber' and 'Robbery Under Arms.' Americans will be imported for leads, and probably another director.

National starts any minute now with 'The Flying Doctor,' to be directed by Miles Mander, a G-B lend-out. Fox will release 'Doctor' while Cinesound has ties with British, Continental, and American interests.

Only pic produced so far under the quota was 'The Bells,' megged by Harry Southwell. Pic is at present waiting okay by the Advisory Board on entertainment values. Some retakes may be necessary before the okay is given.

F. W. Thring has not yet announced any further intention of breaking into pic work. He's waiting.

Snider-Dean

Year's biggest surprise was the resignation of Sam Snider from Hoyts and the formation of a new indie circuit with George Dean. Snider-Dean held interests in the nabes, but suddenly decided to come into the city ace spots and leased its principal theatres from the Fullers. New unit swings into active operation Jan. 1.

Stuart Doyle and the Alberts are reported as interested with S-D. Doyle mainly through the recently completed C. M. Woolf (British) tieup and the formation of Associated Distributors. Certain Woolf product has been offered S-D, with the remainder on offer to Hoyts and others.

With leasing of theatres to S-D the trade here wonders just what the Fullers will do in 1936. Insofar as Australia is concerned it looks as though they're out. In New Zealand they still maintain their strong hold and are likely to continue.

But inside has it that the Fullers are not out of Australia by a long shot. Just happened that the S-D angle suited their purposes. Sir Ben Fuller says he contemplates a vaude try and will build a theatre in Sydney. Also mentioned as going ahead with a theater in Melbourne. Sir Ben says he still hopes to be tops when 1936 finishes its run.

Vaude-Revue

Under Frank Neil management, vaude-revue staged a comeback that surprised the wise ones here. Neil, during a trip abroad, engaged sufficient acts to maintain a constant flow of new faces over circuit. That imported acts would bring b.o. biz was proved when all opposition playing local shows closed down. Since Neil began his high climb other indie interests are figuring on vaude for 1936 and Australia should offer plenty of work for American and British acts.

Ernest Rolls scored a big success in Melbourne with vaude-revue, but has not hit the same mark with legit. Rolls has been kept in Melbourne because of no suitable theatres in Sydney. But in 1936 he will break into Sydney at the Civic, by arrangement with Stuart Doyle.

F. W. Thring scored well in Melbourne with legit, but did not do well with imported revue and also went floppo in Sydney with legit. Vaude-revue is solid and should go even higher in 1936, both in Sydney and Melbourne.

Legit

Williamson-Tait lost its Criterion, Sydney, and towards the end of the year operated only one theatre here. Legit has been just so-so, with mostly revivals of old-time musicals. 'Roberta' was the most solid.

Sir Ben Fuller lost plenty on a grand opera try, but clicked with 'Merry Malones' in Melbourne, only to meet with a floppo in Sydney on the same show.

New year should see bigger activities in the legit field, and E. J. Tait is expected to return with new attractions and players from overseas. First big try will be with 'Anything Goes.'

Radio

Nothing very startlin happened in radio during the year, except the fight now in progress by the B-class managements to prevent the government from giving all the gravy to the A-class. 1935, in the main, has just been another wax year. America supplies 90% of the entertainment given to the fans on wax.

The B-class stations are the most popular with the masses, despite giving out so much advertising. A's are too highbrow. And it still costs $5 a year for a license.

Sheet sales disappeared to almost nothing with the introduction of musical pix and radio. Year 1935 was no exception. Best hits were 'Isle of Capri,' 'Old Faithful,' 'White Gardenia,' tay as Sweet as You Are,' 'Tramp,' and 'Sweet Mystery of Life.'

England's Technicians

By G. H. Elvi

(Organizing Secretary, Associ ion of Cine-Technicians)

London, Dec. 22.

How do British technicians react towards the employment of foreign technicians in the British fil industry?

The answer can be gauged by a study of the official attitude of the Association of Cine-Technicians—the only organization which exists solely to maintain the professional status and interests of workers on the technical side of the British film business.

Permission having at last been granted to Jack Hylton to play in America—although he must still not have his band playing with him—raises again the whole question of employment of foreigners in the entertainment industry.

A. C. T. feels the position is still one sided; that it is much easier for Americans to come to England than for British technicians to work in Hollywood. The point is felt particularly in that the present position permits second class ranking American cameramen to get ace jobs over here while 25 foreign cameramen in England, (the actual number working last month) makes it extremely difficult for promising British cameramen being given a chance to make good. A. C. T. will continue to strive to remedy the position. Further Americans who are keen to obtain employment in England should remember that while salaries may be good, hours and other conditions are at present generally inferior to those pertaining in Hollywood. In addition there are heavy income tax charges to be deducted from gross salary payments, thereby reducing the sum received by about 22½%.

A. C. T. does not object to the employment of foreign technicians in the British Film Industry provided:

(1) That they are ace men.

(2) That no British technician is displaced through their employment.

(3) That they are not engaged to work under less favorable conditions and salaries than those of British technicians.

(4) That the Association is consulted by the authorities, upon consideration of application for renewal of working permits.

This last clause is particularly important as after three years residence in this country a foreigner may be registered as a Resident Alien, after which he can only be removed from the country on a criminal charge and, secondly, the work of a foreign technician is not always up to the standard claimed and it might be found that the job could be done equally well, if not better, by a British technician.

It will be appreciated that if foreign technicians are allowed to enter and remain in this country indefinitely, serious unemployment problems for British technicians may arise. At no time has there been a shortage of British technicians and only a small percentage obtain regular employment throughout a year.

Keeping Records

To help control the employment of foreign technicians and check up on their work, A. C. T. keeps a record of such activity and of foreign cameramen who are naturally, the class of worker whose services are much sought by British film studios.

The Association of Cine-Technicians caters for all grades in the following departments: Camera and Stills, Sound, Art, Scenario, Editing and Cutting, Floor and Production, Laboratory, Newsreel and Television.

Like most organizations A. C. T. had a somewhat chequered career before becoming established, as now appears to be the case. Registration as a Trade Union, however, met with a certain amount of disapproval amongst members, who contended that organizations of this nature should be confined to manual workers and that incorporation in a Trade Union was not necessary for skilled technical workers. Further setbacks were experienced as a result of opposition from certain studio executives. The initial enthusiasm dwindled until merely a hundred or so rather bitter and disappointed members remained. However, these banded together, engaged in active propaganda and began to arouse new interests. New blood was obtained, lapsed members recaptured and a strong general council elected, to formulate plans of action of better existing conditions.

Studios' Reacti

How did the managements regard A. C. T.? Firstly, with amusement, then when members started enrolling, distrustfully in certain cases and employees were discouraged from joining. A year ago the situation was altered when the Association commenced to render definite service to film companies. An employment bureau was started, care was taken to make it efficient and reliable, and a service for employers needing technicans, often at a moment's notice, had been met. The opposition was gradually broken down and, today, practically every studio, and most of the small renting companies, use A. C. T.'s employment bureau regularly.

Winter educational programs are organized and technical lectures and Film shows, followed by technical discussions, are a regular activity.

All the major companies now apparently appreciate the use of A. C. T. to the industry although, of course, they do not always see eye to eye with the Association. Relations with employers are extremely happy compared with the early days of the Association and continued so, as it is generally admitted that in working to protect film technicians we are also working to protect the industry.

Legal advice is granted to members and in certain cases compensation is obtained in respect to broken contracts and other disputes. Issue of a "White List" of employers in the near future is contemplated.

Membership of the Association of Cine-Technicians is now approaching 1,000 and if present progress continues it will soon be 100% strong. On many studios we have already reached practically that position and there are now only three minor studios which have no A. C. T. membership at all. Over 20 studios have a large and increasing number of A. C. T. members. There were only five such studios a year ago.

Contact has been established with similar organizations in other countries and it is hoped that an International Federation may eventually be possible. Such a Federation should be of tremendous help in controlling the employment of foreign technicians in all countries, in addition to making possible a general interchange of ideas which should be of inestimable service both to technicians and the film industry as a whole.

DUCE SETS UP 12 LEGIT COS.

Rome, Dec. 20.

Twelve dramatic companies have been set up by the Italian government, in an effort to help out jobless actors. A program has been mapped out for these 12 companies for the entire theatrical season, through the spring of 1936.

Salaries are to be announced in accordance with expected box office receipts, so that the artists may have an assured income over a longer period. Each company is expected to rehearse for two months before going on the road.

Welfare of actors is further aimed at in the drawing up of model contracts by the Theatre and Cinema Federation; these contracts affect about 200 theatrical companies and twice that number of theatres and motion picture houses. Model contracts have been given a government once-over and ok'd.

Finally a bureau has been created which will try to regulate financial hagglings between theatres and managers, as well as supervise regional theatrical undertakin

NAZIS WANT MORE NEW HOUSES

Berlin,

In spite of the fact that there are still about eight empty and dark theatres in Berlin, including the once-famous Apollo in Friedrich Strasse, which in pre-war days was heavy opposition to the Wintergarten and played numerous American standard acts, the municipality is considering building some new theatres.

It's 'Folk-Theatres' they want, with a large capacity in the style of the Grosse Schauspielhaus, now named the 'Theatre of the Peoples'.

Idea is to erect buildings for 'Kraft durch Freude' (Strength through Joy), Nazi organization which has upset all previous methods on how to fill a theatre. Cheap admissions and low salaries to actors, coupled with a system of distributing tickets in shops, offices and factories, as originally started by the communists in Soviet-Russia. Organization has about 9,000 theatre seats in Berlin today.

Managers are not so enthusiastic about this new idea, claiming that biz is not so forte, anyway. Constant changes in repertory of numerous Berlin houses have to be made in order to bring 'em in.

Italian Amusements Must Close by 11:30 To Save Incandescents

Dec.

Places at which public spectacles are shown' will henceforth close at 11:30 p. m. by order of the Italian Ministry of the Interior. This order goes into effect immediately and forms part of the campaign to save light and heat with which the Fascists are meeting sanctions.

Means that all 'after the show' entertainment will be conspicuous by its absence, as all but the most important cafes and restaurants and those catering to the tourist trade are to close at the same time as the 'places where public spectacles are shown.' And the important and tourist-y cafes and restaurants are allowed only half an hour's grace, till midnight.

Jewish Culture League Reshuffled in Berlin

Berlin, Dec. 22.

Reshuffling in management of the Jewish Culture League by the Reichs Theater Chamber has director Georg Kareski now the appointed responsible leader of the organization.

Dr. Kurt Singer remains on the board of directors, while a group of baptised-non-Aryans have been given permission to start their own Culture League, under the direction of Dr. Heinrich Spiero.

Free Shows for Jobless

Berlin, Dec.

Reichsverband der Deutschen Filmtheatre (German Exhibitors' Union) advises that free performances for those jobless getting winter relief will be given all over the Reich.

Arrangement stipulates that not more than one show per month is to be given by each individual house, and that the arrangement terminates on March 30.

There's a Difference

By Arthur W. Jarratt

(Controller of Gaumont-Theatres)

Lon

That there are fun ifferences between the problems to be met by the cinema industry in America and Britain, is common knowledge. But it was not until I visited the United States in the early fall ined a first h nd view of the was able to satisfy myself as to just where these differences lay and to form an opinion of the situation as a whole.

The question of theatre operation, the branch of the film business in which I am most directly concerned, was not unnaturally the first to attract my attention.

Theatre operation in America is a very different matter to what it is in Britain. Conditions re so radically altered.

In America theatres charge a universal price for the house, sole exceptions being the loges. In England it is the practice to graduate admission charges. On the other hand prices are lower on the average in America. This is made possible by the lower cost of film hire. American film rentals average as much as 10% less than in Great Britain.

The differences in admission charges is particularly noticeable when one compares Broadway first-run theatres with their London West End counterparts. In New York admissions might range from 30c to 60c or 75c; whereas the corresponding London charges would be from 35c to $1.50 and $2. There are theatres in the West End with a regular top of as much as $2.60. One of the principal reasons for this difference is the fact that a New York downtown theatre can rely on a much larger patronage. In the West End of London the turnover is far smaller. Under these circumstances London cinemas cannot afford lower admissions.

In England there is no place for the morning and late night film performances that appear to attract considerable patronage in American cities where the floating population is much larger. In London the floating population is comparatively very small. It certainly could not and would not support morning matinees starting at 10 a.m., or earlier, at more than one theatre. The Londoner, moreover, is an early-to-bed bird. Habit makes him reluctant to be out much after 11 at night. Late nighters prefer cabarets to cinemas.

On Booking

The booking problem in America would appear to be an easier one than it is in England—at any rate for the circuits. A picture that is a success in a big city such as New York can generally be said to be safe in any other major metropolis west or east. And there are so many big towns.

In Britain the large towns, outside of London, can be pretty nearly counted on the fingers of one hand—Glasgow, Birmingham, Liverpool, Manchester and Sheffield. Of these only the first two can boast a population of over 1,000,000. What appeals only to the city in Britain, therefore, is a financial flop. On the other hand neither can a profit be expected from the smaller places without the cities. In short a successful picture in Britain must be one that appeals both to urban and country districts.

The American film booker formerly was at a disadvantage in only having home product from which to make his selection, whereas over here American, British and Continental films have always been available.

The entry of British films into the United States market alters this, and the American booker has now a wider choice. This is an excellent thing for the American industry. A restricted field of choice can only mean restricted patronage. The more good films there are the better for the exhibitor.

And in regard to British films in America in particular I must say this. Nowhere did I find among press, public or exhibitor any prejudice whatsoever against films on account of their origin. Even producer-owned circuits are sympathetic and helpful. Good entertainment is all that is asked. I am satisfied that good pictures, whoever makes them, can now obtai a proper distribution in America.

In regard to subjects the tastes of both people are not dissimilar. The American public possibly prefers films with a slightly stronger flavor, verging on the melodramatic, to the English filmgoer. The light, frothy film, which does have some place in popular affection in England, has none in the U. S.

Subjects of merely local humor or interest fall in both places.

roduction methods both in California and London are altering and must alter to meet the demands, not of one country alone but of both together.

Public's Loyalty

One point that struck me regarding public reaction to pictures in America as compared with England was the lack of loyalty to film stars. A favorite who makes two poor pictures in America is finished. In England they still retail public affection after a number of poor ones.

In regard to advertising and publicity the difference in conditions is enormous and it is hard to say which country has the advantage. In America the quick release of a film throughout the entire length and breadth of the land enables full value to be obtained from the publicity and advertising while it is 'hot.' In England the law demands that pictures must be seen before they can be booked and a long interval must inevitably elapse between premiere London presentation and release. But in England advertising or publicity in London newspapers reaches the whole country since London dailies have a national circulation. Even New York papers do not mean much in towns as close as Philadelphia, two hours off. Advertising in America must be done separately in each centre and the cost is correspondingly greater, especially as there seem to be almost as many newspapers as citizens.

On the other hand bad criticisms in the journals of one city do not affect a picture outside that centre, and in another the film may receive very different treatment. In England a bad review in a London paper reaches all over the British Isles—and a good one, too, of course.

Publicity

Publicity is easier to come by in America where the country is more film conscious and where, I should hazard, a greater percentage of the population is generally film-minded. The fact that America has been until recently the sole home of production must have a good deal to do with this. The man in the street naturally feels closer to the industry. In England today increased home production has produced a more film-conscious public, and the process has been rapid.

The American critics and writers have, I should say, a more studied outlook on the business than some of their English colleagues. They are more closely in touch with public feeling, appreciate their responsibilities to a greater extent and have a deeper insight. They are eager to help the industry. In summation I would say that in matters of publicity and advertising America has a slight advantage. In England we are still struggling to educate the country to the tremendous importance of the screen and its power for good or evil according to how it is used.

Over- ilding

One word about over-building. America has suffered from this evil and has or is rectifying it. The crash of 1929 brought about the reform. In England over-building is rampant. The economic crisis did not have the same salutary effect. The British industry has not profited by America's lesson.

I only hope that reason reasserts itself before this wildly uneconomic competition brings the work of many of the weaker members of the trade in ruin about their heads.

In conclusion I have a tribute to pay. Before I went to the United States I had often heard of the great hospitality of the Americans, but, since my return I have realized how utterly inadequate any description of it must be. Were my profession that of author I might be able to do justice to such a theme. As it is anything I could say would be a gross understatement of my appreciation.

BRITISH FILMS ARRIVE

London, Dec. 22.

New studio sites are being announced with monotonous regularity; more and more money is coming into the industry from the City; production schedules for the coming year are higher than they have ever been before. The British film industry, particularly in production, is entering into a period which is an easy high in its brief history.

Recent interesting events in the studio game are:

Gaumont-British has its changes in America;

Alexander Korda has become a member of United Artists;

Every British company of any standin, at all has American distribution arranged for its product before it is made—even if, as in some cases, such distribution is nothing to brag about.

Those are the developments of the past. Those of the future include:

Full opening of the Korda stages at Denham, Bucks, about an hour out of London;

Building of an eight-stage plant at Iver, also in Bucks, by the National Films group, which is backed by a wealthy Yorkshire business group;

Rebuilding of the Littleton plant, owned by Norman Louden, and said to have $1,000,000 of City money behind it;

Opening up here of Metro In production;

Conversion of the old Whitehall studios recently acquired by Julius Hagen for rebuilding and extending his current Twickenham program;

Installation of Western Electric at British International, with the consequent hope of getting more American production bookings there;

Full establishment, in the production field, of the Max Schach Capitol Films group, acting as C. M. Woolf's chief production subsidiary.

Finances

Local film trade, in 1935, spurted financially in a way it had never done before.

Surest index to this is its quotations on the London Stock Exchange.

Always realizing that many of the most important producers—Woolf, Korda, and so on—are privately backed and have no public money, thereby having no stock on the market, those companies with public issues have, in the main, gone up nearly 50% on the year's turnover.

An important point to remember in this connection is that British film stock has now been accepted for buying purposes by the general public.

As recently as 12 months ago, the Exchange prices of such stock was mainly nominal, as the dealings in them were specialized and restricted to a small circle of people. Now, though, film stock attracts as much attention as any other branch of the general industrial market.

At the time of writing, Associated British Pictures (controlling company of British International and Associated British, its theatre circuit) are being quoted at slightly over $2. Their face value is about $1.20. They could have been bought for that around last Christmas.

Upward trend in Associated British was expected by all the film wise boys, many of whom hold its stock extensively. General opinion has always been that it provides one of the two best film stock buys, being covered with real estate, time and time again.

Gaumon.. ritish $2.50 ordinaries are just now quoted at a premium of about 12c. over face value. They have juggled higher than that figure, but at the beginning of the year were substantially below.

Many smaller film issues show considerable rises, there having lately been a stag movement in Union Cinema scrip which has attracted more general public buying than any film stock.

The City

That the City is at the moment looking with favor on film production is obvious.

There has never been more spare money in England than there is now, due to the low level of the Bank Rate—it has been around 2½% all the year—and the inability of investors to see a much higher return for their money than that combined with safety.

Big City firms, as a result, are increasingly willing to tackle film finance, risking a smack in the bank book in return for the knowledge that they can clean up, if they get away with it.

First into the field was the Prudential Assurance Co., perhaps the largest assurance corporation in the world. In return for Korda taking over the production end of Dufaycolor, in which Prudential was interested, it backed London Films, and still has a large interest in the finances of the company.

Prudential's entry into film finance set the rest of the City running to the market, with the exception of the Big Five banks, who will never gamble on private enterprise when the security doesn't cover the margin extended.

Julius Hagen, leading independent in the field, followed Korda into the City, and emerged with backing reliably estimated as being $3,750,000.

Source of his backing has been kept a close secret, but Insiders allege Hagen connected with his bankroll via a firm of underwriters named Bowater, who, in turn, are backed by the Legal and General Insurance Co., one of the oldest in the business.

Not all the insurances firms here are willing to go into film financing. British insurance companies on the whole are more conservative than the banks, and at least as safe. One or two of the policy peddlers have said no to propositions, including, it is understood the powerful Phoenix co. Against this the Pearl, another of the big firms, is understood to be interested, and would back if coverage justified.

Woolf's Companies

Other finance movements during the year were mainly connected with the formation of General Film Distributors, C. M. Woolf's new concern after his resignation from Gaumont-British.

Woolf is acknowledged here to be the No. 1 film man, and his company's line-up already looks inspiring.

His backers have been closely guarded, and he has a mixture of insurance and general backing behind him.

Woolf's firm is already controlling a number of subsidiaries, including the important Capitol Films venture.

Control is distributional, and not financial, and Schach's unit, with the strongest indie line-up of product in Europe, suggests strong possibilities in the world market. Formed four months ago, he has already completed two pictures, a Jack Buchanan film at Elstree and a bi-lingual at Paris.

Current work includes 'The Marriage of Corbal' from the Sabatini story, in hand at Elstree.

It is quite obvious that Schach intends to have a smack at the Korda formula, producing at the most a dozen a year, but going out for important stuff all the time. He recently bought the film rights of 'The Stars Looked Down', regarded here as the ace British film story buy of the year. Book has been a best-seller in this country, is shortly to be serialized in America and Schach paid its author $25,000 cash and a slice of the American renting revenue for the rights.

For $90,000 Schach bought 'I Pagliacci', the Leoncavello opera, and intends filming it with Richard Tauber in February.

Gaumont-British

Gaumont-British's output for 1936 will probably rank up to 30 pictures, with a tendency, following the booking success of films like 'The Tunnel', to concentrate on star name pictures, and let programmers slide.

One of the lar uestion marks that surrounds in the field this year is the matter of studios. Gaumont currently owns the Shepherds Bush lot in London and the old Gainsborough studios built by Famous Players In 1913, up in the northern suburbs. While both studios have proved adequate for the demands made on them, it is quite obvious G.-B. can't systematically produce 30 to 35 a year in them without having to work uncomfortably close to the shooting schedule.

For this reason its purchase some months ago of a large building site just off the Great West Road, one of the big motor arteries out of town, is interesting. Lot is now being used for exteriors, but it is generally reckoned that sooner or later G.-B. will build there. Decision to do so was nearly reached a few months back, but a last minute change of plans put the idea back.

ritish International

British International, largest studio owners in Europe, will probably be content this year with 25 to 30 pictures, of which its biggest will be 'Glamorous Night,' from the Novello melodrama recently closed at the Drury Lane theatre.

Many rumors have recently surrounded the B. I. P. production policy, some arguing that John Maxwell, chairman, will entirely switch his studio plans and go in for fewer pictures, with better quality. It is only charitable to say that often, in the past, B. I. P. has been content with getting its money back on small stuff rather than gamble on expensive pictures.

Resignations of important production men at the B. studios have been rumored for months, with what truth only Maxwell knows. And he never talks until afterwards.

A unit which can't be left out of the new British studio reckoning is British National, backed by the Rank textile interests. With a studio site listed at Iver—where Rank's group has large real estate interests—and ith the gradual cementing of a regular production team, the unit is likely to be under its own steam by the middle of the year.

Istree-Hollywood

Final reckoning to be given the industry is on the actual production department, where British, with all its earnestness and determination to build up the largest industry in the world, still lags badly behind Hollywood in many respects.

British pictures can never compete with Hollywood until they:

Pay real money to scenario writers.

Get technicians who are technicians.

Evolve a list of directors of their own who can direct 1936 features, and not remember how they used to shoot close-ups in 1911.

Stop imitating Hollywood.

There are still not enough good directors to go round. The number of English directors who could get an assignment with a good American studio could be counted on one hand—easily.

Yank Dubbed Pix In 12 of 86 Paris Cinemas; New Low

Paris, Dec. 22.

Judging by current shows, American films here are touching a new low in distribution. Out of 86 picture theatres in Paris showing French language films, only 12 have dubbed Hollywood product on the bill at present, and most of these split dual programs with local mades.

This, however, shouldn't be taken too seriously, because these statistics come at a time when neither of the big circuits, Pathe and Gaumont, is programming American films. In another week maybe both the circuits will have Yank product in their houses, and that will send the figures jumping.

In the English language first-run houses, on the other hand, popularity of American films remains, and 27 theatres currently are billing Hollywood product. English mades, which from time to time in the past have crashed into these showcases at the expense of the Yanks, are completely absent at present. British pictures haven't done so well in France lately, and the feeling here is that quality of London product is low right now.

Click Pi

Among the American success pix now running, outstanding is 'David Copperfield' (Metro) at the Edouard VII, which was started without the usual gala publicity performance (because the local Metro exece wouldn't have it) but nevertheless has taken on in a big way.

Nearing the end of a good first run is 'She Married Her Boss', (Col) for more than a month at the Umansky-owned Avenue. This exhib is getting ready to open a new Champs Elysees house near the Rond-Point, called Le Paris, with 'Top Hat' (Radio).

'Big Broadcast' (Par) is proving popular at the tiny Studio 28 in Montmartre. '39 Steps' (G-B) is closing a good run at the Marbeuf, which is readying for the opening of 'Midsummer Night's Dream' (WB) next week, after a tremendous bally. 'Alice Adams' (Radio) has just opened at the Miracles-Lord Byron, and seems to be starting well.

LA FEMME EN FLEUR

('Flowering Woman')

Paris, Dec. 17.

Three-act comedy by Denys Amiel. Presented by Benoit-Leon Deutsch and Jacques Albert at Saint-Georges, Paris.

Valentine Salvat	Valentine Tessier
Huguette Salvat	Josanne Cerdan
Odile de Marsot	Lucienne Givry
Yvonne Tardif	Jeanne Reinhart
Pierre Vignal	Daniel Lecourtois
M. Salvat	Maurice Benard
Bernard Lambert	Jacques Mancier
Robert Nicolai	Gilbert Gil

First play of the season in Paris which is a real Broadway possibility. A film, too, maybe.

It's the love story of an older woman who is still young—who really hasn't had any youth before. A young man comes courting her daughter, and gets her.

Atmosphere of youth, plus just enough contrast with the older generation, is treated in a way directly adaptable to America. This is one of the rare French plays about love which is not so Gallic in its psychology as to prevent shifting the scene across the Atlantic. Every character would fit New York.

Amiel's treatment of his little story is delicate, impassioned, wise and dramatic. He opens by showing Huguette, the daughter, surrounded by her kid friends, just a group of crazy youngsters having fun. Huguette's young man, Pierre, is a shade more solid than the others. The mother enters, and the attraction of her maturity to his seriousness is immediately obvious.

Then Huguette and Pierre break off their engagement, and this reveals how fully Valentine counted on having the young man for a son-in-law. Situation at this point gives Amiel the chance to write two marvelous scenes: one between the two kids breaking off, in which they almost tell each other what has happened, and another between mother and daughter, a beautiful mixture of jealousy, love and bewilderment.

Remains the realization by Pierre and Valentine of their love, which comes about in the third act. Final scene of the play is the one between them which ends in the clinch, with the final curtain smack on the highest note of the show. Dialog is no less than grand.

There are three big parts: the mother, played here superbly by Valentine Tessler, whom Americans may remember as Emma in the film 'Madame Bovary.' This is her first crack at an older woman's part—a wise one, because it she had stuck to the young leads any longer she would have been sunk, and now she is out again right on top. Huguette is a good part, too, requiring real acting. Jeanine Crispin, who has it, is one of the young hopes of the French stage and films—among the three or four most logical local candidates for Hollywood at the moment. She is a beautiful little actress, with looks, figure and personality to add to stage ability. There's just one thing against her—her face, which is a little broad and seems, in films, to lack the extreme mobility which is needed. Slight tendency to woodenness. In this show she's great, both in character acting and in personal attractiveness.

Juvenile here is Daniel Lecourtois, one of the best of the youngsters in town, acting with perfection of restraint finally bursting into passion.

Cast is so good that where Seize, best of local critics, suggests that the success of the show may be due to acting alone. He's wrong: there's a real play here. Stern.

THOMAS PAINE

Berlin, Dec. 16.

Tragedy in nine scenes by Hanns Johst, produced at the State Playhouse, Berlin, under direction of Jurgen Fehling.

Thomas Paine	Lothar Muthel
George Washin	Eugen Klopfer
General Greene	Albert Florath
Christopher Stone	Walter Werner
Adams, Banker	Arthur Wascher
Louis XVI	Gustaf Grundgens
Chabot	Bernhard Minetti

That a play on Thomas Paine, American revolutionary and author of 'The Rights of Man' and 'The Age of Reason,' should have been chosen for the festive annual gathering of the Realm's Cultural Chamber, headed by Dr. Goebbels, at the same time giving it the most important opening of the season (that of the newly equipped and brushed-up State Playhouse of Minister Goering), may sound like an anomaly to American ears. But it isn't—anyhow, not from the German and its playwright's angle.

Though Johst wrote this drama in '27, the historical facts, figures and conclusions have been freely remolded to fit the ideology of the current Nazi creed.

American 'freedom' and French 'liberte' are examined in the light of German 'freiheit.' Thomas Paine is political public speaker number one. He is the coiner of slogans, the drummer whose beat inspires rebellion—analogies without number, but so loosely jointed by the playwright that Jurgen Fehling, director, had to re-enforce heavily.

Success of the play is mainly due to this stager's exceptional work.

In his inflammatory articles for the independence of the States, Thomas Paine fights under the pen name of Commonsense; he gives the army its battle cry and shows the bankers how to effect financial freedom from England. Like Franklin before him, he is sent to France to negotiate a loan with the other young republic. Within a short time these negotiations are successfully terminated. He is one of the 13 eminent foreign citizens on whom the French committee confers honorary membership of the revolutionary convention.

Paine's American conception of true liberty makes him defend the condemned king. But France is incapable of understanding this interpretation.

Paine is charged with being a royalist. He is imprisoned and forgotten. His American friends are informed that he is 'missing.' After 17 years of imprisonment an amnesty frees him. He returns to the States. But he is forgotten there, too.

Wasington and Greene are dead. No one remembers even Paine's name. Life is useless; he drowns himself in the Delaware.

But the song of freedom that he had written in Valley Forge for the soldiers had become America's national anthem.

Lothar Muthel as Paine is an impassioned defender of humanity's ideals, but he does his better work in the prison monolog. True to the play's demand, the Washington of Eugen Klopfer is much more the rough rebel than the future president. Minetti is a fanatic Chabot and as Louis XVI the mask of Gustaf Grundgens is gruesome enough to have come straight from Madame Tusseaud's waxworks.

Play has an all-male cast.

THE WAILING WALL

Moscow, Dec. 15.

Jewish Theater, Moscow, production, three acts, by V. Misandrontsev.

'The Wailing Wall' has an especially interesting idea back of it. This is true, by the way, of most of the new Soviet plays this season. In 'Umka, the White Bear,' we went to Kamchatka, and in 'No Surrender,' to the Arctic. Afinogenov in 'Far Away' takes us to the Soviet Far East, and that's where Dovzhenko found his material for the film 'Aerograd.'

Mizandrontsev leads us to Palestine. His theme is appropriate for the Jewish theatre, deals with Zionism, British imperialism and Arab chauvinism on the one hand, and the solidarity of the working Jews and Arabs on the other.

There is warfare between Jewish colonists and the neighboring Arab village over water wells. Aaron Bernz has been murdered by Arabs. His brother Leo, a liberal writer and refugee from fascist Germany, becomes embittered. Danton, a French Jew with fascist inclinations, stirs up the Jews against the Arabs.

Smelyanski, another Jewish exile from Germany, who is in Palestine with his daughter Leah, says that he will buy the water wells from the Arabs and get them to his toiling brethren. Such a gift means that the poor Arabs will be entirely deprived of water. At first reluctant to believe that they have been betrayed by their leader, the poor Arabs refuse to rebel. Finally, under the influence of Manulls, a Jewish worker, and Zaal, an Arab laborer, they understand their true role and kill the rich Arab, Bekhr Effendi.

'The Wailing Wall' is the ideological center of the struggle between the Jews and the Arabs. It is a ruin sacred to both. In the last act, in an inter-racial feud, Zaal is killed at the wailing wall. He has just made an appeal for the union of Arabs and Jews against their common enemy.

Had Mizandrontsev created living characters it would have been a great play. Theme is certainly great. Unfortunately, the people are mere puppets, illustrating a political thesis.

The performance of N. Gertner as Zaal is outstanding. He has one of the best voices in Moscow.

DUET BY ACCIDENT

London, Dec. 10.

New play by Beatrix Thompson, produced at the 'Q' theatre, Dec. 9, '35.

The Man	Arthur Wontner
The Woman	Beatrix Thompson

Beatrix Thompson was one of the two players who appeared in her own play, 'Duet by Accident,' at 'Q' theatre, Dec. 9. Interest always centers about an attempt to carry on a full evening's stage entertainment with a two people cast. Few as these efforts are, the successful ones are still fewer.

Trouble is there is bound to be too much repetition. One tires of watchman, Walter Friedland had previously tried to run the European interests of U from here, but filed because the French wouldn't let him play with all the German refugees whom he wanted in his organization.

An important question of policy to Americans operating here is that of adding local mades to the list of pictures to be distributed. Reps are divided on the subject. Metro does not touch them, and Metro has long been among the most successful distributors of American films here, maybe because it has better international product, and maybe because it is better organized. Anyway, just sells American pictures.

Warners, which also has a good record for profits in France, has got itself mixed up in a few French shorts, but no more. In the case of Radio and Columbia, the problem is solved by the French distribs who handle the product. Osso does Radio-Cinema. They find it a distinct advantage.

Fox got badly burned on French production, and has dropped it. The burning, however, was due definitely to mistakes. Fox started an am itious and expensive Paris producing program, using its own money. Nobody does this any more. Fox also had Fred Bacos making French pictures for it, and making money, but these films got confused in the Fox mind with the costly loss pictures, and when Harley took charge here it was decided that no more local mades would be handled. Bacos, then, started making films for Paramount.

Paramount this year is distributing a long string of local mades, produced by independents in its own studio. Company itself is not entirely sure whether it should be pleased with the policy or not. Frenchmen in the distributing end are definitely for it. They claim it helps them to sell American pictures, and it is certain that it gives them an important place in the French industry, which is valuable for political reasons. Paramount this year was actually the biggest producer of French pictures—producer in a left-handed way, but still enough so to figure as such in the minds of the trade.

United Artists

United Artists locally agrees with the Paramount Frenchmen on the importance of locals, and it is gathering a stock of local mades for release. This firm has been interested in Frenchers sporadically for some time. It put out a French version made in Germany, and a local made produced by Leon Garganoff, and then started looking around for more. Lacy Kastner, continental chief, wants ten Frenchers for next season's release, and has a number of them in sight. It's a definite policy. Only UA risks absolutely nothing this way. It doesn't even give a guaranty to the Frenchers, just a percentage.

The way of the ordinary Yank film is not going to get any easier as French production improves. And it is improving.

The independents who have taken over the entire output since Pathe and Gaumont stepped out have learned something about the business, and are beginning to make pictures. In the early part of the year product such as 'Itto', 'Maria Chapdelaine', 'Crime and Punishment', and 'Monsieur Sans Gene', to mention only a few, kept up the standard, and currently the quality is considerably higher, on the average.

'Equipage', which in mid-November hit its second month of first run at the Marignan, is topnotch; 'Bandera' is a high grade picture, 'Deuxieme Bureau' ('Secret Service') is a popular moneymaker, and there are lots of others.

Locals

The French don't need any special quotas to protect them. All they have to do is to make good films, and they have an enormous natural advantage over the Americans.

It looks as if the trade would remain for some time in the hands of these indies, who currently are doing so well. Gaumont Franco-Film Aubert, one of the former Big Two, is in the hands of administrators acting for the government, and letting it go right on losing money. No chance of it getting into production. It has enough trouble, what with the bosses' lack of picture showmanship, in running the chain of theatres with which it is encumbered.

Pathe may come back sooner. Robert Dirler, after fighting a stockholders' suit all year to oust the Natan brothers, finally succeeded. But he has not yet managed to get in actual control of the concern, although he has in his hands enough of the stock to run it. The judicial administrator whom he himself had appointed is standing in his way, and according to chatter, the higher-ups in political circles want to stop the company from getting back into private hands so as to use it with Gaumont as a nucleus for a nationalized cinema industry. A last-minute bankruptcy of P-N's theatre chain may hasten this.

LE COEUR

('The Heart')

Paris, Dec. 17.

Five act play by Henry Bernstein, produced by the author at the Gymnase, Paris.

Vincent	Victor Francen
Rose	Helene Perdriere
Jean-Claude	Claude Dauphin
Patrick	Jean-Pierre Aumont
Sister	Suzette Mais
Friend	Lucy Leger

Annual Bernstein opening is one of the big events of the Paris season—this year no less than any other, and perhaps more than most.

'Heart' is a bit of a puzzler—a show which sweeps everything before it up to a certain point, which tears a burst of smashing applause from the audience right in the middle, and which then peters out because the author, having solved his main plot, turns his attention to a secondary character. Enthusiasm at the end is strangely less than at the act curtains.

It's a study of love in a French bourgeois family. Set in Barritz. Patrick (Jean-Pierre Aumont) is in love with Rose (Helene Perdriere), the very young wife of his best friend, Jean-Claude. They decide they must tell Jean-Claude, and she must get a divorce.

But Jean-Claude turns out to be more of a man than anyone suspected and he keeps his woman, sending Patrick off ignominiously.

Strange character of the play is Vincent (Victor Francen), the father of Jean-Claude, who has lost a beloved wife and who still mourns her, yet is thinking of remaking his life in a new marriage. He is the confidante of Rose, and his old-fashioned, highly romantic idea of love is really responsible for the little affair between her and Patrick for both of them feel they want love such as the old man knows, and not the dry, cold, modern, harassed sort of Jean-Claude. Let-down in the last act comes because author here devotes himself exclusively to the old man.

One of the themes is the contrast between the love ideas of the father and of his children—and the children, modern and intense, win over the sloppy sentimentality of the previous generation.

Much of the dialog is devoted to discussion of the attitude towards love of the various characters. Here, perhaps, is the key to the difficulty of producing Bernstein in America: he is such a good playwright, and so thoroughly theatre, that it is not apparent in France that his shows are talky. But when they are translated this fact comes out. He works up to beautiful climaxes and has magnificent dramatic scenes, and he creates real living characters, but at bottom his plays are discussions of themes, and the discussion is weakened by transplantation. It requires Bernstein dialog to hold it up, and the adaptor can't always supply it.

Bernstein's English is good—maybe he ought to do his own adapting. In collaboration with an American who could polish the language but whom Bernstein could dominate as a playwright.

In 'Heart' the top scene is one between father and son in which the boy accuses the father of being his enemy, of neglecting him and of winning his wife for another, and in which the father finally sees that the son is really a man capable of great love. Claude Dauphin as the boy produces a performance difficult to equal, not only here but throughout the play. Cast, as a whole, is tops, and staging, (a reminder of the old Belasco manner) is 100% theatre. Stern.

THE LIARS

Goldoni	Adolf Nemeth

Biggest of several successes scored so far this season by the Vienna Burgtheatre is, by general acclaim, Goldoni's 'The Liars.'

During the '80's of the last century this play was performed in Vienna, but not since.

Some months ago Director Roebbling of the Burgtheatre visited Budapest to study the adaptation of the play then being produced at the Hungarian National Theatre. At once he decided that, in the new dress which had been given it, 'The Liars' was just what he was looking for to give steam to his winter program in Vienna.

Full of humor and charm, it has been greeted by the Burgtheatre patrons as a welcome relief from the rather heavy, serious and philosophical plays which this institution is famed for. It is both a box-o ce and an artistic success.

Not being accustomed to heavy sales on the night of a play, the box-office attendant could think of nothing more appropriate on its second night than to faint; and this he did. Literally.

For modern tastes Goldoni's play is considered a bit dusty and out of date. Puenkoesti succeeds, however, in removing all of the dust and polising it up with a genial finesse which gives it almost the appearance of having been made for us go-getter twentieth-century birds.

Performances suffer somewhat from lack of a revolving stage. Herman Thimig is especially good, but would have been much better if he had not insisted on having alterations which make it unnecessary for him to be laughed at,' as he described it. He thought it preferable, for instance, to be permitted to jump into a canal and die in a way which would rouse his audience to sympathize with him. Fodor.

LIMPID STREAM

Moscow, Dec.

Bright in color—its music rhythmically dashing and with a sense of humor, Dimitri D. Shostakovich's new ballet 'Limpid Stream' had its premiere at Moscow's Bolshoi theater. In the 18 years since the Bolshevik Revolution Soviet music masters have been trying to turn out a successful Red ballet. This is not it. Cheerful and entertaining, but not especially superior.

This is Shostakovich's third ballet. 'Golden Age', produced by Volnonen, Leningrad balletmaster, in 1930 (it showed the adventures of a Soviet sports team in a decaying capitalist state) was unsuccessful. 'Bolt', which reveals the Soviet industrial life, was another Shostakovich flop.

'Limpid Stream' is a montage of characteristic and classical ballet numbers loosely ranged around the theme of a collective farm harvest in the Kuban. A crowd of ballet dancers from the city arrive at the farm for the festival. Here is occasion for innumerable classic turns and trick dancing.

Reminiscent of Stravinsky, especially in the first act, the score of this ballet is not up to Shostakovich standard. General level of the music is trite.

The mass dances of the first act, especially the Caucasian cavalry charge, and the meeting of the peasants that marks the end of the harvest and the arrival of the ballet performers, are especially brilliant. V. Dmitriev's decorations are colorful. Second act shows the rehearsal for the festival performance. Agronomist and the sports instructor express their love in typical classical adagio. And between the dances the characters act in primitive naturalistic pantomime.

In the third act, against a painted background of the Kuban, is the festival—the guest artists perform, the collective farmers perform. Everybody has a lively time.

F. Lopukhov and Mordvinov are the producers.

Shostakovich is known in America for his First Symphony, a regular program piece of the New York Philharmonic and other American symphony orchestras. His opera, 'Lady Macbeth' had a showing at the Metropolitan last year. He is 29, a product of the Revolution, and the Bolsheviks' most talented young composers. Bennett.

Notre Dame du Cinema

Paris, Dec. 17.

Play in three acts nine scenes) by Simon Cantillon. Stars Mlarka Laparcerie. Presented by Cora. Laparcerie at the Renaissance-Cora, Paris.

Madame Christiane	Suzanne Stanley
Mistress Lewis	Paulette Noizeux
Mlle Renee	Germaine Vallet
Lewis	Jan Toulout
Jacqus	Francois Rozet
Francoise	Mlarka Laparcerie
Ylnaigrette	Sylvette Fillaclier
Landlady	Maryse Rey
Jenny	Nadine Picard
Moise Bronstein	Fernand Baer
Samuel	Leonce Corne
Chapouillot	Noel Roquevert
Makoulas	Henri Cremieux
Prince Staroff	Robert Dartois
Peterson	Jean-Pierre Alain
Singer	Emy-Lieser

Originally called 'Our Lady of Dreams' (title changed after second day of run) this play is supposed to show the terrible tragedy of the films, which takes a poor, innocent cloak model to make of her an empty goddess, of dreams for the entire world, thereby breaking her life and love and incidentally making her a fortune.

Some of the characters are supposed to represent film magnates, and a few of the local boys are guessing which is a takeoff of whom, but it seems likely that the author thinks Adolph Goldwyn is the former president of Metro and Joseph M. Zukor once worked for Warners.

Simon Cantillon was the author of 'Maya,' a hit of some nine years ago. A few of the scenes of this one recall the beauty of the older piece, but only a few. It misses because of extreme length and overintellectuality, which spoil what insight the play contains.

Main revelation of show is debut of Mlarka Laparcerie, who never played before, but goes through a terrifically long and exhausting part with ease. She's the daughter of the producer, who herself was once a name actress, and she ought to go far. Stern.

Rates and membership of the National Independent Broadcasters, cooperative non-profit association out to secure national biz for low-watt stations, were completed last Friday (27). About 100 members are on the roster, divided into six geographical groupings, which will be sold alone or in combination to the national advertiser. Some station additions to be made later, and there is also a possibility that a few of the current members may be weeded out or replaced by other stations. WMCA, New York, for instance, is included on the list, although it's not certain yet whether the station will join or not.

Membership rates given as follows:

Northeastern Group: WRDO, Augusta; WABI, Bangor; WAGM, Presque Isle; WSBY, Rutland; WQDM, St. Albans; WMEX, Boston; WSAR, Fall River; WELI, New Haven; WATR, Waterbury; WABY, Albany; WMBO, Auburn; WMCA, New York City (not certain); WHDL, Olean; WMFF, Plattsburg; WKBO, Harrisburg; WHAT and WTEL, Philadelphia; WRAW, Reading; WBAX, Wilkes-Barre; WRAK, Williamsport; WCBM, Baltimore; WOL, Washington, D. C. One hour one time on this group per day listed at $939.60; night-time is $1,377.10.

Southeastern Group: WOPI, Bristol; WEHC, Charlottesville (Va.); WBTM, Danville; WLVA, Lynchburg; WGH, Newport News; WPHR, Petersburg; WJBR, Gastonia; WEED, Rocky Mount; WMFD, Wilmington (N. C.); WAIM, Anderson; WATL, Atlanta; WJBF, Daytona Beach. One daytime hour here goes for $391.11; nighttime, $374.85, with fewer stations.

Northcentral Group: WHBC, Canton; WCOL, Columbus; WJBK and WMBC, Detroit; WJMS, Ironwood; WIBM, Jackson; WTRC, Elkhart; WWAE, Hammond; WLBC, Muncie; WBOW, Terre Haute; WCAZ, Carthage; WCRW, Chicago; WEBQ, Harrisburg (Ill.); WCLS, Joliet; WJBC, La Salle; WCBS, Springfield; WHBY, Green Bay; WCLO, Janesville; WRJN, Racine; KGDE, Fergus Falls; KFNF, Shenandoah; KDLR, Devil's Lake; KFJM, Grand Forks; KLPM, Minot; KGFW, Kearney; KGKY, Scottsbluff. AGENCIES' SHOWMANSHIP IN '35

The outstanding examples of showmanship offered during 1935 among network commercial radio programs were largely developments of the amateur idea. No agency during the past year created a method of program or commercial presentation which could be described as blazing a new trail in radio entertainment.

While the year did show that show-mindedness within agency ranks was decidedly on the upbeat, the mortality among big money shows was far greater than in 1934. Particularly noticeable as regards the last year's experiments was that they entailed, with minor exceptions, spending anywhere from $6,500 to $10,000 for talent and script. When they flopped, as practically all of them did, the psychological reaction made itself acutely felt. Agency impresarios, after divesting themselves of an 'I told you so,' became more determined in their penchant to ride along with the types of programs and mike names of current popularity. Failure of radio to produce, during 1935, a new sock entertainment name of national importance, outside of Major Bowes, may in a large measure be attributed to this attitude which is now openly avowed among the major agencies, i. e., sticking to proven values and shying away from the unknown.

Experimentation had more to do with program material and form than with performers. Two notable cases were Procter & Gamble's Gibson Family' (Blackman agency) and Chase & Sanborn Coffee's grand opera tabloids in English (J. Walter Thompson). With Ivory Soap it was the first instance of radio exploiting an original musical comedy script on sustained or serial scale, while C&S's show represented an innovation in only one respect—the fact that it had a network commercial behind it. Impression that each of these two programs made was sufficient to induce others to take up the torch in behalf of original musical comedies, or opera tabloids, for a long while.

A sidelight of 'The Gibson Family' reaction on the trade was the response CBS got when it auditioned a Richard Rogers-Lorenz Hart original musical about three months ago. Stunt was made part of a luncheon the network tossed. Invited were 200 agency men, with the web failing to find a single representative enough interested to submit this program to a client.

One show which drew much interest and comment from agency men wasn't even a newcomer for '35. It was a series that started during October of '34 and after a wobbly start, and months of sorry plodding, acquired one of the highest paid producers in the business. By the end of last summer this show had started to zoom in popularity, and a few months later it was among the Crosley Reports' list of the top ten. Program is Campbell Soup's 'Hollywood Hotel' and the producer (regarded in the trade as doing one of the most meritorious jobs of its kind) is William Bacher. He is still handling the show.

Following is a compilation of VARIETY's opinion on agency showmanship merits and demerits for 1935:

F. Wallace Armstrong. Newcomer to radio with only two shows on its list but each, 'Hollywood Hotel' and Burns and Allen (Campbell Tomato Juice) rated up among the 10 best. Have given much leeway to Burns and Allen with result this comedy team is considered offerin the best entertainment of their air career.

Aubrey, oore & Wallace. Pilots of the perennial dramatic frames, 'First Nighter' and 'Grand Hotel' for Campana products, and doing a consistently skillful and showmanly job. Has developed the stock company idea for radio, with Don Ameche and Ann Seymour as the leads, in highly commendable fashion.

N. W. Ayer & Son. In number of accounts on the air this agency staged a big comeback for 1935. Its outstanding achievement along showmanship lines has been the handling of Ford's Sunday night concerts. Also has done a good job with Kellogg's 'Prom' (Red Nichols, Ruth Etting,' etc.) but floundered with Eno Salts' 'Penthouse Party' (Mark Hellinger) and Half and Half Tobacco's 'Red Trails.' Exceptional talent for handling kid shows was attested by the results it got with the 'Robinson Crusoe' serial. Made a start in 'Atlanta Family,' but found that it takes a seasoned comedian to handle comedy on full responsibility with result that tenor ceased to double as m. c., and Bob Hope is handling the laugh assignment.

Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborne. 'March of Time,' as a quarter hour feature, was one of the year's experiments that panned out badly. Return of the show to its original once weekly half hour should find the fans applauding again. Agency's handling of the Atwater Kent Hour, for its 10th year, proved again to be of first order. Also acquitted itself commendably on 'The O'Neills' for Ozol and Cavalcade of America, despite the heavy doses of propaganda for the DuPont interests, and the one-time stanza in April that celebrated American Telegraph & Telephone Co.'s 50th anniversary. Other of the agency's perennials which maintained showmanly touches were the Bond Bread show, Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit, and Western Clock's Big Ben Dramas. Agency almost made itself a contestant for the year's dullest program with General Electric's 'The Melo Master,' but subsequent installment found the smooth and expert B. B. D. & O. touch in click working order.

Benton & Bowles. Succeeded in keeping Maxwell House Coffee's 'Showboat' and Colgate-Palmolive's 'Beauty Box Revue' up among the best entertainment on the air, but also accounted for a host of flops. Took over the 'Colgate House Party' from Young & Rubicam and, after a few weeks of dismal fumbling, switched to 'Music at the Haydens,' which also failed to make an important impression and folded after 12 weeks. Has done well by 'Log Cabin Inn,' starring Conrad Thibault, and produced a so-so in 'Tony and Gus,' which ran from April to September. Brought Gertrude Berg back in April for a reverse characterization of Molly Goldberg via 'The House of Glass' (Palmolive Soapsuds), and the going for popular favor by this program has been satisfactory (26 weeks), but off the air as of Dec. 25.

Biow. Introduced Ray Noble to American listeners in behalf of Coty and did a distinguished job. Agency holds on nicely for showmanship with the Leo Reisman-Phil Duey combination for Philip Morris cigarets, and didn't require names to make a fetchin program for Kreuger beer on CBS Saturday ni hts.

Blackett-Sample-Hummert. Philosophy of this agency is, 'Who and what are the Crossley Reports and why worry about popularity ratings if you have the shows that produce the sales?' B-S-H boasts that it has consistently hit the bull's eye from the sales angle, and will back up this contention with reams of figures. Practically every one of its adult shows is directed at the lower middle class housewife, on the theory that it is she who makes the potential market for the 10c to 50c articles that the B-S-H programs sell. Hence the exploiting of ballads and waltzes in its various musical shows, the homey sentiments. Some of the programs—Mr. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch,' 'Ma Perkins,' 'Just Plain Bill,' and 'Betty and Bob.' Also the heart angle of newspaper boilerplate, exemplified by such programs as 'The Love Doctor,' 'Romance of Helen Trent,' 'Backstage Wife' and 'Marie, the Little French Princess.' Mixed in with this agency's flora and fauna of entertainment are such deftly produced musicals as 'The American Album of American Music' (Bayers Aspirin), 'Manhattan Merry-Go-Round' (Dr. Lyons Toothpaste), 'Hammerstein's Music Hall' (American Home Products), and the Bi-sodol frame on CBS, which this season exchanged Everett Marshall for Carmela Ponselle. Heading the agency's comedy division is 'Easy Aces,' a standard, with Anacin the current payeroff.

Blackman.—One headache after another for this agency during '35. After fathering 'The Gibson Family,' and shifting its release from one evening's schedule to another, in the hope that the spot might bring popularity, agency gave up and substituted a takeoff of Maxwell House's 'Showboat' for Ivory Soap. It tagged the second try 'Uncle Charlie's Tent Show,' program revolving around the 'ex-Cap'n Henry,' Charles Winninger. With Hinds Honey and Almond Cream's 'Club Romance' added, this agency's musical efforts for the year were three, and not a sock among 'em to hang up for Xmas. In the serial field, however, agency clicked nicely with 'Vic and Sade,' 'The O'Neills' and 'Home Sweet Home.' All three are supported by Procter & Gamble.

Brooke, Smith & French. Went in for a flashy outlay for Hudson-Essex with the Kate Smith series, using a corp of exploiteers and advance men on the road. Program included airing of mike aspirants from their home towns. Results sufficed to keep the account in the agency. H-E business had previously been placed through Blackman.

Campbell-Ewald. Takes the showmanship palm in the Chevrolet division for its consistently adroit job with General Motors Sunday night concerts. Even though Chevrolet elected to switch to a popular musical show (Dave Rubinoff), this agency contributed in a large way in carving out a slick rating for Phillips-Lord's 'G Men' dramatizations.

Cecil, Warwick & Cecil. With the death of Will Rogers, firm's Gulf Refining segment floundered badly. Account finally decided to go Phil Baker and Harry Young & Rubicam. CW&C served in seemingly trying to make a hillbilly of John Charles Thomas (Vince's mouthwash), but in quick time it got him back to his normal, and what proved successful, metier. On the credit side it has the timely booking of Grace Moore (for Vick), the continuously adroit handling of The Warden Lawes (Sloan's Liniment) series, and the smooth direction of Jimmy Fidler's flim gossip for Tangee lipstick.

William Esty. Continues to score with the Walter O'Keefe-Cass Loma combination for Camel. Also holding interest with Feen-a-mint's amateur stanza on CBS Sunday nights.

Erwin, Wasey & Co. 'Voice of Experience,' 'Bolby Benson' and 'Singing Sam' are all that remain of this agency's list, but in each instance the assignment is being so handled as to produce plenty results. When Arthur Kudner moved out he took along True Story's 'Court of Human Relations.'

Geyer, Cornell & Newell. Flivvered for Frigidaire with Jack Pearl (13 weeks), but struck a timely theme with the Peaceways program for Squibbs. Latter program showed signs of having spent its maximum force and effect after the sixth week.

Hanff-Metzger. Picked another attention-getter for Texaco in 'Jumbo' and won the kudos of the trade by the smart way it went about selling at the start of the series. Initial broadcast of 'Jumbo' rated a crack example of mike production.

F. W. Hellwig & Co. Fared okay for Linit with Phil Spitalny, but found 'The Gumps' no happy go for Kre-mel and Karo, all Corn Products brands. Unrepresented on the networks this fall and winter.

Joseph Katz. When this agency finally lifted the Ex-Lax show to high rating, CGS launched its purity drive. Rather than toady to what it considered a much too strict edict, the account shifted to spot broadcasting. John Nesbitt series, on platter, reported to be doing uniformly well.

Kenyon & Eckhardt. ramatization of 'The Amateur Gentleman' with Leslie Howard (Hinds Honey and Almond Cream) served as this agency's debut in network broadcasting. Presentation of 'Gentleman' was hurriedly washed after seventh week, but Howard continues.

Lennen & Mitchell. Failed in its efforts to sell Ethel Merman (Lysol) to dial twisters as an outstanding favorite, but did well by Lorillard with the Briggs Sport Revue, deftly written and produced. Creditable work with Woodbury's two-year holdover, 'Dangerous Paradise,' and the results obtained with Eddie Cantor against the Major Bowes opposition. Paul Whiteman to this agency's list as a Woodbury salesman Jan. 5.

Lord & Thomas. Besides introducing Fred Astaire and his dancing to the air, thereby s acking up the rating of Lucky Strike's Hit Parade in a big way, and also being no little responsible for 'Top Hats' (film) fast national start, L&T did a slick job on RCA's Sunday afternoon stanza when it converted it to a variety name policy. Agency still trying to mold the Bourjois frame, with Odette Myrtil and Mark Warnow into a package of big-time proportions.

Stirling Getchell. After dropping the Socony land sketches, agency took a dip into variety with unsteady results. Settled with two casts before concentrating on Eleanor Powell. In his sudden determination to go radio all the way in behalf of the oil account, Getchell transferred his exploiteer and right-trolled as of Jan. 1. Networks' wire also stated that the further notice would be forthcoming within two days after the first of the year and that it was to be understood that the affiliated stations were under to ASCAP as exist in their present contracts. Baldwin declared Saturday that he wouldn't know until Monday whether ASCAP would extend the same authority to stations not included in the NBC or CBS lists.

Baldwin denied a report which developed Friday (27) that NBC and Columbia had 'retired' from the NAB so that any negotiations or deal effected by officers of the trade organization would not be binding upon the webs. If any such action, averred Baldwin, had taken place, it had not been brought to his attention.

Following notification by the webs to agencies and affiliated stations that after Dec. 31 the former would not clear music under Warner control, wires and airmail letters started pouring into the o ces of New York station reps advising them not to accept commercial transcriptions which contained WB tunes. Other indie broadcasters either flew or came by train to New York to be close at hand for any turn in events.

As his advisory committee Baldwin, managing director of the National Association of Broadcasters, had in attendance at the NAB's temporary headquarters in the St. Regis hotel Dean Fritzer, WDAF, Kansas City, H. K. Carpenter, WHK, Cleveland, Walter Damm, WTMJ, Milwaukee, John Clark, WLW, Cincinnati, and Louis D. Caldwell and Philip Loucks, Washington attorneys, representing the clear channel group.

Neither NBC or Columbia was decided at press time Saturday whether they would go through with their annual practice of picking up dance bands from all parts of the U. S., Canada and South America New Years' Eve. Webs had under consideration the idea of limiting all music that night to studio combos for fear that in the excitement of the occasion some band might include Warner Bros. music.

Indications were given Saturday that some of the more important regional networks would act on their own in dealing with Warner. Particular case in point in that direction was the Yankee Network. Latter's prez, John Shepard, 3d, has his attorney, Sol A. Rosenblatt, who was deputy NRA administrator for the amusement industry, to negotiate a contract with Starr, Rosenblatt and Starr went over the WB contract at a luncheon Friday (27).

In its letter to advertisers an agency CBS pointed out that the terms of the ASCAP contract which was obtained last June were predicated on the basic assumption that WB music would continue to be available to the network and that such terms had made it eco ically feasible for the web to continue to absorb the music costs and not pass the on to the client. Warner now contends, the letter stated, that it was not bound by the June agreement, has refused to let things ride until the courts had decided in this issue thro a test case. Rather than take a chance of running into heavy statutory damages by forcing the issue, Columbia, said the letter, had decided to lay off the WB catalogs altogether. In the meantime, CBS promised it wo ld, through ASCAP, learn how much of the music Warner claimed really belonged to it and to advise the advertisers which of those works could be used over the air without fear of infringement penalty.

MAKING MONEY OUT OF STATION PROGRAMS

By Walter J. Neff

(Gen'l Sales Mgr., WOR, New York)

As recently as the early 1930's, the designation of a radio program as a 'sustaining program' was enough to condemn it to the majority of advertisers who were considering the use of radio. Such programs were regarded as 'time-fillers'—pure and simple. The thought of sponsoring a sustaining program was untenable to 98 out of every 100 advertisers. Prospective sponsors were seeking programs possessing unique and original characteristics which would be associated solely with their product. A ratio of successes and failures—similar to the experiences of Broadway theatrical and Hollywood moving picture producers, attended the radio sponsor's efforts with failures, as usual, outnumbering successes.

Alert radio stations should and do have material at their disposal for the building of good programs. There came a time in broadcasting when sustaining programs ceased to be regarded by far-sighted station managements as 'time-fillers'—and were carefully designed to attract more listeners to the station. They were seriously weighed for their entertainment, educational or institutional value. In spite of this careful attention, radio stations were no less fallible in ther productions than the other builders of shows for public entertainment. As a consequence, only a few of these thoughtfully designed sustaining programs of varied types reached the desired goal of attracting myriads of listeners. Only these few programs were retained on the air.

Goes on Forever

Those found wanting after thorough trial were discarded in favor of other more likely programs. This process goes on forever. The programs which survive in the acid test of public reaction were, in nearly every instance, programs which upon analysis, would fit into some phase of an advertising campaign either as an institutional program, supplemental to other activities, or as a sales-producing program. Obviously, institutional programs, because of their nature, do not lend themselves to testing as do other programs which have sales possibilities.

Those which can be tested quickly, indicate, as tests are made, their relative value in relation to successful programs currently sponsored. These programs then become station tested programs. The reader must keep in mind the fact that in addition to the station tested programs, many station features, which have demonstrated their value but do not lend themselves to testing such as a strictly musical program of a high calbre, could also be put into the station tested class from the standpoint of their effectiveness for the purpose outlined. However, we have no definite informaton as to their productiveness, so we shall limit ourselves to a discussion of known factors.

It ight be well at this point to examine some of the reasons for the success of radio programs, and as we examine these, you will notice that successful programs in every instance have a personality factor, which acts as a definite personal bridge between program and listener.

Instance

Script Acts. (Dramas.) In this type of program, listeners pick the character they like to feel is 'just like them' and live that part with the actor.

Comic Strips—Here, the audience meets old friends who come to life via the air waves.

Personality Shows—The Valice Hour—Major Bowes—Jack Benny. Take the personality out of these shows and you have an empty shell.

Musical Shows—Wayne King—Lombardo. Here the style is so personalized that the listeners have the same feeling toward the type of music as they would have to an individual.

Naturally, these are more or less general statements but reflect a moment and go over the programs you really like, as distinguished from those you think clever, and I am sure you will discover that each such program has a phase of a personal factor which draws you to it. The next step is—how common is this factor to the average audience? When that is answered you will know the size ience. So much for that.

You may well ask why, if we have such a perfect formula, do we not build bigger and better programs? The answer is one of pure financial limitation. Good personalities cost more than radio stations can afford to pay. Remember a station has many programs a week to produce while an advertiser has only one program with which to be concerned, and can go to the limit in cost of that one.

Instead of the economy acting as a brake on the production of good and outstanding programs, it acted as a challenge to program directors, who made a virtue of this lack of money, and substituted ideas which could be executed without unduly high expenditures. The surprising thing about it all is that they succeeded in so many instances. To be sure the programs were not of the type which incorporated outstanding names, but many outstanding stars of the stage and screen owe their present day popularity to a good start on station programs. Just to mention a few, think of Crosby—The Street Singer—Singin' Sam—Amos and Andy (as Sam and Henry)—Pick and Pat, etc., etc. While those are individuals, the following programs are known to many and have also been very successfully sponsored. 'Main Street Sketches,' 'Pick and Pat Minstrels,' 'The Witch's Tale,' 'Husbands and Wives.'

In a large sense Rudy Valice and Major Bowes are station-tested. Each appeared on the air over a long period before a sponsor recognized in these artists a force for advertising and they were not disappointed. Only two cases are cited here, but if you give the matter a few moments consideration you will be able to add many other instances to the two mentioned. Remember, please, that radio stations, not sponsors, bore the cost of building audiences for these programs. The sponsor, in each case, by intelligent use of other forms of advertising, can and does add materially to the size of the original audience. It is to his interest to do so and if properly done does not detract from but adds to the effectiveness of his general advertising.

Those advertising agencies, which have had considerable experience in radio, are beginning to recognize the potency of station-tested features as producers of quick results. So important do 'station-tested' programs loom in the eyes of more and more agencies and advertisers that at least one agency has employed a man to do nothing but acquaint himself with all the facts concerning these programs in all the more important population centers. For the wise buyer there is at least one, and in most instances, two or three programs of this type, that can fit the needs of any advertised product in any fairly large city.

JACKSON-MOORE REP FIRM IS REVAMPED

Chicago, Dec. 29.

Lowell Jackson has bought out the interest of his partner, Margaret Moore, in the station representative firm of Jackson-Moore. This is reported as the first step in a complete revision of station rep outfit.

Understood that next week three network time salesmen will resign to join the Jackson-Moore outfit. Jackson himself was formerly with NBC locally.

DURANTE OFF 'JUMBO' BUT PROGRAM STAYS

Texaco will keep 'Jumbo' going for a second 13 weeks but without Jimmy Durante in the cast. Durante has handed in his notice for the air version of the Hippodrome show, complaining that the necessity of appearing for program rehearsals at 11 a. m. three times a week has become too strenuous for his constitution. Change occurs Jan. 21.

With Durante out, the talent cost of the program will be reduced from $10,000 to $7,500 a broadcast.

JESSICA DRAGONETTE

Queen of the Air

Jessica Dragonette, recently voted radio's favorite woman star, is in her sixth straight year as the singing star of the Cities Service Hour, heard every Friday evening 9:00 to 9:00 P.M., EST., over WEAF-NBC Networks, also Short Wave.

Looking Into the Future

By L. B. Wilson

President and General Manager, WCKY, Cincinnati

The year 1936 will, without doubt, be radio's biggest and best year, from every viewpoint. Mr. and Mrs. Listener will have better programs, a greater variety of entertainment and finer receiving sets than ever before. Broadcasters and advertisers will likewise have greater results in every way.

I look for higher power in stations in 1936. More radio sets will be sold, because reception will be better. This means more listeners. And this in turn makes it certain that programs will be bigger and better, because sponsors will be justified in spending larger sums.

Watch television in 1936! It is much closer than most of us can realize. The foresighted broadcaster will do well to consider this in making any plans for the future.

Radio stations will be better managed in 1936 than ever before. The business has grown to such magnitude that management has become vital.

Coming year will see the start of a definite policy on the part of some stations against the sale of spot announcements. On many of the better stations the advertiser will be compelled to buy programs to carry his message, or nothing at all, in line with present network policies.

Electrical transcription phase of broadcasting will be developed further in 1936. This bettered service will enable stations to give a higher percentage of good entertainment 19 and 20 hours a day. And I predict that next year will see the start of a policy on the part of more broadcasters to operate 24 hours a day.

Lincoln-Omaha Station Group Sells 50% Stock Interest to Dailies

Lincoln, Dec. 29.

Climaxing one of the longest and most stubborn battles between radio and newspapers, the Central States Broadcasting Co. stations, KFAB and KFOR, Lincoln, and KOIL, Omaha, sold 50% of their stock to the Lincoln newspapers, Star and State Journal. The latter sheets have been operating on a combine basis since 1931, and this new move almost completely ropes in the advertising field of this section.

Move to take radio under its wing was accelerated here when the Omaha World-Herald moved to acquire a station string in Nebraska, assuming control earlier in the year of KMMJ, Clay Center; WJAG, Norfolk; WAAW, Omaha, and KGBZ, York.

Lincoln sheets, the Star, owned by the Lee chain in Iowa, and the Journal, controlled by J. C. Seacrest, were the bitterest antagonists of radio publicity of any kind during the four-year-long battle, although a very small program listing was carried.

At the present time, no changes are contemplated in the radio staffs, or in the policies. Trans-Radio news, now feeding the nine newsperiods per day on the stations, will probably be retained until the publishers determine to what extent their leased wires may be used. Between the Star and Journal nine leased wires are controlled.

KFAB is a 10,000 watt station and has studios in both Lincoln and Omaha; KFOR is a 250-watter but is strong in this trade territory; and KOIL, Omaha, is a 2,500-watter. KFAB carries CBS and gives the off programs to KFOR. KOIL strings along with the NBC red.

ick Kiplinger is th station's news commentator now, and Larry Hall is the radio editor for the newspaper combination. It is not known whether another radio editor will be named for the extra paper now that the stringent policy toward radio will probably pendulum the other way.

Price paid for the 50% stock, 25% to the Journal and 25% to the Star, was not made known. The ether trio has been a consistent money maker.

Major Lenox Riley Lohr, former U. S. Army officer, and the former manager of the Century of Progress (World's Fair) at Chicago, is the new president of the National Broadcasting Company. He succeeds M. H. Aylesworth who has been elevated to the post of vice-chairman, under David Sarnoff, chairman. Lohr was elected by the NBC Board of Directors on Friday (27) and takes office today (1). He is held to be the personal nominee of David Sarnoff.

Current belief in the trade is that the Lohr appointment may bring the resignation of Richard C. Patterson, Jr., executive v.p., and also that of Frank Mason, v.p., in charge of operating details and press. Should Patterson withdraw his successor would undoubtedly be a David Sarnoff selectee.

As vice-chairman, Aylesworth, as before, will continue to be the boss of public policy at NBC. Lohr will be the operating head.

It is understood that this change in operating heads is one which was suggested by Aylesworth, with Sarnoff's approval, and in order that Aylesworth, personally, could devote more of his time conveniently to Radio-Keith-Orpheum's business, still 50 percent owned by RCA, parent company of NBC. Aylesworth has taken Sarnoff's job as chairman of the board of RKO.

Insiders seemed to be almost intuitively aware of an impending change in the operating throne of NBC, for some time, but to the outside world, although not to show business as a whole, the shift is a complete surprise. Sarnoff and Aylesworth are known to have been seeking a new operating head for NBC, for several months, until Sarnoff decided to rest his search with Lohr.

Lohr has been among those mentioned as a likely choice for manager of the World's Fair to be held in New York City, in 1940. He is 45 years old, married and the father of five children. A graduate of Cornell University Engineering School, he served during the World War. As manager of the Century of Progress, under Rufus Dawes, Major Lohr, is credited by many, according to mid-western authorities, with being chiefly responsible for the success of that venture.

The Year in Broadcasting

By Bob Landry

Radio broadcasting is 15 years old and has gray hair from worrying. Not about business. That's good and gets better every year. The worry is about the politicians, pressure experts, and propaganda that threaten to end things as they are—and they are pretty nice—and substitute an uncertain state of affairs, that those now pleased feel sure they won't care for.

Radio's continual nightmare of Washington, women's clubs, censorship, wavelength juggling, school, church, labor, newspaper and miscellaneous opposition constitutes the essential, basic and perennial problem of the industry. Compared to this the troublesome ASCAP situation is just a passing disagreement, and a few new chisels or chislers just colorful departures from normalcy.

By the end of 1934 the network programs were running dangerously close to the thin ice. Detailed dissertations on why adolescents have pimples, vivid phrases anent the chemical changes that occur to food once it leaves the fork, grippingly graphic literature on what b.o. and halitosis and other things can mean to the social and economic standing of you, and you, and you, got to be intolerable. A bust-up and show-down had to come. The situation was well expressed by a gag:

'Alice, if you're constipated, use yeast.'

'Oh, ι tell that to all the girls.'

Although the National Broadcasting Co. had traditionally carried the banner, Columbia preempted the bidding early in 1935 by stepping in with a dramatic gesture for lily white leadership. Medical accounts were given the boot, a formidable list of must-nots and will-nots was publicized, a pledge of devotion to sweetness and light was made. NBC refrained at the time from putting on any counter-pyrotechnics.

Late in the year NBC had regained its composure and was moving to regain its rep as the uplift zealot. NBC has in mind magazines spotlighting culture in its sheerest essence and distributed, on the cuff, to hand-picked lists. NBC wants those who stand for the better things to know that NBC isn't sitting down on its profits.

The laxatives took a bad tossing around during 1935. They complained bitterly about 'ingratitude', but that carried little weight. The laxatives were doing radio no good. They must have known that they were allowed to associate with de luxe company only so long as they behaved and the squawks weren't too numerous. They didn't behave and the complaints multiplied. Even today several programs with big talent outlays still carry a line of malodorous copy that gets by chiefly because the agency responsible is influential and has to discipline.

WB-ASCAP Schism

During 1935 Warner Bros., the film producing firm that owns four leading music publishing houses, made good its long-threatened break-away from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and thereby created a problem of immense complexity for the broadcasters. Admittedly few radio men, or for that matter few music men, understand the legal maze of copyright and performing fee questions which had been tossed into the laps of the director of the National Ass'n of Broadcasters. As the year closes the ASCAP-Warner situation is transferred to the unfinished business file from which point it will undoubtedly continue to haunt the houses of broadcasting.

At several bends in the road the ASCAP dilemma threatened to split the radio industry during 1935. Ike Levy's impassioned defense of his record as a negotiator and his ultimate return to the N. A. B. treasurership over the Colorado Springs candidacy of John Shepard, 3rd, will stand out in broadcast history as evidence of the strong emotions of radio men generally on the subject. A subsequent tendency of the non-network broadcasters to dally with the notion of separate deals, independent of the networks, also suggested a mental state shot through ith confusion and doubt. Meanwhile the Federal government suit against ASCAP, inspired and couraged by radio, got nowhere after limping through several days of trial and a series of postponements.

In gen-eralizations and trends to personalities the year 1935 was marked by such news items as L. B. Wilson chasing a dog off his lawn and breaking his arm; Jesse Kaufman going in and out as general manager of WINS, New York; East and Dumke turning agents; Maude Adams doing a spin on radio; Burns and Allen switching from cigars to tomato juice; Kate Smith's A. & P. party-packing Madison Square Garden; John Royal meeting everybody in Europe from the Pope to the commissars of Russia; Ted Husing writing his memoirs; Jessica Dragonette talking about turning legit actress-manager; Donald Flamm restored to his swivel chair at WMCA; J. Truman Ward buying WLAC, Nashville, from the insurance company for whom he formerly worked; Jack Hylton coming over from England for an American commercial; Fred Waring making a test case against WDAS, Philadelphia, to stop radio use of phonograph records; Monte Hackett back as head man at Lord & Thomas; Bing Crosby and Paul Whiteman in a reverse play between sponsors; Ed Wynn off the air, ditto Jack Pearl, ditto Joe Penner, ditto Joe Cook.

Accomplishments unique in character during 1935 included the record of Howard Dietz and Arthur Schwartz, who together turned out 80 special songs for 'The Gibson Family' program in a period of nine months. A trend toward special material for radio programs and a minority of sponsors were able or willing to pay the piper.

Press and Radio

Schisms within the ranks of the publishers signaled the disintegration of the press-radio pact that sought to impose upon broadcasting the stale news already on the stands in the newspapers. This problem was a holdover from 1933 and 1934. In 1935 radio won the fight hands down. Unable to beat 'em the publishers for the most part decided to join 'em. While many localities still know the acid of publisher hatred, the papers increasingly bow to the inevitable. Indeed newspapers are embarrassing the Federal Communications Commission with the number of their requests for broadcast facilities.

Against the field, and the sole major holdout, the Associated Press continues to denounce the practice of selling news flashes to sponsors. Meanwhile the United Press has no scruples. Hearst and Scripps-Howard syndicates are openly seeking royalties for the radio use of cartoon strips, special articles and writing personalities which they control.

News programs have become one of the standard commodities of commercial radio. Local stations such as KVEL-KVOD, Denver, have as high as 100 news periods a week and find them easy to sell. Late in 1935 a New York City group formed a company to service radio news to South American stations. News programs will probably become the one universal common denominator of world-wide broadcasting although propaganda, rather than news, is all that may be expected in Russia, Ger Austria, Italy, etc.

Chalked up as radio flops during 1935 were:

The San lego Exposition.

The Mexican 'obscenity' campaign by congressional critics of the F.C.C.

A plan to have NBC act as national sales rep for the Mutual network.

local food and drug laws.

An all-American program broadcast in London at the careless suggestion of a VARIETY staff member.

The Federal government's efforts to interpret the excise tax of 5% to apply to transcription-makers.

Litigation

Litigation of some importance in radio during the year included the Association of Motion Picture Advertisers suit against General Foods won by the latter, on a question of whether one set of 'names' was of comparable value to another set Helen Menardi sued Ruthrauth & Ryan for literary services and lost. General Broadcasting bankruptcy case was resisted by a number of radio-prominent creditors. A libel action against the program 'March of Time' was settled out of court for a reported $20,000. Involved an allegation of penitentiary background by a Kansas City official.

Probably the most unusual and in some w ys most significant court action of the year was the joint move of Cecil, Warwick & Cecil and the National Broadcasting Co. for an injunction restraining Charles Henry Freeman, Jr., from advertising, talking about, interfering with or addressing correspondence to the Sherwin-Williams Paint Co. of Cleveland, prospective sponsors of a radio program Freeman claimed the basic idea was an infringement upon an idea he had been peddling around in radio advertising circles.

Controversies

Controversies of 1935 number such questions as to whether a short list (of stations) or a long list is best. Station men seemed to favor the short list trend. John Blair, among the brokers, was a leader along short list lines and also did the unusual in tearing up all contracts that bound stations for specified periods. This was in marked contrast to the policy of Edward Petry who uses five-year clamps. There was a good deal of conversation among the station reps about organizing their own trade association but no common ground could be discovered in an atmosphere of distrust and competition. Late in the year the firm of E. Katz, big shots in newspaper representation, entered the radio time-selling brokerage biz and thereby brought up a whole series of possibilities.

NBC knows the meaning of controversy after a year of grief with its new station compensation contracts. Repeated changes of policy, tactical shifts of front, the emergency pinch-hitting of M. H. Aylesworth, the desertion of WJR, Detroit, to Columbia, and the stubborn standoff of various affiliates kept the boys nervous.

Canada had its due share of pro and con stuff over radio. Liberal victory at the polls promised the end of the present radio commission in M ch (1936) and a revamped order allowing advertising to escape many previous restrictions. Use during the campaign by the Conservatives of a 'Mr. Sage' commentator (later revealed to have been an American legit actor) was a political hot potato in the Dominion.

Labor difficulties within broadcasting were confined to the engineers. Number of strikes were called and various collective agreements were okayed. Panelmen are the sole group within the 15-year-old industry to go in much for unionization or horn-locking with the management. A proposal made during the year by Verl Bratton, chief announcer of WREN, Lawrence, Kansas, was snowed under by criticism or indifference. Criticism was that the Announcers Union, as outlined by Bratton, did not come to realistic grips with such problems and complaints as the spieless feel are theirs. Indifference reflected the feeling that unless salaries and hours were cornerstones no announcers organization was worth the trouble of thinking about it.

Equity did nothing in radio. Early in the year, goaded by a small group of disgruntled legit actors, now on the air, Equity went through the motions of taking an interest in lining up the radio performers. No real enthusiasm existed in the Equty high command so this petered out. However, the networks pondered for a time doing something to anticipate any Equity drive. A company union idea to be called the Radio Guild was suggested but got no further than a suggestion. Many are of the opinion that radio performers (a mixture of stars from films, legit, vaude, concert, ex-newspapermen, chautauqua graduates, parlor singers and precocious kids) cannot find any common ground either of complaint or self-interest. Eddie Cantor came out strongly for an organization and thinks the exploitation of the small talent may force such an issue eventually. A radio social club in Chicago, behind which some sensed a labor movement, seems to have been thrown out on first base.

iggest Spenders

Biggest spenders for radio among the advertising agencies were: Blackett-Sample-Hummert, J. Walter Thompson, Lord & Thomas, Benton & Bowles, Erwin-Wasey (prior to split-away of Arthur Kudner), N. W. Ayer, Young & Rubicam, Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborne, Ruthrauth & Ryan, Stack-Goble, Newell-Emmett, McCann-Erickson, Campbell-Ewald, Lennen & Mitchell, William Esty, Bess Schillin.

Local live talent programs continued to multiply. inds Honey & Almond was an outstanding addition to extensive sponsorship of station programs. This trend is retarded by the inability, in many sections, of broadcasters to deliver entertainment of a calibre that national advertisers will underwrite. A steady if uneven increase in showmanship continues, however, from year to year. VARIETY'S efforts to paint some sort of a picture of community showmanship in an annual survey has helped jog the broadcasters into an awareness of what showmanship can and should mean as a realistic lever in swinging important time contracts.

NBC has been bearing down in its trade advertising during 1935 on this subject of showmanship. That is a salute from an influential source to the importance of an element in broadcasting that was neglected and belittled in the radio industry for a long time. Little by little, as the networks build up their statistical story, and circulation becomes less mysterious and less disputed, it is probable that the showmanship emphasis will be generally adopted as a competitiv keynote.

Those Graphs

In furtherance of the statistical picture of radio, NBC, CBS, Mutual and a variety of individual stations and regional webs brought out more or less elaborate charts, graphs, maps, etc. By far the costliest and most intensive job was done by E. P. H. James on behalf of NBC. Probably the largest sample of response data ever analyzed went into this compilation. Nearly $250,000 were spent on the job.

Potentially a twist that will in future markedly alter the radio control situation was the action of WJR, Detroit, in floating a stock issue. This had a twofold result; first, it brought in a liquid cash reservoir to finance expansion; second, it spread the ownership of the station among 400 persons. It is the latter angle which is of future importance if stations adopt the device widely. For by scattering ownership through the community and especially with the moneyed classes the station presumably fortifies its moral claim upon its wavelength and wattage which could not be tampered with by Washington, save at the risk of making numerous and probably influential enemies.

Executive shifts during 1935 were numerous. That's true of any year in radio. George Bijur left Bamberger's for Columbia and Columbia for Fletcher & Ellis. Vic Ratner stepped up as sales promotion boss at CBS. Bill Lewis became more important in commercial programming at the same network and Ralph Wonders revamped his artists' bureau with new blood and revised functions. Average quota of newcomers and outgoers at NBC, but mostly in the lower brackets.

But by far the biggest shift of 1935 occurred a few days before the year ended when M. H. Aylesworth, possibly broadcasting's No. 1 executive personality, stepped out as president of NBC, and Lenox R. Lohr, the G. M. of the Chicago World's Fair, succeeded hi

David Rosenblum, from Tradeways, was a growing power as a new v. p. of the RCA subsidiary. Walter Preston is g. m. of the Cowles group in Iowa and James Hanrahan is now with Scripps-Howard. David Brown exited at McCann-Erickson. Louis K. Sidney, Loew theatre showman, took over WHN, New York, and instilled plenty of pep and enterprise in that previously lethargic outlet. Anning S. Prall became the mogul-in-chief of the F. C. C. Leslie Fox skipped from WGAR, Cleveland, to WLS, Chicago, to KMBC, Kansas City.

WLW, Cincinnati, experienced some inconvenience during the year due to complaints from Canadian stations that the 500,000-watt signal was interfering. Joe Chambers made a few calculations on his cuff and came up with a solution that took care of Canada and allowed 'the Nation's station' to continue to drench the cosmos.

Televi

Television got its annual share of the speculative conversation but nothing happened of much consequence except that the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. expressed itself as peevish, restless and rebellious at the F. C. C.'s anti-monopolistic notions that A. T. & T. should not hog the full benefits of the new coaxial cable.

A novelty of the year was the use of portable film equipment whereby auditions the easy way were submitted to prospective accounts by WMEX, Boston. Wired radio was another novelty that loo ed on the horizon as a possibility. More of that, probably, in 1936. Edward Allen of WLVA, Lynchburg, Virginia, took the initiative in welding s all stations into a national sales organization. Should be heard from in the year to come. Still another possibility of 1936 is a coast-to-coast link for the Mutual network.

Confessions of a Feminine Radio Station Manager

By Edythe Fern Melrose
(Gen. Mgr. WJAY, Cleveland)

After having served sentence at hard labor for one year VARIETY now asks for a written confession! In this confession I'll answer the routine questions invariably asked by almost everyone. The first one—Well, so you're a woman managing a radio station. How does it feel?

I'll confess—it feels like a big obligation. An obligation to make the business a success for the owner's sake and the same obligation to a large staff of employees for their sakes.

I'll confess—the glory lies not as a woman holding the position but in justifying it and the sex's ability to make good.

I'll confess—that I depend upon two barometers to guide me, and I study them closely to know whether I'm merely a manager—or a success. One is the ledger—how's the heart-throb of the bank balance? The other is the staff—is the morale good? Is the staff leaning forward eagerly or sitting back? That's an all-important matter. It spells contentment or the reverse. As good as its staff, not it's management.

I'll confess—I might never have had courage to tackle the job but for a very wise teacher who used to say—'There is no such thing as sex in intellect. Your brain will think just like any other brain.'

I'll confess—I never cease to be amused at the amazement of the opposite sex when they discover that a woman is actually managing a business through wits and not wiles.

I'll confess—that one of the biggest thrills I've had since assuming the role of station manager was October 30th, 1935, when VARIETY published the showmanship rating and WJAY had moved up into second place in Cleveland!

Now that I've written a complete confession I'll tell you the truth about the whole thing. A few years ago I was invited by officials of WJAY to come up and look the station over, saying—'We need someone like you on our staff.' I came. I looked the station over and thought it was good. The station manager looked ME over and said—'NOT so good.' In fact, he sa'd to his high officials—'What does she know about radio—let her go back where she came from.' I went! Later HE went! Then I returned. The station changed hands and HE returned. That man was Grant Melrose.

Well—he decided the only way he could manage me would be to marry me, so he went to the county courthouse, made a confession and the sentence was pronounced—You are to live with her for the rest of your life. It was a life that proved all too short. During that life I learned m things about station management, which have made it possible for me to carry on simply through past experiences and knowledge gained from one who really knew.

The Peculiarities of Pacific Coast Radio

By Harrison Holliway
(Manager of KFRC, San Francisco)

Bounded on the north by Canada, on the south by the land of Manana, on the west by the Pacific Ocean, and on the east by thousands of square miles of sage brush and its accompanying population of jackrabbits and coyotes, the Pacific Coast radio market is, geographically, a thousand mile-plus strip of ocean-edged fertility, dotted, in six strategically but greatly separated points, by as many metropolitan cities. Notwithstanding this wide separation of major markets and what the map shows to be an evident expanse of commercial nothingness, the Pacific Coast radio advertiser buys months and not miles. To be more specific, the geographical Pacific Coast market, namely, Washington, Oregon and California, boast some 8,000,000 people—90% of whom live within the primary trading areas and, synonymously, the primary coverage areas of these six metropolitan cities.

A jobber salesman on the Pacific Coast can drive hundreds of miles and find as many cross-road dealers, whose sole complaint is that they can't hear the factory's program, but—so what—does Mr. Advertiser consider that the 8% unreached audience, which is the clientele of the Corn Center general store, has any connection with the 92% listening audience which is the valued trade of the West's metropolitan merchant? The answer should be no. The answer is no, but of course you can't blame the advertiser for expecting all of his dollars 'to do or die for dear old Rutgers.'

Remembering the gentleman who said, 'We're always talking about the weather, but nobody seems to do anything about it,' we might suggest 'Mr. Advertiser is always talking about the geography of the Pacific Coast, but we can't do anything about it.' Radio can't put any more metropolitan cities in between those that already exist.

Apologetically, we of sunny California understand that the Manhattanite thinks the sun rises in the East river and sets in Jersey. Correctively, we suggest that it doesn't—it sets three hours later in San Francisco. While we sympathize with the program producers and artists, and Mr. Advertiser who might possibly be obliged to ante up a few more chips for a double production in order to meet our coastal 8,000,000, we admit that we can't do anything about this peculiarity of the sun. However, it does make for different listening habits on the Pacific coast. It's a solar fact that 6 to 8:30 encourages a comparable audience to the Atlantic seaboard's 9 to 10:30 features. This might account for the misconception that western sidewalks are rolled up at 9 p. m. If such is the case, they are the sidewalks of Corn Center. By the time the eastern programs reach their conclusion on the West Coast, our local moguls take to the air. The sum and substance is that it makes for a good long radio evening, enthusiastic radio listners and, as a casual consequence, we point authoritatively to the large percentage of radio ownership in the Golden state.

Program Problem

Probably nowhere in the country is a program builder faced with the necessity of pleasing such diverse tastes as those characteristic of the two largest cities on the Pacific Coast, San Francisco and Los Angeles. The latter is a great and expansive community, a great percentage of the residents of which represent a regional cross-section of the country's populace. The former is a community of tradition, whose people are traced back through generations of local residents.

A Hollywood picture premier requires police traffic assistance. In San Francisco, the personal appearance of film stars creates little impression. The paradox here is that San Francisco has been regarded for years as a 'great show town' by vaudeville performers. This is not expressed in numbers of so-called 'idol worshippers' but rather by the theatre audience's appreciation of meritorious material. San Francisco has always maintained a high place in the world of art and literature. It is the cradle of many a famous musician and artist. Peculiarly, its people are, as a whole, extremely sophisticated as far as entertainment is concerned.

On the other hand, Los Angeles is perhaps the birthplace of hillbilly radio entertainment. This so-called contribution to the art of radio has long maintained an exceptional popularity in Southern California. No hill-billy act ever clicked in San Francisco. The diversity of the Southern California population, however, is well exemplified musically by the success of the Hollywood Bowl symphony concerts. It proves a versatility of the Los Angelenos' tastes, and accordingly is a fertile field for the radio program producer.

Industrially, the West Coast has always been notably resourceful. That this virtue has been one of necessity rather than of choice, is quite obviously one of distance born of the pioneering instincts of the original Westerner. This same instinct has been carried through radio on the Coast long before either network established standards of meritorious entertainment. Western radio station, by initiative and originality were creating a radio program of a class equal to any in the country before 1928. Both Don Lee and NBC were operating regional networks in California and the Pacific Coast quite some time before the establishment of transcontinental circuits made Eastern programs available. With this regional network creation naturally went an obligation to maintain large entertainment organizations. Before its connection with Columbia, the Don Lee System maintained a 25 to 35 piece orchestra in both its studios in Los Angeles and San Francisco. The accompanying extensive program production fostered the development of fine artistry which has subsequently found its place in the 'Radio Major Leagues.'

Footlight Poise

Western radio operator's foresight is well exemplified by the present day apparent regard for the absolute necessity of a studio audience on all musical or variety programs. While this was undoubtedly engendered by the introduction of the vaudeville performer who needed a personal reaction because of habit, as long ago as 1927 the writer's station had seen that sound proofing and a 'vacuum of studio quiet' was not a necessity, and had encouraged 'in person' audiences. As a consequence, its artists were being schooled in 'footlight poise.' As an example, in 1927 this station's two-hour Blue Monday Jamboree, the pioneer fun show of the West Coast, played to an audience of 17,000 people in the San Francisco Auditorium, and for four successive weeks to an audience of 11,000 people in the Oakland Auditorium. From its inception a year previously, this program had made valued use of a studio audience. In the following years, this program was presented from the stage of some theatre in every community of 20,000 people or over on the West Coast. It is claimed that this feature was the forerunner of the present day final admission that there really is something in common between radio and the stage.

Another peculiarity of Pacific Coast Radio is caused by a lack of seasonal weather extremes. Eastern listening habits are governed, to a great extent, by climatic conditions. The curve of listening interest reaches peaks and depressions in sympathy with summer heat and winter cold. The Eastern listener's confinement during the winte months encourages the radio to be played as an accompaniment for the family circle. Mediocrity in entertainment is therefore possible. The West Coast's normalities, rather than encouraging habitual listening, present the problem to the radio operator, particularly during the daylight hours, of dishing up an appetizing radio fare sufficient to entice the radio listeners to indoor recreation. Steady month-in and month-out gasoline sales on the West Coast prove that radio has a worthy foe in the weather man. While perhaps admitting that western daily radio listening hours are below the average of the East, we will match our year round average against the Eastern heat-caused summer decline. As an example—despite his middle-western experience, we encouraged an Iowa cooked-cereal manufacturer to use our San Francisco station during the summer months and our insistence that there was no western summer radio slump was proved by a 14½% increase in his regular summer sales.

Summarily, instead of being able to coast through certain months with a guaranteed audience, we must be ever on the alert to grasp ears that can never be frost-bitten.

Shepard Mechanical Survey-Taker Inspires Booklet

John Shepard, 3rd, Yankee Network prez, will issue Jan. 10 a booklet showing the results derived from a listening habit survey which was made in the Boston metropolitan area through the use of recording devices attached to home radio sets. Pamphlet will describe how the devices were planted and checked and some of the findings, but more detailed and particularized info about listener habits will be made available to advertisers for a fee.

Recording mechanisms claimed to have been placed in 10,000 homes and kept there for 10 weeks.

VARIOUS LEGAL ANGLES IN FREEMAN AIR CASE

Law firm of Breed, Abbott & Morgan has filed a petition in Federal court on behalf of Charles Henry Freeman, Jr., asking the court to set aside a temporary injunction procured by Cecil, Warwick & Cecil, which prevents Freeman from alleging that the Sherwin-Williams Paint Company's 'Metropolitan Opera Auditions' program is similar to an idea copyrighted by him, or from suing Sherwin-Williams for alleged damages. Freeman's petition contains a citation of errors, returnable Jan. 24.

Filing of this petition throws the whole litigation over priority rights to the opera auditions stanza into a highly involved phase. Four stages now in force or pending in court:

(1) Cecil, Warwick & Cecil and NBC are suing for a permanent injunction against Freeman preventing him from talking, etc. This case has been postponed indefinitely, but will come up in the future.

(2) C., W. & C. and NBC have a temporary injunction against Freeman which holds good until hearings on the permanent matter come up. Freeman is now trying to set this aside.

(3) C., W. & C. is petitioning Federal court to hold Freeman in contempt of the temporary injunction, clai ing he gave an interview to the New York Sun which violated the terms of the injunction. This case comes up Jan. 3.

(4) Freeman is petitioning to have the temporary injunction lifted on the grounds that it was allegedly granted on error. This citation is returnable Jan. 24.

Sherwin-Williams' stanza is broadcast on Sunday afternoons over the NBC-Red at 3:30. Started Dec. 22 after being held up three weeks by the litigation over priority rights to the idea.

SOUTH AFRICA TO REVAMP RADIO

Capetown, . 4.

South African Minister of Posts and Telegraphs will submit legislation at the next Parliament Session regarding taking over the Broadcastin ny inger) at the end of March,

It will be formed as a Public Utility Trust, and not State-controlled, an organization acting for the people, and operating broadcasting in the interests of the people, eliminating altogether any question of private profit out of the enterprise. All profits will be used for the further development of broadcasting.

It will be suggested that it be known as the African Broadcasting Corporation, with a Board of nine Governors. The Minister suggests that I. W. Schlesinger be chairman. Five of the Board for five years and the remainder for three years. To pay the Schlesinger outfit by means of debentures in the new concern, and due to this the Government will not be called on to pay cash.

Oppose Schlesinger

Objection is being voiced to the suggestion that I. W. Schlesinger act as chairman of the new radio set-up. A truly independent broadcasting system putting high class programs on the air would obviously compete for public attention with the theatres which he controls and some citizens feel he would not encourage such competition. South African radio has been pretty bad in the past and dissatisfaction is widespread.

Not liked here is the further idea of introducing advertising to the air. South Africa in this respect takes the English rather than the American position. It's a theoretical prejudice as the country has no way of contrasting the merit of English and American programs. Most impartial observers familiar with the two English-speaking broadcast systems feel that advertising makes possible a range and variety of entertainment and star personalities, which non-commercial radio can never emulate. However, anti-sponsored sentiment has been developed here.

The Transcription Outlook

By Edgar Grunwald

Status of electrical transcriptions until last year was nomadic, and the platter biz consisted mainly of picking up crumbs from the national advertisers' table. Though equipped with strong arguments anent economy and flexibility e.t.'s suffered from the complications connected with a disc campaign, the irregularity in time of broadcasts, and the psychological drawback of a mechanical airing as opposed to the flesh and blood stuff that goes through a web mike.

Past year, however, has seen the platter producers start to carve a new and definite niche for themselves. N. A. B. figures for the first nine months of 1935 show national discs up 38.5% over 1934, and local up 51.4%.

Increases in national revenue are less significant of what is happening in the e.t. field than is the big local increase, and are to some extent due to a lucky fall of the dice. Specifically, the sudden web cleanup of deodorants, laxatives, etc., accounted for a good portion of the new shekels here. As an example, Ex-Lax, which recently left CBS because of the web's new policies, is already one of the 10 biggest platter buyers.

Rest of the augmented national intake came from sponsors who couldn't be accommodated on the chains, or those who only wanted partial coverage, plus those who, in addition to chain blurbing, wanted local messages to deepen market penetration. Circumstances here again played a big role in shoving this revenue into the lap of the transcription crowd, though the e.t. boys did wear out shoe leather in a number of cases (Chevrolet was one).

World Pioneers

But the zooming local revenue is the most essential factor in the picture, and the recorded library is responsible for it. World Broadcasting pioneered this development in 1934, and last year was aped by Standard and NBC. Between the three companies, some 325 to 350 stations are now equipped with libraries out of which they can throw together a relatively coherent broadcast in a short time.

Predictions are that the library will in the future be a stabilizing influence and one of the most dependable sources of e.t. money. Some national business will, of course, always come in, and the recorded library can, in the last analysis, be sold to a national sponsor as well as to a local one. But the crossroads retailer in the sticks who hasn't tried radio much before is the best fish for this bait. Attraction to him is the guarantee of passable talent and a reasonably professional program at a cheap price. Local live talent generally has no such guarantee, and hence is viewed by the local boys with a Missouri squint.

Library is also regarded as means of creating order in the manufacturing end of the e.t setup. Small fry disc producers will not bother with it because they can't afford to finance it. They'll stick to eking out an existence by selling platters to national sponsors on a low price basis. Big houses who do have libraries, on the other hand, will be saved the fear of chiseling and cut-throat competish. Furthermore, World, Standard and NBC all operate on a policy of selling only one station to a town, and this avoids stepping on toes all around.

With this local situation viewed as continuing and improving during 1936, and with national biz expected to be undiminished, the e.t. bunch sees the coming months in an optimistic light.

Live talent is not regarded as much of a competitor, though it is definitely on the upbeat. From the national viewpoint, only the biggest sponsors with the best agencies are skilful enough to whip together a nation-wide live talent campaign. Local live talent, on the other hand, presents various uncertainties to the sponsor, has been sold only haphazardly by radio stations, and the local biz is withal so untapped that there is room for all forms of broadcasting as yet. Furthermore, much of the local live talent stuff is newscasting or amateur shows, neither of which is strictly an e.t. competitor, because neither can be cut onto a platter.

The Washington Political Routine

Washington.

When you gotta go you gotta go, but few station men relish the summons to Washington. The home of the pork barrel and the happy hunting ground of lawyers is the town that giveth and also taketh away. Its summons may not be disregarded and its mood may not be predicted. Every visit is like joining a fraternal lodge. You've been promised that you'll be slipped in on a quiet night, but there's no guarantee that a sudden caprice may not change the quiet session into rough-house night.

Washington occupies a disproportionate amount of the broadcasters' attention and expense. It diverts broadcasters the job of broadcasting. It throws a spotlight on politics and a shadow over showmanship. It creates an atmosphere of uncertainty and a fear that the other fellow, with friends in high places, may be able to step part of one's wattage, hours, or preferred position in the status quo.

Some of the criticism of the Federal Communications Commission may be dismissed as partisan propaganda. Bad as various habits alleged against the Democrats may be it is not to be forgotten that the WIBO, Chicago, case happened while the Republicans ruled the roost. However, the present commission cannot brush aside as inconsequential certain of the charges fired at them. Growing practice of referring matters to the 'closed file' beyond the scrutiny of the press is distinctly an unwholesome tendency.

Despite progress in some directions during the past year, the government regulatory agency still is torn by factional strife which proves both costly and exasperating to Washington attorneys and their license-holding clients in all parts of the nation. The F.C.C. routine is bewildering and perplexing, with the ever-present figure of the political ghost looming dangerously in the background.

Critics charge that the keynote of the F.C.C., under present conditions, is deep intrigue combined with suspicious and unlawful secrecy which together have the effect of keeping the broadcasting industry in a perpetual state of jitters and thwart even the most conscientious efforts to do business with the government in a business-like manner. However, the radio laws were foggily drawn in the first place and the commission is obliged to proceed at oblique angles instead of directly. Strange limitations to authority of F. C. C. can be blamed for many of the 'unbusinesslike' methods.

Inheriting a large proportion of the frequently-denounced vices and abuses of the old Federal Radio Commission, the latest governmental boss of the broadcasting industry stands out conspicuously as the target for congressional criticism which is likely to develop in the near future into a determined move for investigation. Meanwhile broadcasters can only fret and fume privately and, in self-defense, resort to the use of political wires and under-cover tactics in order to protect their investments and entertain hope of continued existence.

Triple Squawk

Radio attorneys, engineers, and others in close contact with the commish claim the following as the chief peeves:

(1.) The commission plays favorites, with political backing almost an absolute necessity in any proceeding.

(2.) Split into jealous factions, the commission lacks clear-cut policies and principles upon which the industry can place reliance.

(3.) Procedure frequently is costly, with stalli delay a major cause of dissatisfaction.

Commission's 1935 program clean-up drive has aroused widespread antagonism, not so much because of the motives behind the sapolio crusade, but principally because of the dictatorial manner in which the effort has been carried on. In this respect particularly the complaint about commission secrecy is heard most frequently.

Loudest squawks center about the commission's refusal—ostensibly because of legal complexities arising from the prohibition against censorshi powers—to lay its cards on the table.

An outstanding example of the reason for dissatisfaction along this line is provided by the recent Marmola cases against KNX, WTMJ and KFRC. In this proceeding, the commish caught the defendant stations completely unawares by notifying them that their program service had been challenged because of certain specific features and then confronting officials and attorneys with numerous other complaints not included in the original notice of hearing. The KNX file demonstrated this practice most convincingly; the commish announced it wanted to investigate particularly the Marmola, Ionizer, Congoin, and Malk programs and then, when the hearing occurred threw at the Guy Earl forces squawks about two dozen other programs which the government deemed questionable.

Another commish habit, linked closely to the sapolio drive, which has caused grumbling, is the practice of arbitrarily ordering stations to file applications for renewal licenses in order to provide an excuse for a public hearing about program service. In the KNX case, attorneys for the Western Broadcast Co. reserved the right to question the commission's authority to call for a renewal application, censor programs, or designate applications for hearing 'without theretofore having examined such an application as required by statute.'

Temporary License

Along the same line, broadcasters are completely at the mercy of the commission when applying for regular license renewals. Frequently of late, with program probes under way, stations have learned, without any prior notice or reason to suspect that such action would be taken, that they have received only 30 or 60-day continuances or temporary renewals which may be terminated at the commission's pleasure.

Probably the worst headache of this variety—one which is only slightly diminished despite most persistent efforts to work out a compromise—is the commission's refusal to indicate what programs it regards as not in the public interest and the custom of attempting to exercise powers for the Food and Drugs administration which the F & D people lack in their own right. A measure of progress has been chalked up following the willingness of the Federal Trade Commission to use in the case of broadcasters the stipulation procedure employed in settling disputes with newspapers and magazines over objectionable or misleading advertising, but the situation continues to be far from satisfactory from broadcasters' viewpoint.

An irritating and often expensive practice—postponing hearings on only brief, if any notice—has been pretty well stamped out, but broadcasters still must suffer in silence whenever, armed with exhibits and evidence, they troop in to a hearing only to find that another party has defaulted or suddenly tried to withdraw its application. Commish has been trying to clean up this sore spot by attaching 'with prejudice' tags to dismissal orders in cases of default where either the government or other broadcasters were inconvenienced and forced to incur needless expense, but the practice of continuing and postponing proceedings for exasperatingly-long periods remains a bother.

Political vice is, without much question, the worst of all and the cause of greatest grumbling. Broadcasters desiring to settle squabbles on their merits have come to realize that backing of big-shot politicians is almost impossible in every proceeding. Examiners' reports are reversed, cases are remanded for further hearing, appeals are granted, and decisions are changed altogether too often as the result of intervention by some ward boss, national committeeman, legislator, or friend of the administration.

This complaint naturally enough is heard repeatedly from persons doing business with various government departments, but squawks are especially loud and steady against the F.C.C.

The Boys Deserve Sympathy

owever, while it is fashionable to criticize the Communications Commission and while the Republicans are watching with eager anticipation for a chance to pounce on the radio regulatory body the situation calls for a little sympathetic understanding. Anning S. Prall, the present chairman, is regarded as a high-class and gentlemanly fellow with whom politicis is a career, as he is independently wealthy. Both he and his colleagues probably have plenty of headaches as they are subject to the pull and tug of political demands and obligations that must be as confusing to them as some of their actions trying to lessen the pressure are to outsiders.

Fact is that the Democrats are in control of radio at a time when scores of powerful newspapers are seeking licenses, when accumulated church-school-labor-reform group antagonism has crystalized, when the networks with their strong lobbies are in a position to make their leverage felt. Again as the engineering concepts of broadcasting have been widened by experience and experiments both a need for and an ability to take care of more service has grown up. Obviously every new station constitutes, in greater or lesser measure, a threat to the position and prestige of existing licensees.

Into this befogging criss-cross and wheels-within-wheels incrustration of political, industrial, social, religious, academic and cultural problems the individual commissioners with the best intentions in the world must be irresistably impelled out of sheer exasperation with the innumerable claims on their time, influence and tolerance to break out with conclusions based on their own need for fresh air. Fawned upon by lobbyists, flattered by a servile trade press, badgered by fellow-politicians the lot of the communications commissioners is not one that a philosopher would envy.

Claim P-R Gave Aircasters Top Slice of News

Los Angeles, Dec. 29.

Elasticity of the Press-Radio's Pacific coast division rules provided stations a better news service than publishers had intended when they devised the setup, according to William Gordon, former bureau manager, who testified as a defense witness in the trial of KNX's libel suit against the Los Angeles Times.

Defense attorney T. B. Cosgrove used Gordon's statement to deny KNX's chargcs that publishers had created Press-Radio to stop stations from broadcasting spot news. Gordon testified that although publishers had li ited dispatches to 30 words, his bureau had sometimes sent as much as 800 words on a story, and that frequent bulletins the plan.

Ralph Trueblood, writer of the Times editorial that forms basis of the suit, also testified. He said that 'misinformation' broadcast by KNX led to the writing of the editorial.

were released during the day to broadcasters who had subscribed to

5 COAST STATIONS JOIN NBC NETWORK

Hollywood, Dec. 29.

Five Coast stations join the NBC Blue network this week, taking as the first feature the Rose Bowl game between Stanford and Southern Methodist. New web affiliates are KECA, Los Angeles; KGO, Frisco; KFSD, San Diego; KEX, Portland; KGR, Seattle, and KGA, Portland.

Move is seen as the clincher for KECA's increase to 5,000 watts, now before the Federal Communications Commission.

PENNY-WISE CHICAGO OUTSMARTS ITSELF

By Dan Goldberg

Chicago, Dec. 29.

Chicago continucs to reign supreme as one of the cheapest radio towns in the land. Chicago, instead of increasing the salarics of its radio workers, both behind the scenes and on the air, has steadily clipped the remuneration for artists, salesmen, announcers, executives, until the more ambitious and efficient among these people have given up the battle and have lammed for New York, Hollywood, Detroit and Cincinnati, where the pay is somewhat more comforting.

On the key stations in Chicago there are experienced announcers working for $35 a week. In several instances these same announcers have jumped to Detroit, Cincinnati, New York for substantial increases in salary. There are salesmen working in Chicago for 2½% commission, while i other cities the commission ranges as high as 15%, even where there is practically no difference between the Chicago station rate cards and the out-of-town rates. One of the biggest exccutive. in radio, headquartering in Chicago, is receiving $16,500 annually, while the manager of a medium-sized motion picture exchange in Chicago receives a higher salary. The head of the Chicago division of a theatre circuit receives $75,000 annually and his duties are much si ilar to those of the network executive.

Press department chieftains are working for $60 to $75 weekly. The chief press director for the theatre circuits in Chicago range from $150 up.

So it goes up and down the scale in radio, with the Chicago rate of payment for the other workers considered low in comparison with salaries in other branches of show business and in comparison with radio salaries in other cities, éven some which are less populated and less important than this, the queen of the midwest and the second metropolis of the nation. But the prize low salaries are seen in the wages handed out for the artists.

The Answer

Salaries of $30 and $3f a week for standard performers are not unusual in the Chicago, and yet everybody wants to know why Chicago is so far behind Hollywood and New York in the origination of major network shows. Chicago advertising agencies, networks and advertisers claim not to know why this should be.

It is strictly the fault of the stations and the networks. The program directors of these outlets are responsible. Agencies are willing to spend money for talent and the advertisers are ready to hand out the necessary amounts, bu' the program heads quickly interpose with a 'tsk, tsk, that is just a waste of money; we can get it for you wholesale, or at least somebody just as good and not as expensive.'

Chicago program directors think in terms of nickels. They are afraid to mention names which cost money, shows which cost coin for fear of losing the account. The result is that they have driven the b' shows out of Chicago and made Chicago the haven for script programs which can be produced for apples because the Chicago program chieftains know how to buy cheap little dialog shows for cheap money.

They know how to get performers to accept $27.50 per week for a five-times weekly show instead of $40. They buy commercial dialog readers for $5 for a network shot instead of $15.

These program leaders know how to play one performer against another in order to get the price down from $27.50 for the five-times-weekly show to $22.50. They play favorites by placing certain players on several shows, demonstrating to these punishment-piggish players that they can make $100 weekly by playing in five of these five-times-weekly programs at $20 per show.

'Showmen!'

Thus, t tide of script shows swings into Chicago and the 'showmen' sit behind their mahogany desks and issue great statements about Chicago being the script show center of the world. But they neglect to tell about the coffee-and-rolls breakfasts, the skipped lunches, th soup-and-beans dinners that the great performers in these great script shows have to live on just to be on the radio and earn what they call a living.

Chicago could and should be a great center of radio entertainment if it would learn that demoralized, under-fed talent never give good performances and that bargain rate show business is always honky-tonk show business. Big networks have artists bureaus that are trying to crash into the talent booking field and yet they continue to gape in great surprise when their $500 weekly show is rejected by the would-be sponsor who then turns right around and buys a $5,000 name from a standard vaudeville agency. Chicago has no one to blame but itself for the exodus of name shows from the loop.

PICKET INJUNCTION DENIED TO AGENCY

Efforts of the Geyer, Cornell & Newell agency to obtain an injunction against the Allied Printing Helpers Union failed last week in the Supreme Court, Manhattan. G, C & N wanted the union stopped from picketing the front of the building in which the agency has quarter. Placards carried by the pickets charged that the agency was having its printing done by a downtown plant which employed strikebreakers.

Another agency which has been subject to si ilar action by the union is Benton & Bowles.

WNBX, Springfield, Vt., is the first station in the state to inaugurate commercials on Sunday. Uses dignified notes on sponsors. Also airs church services as do other stations.

Military Music Chief German Radio Program

Berlin, Dec. 17.

Official figures circulated by government mention 6,990,741 subscribers to German radio and speaks of an increase of many thousands over figure from the month previous. About half a million listeners are freed from paying usual fee of 2 marks (80 cents) per month, jobless who have no family members that earn anything at all.

Difficult to ascertain number of subscribers that have to content themselves with the home brand of radio program. 'Volksempfaenger' (People's Radio), set which sells at 76 marks ($30), is commonest receiver and cannot pick up non-German programs.

Many restrictions in the way of presenting what other nations would consider entertainment. Propaganda has right-of-way and cancels many a program. Then there is that law forbidding 'Jewish Music' no matter whether it's Offenbach or just Jean Gilbert-Winterfeld and in addition there is a ban on 'negro jazz'.

German listeners to-day get more than their share of Tyrolean yodlers and Bavarian peasant dance tunes. Not forgetting plenty of military march music, from early in the morning till bedtime.

WMCA's All-Nighter

Station WMCA, New York, falling in line with other indie stations, inaugurated an all-night show Dec. 31. It will continue once weekly recordings interspersed with comedy supplied by Zeke Manners, Erwin Cooper and Perry King.

WHN and WNE both have nocturnal clock-rounder programs every night.

When Radio Was a Funny Noise

The Talent

By Bob Landry

In December, 1922, the late George McClelland tried to sell radio at $100 for 10 minutes to William H. Rankin, a pioneer New York City advertising agency man.

'You have your first customer,' said Rankin. 'I'll invest $100 to find out about a new advertising medium any time.'

So on Dec. 30, 1922, Rankin paid $100 to Station WEAF and delivered a speech over the air to find out about radio. The next day he got 15 letters and 25 telephone calls.

Marion Davies was a pioneer broadcasting personality. She got $300 a week in 1923 from Mineralva.

Phil Carlin, Norman Brokenshire, Graham McNamee, Pat Kelly and Leslie Joy were crystal set announcers. They're still in the biz. Johnny Johnstone was a pianist way back but has been a press agent for years. Vaughn De Leath is generally believed to be the first woman to sing on the air and she's still going strong.

'Wildflower,' a legit musical starring Edith Day, was turned from an about-to-flop show into a commercial success in 1923 through the use of radio advertising.

Bertha Brainerd, now head of the NBC commercial program department, was probably the first radio commentator, and Thornton Fisher was No. 1 radio sports columnist. Vincent Lopez, Ben Bernie, Ross Gorman, Harry Reser, Harry Horlick, Joseph Knecht and Harold Sanford were among the first orchestra men to air. Philharmonic concerts were broadcast by WEAF in 1922, and there were Capitol theatre and Metropolitan opera programs about that time.

First big hook-up was Washington's Birthday, 1922, when 42 stations carried Calvin Coolidge's speech. Phil Cook dates from 1924 at WOR; Dale Wimbrow from 1924 at WJZ; Billy Jones and Ernest Hare tried out in 1922 (for nothing) over WJZ, but got paid in 1923 over WEAF for the Happiness Candy Company. A couple of concert singers, Norman Jolliffe and Redfern Hollingshead, were known as Trade and Mark for Smith Bros. cough drops; later Scrappy Lambert and Billy Hillpot became T. & M.

In Aeolian Hall two radio performers, Goldie and Dusty (Hindermyer and Tuckerman) made what was probably the first personal appearance. The Revellers then called themselves the Shannon Four. May Singhi Breen (now with Peter DeRose) is one of the oldest (in experience) continuous air entertainers. Joe White, once the Silver Masked tenor for B. F. Goodrich, is now sustaining for NBC, sans mask.

The Engineers

By John T. Schilling

(Gen'l Mgr., WHB, Kansas City)

I'm no good as a prophet. When I first started playing around with radio in my high school days, using a 'rock-crusher' type transmitter and a quenched or rotary spark gap, I never thought of it as more than electrical experimentation. Later, when teaching naval operators how to use radio telephony in submarine chasing, I didn't think past radio's military uses. The idea of radio as a mass entertainment medium backed by millions of dollars worth of capital was far beyond me, but at that seeing and hearing the radios of the pre-1920's, I doubt if many imaginations could have predicted the radio industry of 1935.

Among the first broadcasts of regular programs were those originating from a group of cluttered rooms on Sedgewick Avenue at the foot of High Bridge in New York City. There Dr. Lee DeForrest and his assistants had installed a transmitter for experimental and program purposes. I was employed in the laboratory during this period of regenerative receivers, honeycomb coils and variometers. Ike Lounsberry, now general manager of WGR, Buffalo, New York, was on the staff, as well as Ed Sargent, now a San Francisco radio engineer. A similar transmitter was installed at the home of the chief engineer, Bob Gowan, in Ossining, New York, for the purpose of conducting two way program tests. That was back in the middle of 1919.

Both Sargent and I thought there was too little adventure in this type of radio, however, . . . Before long we were both radio operators on oil tankers plying the Pacific. I remember one particularly embarrassing spot I got into through my job as operator.

It was on the S. S. Durango, 16 days out of San Francisco for the Philippines, that all hands, numbering 40, had bet heavily on the outcome of the Dempsey-Tunnan fight scheduled Dec. 14, 1920. During the night of the fight static was so bad that accurate copy of the flight results was impossible. However, piecing together fragments of what little could be received, I finally released a bulletin 'Brennan Wins.' The next night, after all bets had been paid off, I discovered to my consternation, that Dempsey was still champion. As a result, the radio operator of the Durango stayed close to his shack during the remainder of the trip and never ventured too near the crews' quarters!

Still adventure-bent, Ed Sargent and I again joined up in 1921, after jointly giving up the sea, for the purpose of installing several radio phone transmitters for the Continental Mexican Petroleum Company. We started with a transmitter in Tampico, Mexico, expecting to go inland later to install several others. About that time, however, the Mexican government heard our successful tests and decided a Tampico radio station would be a fine asset to the Mexican people. We were visited by an imposing delegation which withdrew the provisional permit for the other stations and officially confiscated the station we had constructed. Sargent and I waited around a couple of months, hoping for a revolution or a change of heart, but the order stuck and we were out of a sweet job.

Returning home to Kansas City, I found that the Western Radio Company, headed by Art McCreary, had constructed a small five or ten-watt broadcast transmitter, which soon after was increased to 50 watts power. This station, WOQ, was, as far as I know, the first broadcaster in Kansas City. Sam Adair, now a radio manufacturer in Chicago, and I composed the station staff. We would tinker around with the apparatus throughout the day, and then in the evening put on a two-hour show. The two-button carbon microphone was not available at that time. As a result, we had a miscellaneous assortment of transmitters of the regular telephone variety, some with a megaphone and others arranged in a row on a piece of wood which could be cut in or out in the event they became heated. The transmitter itself followed these general lines—and was certainly not a piece of equipment of which to be proud when based on present day standards. However, so great was the impetus given to radio reception from this station that galena for cat-whisker detectors was at a premium and would bring fabulous prices—anywhere from 50c., 75c. or even a dollar for a small piece which was selective enough to receive the station. As a matter of fact, many times we were unable to keep a supply on hand for the prospective purchasers at any price!

Early in 1922, E. J. Sweeney decided to put a broadcasting station on the tenth floor of the Sweeney Automotive and Electrical School, located across from the Union Station in Kansas City. Adair, Henry E. Goldenberg—now chief engineer at WHB, and I were given the job, and about April of 1922 our 250 watt transmitter began regular schedules. Later a Western Electric 1-A, 500-watt transmitter was purchased by Mr. Sweeney, and on Friday, August 11, 1922, it was approved for operation by J. M. Motley, Bell Laboratory engineer.

Had Two Wavelengths

Thinking of the battles over frequencies which mark present-day broadcasting, it's interesting to note that we originally had two frequencies—or rather, as designated then—two wavelengths. We broadcast markets on 485 meters and music and entertainment on 360 meters. Since this first assignment WHB has operated on no fewer than nine different frequencies during a period of a little more than 13 years.

Today, holidays and Sundays call for a concentration of the best available radio talent, but in the early days, they were a sign to knock off. As a general thing, the average station would broadcast an hour or two, then close down for the day. I remember we remained silent the entire day of August 10, 1923, in respect to the memory of Warren G. Harding, who had died a few days earlier. Modern networks would have caried not only a complete description of the funeral but also a dramatization of Harding's life, reaching the people before newspaper stories and obituaries.

E. J. Sweeney was probably the first broadcasting pioneer to realize the necessity of outstanding sustaining programs to build up the radio audience. On August 15, 1922, he employed an eight-piece staff orchestra which appeared on several programs a day thereafter for the following three or four years. The first orchestra was directed by Lewis Forbstein, brother of Leo Forbstein. Subsequent staff orchestras were directed by George Parish and Paul Tremaine.

Many oldtimers will recall the use of the siren which opened and closed all schedules of the Sweeney Automotive and Electrical School. The sound of the siron started Sept. 14, 1922, and was one of the first station identifications ever employed.

On Feb. 1, 1923, WHB gained nation-wide comment with America's first all-night broadcast—12 hours, 20 minutes on the air. Newspapers and magazines heralded the achievement, and some of them even weakly prophesied that some day broadcast stations could remain on the air indefinitely. Incidentally, Ted Lewis and his orchestra was on this all-night schedule.

One of the first commercial uses of radio with which I am familiar was back in 1923—though really it was not commercial at all in the modern sense. Mr. Sweeney had a real estate tract, known as Indian Village, just outside the southern limits of Kansas City, so we put on two programs daily by remote control from the development. We mentioned nothing about the lots to be sold or the prices asked, but merely invited listeners to come out and hear the broadcast. Thousands would gather at night—as well as several hundred in the afternoon—and from that point, the salesman could do the rest. Within a year's time nearly three-fourths of the lots were sold.

On April 30th, 1925, WHB made radio history by connecting the Pacific Northwest and the Middlewest for the first time with an independent broadcast network. Celebrating the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Long-Bell Lumber Company, WHB originated a broadcast fed to WFAA, Dallas; KGO, Oakland, California, and KGW, Portland, Oregon. The main portion of the program came from the home of Mr. M. B. Nelson, in Kansas City. Then, for the response from Longview, Washington, the circuits were reversed and Portland served as the point of origination. This was also probably the first instance of its kind where broadcast circuits were reversed for transmission in the opposite direction.

Fitz' Big 1925 Stunt

One of the first big radio meetings of the country was the idea of Leo J. Fitzpatrick—then manager of WDAF in Kansas City—now president of the National Association of Broadcasters. He invited many of the most famous announcers in the United States to participate in the Kansas City Radio and Electrical Show, held at Convention Hall during the week of March 2nd, 1925. During the week, more than 100,000 people went to hear Harold 'Hough, the 'Hired Hand' from WBAP, Ft. Worth; Bill Hay of KFKX, Hastings, Nebraska, now with the National Broadcasting Company and official announcer for Amos 'n' Andy; Lambdin Kay, 'the little Colonel' of Atlanta, Ga., George Hay, 'the Solemn Old Judge' of WLS, Chicago, Geno Rouse, then of WOAW, Omaha, Fitzpatrick himself and this writer.

Radio was a lot of fun in the early day, but there seemed to be no method to make it pay its board and keep. Advertising on the air was not considered ethical. However, George Hamilton Stone, general manager of the Sweeney School and director of WHB at that time, worked out a plan which was as ingenious then as it seems ludicrous now. We inaugurated 'The Invisible Theatre,' for which tickets were issued and purchased voluntarily by the listeners at prices from $1 for gallery seats to $10 for box seats. A subscription to the Theatre gave the subscriber not only tickets which showed the section, row and seat number to which he or she was theoretically entitled, but also a monthly mailing of WHB's official paper, the 'Microphone' and monthly programs in advance.

Returns to the Invisible Theatre were surprisingly good, but such a plan would hardly foot the bill for modern radio. It is fortunate that Advertising came along to sign on the dotted line, for without it, not even the most advanced technical equipment could have kept the American public entertained.

Choral Rivalry on WFIL At Commercial Rates

Philadelphia, Dec. 29.

Ivalry between two department store choruses has brought WFIL 11 commercial programs in two weeks. Station is operated by owners of Strawbridge & Clothier and Lit rothers stores. S & C chorus is veteran musical group of established reputation. Lit organization is of fairly recent origin. Latter asked for and got ether shot. That whetted former's appetite, and it, too, went after station.

WFIL execs, rather than put itself in middle by favoring either group, and not being eager to broadcast them as frequently as they wanted, ruled each must pay commercial rate. Rather than be outdone by the other, each went for it. S & C singers are on eight times during holidays, Lit chorusers on three times.

WORC 75% CBS in '36

Worcester, Dec. 29.

WORC, owned by Alfred F. Kleindienst and directed by Edward E. Hill, is planning expansion in 1936, now that it has been made a basic station of Columbia web. Station is one of five known as optional stations of the optional group. There are 21 'must' stations in the basic chain, with two to be chosen from the five optional.

Where WORC has been getting 60% of the Columbia broadcasts, it is assured at least 75% now.

Today's Station Rep a Reformed Idea Man

By Edgar Grunwald

Already in his coffin in 1934, the time broker last year was hauled out to the cemetery for good, and the special rep is, phoenix-like, rising out of his predecessor's ashes. Opinion is now practically unanimous that the special rep is a permanent radio fixture. To that all-important hub of the advertising biz—i.e., the agency—the special rep is the symbol of a victory, and for that reason, if no other, he is virtually guaranteed a stable and a feedbag.

Forte of the special rep is that he capitalizes on his predecessor's indiscretions. Latter were three in number:

First, the time broker ballyhooed himself as an 'idea man,' whereby he went afoul of the agency which jealously tries to create for itself an idea-monopoly in advertising. Any tampering with this monopoly is 100% certain to draw down thunder and lightning, and the time broker drew it down plenty. Today the station reps studiously avoid program suggestions.

Second, the time broker made very few gestures in the direction of exclusive representation. Agencies consequently viewed him as a peddler whose medicine act consisted of covering up a nondescript, or even downright weak, list of clients with a fancy front of ideas.

Third, the agency's scowls made the time broker's client stations uncasy. Anyhow, the exclusive spokesman was made to look like a much better bet to the stations because his sole job is scratching for pennies. This was viewed as a highly worthy trait, and so the special rep's stock started to boom.

The Green Light

Cumulatively these trends worked against the time broker, and in August, 1934, he officially dropped into limbo when Scott Howe Bowen's Group Broadcasters, Inc., went haywire, and Edward Petry annexed G. B. I.'s backbone—the Yankee web. For the advertising agency this represented a victory, and for the special rep it was the green light to go ahead and dig in. Some concern was expressed here and there over the Bowen system demise on the grounds that good idea men are necessary to keep the spot biz alive. But that concern has not proved very overwhelming. The advertising agency began to pay more attention to radio, including spot, and the wails died out in the general spirit of opti ism.

Last year the special reps grew like weeds.

last year likewise proved that the business isn't as yet all milk and honey.

Being in its incipient stages, it was chiefly without rules, except the No. 1 rule to be friendly to the agency. Some reps worked exclusively for their stations. Some worked regionally. Some charged 15% commission and overhead. Some didn't. Consequently the whole field donned a Jesse James suit and went gunning for stations. This inevitably resulted in chiselling rates and hard feelings. A minor form of piracy became a daily accoutrement to successful conduct of business.

Blair's Notion

How the reps will this year fence off their clients against competition is a moot question. John Blair's remedy has been to cut his client list down to a dozen and tear up all contracts as a gesture of goodwill. Free & Sieininger have practically done the same thing by adding a subsidiary company—Free, Johns & Field—to guarantee tiptop service. Edward Petry, on the other hand, maintains a client list as long as a kite tail, and rivets it down with five-year contracts.

Talk has it that such precautions will be augmented soon with a trade association which will outlaw knifing and put some rules into the game. Such talk is gaining strength. But it is still too weak to mean much. Any Moses willing to lead the reps out of their wilderness of chiselling and competition would be sure to be regarded with suspicion. His confreres would think he was trying to steal a strategic march on them, and would set up a counter howl. It all looks like no go, at least under status quo.

Smarter boys, however, do think that a loose union among the topnotchers is in the offing for the purpose of smoothing out station rates. Latter are in many cases so antiquated that they are causing financial leaks, or are antagonizing sponsors. This type of union would thus have only mild competitive angles, and would stand chances of bringing more prestige for the reps from every corner of the advertising field.

For the moment, though, even that type of thing is only in the realm of speculation, and 1936 will undoubtedly see the boys still cutting themselves slices of each other's throa'ts. The business is a Siamese twin. Its future looks rosy from without. But intramurally the competish is causing fever.

We are grateful to those showmen for the confidence accorded us . . . This faith in our organization facilitates the sale of the diversified talents of our clients . . . It enabled us last year, to enjoy the largest gross business in our history.

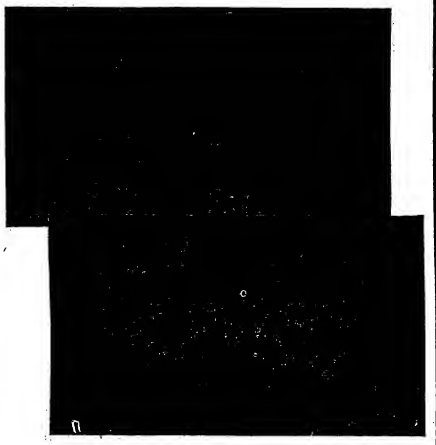
Listeners Like to SEE the Artists They HEAR.



While 5,700 persons wait in the foyer for the second performance of a WLS Barn Dance Unit to begin, 5,600 others enjoy the first show. The place—the Grand Rapids, Michigan, Civic Auditorium. The date—September 17, 1935.

...2,148,420 PAID to SEE WLS Artists in 1935!

FROM September 1, 1934, to September 1, 1935, more than 2,100,000 persons paid to see WLS artists at theatres, fairs, churches, etc. In that time WLS personal appearance units played 733 engagements; shattered 104 all-time attendance records. People pay to SEE the WLS artists they HEAR on the air. And because listeners do HEAR WLS artists, advertisers get results!

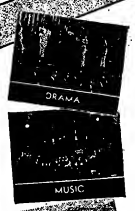
IN SHOWMANSHIP

And First in Power—Coverage—Listener Influence and Years of Service.



VARIETY, the nation's authority on the show business, again scores KSL first in showmanship for 1935 with the following significant comment:

"KSL closely identified with majority community interest. Has one of the best-situated transmitters in radio due to location in Utah salt bed. Has 59 hours per week of live talent, merchandising, powerful mobile short-wave unit. Adheres to 64% non-network program ratio." Additional reasons for KSL leadership are listed below.

When Sir Malcolm Campbell established his all-time land speed record of more than 300 miles per hour on the Utah salt flats, KSL covered the action exclusively; and later interviewed Sir Malcolm Campbell exclusively over a nation-wide Columbia network and over foreign networks of the Canadian Radio Commission and British Broadcasting Corporation; also recorded and rebroadcast to entire British Empire.

These eight half-hour shows, written and produced by the KSL staff, in the middle of summer, 1935, pulled 27,123 written replies from every state in the U. S. and every county in the west.

Originating with KSL, a score of outstanding musical programs have been presented on regular network schedules, including the world-famous Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir broadcast now in its seventh year on a nation-wide network.

The K S L Press Bureau keeps western America in touch with the pulse of the world, with six news periods daily, edited from the complete world-wide reports of International News Service, Associated Press and Universal Service.

LITTLE STORIES OF RADIO ADVERTISING

"Uncle Don's Bank"

The Greenwich Savings Bank is one of the oldest financial institutions in the United States. It was incorporated in 1833 and is, I believe, the largest savings bank in the country today. Greenwich Savings Bank is the oldest continuous advertiser on WOR, also the oldest advertiser on Uncle Don's program, through which many thousands of listeners have been induced to join the Earnest Savers' Club by genial uncle Don.

The Bank is located on Broadway at 35th, "right under" the Empire State Building tower.

Recently a party of youngsters were enjoying a conducted tour of the Empire State Building. From the observation platform, 102 stories up, the teacher was indicating such points of interest as the Statue of Liberty, the George Washington Bridge, et cetera, when one youngster, pointing to a large red and white sign on the Greenwich Bank, piped up with, "Hey, lookie guys, there's Uncle Don's bank!"

Silly, isn't it? They spend 102 years establishing the name Greenwich Savings Bank in the minds and consciousness of several generations of New Yorkers, but Uncle Don in five years has given it a new name so far as the present generation of New York youngsters is concerned. No wonder the bank gives him credit for having brought in more than 32,000 new savings accounts in one year, and no wonder they have stayed with him through all these years, not even dropping off during the bank moratorium.

Uncle Don is an institution, and there are few children living within the effective range of WOR's powerful signal who have not been influenced by Uncle Don's persuasive voice.

They have their pennies and eat their spinach and polish off their oatmeal and drink their tomato juice because Uncle Don tells them to. And, of course, they buy Borden's Mel-O-Rol—that's Uncle Don's Ice Cream.

They wouldn't know a vitamin from an ichthyosaurus, but they get their codliver oil in I.V.C. Pearls because Uncle Don tells them that is the way to grow big and strong. They look both ways before crossing the street and they wash their faces (and even behind their ears) with Fairy Soap.

Uncle Don promotes right living and clean thoughts—clean teeth, too, and that calls for Calox Tooth Powder.

You may gather from this that Uncle Don is the mothers' best friend and helper, and you may gather also that Uncle Don does a very effective job of selling products used by children. He is and he does!

So we give you another famous "audience tested" program. We will appreciate an opportunity to tell you all about it.

VARIETY Says—

"With only 100 watts of power Station WJBK fights so hard and displays so much brain activity that it secures itself a remarkable recognition side by side with stations that have everything WJBK lacks. This is one of the country's best examples of showmanship, at least partially offsetting advantages of power, pull and prestige. Sports is WJBK's big dish. Special emphasis is given to hockey, which yields sponsor coin, but any athletic clash is apt to get attention. Horse racing, tennis, polo, speed boats have all been exploited for listeners and for commercial angles. Uses lots of remotes, ties in with churches and politicians. Foreign language programs in Yiddish, Roumanian, Italian and Polish cock a canny eye at Detroit's large polyglot population. Station has also developed Negro amateur stunt."

To Reach Detroit's Radio Listeners You Must Have

WWJ

WWJ is first in listener interest in Detroit. Every survey that has ever been made proves that. The reasons—WWJ was the first radio station in America to broadcast regular daily programs; the first in Michigan to broadcast play-by-play accounts of baseball and football games; first to bring network programs to Detroit; first station in the state alloting time to community and civic movements, and first to provide its listeners with important news flashes.

WWJ Building for the Future

In keeping with its pioneering instincts, WWJ recently completed one of the most modern high-fidelity 5-KW transmitting units used by any radio station in America. And the new broadcasting building, illustrated, now under construction will house the most elaborately equipped studios between New York and Chicago.

WWJ has a staff qualified to meet all requirements. It has its own 24-piece concert orchestra and a 14-piece dance orchestra. Its personnel includes such well-known members as Ty Tyson, sports announcer, acknowledged to be one of the country's best on baseball and football; Wynn Wright, production manager, formerly a director of production with NBC; and Val Coffey, music director, an outstanding musician, conductor and composer.

1KW NIGHT 5KW DAYTIME

WWJ's soloists include many distinguished in music circles, while its large dramatic and juvenile staffs rank among the best in radio.

RADIO REPORT
WCOP
With Songs, Talk, Musi , Any Day
WCOP, Boston
(Massachusetts Broadcasting Corporation)

Favored with a staff who know how, WCOP, Boston, has clicked in a big way. Only four months old, this Daytime Independent on 1120 kilocycles has the fourth largest buying area in the United States by the ears.

The sales staff set the town buzzing when Jordan Marsh, largest department store in New England, signed with this crack 500-watter. Then, to top the wiseacres who were skeptical that a new station could register overnight, Sears, Roebuck; Leopold, Morse; Kane Furniture; R. H. White; Gould Negative Ion; Ford Motors; Snider & Snider Coal Company; Ital Radio; Pan-Hellenic, and other ace accounts came thru with sweet contracts.

"Variety," after two months, gave WCOP number four rating on the basis of showmanship, out of a field of seven Boston stations.

Located in the swankiest hotel in town — the Copley Plaza — WCOP has definitely proved its showmanship ability, with World Transcriptions, wide-awake program department, and a clear, clean signal that blankets the town and beyond.

This lusty youngster is going places. Already it has COPed some sweet business.—Slatter-y.

WCOP extends best wishes to VARIETY on its 30th Anniversary.

AGENCIES' SHOWMANSHIP IN '35

hand idea man, Harry Bercovitch, to the radio department as director.

Marschalk & Pratt. Mushroomed into the radio picture with the sale of Guy Lombardo to Standard Oil of New Jersey; Bob Crosby to Roger & Gallet, and Gabriel Heatter to Scott & Bowne. Novel construction of the plug in the petrol program gained some attention from the trade.

McCann-Erickson. An off year. National isculi called it quits for the 'Let's Dance' marathon after the idea had run through the originally contracted period. Same happened in the case of 'The O'Flynn' (Standard Oil of New Jersey), while Forhan's dramatization of 'Stories of the Black Chamber' proved no model of its kind. Though a consistent puller, 'Red Davis' failed to return to NBC this season. The account, Beechnut Packing, stayed with the agency.

Newell-Emmett. Still a singleton for this agency, Chesterfield, but with no letup in standard or class showmanship. Earlier in the year it was Lucrezia Bori and Richard Bonelli. Currently it's Lily Pons and Nino Martini. With either vocal combination Andre Kostelanetz gives proceedings that socko touch.

Ruthrauff & Ryan. Year's two major efforts for this agency were Max Baer in a serial for Gillette Razor, and Joe Cook in 'Circus Night in Silvertown' (Goodrich Tires). The former lasted three months and the latter 22 weeks. The Baer tieup, which preceded his bout with Joe Louis, neatly served its purpose. The Cook effort was at best an on-and-offer. From the network viewpoint the agency stands out with dramatic shows of 'The Shadow,' 'Peggy's Doctor' and 'Vanished Voices' type.

Stack-Goble. From a minstrel show the agency switched Molle to a street quizzing stunt, 'Vox Pop,' which had previously done service for Standard Brands. But the pick of the year was 'Dick Tracy' for California Syrup of Figs. Forced off CBS by web's anti-laxative policy, this script show went wax and again proved a good audience builder.

J. Walter Thompson. After doing a brodie with the 'Opera Guild,' Chase & Sanborn's Sunday evening spot was returned to ace rating through Major Bowes and his amateurs. Another flop score for this advertising organization was 'Pathe News of the Air.' Its click for the year was Shell's Sunday night hour, first m.c.'d by Al Jolson and then by Wallace Beery. 'N. T. G. Revue' drew the fire of the Women's Radio Committee on the ground of being moronish and not quite up to the committee's required cultural level. Year also saw the agency exchange Joe Penner for a team of street quizzers and then drop the 'Vox Poppers' for Robert L. Ripley, latter proving that the old dime museum can be brought to the air. The Ripley program is cleverly produced and sold. Alexander Woollcott built up a loyal though ill ited following and when he proved too outspoken for the sponsor (Cream of Wheat) in his air comments he was swapped for a kid show (Buck Rogers).

Young & Rubicam. This agency closed the year with a roster of names second only to J. Walter Thompson's. Keen concept of showmanship, a tendency to keep to the forefront of programing ideas and a well-oiled producing organization have been evident for the past two years. During '35 it kept Beatrice Lillie going neatly for six months under the Borden banner; teamed up Lawrence Tibbett and Packard to big results; brought Gulf Refining back into the fold with Phil Baker, and helped nudge Jack Benny into the No. 1 position. Among other achievements was the acquisition of Fred Allen with the Bristol-Myers account, and the launching of Helen Hayes on a regular program for handsome results.

One Licensee Can Have 8 Australian Stations

Canberra, Dec. 11.

Fight between Australian government, controllers of A-class stations and the Commercial B's was won by the latter hands down. This week the government decided to repeal the broadcasting control regulations recently gazetted, and substitute new regulations providing for a maximum of eight air stations to be owned or controlled by any one person or company.

Previous regulations only permitted five stations to be controlled by one company or one person.

GULF CONTROLS P. A. SYSTEM AT DALLAS

Dallas, Dec.

Gulf Refining Co. has gained exclusive use of Centennial Exposition public address system by agreeing to erect a $120,000 plant and studios from which all broadcasts from expo will be originated.

While Gulf will be allowed only three commercial announcements daily on the p. a. system, it will hold title with expo to the broadcast studios and equipment. Studios and facilities will be free to all sponsors, with Gulf maintaining the technical staff and expo dictating production. Building will be erected by Gulf and is to be completed May 1.

RAMBEAU ADDS TO REP LIST

Chicago, Dec. 29.

William Rambeau station rep outfit is changing its general policy and starting with the new year will open its list to add more stations. This policy follows the settlement of a long continued negotiation which has been going on between Rambeau and the outfit's key station in the east, WOR of Newark.

For some time, it is understood, WOR has been discussing with Rambeau the possibility of his accepting a vice-presidency in the station's organization as chief of the Chicago bureau, which would make the Rambeau organization simply the Chicago office of WOR. Reported that WOR offered $20,000 to Rambeau as a fixed salary for the job. Rambeau has consistently rejected these offers, preferring to operate individually rather than as a branch office of one station.

WOR has now agreed to continue with Rambeau as strictly a representative and with Rambeau in a position to add more stations to his current list of WOR, WXYZ in Detroit and the Michigan network, WIRE in Indianapolis is the latest addition, with a west coast station understood to follow shortly.

Victor Linfoot, formerly of WLW, Cincinnati, joined the announcing staff at WWJ, Detroit.

RADIO BETTERS IN FRANCE

By Robert Stern

Paris, Dec. 22.

French radio is on the upbeat. Until 1934, about all that could be said about it was that it was pretty terrible—dull programs, little and unintelligent advertising, bad technique of broadcasting, poor pay for artists, and anything else derogatory that you could think of. Any criticism was likely to be true.

But in the past year things began to change, and it may be said that broadcasting in this country is now on its way to take its proper place in the radio of the world. Can't be said that it's marvelous already—those revolutions don't take place so quickly, not even in France. But wonders have been done.

Radio here is divided into two distinct parts: Government and private. There is no advertising whatsoever from the Government stations, under decision made in 1934, but private stations, which accept business, are tolerated. There is no partienlar rivalry between the two sets of outlets, and in fact they often collaborate in such things as big news broadcasts.

Both branches have progressed enormously in 1934—the Government network because it is headed by a forward-looking Minister of Posts, Telegraph and Telephones, Georges Mandel, and the private stations because they have made commercial progress.

Mandel is in part, at least, responsible for the improvement in private stations as well as in those over which he rules, for his program boosting has forced the commercial outfits to keep pace with him.

First of all, he has set about to increase the power of the Government network. After bringing the Eiffel Tower, which was out of step with the world, to the wavelength of 206 meters, where it was officially placed by International agreement, he began building stronger stations all over France. Lyons is now equipped with a 60 kilowatt outlet; Paris PTT makes 120 kilowatts; Lille rates 60, Nice 80 and Toulouse 90. Presently stations will be opened at Marseilles (90 kw.) and Rennes, in Brittany (60 kw). With the addition of a new outlet at Bordeaux and one for the center of France, both of which are to follow, this will constitute the new French Government network for local consumption. In addition is Radio Colonials, for broadcasts overseas.

Government has built all this up with the idea of constructing a propaganda agency on an equal basis with those possessed by neighboring states. France just can't afford to be backward in radio.

Following the propaganda idea which is inseparable from all government radio, the French network puts out three news reports every morning—the same one repeated three times, by a system of recording, for the benefit of those who get up at different hours. It is to a large extent a rehash of newspapers, but there is a certain amount of reporting, as well. Especially for broadcasts later in the day, the Paris stations (which serve as keys to the network) have developed staffs of radio reporters who trot around town after news, and then go to the mike with their own stuff.

Local entertainment programs also are improving. The government is beginning to pay radio artists a little something. If an international name should come this way and want to broadcast, he (or she) might have a chance of getting a little cash. Toscanini, in fact, broadcast two concerts with the French National Orchestra in November, and must have got good money for it, although concerts were given in Paris Opera and that was probably the chief source of the revenue, rather than the radio. But fact that so big a man gets on the air locally is significant of the improvement.

Money for the state network comes from taxes on sets, and Minister Mandel has been making a drive to get in declarations from owners, many of whom previously kept quiet and succeeded in escaping attention. Gentle threats of investigation and prosecution brought in half a million declarations in a single month, which meant 5,666,000 new money to be spent on programs and technical improvements. All this money now goes into radio, whereas in previous years it went into the general budget and other government departments were allowed to sponge.

An important addition to the non-government radio business is Radio-Cite, post owned by the evening paper Intransigeant, which bought Radio LL during the year and transformed it for its own needs. (Poste Parisien is owned by the Petit Parisien, morning paper, so the commercial field is virtually controlled by the press.) Radio-Cite specializes in news broadcasts and the like, and sends around a recording car with a mike to all events that looks as if they would make a half-hour or so of broadcasting. In addition it handles concerts, and puts out a certain amount of advertising, although it is still limited in business.

English programs are heard and enjoyed in France, usually being better in quality than the output of the purely French stations, especially as far as popular and dance music is concerned. In the summer Radio Normandy virtually blocks out all other stations for fans at the seashore along the Channel coast, and the English programs there must have as many French listeners as English, if not more.

PROGRAM TRENDS' SAFETY ZONE

By Bob Landry

During the summer of 1935 the auditions were bigger, better, brighter, and notably more Barnumesque. But the bulbs that looked like dahlias turned out to be the old familiar crop of dandelions. Sponsors continued to avoid departures from standard pattern like Communists avoid carrying gold-headed canes.

Straight dramatic shows and comedians in combination with dance music are the standouts this season. But neither represents much of a trend. Instead they may be regarded as simply representing greater emphasis on specific ideas that have proven popular; successful and comparatively safe from the sponsor and the advertising agency viewpoint.

Safety is probably the all-important fact to bear in mind in understanding and interpreting program "trends.' That's true for 1935 as it has been true for the past decade. And it may remain the permanently valid behavioristic maxim of advertising agencies in connection with radio programs.

Agency-sponsor relationship realities, being what they are, the commercial radio program will probably continue to reveal trends only as a reflection of the vogues developed by legit, pictures, concert, vaudeville and the rest of show business. Successes or personalities tried and clicking elsewhere will be picked up for a ride—an expensive ride for sponsors—but radio itself will not develop many successes or personalities of its own. The whole set-up acts against pioneering. Nobody is willing to take a chance—and showmanship is based on taking chances.

Ziegfeld, Harris, Pemberton, Gordon, the film companies, all have their flops, freely admitted to be such, but the flop is not so easily accepted in radio. Agencies will never admit they have spawned a fiasco and sponsors will seldom tolerate one. It calls for a change of agency. Hence the conservatism, the lack of cordiality to ideas and idea peddlers where pioneering or departures from the familiar are suggested.

The Amateurs

Once an innovation is accepted, such as the amateur cycle, it will precipitate uncounted dozens of offshoots. These may appear on the surface to be new ideas but really are twists of a formula which has the stamp of success and hence is safe for an agency to urge upon its clients.

Major Bowes himself while remaining No. 1 in the Crosley Reports for some time had to prove his popularity over WHN, New York, unmistakably, and over a protracted test period, before J. Walter Thompson would take a chance. At the same time there were other straight amateur shows for the networks; while amateur authors, amateur songwriters, amateurs from vocational groups, from definite races, clubs, societies and amateur opera singers, have all followed since.

Taking No Chances

Bearing in mind the hazards of the trade of building radio shows for the other guy, and on his money, the agencies have to their credit a number of sufficiently daring departures from the beaten path. It is unfortunate for showmanship that some of the gambling ventures have not been successes, for the effect is to drive back others to the unimaginative carbon copy procedure.

There may be no particular sense to indulging in speculation as to what might have been, yet one paragraph may here be inserted concerning the networks' failure to hold control over commercial programs. The networks were and might still be (improbable, of course) in the ideal position of being able to gamble and experiment and carry the burden of new program origination, new personality development, and all the rest, so that broadcasting, considered as a popular amusement, would have some sort of central guidance and could avoid the deadening dullness of imitation and duplication. Yet, as the history of radio tells us, the networks were themselves in their heyday the chief contributors to the short-sighted policy of the easiest way.

All of which may simply be another way of saying that from the beginning of radio, as today, the failure to hire showmen and the failure to value showmanship or give it elbow room has been the outstanding program characteristic. Radio, now 15 years of age, has thus far carried through on the momentum of its own successive novelties. A settled habit of borrowing from the rest of show business has snowed under and may have definitely doomed any chance of genuine radio showmanship rising to a position of dominance. (With the agencies seldom friendly to showmen not on their own payroll.)

In Re: The Kiddies

Children's programs have fallen off this season. That is an echo to women's clubs, parent-teacher, and similar clamor that Rollo and Dolly were not digesting their spinach well due to the unholy excitement of goose pimple thrillers. Sponsors responded to this criticism by quitting (to some extent) the kid program field. Without the kidnapping, crooks, wild melodrama and fight stuff it was evidently figured the kid programs would not be sure-fire, and anything less than sure-fire is not wanted by kid program auspices as a rule.

Housewife scripts have been on the increase. So much so that morning and afternoon niches have been cluttered up with programs all more or less lithographed off the same stone. What the other fellow has used and found workable is always good enough for the radio sponsor, it seems. Housewives are bombarded today with a dozen programs all carrying serialized petty household drama and dedicated to the proposition that the American appetite requires nothing but meat and potatoes.

Straight spieling under network sponsorship of kitchen recipes, household hints and how to whip up a trick salad is falling off, leaving the commercially sponsored experts limited to Ida Bailey Allen and others of comparable prominence. However, the cooking school is pretty standard for radio, and what seems to be a tendency on the networks may be offset by an increase in purely local programs of the same nature.

Heavy Star Coin

Guest star programs are perhaps stronger than ever as prices for celebrities are higher than ever. It is now a confirmed policy of the leading agencies to buy only topnotch names. Same agencies that whittle down the obscure but dependable players cough up fabulous fees for names that provide tune-in drawing power but deliver uncertain entertainment.

Guest star things is another tipoff on the agency safety zone complex. Some of the most successful agencies (in radio) consciously adhere to a policy of nothing but the biggest personalities and heavy sugar programs. Program 'trend' in such cases is not necessarily a parade of triumphs but rather a steadfast refusal to associate with anything that, on paper, isn't 90% sure to succeed, or at least look and seem big. It's the third and fourth-string agencies that, unable to protect themselves through sheer size of budget, must take the risks of trying to bring in winners in a tough steeplechase.

42 KMOX PROGRAMS FED TO CBS GROUPS

St. Louis, Dec. 29.

KMOX, CBS station, is growing as originating spot for Columbia network shows. At present 42 programs come out of St. Louis for full network, Southwest and West stations.

Artists participating are Al Roth's orchestra; Eddie Dunstedter, organist; Tom Baker, Edith Karen, Gladys Post, Fred Wild's string trio; Harry W. Flannery and Seth Greiner, pianist.

'The Milky Way' is aired from KMOX for network Tuesday and Thursday mornings.

Gaffney to CBS

Maurice Gaffney being named to take charge of trade news for Columbia Broadcasting as of Jan. 6.

Gaffney heretofore has been managing editor of Advertising & Selling, trade mag.

THE HARD WAY

WHB Tosses Out Laxative and Similar Accounts—for 'Presti '

Kansas City, Dec. 29.

WHB is doing it the hard way. Station has kicked off all laxatives and other accounts over which any doubt existed. Means a substantial temporary loss, but Don Davis, manager, thinks it will pile up more coin, plus added prestige, in the end.

WHB has been a consistent money-maker for some time but wanted to be 100% in the clear on anything that might be deemed offside in taste, etc.

Whelan's 3 Stations

Whelan's Drug Stores will debut Jan. 5 a half hour program over a special hookup composed of WOR, New York, WFIL, Philadelphia, and WOL, Washington. Program will combine the Isham Jones band with Ed Smallie's mixed chorus and have Harry Von Zell m.c.ing.

Show is to originate from WOR 6 p.m. Sundays. United Cigar stanza will continue Friday nights on the WOR-WGN, Chicago, link.

NBC's New Statistical Brochure Due in Jan.

Survey showing the percentage of home sets that are to be found tuned on at various hours of the morning, afternoon and night will be brought out by NBC in January.

Findings are based on door-to-door inquiries made in representative cities. Research firm of Anderson & Nichols directed the probe.

New survey will be an extension of the project that the network disclosed in 'Sales Begin When Programs Begin.' This brochure, released last summer, dealt with the number of housewives that could be depended on for audiences at stipulated half hours of the morning and afternoon.

Cleghorn Off WMC

Memphis, Dec. 29.

John H. Cleghorn, program and publicity director of WMC, radio station of The Commercial Appeal, has resigned to become an announcer for WKY, radio station of the Oklahoma City Times.

He will be succeeded on the staff of WMC by F. W. (Doc Sunshine) Roth.

PRESERVED PROGRAMS AN NBC BY-PRODUCT

Upbeat in how-did-we-do reference recordings during the past year or so is currently prompting the NBC Transcription Service to add such platters to its products.

Clause in contracts made with agencies, artists or sponsors explicity prohibits use of reference platters for commercial broadcast purposes. Must be for files only. Practice of using reference discs for transcription broadcasts has become pretty frequent of late, and NBC is sticking in the protective clause so that the transcription biz (in which it has a big stake via RCA and the Thesaurus) won't be damaged.

NBC Boston Shifts

Boston, Dec. 29.

Reshuffling of NBC's sales setup in New England places Griffith B. Thompson, formerly commercial mgr. of WBZ and WBZA, in charge of all time sales coming out of the territory. Besides selling hookup business, Thompson will supervise the handling of national spot sales for NBC owned and operated outlets.

Other shifts involve Walter E. Myers joining the network's national sales staff in New York and Gordon Ewing coming into the local NBC office to sell both spot and web time under Thompson. Myers was for eight years mgr. at WBZ-WBZA before becoming network sales rep in New England, while Ewing had charge of the lower Connecticut territory.

ERROL FLYNN Dramatic
6 Mins.
FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST
Thursday, 8 P. M., E.S.T.
WEAF, New York
(J. Walter Thompson)

Errol Flynn's one-timer on the Fleischmann broadcast should serve as a warning to picture producers on the care that must be taken with the material their players use on the air. Flynn, for instance, used a portion from Warners' 'Captain Blood,' a bit that carried extremely little weight on the air regardless of its pictorial strength and which could not help the film or Flynn.

Dramatic strength of the 'Captain Blood' excerpt lies in the fight to the death between Flynn and his pirate partner. On the air, however, it came as nothing more than a series of grunts and a death-rattle. It appeared to be aimed chiefly for those in the audience at the broadcast, instead of listeners, and was an all-around mistake. Three others in the cast (names not announced), including the vanquished pirate, added little to 'Blood's' radio plug.

Weakness of the bit on the air, however, was not Flynn's fault. He gave it everything possible, but it just wasn't etherable material. Scho.

'A NIGHT AT THE OPERA'
With Kitty Carlisle, Allan Jones
Radio Disc
15 Mins.
M-G-M FILMS
WHAT, Jersey City

This is a commercial program on behalf of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's comedy picture starring the Marx Brothers, but the stations accept it gratis for the benefit of having a superior entertainment. Kitty Carlisle is a fairly well-known personality, better both in reputation and ability than the average available to stations of the smaller wattage group.

Marx Brothers are not heard on the disc. Probably not available for such cuffo radio appearances. Miss Carlisle and Allan Jones of the supporting cast, plus M-G-M orchestra and choral groups, carry the show. It's a good show replete with big league music. Plugs for the picture not too long nor too bad. Sound effects as of an audience in hilarious laughter are woven into the program as symbolic of the picture's comedy. Only the musical end is given in sample form. Land.

KSANYA
Songs
15 Mins.
Sustaining
WGY, Schenectady

This exotic-named singer has been broadcasting for the past two months on the Thursday afternoon 'Household Revue.' Of Latavian parentage (family cognomen Bloom), she is a soloist with musical groups hereabouts, being a newcomer. Ksanya does numbers in English, French, German, etc. They range from musicomedies and standards to operatic arias. All are interpreted with the skill of the trained vocalist.

Here is a coloratura soprano, sweet, clear, and fairly rangy, but rather light in volume. Young woman's linguistic talent fits her well for a series of Household Revue programs arranged for and dedicated and rebroadcast, via WGY's short waver, to individual countries across the Atlantic. She does not essay as many 'trill' numbers as do most coloraturas, albeit she sang one, and sang it rather well, on a recent three-artist program fed to the NBC red web. Jaco.

COX GELATINE

WJZ, New York
(Jos. Katz)

Ballad songs rendered in a barber shop key and interspersed with homey, familiar chatter make up this one. Harry Frankel (Singin' Sam) could tune in and think it was his alter ego performing.

Berch persistently calls his audience 'girls' and affects other mannerisms designed to build him up with the femmes as an old pal who entertains 'em while they're mopping up the floor or scrubbing dishes. Numbers are all pops of the melody type.

Cox is offering an apron for two box tops, and Berch puts this offer into his chatter with considerable grace. Commercials are comparatively short, and the stanza contains nary a word of advertising at the start.

Betty Wallace, of WJBK, Detroit, escaped injury in crash with fire truck.

THE CRUSADERS
With Elsie Ferguson, Fred G. Clark
15 Mins.
Political
Thursday, 7:45 p. m.
WOR, New York
(Marschalk & Pratt)

This obvious anti-New Deal program (though not announcing its own political affiliation) has been on the air for some time now. It is sugary propaganda asking its listeners to rebel against a dictatorship in the U. S.; to fight for constitutional liberty, sound government and the pursuit of happiness as outlined by the fathers of the Revolution.

Elsie Ferguson, actress, was drafted for the main spiel at this hearing. Her appeal was chiefly to the women of the nation to build character and pure political belief in the home. Her speech was evidently read and free of the histrionics and vocal emotionalism she is capable of delivering. It was an appeal to fight the present high government administration, though not mentioning names or measures, without naming a substitute except the original tenets of the Constitution.

In one portion of her speech she said: 'I've spent the best years of my life in the theatre, and I will spend the rest of my life fighting against a political dictatorship.'

Crusaders' Commander, Fred G. Clark, followed Miss Ferguson for the last couple of minutes of the program, stressing the fact that the future of the U. S. rests on the 'intelligence and clear-thinking' women of the nation. He asks the listeners to become members of The Crusaders, or send criticisms or suggestions, but there's no appeal for funds.

Program goes over the entire Mutual network and is reported paid for by a group of commercial interests in the midwest. In carrying no factual criticisms of the New Deal, it cannot hold much political weight. It must depend on emotional appeal, but instead is almost cut and dried propaganda without much entertainment value. Scho.

NINA ALLEN
Songs
15 Mins.
Sustaining
WGY, Schenectady

A new voice on a sustainer in late afternoon. Originally tabbed a contralto in newspapers and listings on station's billboard, Miss Allen is now announced correctly as a soprano. In fact, hers is rather a high soprano, although she does use some throat tones, in the familiar air-singing fashion, when warbling currents.

On recent broadcasts has been singing an increasing number of better grade compositions. Tone is usually good, the volume fair, the range sufficient, and the enunciation clear-cut. A violin interpolation lent a fresh touch to the rather hackneyed 'Without a Word of Warning,' on one of the last salvos heard—perhaps the best of the series. Accompanist is Johnny Finke. Jaco.

15 Mins.
DENVER DRY GOODS CO.
KOA, Denver

Denver Dry Goods Co., largest department store in Denver, is on the air with five programs a week, three half-hour and two 15-mins. Program caught had Helen Bonfils, daughter of the late F. G. Bonfils, publisher of the Denver Post. Miss Bonfils was interviewed by Barbara Reid concerning the University of Denver Civic theatre. Plugs were inserted as to why people should buy membership.

Miss Reid handled the commercial end besides reading an article on ancient headdresses. Orchestra sciections (transcriptions) opened and closed as well as filling the gaps. Rose.

6 Mins.
FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST
Thursday, 8 P. M., E.S.T.
WEAF, New York
(J. Walter Thompson)

This was Frank Fay's first shot on a network broadcast and he shows sufficient radio comedy possibilities to deserve serious attention. His air delivery is as smooth as his stage work and appeals readily.

Fay's work is more or less quiet, sophisticated comedy. He chose for this broadcast a comedy digest of the song, 'Everything I Have Is Yours,' singing each line before planting the gag, and it landed through the loudspeaker.

Cute by-play between Fay and Vallee on the former's personal message to his four-year-old son, Dion, on the Coast afforded Fay a sentimental windup for his short stint. Scho.

TODAY'S CHILDREN

Drama Seri
15 Mins.
PILLSBURY
Daily Ex. Sat. and Sun., 10:30 A. M.
WJZ, New York
(Hutchinson)

Originally a sustainer over WMAQ, Chicago, this stanza was purchased by Pillsbury a couple of years ago and subsequently has risen high in surveys of the daytime audience. Scripts were penned by Irna Phillips and Walter Wicker, both members of the cast. Wicker, incidentally, is the husband of Ireene Wicker (also in the cast), who is best known as the 'Singing Lady' when she performs under the Kellogg cereal aegis. Here she essays a role as mother of two youngsters.

Like many daytime colleagues, 'Today's Children' is full of the Irish. As Mother Moran, Irna Phillips gets the lion's share of the Erin lingo, but her accent doesn't appear to have improved materially in the three years she's been playing the part. It's still the kind of Irish that is found in caricatures, though the delivery makes up for a good deal.

Where the stanza does its best is in pace and lines. A close observance of the trivia of domestic life and speech gives it an easy gait with all scenes played full length. Adventure is almost completely foregone for sentimentality, and this alternation between weeps and joys is written up to the hilt. Lines in general are a good deal more skillful than the run-of-the-mill serial stuff.

Long run of the series to date has probably delivered a steady audience. Spring is further kept from dwindling by a good time spot (following music) and various free offers.

Murine eye-wash uses two chanters, plus standard syncopation plus the amateur idea. Makes okay quarter hour.

Johnny and Dotty introduce popular numbers with incidental repartee, which has the last sentence generally conveying the coming tune. Diamond's orchestra spotted for solo once.

Amateurs, this time it was a girls' trio, sing in the last five minutes. Listeners urged to write in comment if they think they're okay, so the girls can land a sponsor soon and make some coin. Don't bother to write if they're deemed n.g. In closing all joined in for 'Round and Around,' the Farley-Riley jingle, and it proved quite suitable for the ensemble finish.

Murine uses an eye-specialist to air its commercial message. Bright eyes is the gist of the printed material. A one-time spread on Thursday and pleasantly produced. Br

Swing It!

By Abel Green

West 52d street, York, is the capital of the swing world. The addicts sit around entranced, in an ultra-modern jazz coma, as the boys cut their didoes at the Onyx Club, the Famous Door and the Hickory House.

So what is swing?

Ask any of the swingologists and they 'all vamp-off,' 'Well, swing is something like—.' But none seems able to define just what is. There are many versions.

Says Mike Farley, 'It's jam, but arranged.'

Explains Red McKenzie: 'It's an evolution of Dixie (i. e., the Original Dixieland Jazz Band's style). It's the difference between the old and the new music. It's carefully conceived improvisation.'

Says Wingy Mannone: 'It's a livelier tempo; you know, swingy like.'

Says Red Norvo: 'It's a desire to achieve a definite, livelier rhythm, and only advanced musicians can do that. That it's not just the old style jazz is best evidenced by the fact that only the crack musicians can swing. They alone know how to keep the original melodies in mind and then improvise figurations around the original music.'

Norvo is committed to the proposition that the bands must first 'read the book' on the music; play the theme more or less straight and orthodox, as composed, and then improvise around it. The Benny Goodman school of swingers hit the theme hot 'n' heavy, resulting in cacaphony which sometimes distracts the listener. But the musicians are cuh-razy for it, especially the Goodman brand.

None of the West 52d street swing joints has a dance license or a dance floor. The appeal is all ear; it may inspire to hoof, or sway, or syncopate, or hotcha—as it consistently does—but there isn't room for any hoofing. Therefore, the ear appeal is paramount.

Making Jazz History

A swing of all the swings discloses a wealth of natural color and advanced jazzique which is probably making history in the evolution of the world's music. The swingos are frank in that belief. They think the swing is marking an indelible notation on the evolution of jazz.

With them it's a creed, a code and something of a state of coma. That's why the swing addicts seem so glazed and dazed in their nth-degree appreciation of this here swing business.

Red McKenzie, of the original Mound City Blue Blowers (one of the earliest manifestations of moderated swing) thinks that swing is the American music of the future. He dates swing from 1914 when Nick LaRocca and his Original Dixieland Jazz Band pioneered with their 'Livery Stable Blues,' 'Jazz Me Blues,' 'Dixieland Blues,' 'Bugle Call Rag,' the sundry W. C. Handy blues, etc., all survivors to this day. The only difference is that swing was more hot and jazz, but under expert musicianship it has moderated and modulated. The Wolverines in 1920 furthered the tempo.

McKenzie's theory on swing is that the world's music (symph, opera, etc.) has been going on for hundreds of years. Swing, in its 15-20 years of evolution, has yet to hit its stride in future.

That this broadly prophetic statement is not without merit is evidenced by the nightly gatherings of the congregation in New York's swing spots. They're disciples of a new musical cult and seem proud to be privy to the charmed inner-circle.

At the Onyx Club

In sequence, at the Onyx Club, Eddy Farley, trumpet-entertainer, and Mike Reilly, trombone, head their combo comprising George Yorke, string bass; rank Froben, piano; Artie Ens, guitar; Slat Sloan, clarinet. They started the current musical craze, 'The Music Goes Round and Round,' as Reilly illustrates on an old, battered French horn. The 150-capacity room is jam-packed as Joe Helbeck, major domo of the Onyx, has his hands full handling the crowds. The tapes are up almost constantly. 'Music Goes Round' not only bids fair as another 'Bananas' but it's made the Onyx anew almost solely on the solo strength of the number.

Farley-Reilly ridicule 'Chicago hot' as a dance style. Others call them synonymou Farley-Reilly observe that swing music makes you wanna swing and snap your fingers. They mention the late jazz-great Bix Biederbecke and go into ecstasies and rhapsodies. For 'the Bix style,' to this day lives in sainted memory among the advanced jazz musicians. He was trumpeter with Paul Whiteman's orchestra for years, meeting an untimely death. Jack Teagarden, trombonist, with Whiteman today, also ranks with the jazz idols on swin

At the Famous Door

At the Famous Door, Wingy Mannone ad libs 'Star Dust' with a curtsy to Teagarden, improvising the lyric, 'By a Garden Wall, I mean a Tea-Garden wall,' etc. Mannone also observes, 'Sometimes I wonder why I gotta blow this horn in this peanut cabaret,' all to the tune of 'Star Dust.'

Improvisation doesn't end with the instrumentation. It embraces the lyrics as well. Mannone's best seller on Vocalion is 'Ol' Capri,' his own version of 'Isle of Capri' which is almost nothing like it.

Mannone's personnel is himself with the torrid trumpet; Joe Marsala, clarinet; Sid Weiss, slap-bang bass; Carmen Manstran, guitar, informally perched aloft a baby high-chair. No piano.

No piano is needed, rankie Signorelli, or some other great jazz pianist, is just as apt to wander in and sit in, making corn on the ivories, just for his own amusement. This informality of showmanship and musicianly cooperation is something to marvel at.

No Italo-Ethiops

Especially, when considered that Teddy Wilson, one of the greatest present-day colored pianists is the relief artist here. Any Italo-Ethiopian political complications go by the boards when a Signorelli and Mannone get together with Wilson. For that matter, so far as the swing addicts are concerned Mussolini and Selassie don't mean a thing when the boys and girls talk swing. In other public taverns they were wont to discuss the travails of a political world, but in the West 52d street citadels of swing, all they eat, talk, breathe and think is swing.

The informality of it all is manifested also in the customer reactions as they chat with the musikers between drinks. They voice their requests and approval, unabashed and uninhibited.

The favorite postures of the swing bands approximates something of the old Ted Lewis jazz school of grotesque positions; eyes popping, brass b l a r i n g, arms akimbo, clarinet oblique in air, as the kiddies get hot.

At the Hickory House

At the Hickory House Red Norvo and his Swing Sextet holds forth. Red on the xylo; Dave Barker, guitar; Peter Peterson, bass fiddle; Don McCook, clarinet; Stuart (Stu) Fletcher, trumpet; Herbie Haymer, tenor sax. Again no piano, and again something different in instrumentation.

Norvo is committed to the light swing. He differs from the coarser swing style of Benny Goodman (now in Chicago), who also rates tops as a musician's musician. The smaller the band the lighter the swing, says Norvo who has six men. Goodman has of team of 10-12.

Norvo also champions slow swing. He proves that with a slow drag tempo and yet it's undeniable swing. At the premiere, his wife (Mildred Bailey) is there; also Red McKenzie, who shows how to swing vocally as he figurates an old Bing Crosby tune. Bing's binging is, likewise, modified swing.

Norvo likes Claude opkin's swingo; Willie Bryant's; also Chick Webb's, latter at the Savoy ballroom in Harlem. All are colored.

But swing isn't confined to Harlem or New Orleans, although the Mannone-Prima-Dixieland and kindred exponents, hailing from N. O., evidence there is a natural heritage derived from the Creole capital.

It's something the kids grow up with, states Mannone.

At the Hickory House's Melody Bar, where Red Norvo holds forth, the pros and cons on musical distortion continue.

'Always play a melody course first,' says Norvo, 'and then improvise around it. Gotta sell the song first and then dirty it up with figurations.'

The Wolverines in 1921 and Red Nichols and his five Pennies on the old Brunswick records around 1927-28 are credited ith swing pioneering.

Red Nichols' Pioneering

Nichols' versions of 'Avalon,' 'Japanese Sandman,' 'Whispering,' etc., with the jazz modulations around these basically 'sweet' fox-trot ballads, are largely credited for the present day style of swing. Just a few years ahead of himself is the consensus, although Nichols today is among the radio commercial topnotchers. Sometimes the sponsors think Loring (Red) Nichols is a more dignified billing, but the style's basically the same.

At the Hickory, hot trumpeter Stu Fletcher is a Yale grad and a post-graduate student in England and France, but to the campus and younger crowd that knows what swing is all about, Fletcher is among the foremost exponents of this type of jazzique.

Besides Norvo and the others above mentioned, the colored Teddy Wilson, Benny Goodman (clarinet), Teagarden, Gene Krupa, drums, with Goodman; Louis Armstrong, Chew Berry with Fletcher Henderson; Henderson himself, who orchestrates much of Goodman's stuff and also tenor saxes, Mezz Mezzrow, first sax and clarinet; Benny Carter, third alto; Bud Freeman, tenor sax; Chick Webb, drums; Fats Waller, Gene Gifford and Whiteman (when he wants to) are among the other topflight swingers. And there are others. The late Frankie Teschmaker; Miff Mole, Bix and the rest come within this category. All combos in this school are interchangeable as the men sit in with one another's combos.

Various Styles

Jazz has been going through various progressions but swing is the most concrete manifestation, say the musicians, because more and more people know now just what it is. There has been the scat cycle (i. e., hi-de-hi school of singing); the 'stravis,' viz., the palm-to-palm whisking in tempo; the 'taproom gangs' of ad libbing jam musikers; the barrel-house and clam bake exponents.

As one recording company found, it's not unanimously acclaimed. This disk firm round robined the college paper editors and the more professional phonograph record reviewers for an interpretation of hot music. The sundry collegiate 'hot clubs' were likewise quizzed. All had different ideas on the subject, so the phonograph record-makers and the swing artists have decided to proceed on their own, individualistic ways and are thus, uniformly, propagating a new school of jazzique.

'Nagaski,' 'Capri,' 'R o s e t t a,' 'Dinah,' 'Honeysuckle Rose,' 'Jingle Bells,' 'Sweet Sue' have been swing favorities for jazz figuration along with old school musical comedy excerpts like 'Who,' or any of the sundry 'twists,' 'Body and Soul,' 'Someday Sweetheart,' 'Ain't Misbehavin,' 'Farewell Blues,' 'Way Down Yonder in New Orleans,' 'St. Louis Blues,' 'Let's Swing It,' 'Nothing But the Blues,' 'King Porter,' 'Sometimes I'm Happy,' '12th St. Rag,' etc., as recorded by Goodman, Whiteman, Noble, Gifford, Mannone, Mezzrow, Norvo, Farley-Reilly, etc.

If This Be Reason

Berlin, Dec. 22.

By order of the Berlin Culture League (N-S Kulturgemeinde) new music has been composed for 'A Midsummer Night's Dream.' Genius who wrote same is Julius Weismann, and first performance was given at Freiburg.

Melodies of Felix Mendelssohn were nixed on that Aryan principle.

OSCAR 2ND ON DECK

Hollywood, Dec.

Oscar Hammerstein, 2d, has arrived to start on his new Paramount contract.

Before starting he will confer with Jerome Kern on the music and score now being used in Universal's production of 'Showboat.'

Gill's Miami Spot

Emerson Gill and his orchestra have the band job for the new French Casino in Miami opening Jan. 22.

Gill has been at Webster Hall, Detroit, for a run, closing there New Year's eve, then breaking the jump to Florida via one-nighters.

Music Men's WB Worry

None of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers' loyalists have ever accused the Warner Bros. of stupidity, just because of its schism from the ranks of the Society. No matter what the music business may think of the Warners, none doubts its business acumen. Warners' business aptitude, manifested through a progression of business events, has made Tin Pan Alley fully aware of that film company on financial and economic matters. And that's what's disturbing the music business. Warners' arbitrary withdrawal from ASCAP was not born on the spur of the moment. It's been brewing for many a month.

The music biz figures that the Warners feel they must know they're doing. They must have checked and rechecked their legal position. The WB cabinet on music copyrights indubitably must feel they will best the situation.

If Warners gets more for its music from radio and other large users of copyrighted music, that's the answer to everything. ASCAP, perhaps, is secretly rooting for that, as they, too, may eventually collect in like proportion. For the moment, however, the Society adherents have other ideas.

Along with the WB-ASCAP schism has arisen another element—good will. The Warners, as a matter of simple economics, let out quite a few of its song-pluggers, music counter-boys, piano-players, road men, et al., just before Xmas, effective as of Jan. 1. It's said to represent a saving of $6,000 in weekly overhead. On a strict dollars-and-cents equation, WB probably has no other alternative, regardless of any pre-Yule sentiment. Herman Starr, for Warners, stated that the letout isn't a tactical or political move—it's a decision born of the exigency of circumstances. 'We don't play with people's jobs that way,' stated Starr. But having no radio outlets, and as yet having no exploitation media for songs which are licensed to Warner Bros., firm states it doesn't need pluggers or contactees. When and if licensing agreements ar made with music users (broadcasters, hotels, niteries, etc.) Warner undoubtedly will be compelled to re-engage manpower.

But on the matter of good will, other elements have cropped up. Orchestra leaders, commercial and sustaining, have openly expressed resentment over the WB letout move. Another phase is the theme song linked with this or that maestro. Under the WB breach, effective Jan. 1, Ray Noble may not be legally privileged to theme-off with 'The Very Thought of You,' his own composition and long identified with hi , but a Harms, Inc., copyright and thus restricted. Same has cropped up already for several others. Bing Crosby's 'Anything Goes' (Par) filmusicalization was scheduled for a radio ride, including the new songs, but there is a WB (Harms) angle there which may preclude the commercial use of that score. Fred Waring's commercial (Ford) had $1,100 invested in arrangements of a Rodgers and Hart score and this too may be nixed.

Therein lies Warner's strength. If the music is vital to the program, WB may be in a position to make a series of special deals, per program, for the use of the songs. This may achieve the aggregate gross revenue that WB thinks is commensurate with the valuation of its copyrights. On the other hand, the maestros may be peeved. To which, Warners answers, it is not asking the artists to pay—it wants the sponsors to defray that cost. What's a few hundred dollars more compared to their other investments in radio advertising, say Warners.

There are also certain commercials which thrive on old-time music. These may be compelled to substitute more contemporaneous, non-Warner Bros. copyrights. There are certain commercials which present radio tabloidizations of the old operettas. Most of them are Harms, Witmark, T. B. Harms Co., or Remick copyrights. These sponsors may have to make separate deals with WB, or else entirely alter the nature of their programs.

Then the sponsors may be asked so fancy a figure by Warners that the advertisers may squawk to the networks. WB may thus force the radio chains into licensing from Warner Bros. in that way. It's also the Warner theory that one or another of the major networks will endeavor to beat out the opposition and close with Warners.

The negative aspects on song hit making are several. Outside of the one-time hearing of a tune in a WB filmusical, the public will have little or no reprise opportunities for the favorite tunes. It's generally conceded that a one-time hearing isn't enough no matter if the song is a 'natural.' A song hit is made—literally manufactured through repetitious performance, vocally or instrumentally.

Thus sheet music sales are discounted for Warners for the ti being anyway.

WB's attitude has been that the music business, as a self-contained entity, is hardly worthwhile. There isn't enough money in that. Discounting whatever value music has for films, the performing rights to music become the major source of inome. If automobiles, groceries, cosmetics, nostrums, household wares—in short, merchandise of any calibre, whether necessities or luxuries—depend on music as a good will salesman, the Warners take the position that the music rights are worth much more than under the present and existing deals. And, off the record, all Tin Pan Alley is of the same opinion.

Whether the WB standards of valuation will prove correct, the near future will decide.

Berlin Jewish Cabaret

Berlin, Dec. 22.

Cafe Leon on Kurfuerstendamm houses a permanent cabaret now operated by the Jewish Culture League for members only.

Cast includes such names as Max Ehrlich, Willi Rosen, who were popular before 1933.

Show concludes with a regular revue.

CALLOWAY, LYONS' DATES

Hollywood, Dec. 29.

Cab Calloway's band is spotted for dates at Tacoma, Oakland and the Cotton Club, Culver City, before going into Al Jolson's 'The Singing Kid' at Warner Bros. for three weeks' work.

Al Lyons combo into the L.A. Paramount theatre week of Jan. 1.

Lew Pollack will write two numbers for Simone Simon to warble at 20th-Fox.

'MERRIER' TO WANGER; DOING OWN SCORING

Hollywood, Dec. 29.

While closing with Jack Robbins for the screen rights to musical comedy, 'The More the Merrier,' Walter Wanger decided to do all his future composing, recording and scoring at his discretion, and will not confine it to the Paramount musical department.

Wanger has Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin tuning 'Palm Springs,' and Boris Morros is scoring the 'Trail of the Lonesome Pine.'

Bob Strauss, who play Nappy Beagle in Lulu Vollmer's NBC serial, 'The Widow's Sons' was not properly credited in VARIETY's radio report. e was also in previous Vollmer serials, 'Moonlight and Honeysuckle' and 'Grits and Gravy.'

WORDS AND MUSIC IN 1935

By Abel Green

The Warner Bros.-American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers schism is still the biggest thing in Tin Pan Alley at this writing. It marks the first breakaway of an organized group of song copyright owners from ASCAP, and its possible effect on the industry may be dire.

This is the most salient highlight of the year along with the U. S. government's anti-trust case against ASCAP; the pending Duffy bill for copyright revision; the State of Washington's injunction on the society, and the government's $1,000,000 income tax claim.

On the credit side of an industry, which seems to be usually beset with legal and economic travail—in addition to upheaval within the executive ranks—is the increase of transcription income from $85,000 per annum to $115,000; the possible $1,000,000 per annum income from the small music rights via Muzak ('wired wireless'), Teleflash and kindred services; the increase in sheet music sales; the news that the piano business is up 40% or so, which means that a vast potential, 'second generation' of music students are bound to have an i roving effect on sheet music sales.

The emphasis on ASCAP throughout the of dollars and cents.

Music performing rights are now ig Business. It's $4,000,000 a year. In 1921 only $236,723 was collected, and of that but $81,833 was distributed, or an operation cost of 65%. It's now been brought down to 25% for a $4,000,000 gross income, hence little wonder that the Society is the fulcrum of the music business' economic scheme of things. That takes in writers and publishers alike.

In 1933 the music men started tasting big money. Then, $2,531,673 was collected, of which $1,769,470 was distributed; an operation overhead of 30%. The following year, 1934, the nut was broken down to 25% and it's hoped to be further reduced, possibly to 22% this year. In 1934 the intake tilted again to a new high of $3,760,067, of which $2,521,413 was split up as a royalty melon among the composers-authors, as one class, and the publishers, as another, 50-50 basis.

With this big money as a potentially increasing source of income, Warner Bros., which had invested $8,000,000 in music publishing properties in 1929, decided as far back as May 1 that it should get $1,000,000 a year out of it.

It's now Tin Pan Alley legend that when Harry M. Warner golfed with Bill Paley of CBS, and was told that CBS was doing $8,000,000 a year (and more since that period, two or three years ago) that Warner concluded the radio broadcasters would be out of business without some of the music which his WB firms controlled.

With the WB backout from the society and curtailment of ASCAP income after Jan. 1, the WB publishers just before Xmas cut its personnel radically. Aggregate weekly payroll saving placed at $6,000. Hermann Starr for WB stated this became necessary as song exploiters, contact men for landing plugs, etc., were no longer needed with the radio exploitation channels and other plugging media curtailed. In time, if and when licensing deals are effected, that would again change the complexion of things.

Despite the WB-ASCAP split, both concur on one thing anyway—that radio should be made to pay more for music. But the Society's attitude at the present is that the gradually increasing of the 3% to 5% of the commercial net is about all the market can stand, whereas Warners has other ideas.

Aligned with the anti-music men antagonists on the threatening Duffy bill are the theatreowners, hotels and radio. The Duffy bill would limit copyright infringement damages to specific sums; would, the writers and publishers fear, pave the way for 'a wholesale campaign of piracy'; would refuse injunctive relief against anybody financially responsible to ultimately meet financial damages; would eliminate the present $250 minimum fine, and would in many other respects undermine the copyright proprietory benefits under which ASCAP has been able to flourish.

The government's $1,000,000 tax claim is deprecated by the Society, as one of those things. The anti-trust suit is likewise more or less assured of ultimate victory for the music men. If anything, the WB withdrawal makes any alleged monopoly less so, and it's not unlikely that the government will assent to a decree withdrawing the action on that ground alone. It now remains for the music users to treat independently with both the ASCAP and WB groups.

Apart from legislative, the intra-trade significances have revolved chiefly about Hollywood and the picture companies. The sole remaining independent music publishers, sans film company control, are Marks, Shapiro-Bernstein, Joe Morris, and Mills, of the important firms.

And all have had filmusical affiliations of one sort or another, on occasion. Mills Music especially has been anxious for a Hollywood tie-in, and Irving Mills, after considerable Hollywood propagandizing, and a $1,500,000 asking price, got himself on the map for a spell, but no deals. He even had a Hollywood agent trying to sell the proposition. Mills, Marks and Shapiro-Bernstein are the three most important non-picture company catalogs extant.

Metro's $400,000 buy-up of the 38-year-old Leo Feist, Inc., catalog, lock, stock and barrel, and the ultimate resignation of Edgar F. Bitner, president of Feist's, was the filmusical highlight. It gives Metro, besides Robbins and Olman, the next largest music pub group through having Feist; also sundry subsids. Olman Music Corp. filed one of those 77b reorgs and Metro-Robbins financed the settlements. Abe Olman eventually became business head and v.p. of Feist's, as the Robbins-Metro designee.

Crawford Music Corp. (nee DeSylva, rown and Henderson, Inc.) also experienced financial travail of a sort. Culminated in Bobby Crawford deciding not to sell out to a picture company (Lou Diamond, for Paramount, had been most interested, for a time) and disposed of his contract control of Mack Gordon and Harry Revel to Paramount-Famous Music Corp., in settlement for certain claims. Rocco Vocco resigned as 25% stock owner and v.p.-g.m. of Crawford's to align with WB as professional head of the Remick catalog, after being virtually set to take the Feist-Metro berth. Crawford decided to stick to the music biz in which he was reared.

The film companies and other music pubs' scramble for old catalogs was an offshoot of the Hollywood-tin pan alley alliance. Deals have been made for years in advance for old songs, some of which are legally doubted and are certain o have technical and legal repercussions in future. On the other hand an indie like Jerry Vogel was successful in getting the valuable George M. Cohan catalog of songs away from Witmarks.

Mrs. A. J. Stasny essayed a comeback. Max Dreyfus was ailing and il lted his business schedule. Phil Kornheiser-Ira Schuster music pub combo financed by Southern Music (R. S. Peer) split up when Famous started another subsid, Popular Melodies Corp., and installed Kornheiser at the professional helm. Bob Miller, formerly Schuster's professional and publishing partner, awoke with a surprise, 'Boots and Saddles,' hit.

Other Realignments

Other personality stuff concerned itself t til Henry Spitzer going out of Harms, Inc., as g.m. to head the new Chappell of America with the Dreyfusses and others reported officially or unofficially interested. Lester Santly bought out Berlin's 50% in Santly Bros. (Henry Santly had died) and allied itself financially with Rockwell-O'Keefe's Select Music Corp., forming the combined Santly-Joy firm. Georgie Joy, prof. mgr. for Berlin's, resigned to lend his name and acquire an interest in the new firm. Jack Robbins represented his firm on the Metro lot, but later he got out of the studio (second time) through a clash in policy with the production execs. At a previous time Bobby Crawford had almost closed a deal to head the music department on the Metro lot.

The 20th Century-Fox deal and the Walter Wanger indie production deal with Paramount made the exclusivity of publication rights to these films something for the open market. It depended on the writers and to whom signed, rather than any deals between the studios and the N.Y. publishers.

Eli Oberstein, recording head of Victor, went in as business manager of Harms and subsequently out. Buddy Morris (Warners) now supervising. Harry Link, now prof. mgr. for Berlin's, resigned as prez of Donaldson, Douglas & Gumble, Inc., to accept the new berth, after having likewise given up a piece of Harry Engel, Inc. Charlie Warren succeeded Link at D-D-G and ultimately went to Robbins, swapping berths with Joe Santly, who aligned with Donaldson.

The Gershwins shifted from Harms to their own subsid, under the Spitzer-Chappell banner. Rodgers and Hart, after Metrolzing under the Robbins imprint, returned to Harms. Jerome Kern resigned his berth on the ASCAP board, was refused his resignation. Victor Herbert's posthumous waltz, 'Someone I Love,' was unearthed and published by Feist; just fair seller. Recently three complete musical comedy scores were discovered, and may be produced. Gertrude Stein's double-talk vogue got her a disk recording contract.

Ray Noble's open-sesame into the U.S. finally brought in Jack Hylton and now Bert Ambrose is being sponsored for U.S. entry. Noble's Anglo-American pop song hits established him for international attention. British maestro-songsmith, upon U.S. arrival, chided the American radio sponsors, for killing the bands' personalities on the air.

In Berlin, using a Hylton tour, this past summer, as an example, they reported that jazz was through. The Nazi thing, of course, interpreted itself in other respects for all U.S. music; also the Viennese and native compositions by Jewish composers. This accounted for the world's operetta capital switching from Vienna to Paris.

Buenos Aires tired of its native Argentine tangos, in favor of American foxtrots, whereas the U.S. grew more rumba, tango and waltz-minded.

ix Songs Top Sellers

For months the top songs in performances and sales wer picture numbers until this past month when three independent, non-picture numbers, 'Red Sails in the Sunset,' 'Little Bit Independent' and 'Treasure Island' stepped out. This may partially offset the songwriters' wailing. They see the Hollywood scourge as exterminating all non-picture tunesmiths. 'Boots and Saddles,' 'Gypsy Tearoom,' 'Capri' and others have been non-film songs that stepped out.

The rivalry for the top plugs assumed silly proportions of bribery and proselyting. Hollywood producers, execs, writers, et al., started watching the plug credit sheets and squawking if the songs weren't in the upper brackets.

From the Hollywood stance all this was free radio advertising. Every time a 'restricted' song (i.e. film or stage production) is announced, it must credit its source, resulting in a free mention for the current film releases. The better grade songpluggers themselves met and deprecated the special arrangements and other forms of bribery, including cash, likker, fight ducats, etc., stating that this would literally cashier them out of business. If a song contact man can't get a plug on personality and salesmanship, all the publisher in future must needs do is mail over an orchestration and check. And where would the pluggers then be?

ing Stuff

Along with the plugs, a new school of swing music had manifested itself. It tickled the hyper-musicians and the jazzhounds, but meant nothing for sales excepting for a few orchestrations of the intricate stuff. Still the influence o the Benny Goodman, Louie Armstrong, Fats Waller, Louis Prima, Wingy Mannone, Farley-Reilly (Onyx club), Red Norvo, Red McKenzie, Adrian's and the swing exponents is still here, but principally as a highly advanced form of jazzique.

On the proposition of artists and radio, Fred Waring formed the National Association of Performing Artists as a move to curb the alleged indiscri inate etherizing of phonograph records, tying them up with so local merchants as a radio commercial, and thus hurting the important sponsor and the artist alike. That's still being threshed out as a test case.

Roger Wolfe Kahn, who went fro riches to ragtime, is attempting a jazz comeback. Johann Strauss was ballyhooed for short-lived engagement at the French Casino, Chicago, as th 'waltz king,' but people learned he was only a nephew of the younger Strauss. Ballard Macdonald died at 52. Brooks Bowman, Princeton '36, astounded in Pan Alley with his song hits from the Princeton Triangle Show; he's to get a Warner Bros. songwriting contract after graduation.

The dancehounds started labeling the vet dance maestros nd musicians as the old men of jazz. Kids are hot for the younger blood and endorsed the Casa Loma, Kemp, Knapp, Kyser, Noble, Nelson, Armstrong brand of dansapation. Kids demanded 'new faces' on the dance rostrums.

Besides the lingering hillbilly and 'Isle of Capri' vogue in pop songs, sales have gradually upped. 'Capri' sold 500,000 copies; 'Last Roundup' did 650,000; 'Spinning Wheel' (all last year), 800,000. Romberg's 'When I Grow Too Old to Dream' is above 600,000 and has gone an astounding over-400,000 in England. 'Capri' was greeted with a threatened suit by J. & J. Kammen, Yiddish musical comedy publisher, allegi that it's an infringement on 'Yussel,' a doggerel from Second avenue musical comedy of 1924. Two Astaire pictures, 'Roberta' and 'Top Hat,' with scores by Kern and Berlin, highli hted the picture grosser, although the Warners Bros. crop and Metro's 'Broadway Melody' also stood Earlier in the season the 'Anything Goes' (legit) usic was widely plugged.

Writers' Problems

E. C. . , ASCAP g.m., went to the Coast as a builder-upper for the writers, on Society problems. In the east Nathan Burkan discouraged the filmusical tunesmiths by stating that 70% of the contracts ceded all priority rights to the studios, so that the WB schism seriously affects those writers under Warner affiliations, past and present, who, however, would remain faithful to the ASCAP cause. Al Dubin and Harry Warren are notably thus in a muddled position. Other name composers have protected themselves in the past by specifically reserving certain rights, including performances.

The ASCAP to-do created a peculiar strengthening of solidarity in a business notorious for its petty rivalries and chiseling. The capping climax was Sam Fox's withdrawal of a suit for reclassification credit against ASCAP on grounds that he didn't want to harass the Society at this time. Robbins had previously settled a similar suit and as did Marks.

oving to R.

In Pan Alley is moving more and more into Radio City. Now housed there are Harms, Witmark, Remick, Marks, Sam Fox, Chappell. Feist's would have gone over but for its long lease on Broadway; however, the downtown Cooper Sq. business office was consolidated with the uptown professional headquarters.

Femme singers who used to be top plugs have slipped on the air. Cantor, Lombardo, Waring, Vallee, Frank Parker, Ozzie Nelson, Lyman, Fio Rito, Denny and Whiteman rated the hit makers. The Crosbys, Powells, Kate Smiths, Dowmeys also important.

Harriett Hilliard (Mrs. Ozzie Nelson) getting her film opportunity in the new Fred Astaire picture, 'Follow the Fleet.' Ben Bernie divorced and remarried; Mrs. B. also remarried—and all four good pals.

Fox Film added the Sonnemann Music Co. and Edwin F. Kalmus, Inc., catalogs.

ASCAP income from the first quarter of 1935 started on the upbeat. It was 10% above the corresponding period for '34, or a $700,000 royalty melon of which class AA writers received $2,900 and the top-flight publishers got $12,000-$20,000 for that quarter, according to the point-system and repartition of the Society. Harms (a WB property, incidentally) collected the highest amount for that quarter, 20G's.

Second quarter income was up another $100,000 above that, or an $860,105 royalty melon. Third quarter (summer period) was the highest in the history of ASCAP, $800,500. Which meant that up to this period the AA writers earned $8,000 for the period and the top-bracket publishers benefited $40,000 to $80,000, not counting the final quarter, which is hoped to exceed $4,000,000 in all. The three quarters thus far totaled over $2,300,000, with the cream income for the final quarter of the year (fall period) always topping everything.

In line with the Society divvies, the writers' branch splits up prize money quarterly, intended to compensate hit writers and others who contribute to the 'prestige of the Society,' even though not collecting adequately through juniority and lack of availability. These are the advantages in favor of the older members on the royalty melons.

Royalties in 'Variety'

VARIETY published a complete r partition of the Society's 1933 royalty split-ups to writers, disclosing some interesting things on the number of performances and how much (or little) certain prolifically performed songsmiths collected. Others, inactive in recent years, but with a fertile background catalog, benefited much higher in proportion.

Further in the ASCAP situation, when Herman Starr, Warner Bros. v.-p., representing the WB music pub holdings, succeeded Buddy Morris on the Society's board, he demanded seeing the books; was gr nted that privilege after initial balking; then stated that his acceptance of board membershi was not to be construed as any endorsement of ASCAP's business management. However, previous WB board members had made no such mental or oral reservations, which is the Society's present-day rebuttal to the WB innuendoes and attacks. WB at that time sought to ally Mills and Feist (both non-film publishers at the ti against ASCAP in a show-down, but no dice.

These are sundry manifestations of the Warners' carping and captiousness against ASCAP ever since May 1, when Harry M. War er ex ressed himself as he did on the WB-ASCAP situation.

Among the pop song outstanders in 1935 were: ook At,' 'Top Hat,' 'Cheek to Cheek,' ' 'Old Faithful,' 'Middle of a Kiss,' 'Never Say Again,' 'Grow Too Old to Dream,' art of the All I Need,' 'Lullaby of Broadway,' 'Chasing Sha ,' ' Love Find a Way?' 'Mood for Love' 'Accent outh,' 'Paris in the Spring,' 'Truckin',' 'Blue Moon,' 'Object of My Affection,' 'Continental' holdover from last year, as were some of the other early 1935 numbers), ' In January,' ,' 'Goodship Lollipop,' etc.

mong the pop song antagonists was an o cial pronu iamento from the Society for the dvancement of th Colored People against the following compositions w the race champions deprecated as being either offensive or derisive: 'That's Why Darkies Were Born,' 'My Old Kentucky Home,' 'Swanee River,' 'Muddy Waters,' 'Carry Me Back to Old Virgin 'River Keep Away from My Door,' 'Without a Song,' and 'Underneath the Harlem Moon.' Chiefly predicated o the usages of the words, darkies, coon, etc.

British Stance on Tin Pan Alley, Hollywood's Influence Abroad

London, Dec. 29.

The most definite thing that seems to be emerging in the popular music field in Britain is the increasing strength of the home product, and whereas a few years ago any representative list of best sellers would have shown a predominance of American songs, the position is now reversed. In analysis at the present time gives about 75% to the works of English tunesmiths.

One reason for this is that the cream of America's composers are under contract to film producers, who are concerned more about situations in their pictures than for the merit of the songs, and whilst film directors hold the idea that all they have to do is tell a writing team to deliver three songs for a picture to be shot tomorrow, they are going to get material that owes its existence more to perspiration than inspiration. The best work in this field is still being turned out by the older, experienced writers such as Jerome Kern, Irving Berlin and Sigmund Romberg, who have had training in the musical comedy world, and who are in a position not to be rushed.

English writers on the other hand, have developed a keener sense of the commercial type of song. They have no desire to emulate the clever rhythm of their American brother, because in the first place they realize they cannot compete, and secondly, whilst this type might be very popular with the dance band leaders who will be glad to play it provided the publisher presents him with a $40 orchestration, it doesn't sell.

Fostering Native Talent

The English publisher is developing and fostering native talent because he cannot afford the high figures that are still being asked by many American publishers as a guaranteed advance for a speculative catalog that may not produce even a single hit in a year. On the other hand, he realizes that if he can steer an English song into a top position, he is assured of a market in America putting hi in the position of probably receiving a handsome check instead of having to send one; and although it may still be more blessed to give to receive, there's still a lot of satisfaction in receiving.

Some of the English publishers are still keeping a watchful eye on the possibilities of musical film productions. Up to the present, this has only meant the adaptation for the screen of a well known musical comedy that has shown its worth on the stage, or else some cheap affair produced to satisfy the quota law. If it is particularly good, it may have a run as a second feature, and even the most patriotic Britisher is prepared to admit there is nothing in this line to compete with such productions as 'Roberta', 'Top Hat' and 'Broadway Melody of 1936'. Still, there is plenty of optimism, and what is more, plenty of money for British pictures. Given the right facilities they should provide film fans with something good in musicals. They may in the first instance have to import some artists and writing talent, but they will eventually discover sufficient homemade material to give their productions a British label. In addition, the publishers are ever mindful of the possibilities of an association with a film producing company—on the same lines as in America when Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer took a 51% interest in the Robbins Music Corp., and more recently bought out Feists, or the deal whereby Warner Bros. acquired all the stock of a group of music companies.

Up to the present the only thing that has happened has been the formation of the Cinephonic Co., owned by Gaumont-British and Campbell-Connelly, but given the opportunity to make successful English musicals, there would be the possibility of closer association with some of the publishers who possess valuable standard catalogs, and who would in addition be very useful in the matter of clearing copyrights.

A very encouraging sign has been the sales of some of the leading numbers during the past year. It has been shown that it is still possible, with an exceptional hit, to reach somewhere near the 500,000 mark in a cheap sixpenny (12c) edition. The best have been 'When I Grow Too Old to Dream', 'Red Sails', 'Roll Along Covered Wagon', 'The Wheel of the Wagon is Broken', 'Street in Old Seville', 'Smoke Gets In Your Eyes' (25c). These are all of the simple melody type, and it is Maggie Smith who walks into a Woolworth store in Manchester and puts down the nimble 'tanner' for something she wants and can play, that is more use to the business than the Honorable Montmorency who lazily applauds a clever sophisticated composition when played by a star band at the Hotel Splendor, but whose enthusiasm doesn't extend to the purchase of a copy.

Coast's Music Stall

Hollywood, Dec. 29.

Local independent radio stations are holding out against signing with Warners or American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers until their meeting tomorrow (Monday), when they expect concerted action will be taken. Checkup revealed that none have signed yet, yelping against the added tap by Warners which, it is claimed, can't be passed along to the advertiser.

Warners has served notice forbidding use of its catalog after Dec. 31 by non-signers of a three-month temporary contract.

N. Y. Niteries Think Even Numbered Streets Might Be Bringin' That Biz

It may only be coincidence, but the New York nitery entrepreneurs point to the fact that the eastbound (even number) streets have much to do with the success of nite life. It's another version of the Park avenue inroads on Broadway.

The bull market for the West 52d street spots (Tony's, Leon Eddie's, No. 21, Onyx, Healy's and 20-30 others on that one street) is borne out by the fact that taxi traffic from Broadway wends eastward. The Versailles on East 50th and the Morocco on East 54th, almost under the Third avenue 'L' and certainly not swankily situated, but getting a bon-ton draw, all support the theory of flowing eastward from Broadway.

The big on-Broadway spots such as Paradise, Hollywood, etc., are clicking better than ever, ascribed to the usual flow of transients plus improved theatrical condition. Theatres in the Times Sq. sector stimulate biz for the adjacent eateries before and after the curtain.

REICH WARNS MUSIC PUBS TO BE CAREFUL

Berlin, Dec. 22.

Union of German Music Publishers has been informed by the President of Reich's Music Chamber that great caution should be observed in offering compositions of works 'not wanted.'

Union had inquired whether Mendelssohn, Offenbach, etc., would come under the ban and whether their names would have to be taken out of catalogues still on file.

Official reply said there would be no immediate prohibition of such works, but in the future new catalogues must refrain from offering any such 'unwanted numbers and names.'

Waring on NBC Jan. 17

NBC's share of the Waring program (Ford) has now definitely acquired a time and date.

Will hit the Blue each Friday, starting Jan. 17, from 9:30 to 10 p.m. CBS retains a similiar Waring stanza on Tuesday eves.

Farley-Riley combo, now spotted at the Onyx club, New York, has gone under the Rockwell-O'Keefe management.

After seven months in the east, Tom Coakley and his orchestra open a three months' engagement at the Hotel St. Francis, San Francisco, Jan. 1.

Speed Boys

Hollywood, Dec. 29.

In seven days' elapsed time Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart landed here, dashed off two numbers for Pioneer's 'Dancing Buccaneer' and were back in New York.

Songs are untitled. Team now working on melodies and lyrics for 'On Your Toes.'

IRVING BERLIN ON WRITING FILMUSIC

By ABEL GREEN

Among 1935's filmusical outstanders was 'Top Hat,' which brought Irving Berlin to renewed attention as a song hit knocker-outer.

Berlin's experience in Hollywood, at first strictly a business proposition ($75,000 for the songwriting chore, against a percentage of the gross, which may double that amount) quickly assumed an adventure. Berlin, vet songsmith that he has been, realized that the creation of filmusical material had to assume the proportions of an oracular proposition, and not merely the fashioning of a ditty to fit a situation.

It meant that the songsmith in writing for talkies had to guess right the very first time. Berlin wrote 17 numbers for 'Top Hat' and picked five. If it weren't for a studio suggestion for a spec dance number there'd be only four, and 'Piccolino' would have been discarded.

But apart from placing a new valuation on the importance of the songwriter as a definite artificer for the screen, it meant that the songs had to be more certain of clicking at first hearing almost, else their value is nil, and ofttimes negating the boxoffice chances.

Berlin found it harder working on a film score than doing 20 different song items as one does for a stage production. There, too, only a couple of songs may stand out, but there's considerable patter, chorus numbers, openings, finales and seemingly inconsequential build-up which requires just that much more effort to contrive. Furthermore, comparison between a stage and screen production is that there is always the advantage of the road break-in. Not so for films. Once it's in the can, that's that. Even the previews, retakes and mayhaps even remakes doesn't achieve the same public warming-over, the same moulding process as after a series of performances in Baltimore, Philly, Washington or Boston, prior to Broadway.

4 Nos. on 'Hat'

As result Berlin found it took him four mouths to fashion 'Top Hat,' constituted 50% harder work on the whole, and necessitated the creation of what must perforce be 'instantaneous' hits. If the song isn't there as a quick click, to fit the situation, it's no good.

No amount of radio builder-uppering in advance helps. For one thing, from the Hollywood and boxoffice angle it's a hindrance rather than a help. If the songs are there, they'll be overplugged and the b.o. values are militated against. If not there, it won't help much—and the same thing also happens, overfamiliarity of the song pattern.

A successful filmusical and its score must sort of rise to popularity coincidentally, keeping pace between the radio plugging and the boxoffice response. Thus it's a mutual beneficial affinity. The only benefit to the surprise song hit may be to the publisher and songwriter, but since Hollywood underwrites everything, Tin Pan Alley has now assumed a new regard for the preservation of the film capital. That's a prime consideration, especially when the music publisher is a Hollywood-financed entity. Irving Berlin, Inc., is not, but when Berlin, individually, has collected $75,000, that's something else again.

The censorship angle also is no small item for the songsmiths of the screen. The ordinary pops which rhyme sophisticated lyrics and perhaps suggest pash romantic situations can't chance that when incorporated into a screen production intended to play in the hinterland cinemas.

Paris Nite Life, 1935

By Bob Stern

Paris, Dec. 22.

It's a habit of visiting Americans to say that Paris is not gay any more, that there's no night life left. That isn't true. There's still plenty of night life, only it's not as wild as it used to be. It's Frenchier, and the French take their pleasures more soberly than the Americans.

The change is not so much in the night life of Paris as in the Americans. When they come, they don't go out much. They go to bed at 1 or 2, when 6 or 7 used to be the rule. Why blame Paris for that?

The chief difference between 1934 and 1935 in Paris niteries is that in 1935 things were more settled and steadier. The year before there was a little vestige of boom ideas. Lots and lots of spots, some of them big, kept opening up, particularly at the beginning of the season and at turning points such as just before Christmas, and they kept closing again just as fast.

In 1935, on the other hand, there were relatively few new openings, and not such a terrible epidemic of closings, either. The nite clubs seemed to have found their level; steady appeal to the local trade, lower prices, quiet class in certain spots, popular gaiety in others. Considering the drops in the cost of drinks and even a certain small measure of tax relief, business has not been so bad.

Changes in where people go along toward midnight and after have not been very great during the year.

The big night section remains Montmartre. Some years ago Montparnasse made a bid for the trade, but couldn't hold its gains. Montparnasse remains a cafe neighborhood, where international Bohemians and those who would like to hang around all evening drinking cafe cremes and bocks, and occasionally fines a l'eau, but there are relatively few places offering entertainment.

The Jockey, and the Villa, where Joan Warner danced before she left on tour in the fall, where very nearly alone during 1935, with the exception of a few more or less popular dance halls without shows. In Montparnasse people don't go to shows: they're a show in themselves.

Champs Elysees Sector

The Champs Elysees section is putting up a bid for the business, and is actually making progress. But in real night spots it is still deficient. There aren't enough of them yet to make owlish people like the neighborhood; if you don't like the place you're in, you can't step out in the street and have the choice of a dozen others. There are Harry Pilcer's new place, and the Villa d'Este and a new little one called the Sardine Can, and Boeuf sur le Toit—but what else? Not much.

The Champs Elysees was rather the neighborhood of big daytime and early evening cafes, in 1935. Triomphe opened around New Year's, and the Florian—both enormous places with sidewalk tables—adding to seating space of the Colisee, the renewed Rondpoint, the Marignan, Tortoni's, Fouquet's and a dozen smaller places.

For just a bite after the theatre, these places were popular during the year, as well as a number of cafes in other parts of town, including the Opera-Madeleine section. Weber's, in the Rue Royale, has always been popular with the French for supper snacks—Welsh rarebits, oysters, special sandwiches and things like that. There is no show, nor band. Another of the same type, but a bit off the beaten track (unless the show you're coming out of happens to be at the Comedie des Champs Elysees) is Chez Francis at the Place de l'Alma. Maxime's, hot spot of the '90's, has done a comeback, too, since Albert, of the Ambassadeurs, has been head waiter there.

ontmartre Still Tops

For real niteries, there's nothing like Montmartre.

The class spots that have been going for several years held their position in 1935. Chez Florence, sponsored by Victor, remains the place where you can see most of the name personalities of Paris, American and otherwise. As in previous years, the place has no show except for the opening of the season. This fall the opening attraction was Nora Williams, brought over from London; now, there's just Willie Lewis' colored band, which sings as well as providing some of the best dance music in Paris, and the customers themselves, who love to look at one another.

Two Russian places are holding their own among the high class trade: Scheherezade and Casanova. At the latter place the current attraction is Revva Reyes, little Mexican singer who has been in Europe for years now. A newer and perhaps even more prosperous spot of the same type is Monte Cristo, which emphasizes gypsy orchestras as pullers-in. Those spots are all small, and very thick with Continental atmosphere, and depend mostly on champagne sold on a sliding scale, with perhaps $10 a bottle a fair average.

Most of the newcomers in 1935 are places a little less expensive, really livelier and getting a Frenchier trade. Les Nuits Bleus classes as one of these, a spot which at the beginning of the fall season, at least, made a real effort to give a good show, and made offers to most of the outstanding American acts coming to town, although in many cases not big enough offers to induce them to stay.

Even more successful, as a novelty, is the Grand Jeu, a sort of annex to Tabarin, on the corner of the Rue Victor Masse and the Rue Pigalle. This place is plugged in the Tabarin show as where to go later in the evening. It has a good French band—Maurice Toubas'—lots of people hanging around to see that the customers have a good time, and an ingenious device to make the floor seem full all the while; the orchestra is on rails, and when the room is empty it closes down on those who are in the place, reducing its size.

In addition to these, there are innumerable places of approximately the same class, far too many to name, which in 1935 were a bit steadier than in previous years. Along the Rue Pigalle and the Rue Fontaine there's one at almost every door. When you walk along these streets at two or three o'clock, Paris looks as gay as ever, with the exception that you don't hear much American and you can cross a doorstep without needing to fear that all your dollars will be gone before you get out.

Among them, special mention should be made of Le Trone, last season called La Noce, operated in a very noisy, middle-class, French way by a female impersonator calling himself O'Dett. He gets the crowds, and sells very little champagne.

The Strip Joints

There are also a couple of places specializing in stripping: Eve, and Chez les Nudistes, which used to be Zelli's in the bonanza days. There's one eminent Negro place. Melody's, on the Rue Fontaine near the corner of the Rue de Douai, where a good number of the American Negro performers now in Paris find work.

Across the street is a spot which is in no sense a night club but which is one of the liveliest spots, all night long, in the neighborhood: Boudon's cafe, where the colored entertainers of Paris all hang out. This is an ordinary French zinc bar, and many of the customers are Negroes from the French colonies, but the Americans go there, too, and the spot is as close to Harlem as any place in Paris.

The Creep Joints

The strictly dance halls, in 1935, did about as good business as any places in Paris. Two places are outstanding: one in the heart of Montmartre, the Ange Rouge, which keeps open all night and during the past year has become one of the most popular places in Paris with girls of the stenographer class to get their exercise. The other is the Colisem, a bit further east in the Rue de Rochechouart, older but still keeping up its end. Both of these places are primarily for dancing, and anyone dances with anyone else—you don't have to bring in your partner—but they do just a spot of entertainment sometimes: a little lottery, or a ballroom team, or something of the sort. Colisem, progressive and with its eyes on the United States, has introduced taxi girls. No other places have followed suit.

The old Bal du Moulin Rouge, which also is primarily for public dancing, stepped out in 1935 into the entertainment business, and now gives something which may be characterized as a floor show. Besides a ballet, it sometimes uses an English line and a few acts. American turns that don't ask too much can get a few weeks' engagement here. This is a new development in the strictly dance places.

RENAISSANCE OF NITE CLUBS

By Abel Green

National economic conditions being admittedly better, the niteries are benefiting proportionately. It's axiomatic that when folks want to step out of nights and play times must be good. Perhaps no better index of the national financial batting average is to be had than at a hot night spot.

The people, of course, deter ine whether or not the improvement is general or just limited to a handful of illegitimates, such as obtained for a limited period just before and after repeal. That the mass points are doing mass biz is ample enough reflection on upped conditions.

In line with the bull market for the niteries around New York, and in every key city throughout America, there were certain trends and manifestations in the past year. Most salient of which is the Gallicizing of America. It's no idle statement that New York today is more Frenchy than the Paris boulevards.

Similarly every key city has its centre of nocturnal divertissement and diversion where leisurely dining has become a renewed American art; where vintages in the cellar are beginning to mean something; where it's apparent that the same fol-de-rol that obtained in Paris, before Wall street laid an egg, can be had right here at home. Besides which, it's all very necessary in view of the rate of exchange and the political boiling pot on the Continent.

The yen to step out manifested itself in sundry manners. Schrafft's chain of ice-cream parlors and dainty-sandwich dispensaries started serving scotch with whipped cream and rumbas with maraschino. The Childs chain of eateries likewise was dispensing pancakes with m. c.'s and swing music.

The French Casino on Broadway remains the big money-making outstander, opening with the new (second edition) 'Folie Parisenne' to a $50,000 gross. A Miami counterpart opens in mid-January.

Cabaret-Theatres

Casino de Paree, N. Y., which started the cabaret-theatre vogue two years ago, gross upwards of $40,000, started slipping through a combination of circumstances; (1) when it opened a competition to itself, in the form of a Manhattan Music Hall, around the corner on Broadway and 54th street, and both started knocking off the other. The managerial tiffing, resulting in Billy Rose's walkout, capped the climax. In the late winter of this year the Casino de Paree, Inc. took a financial bath, listing $121,000 in liabilities and $116,000 in assets.

Washup of Harlem was prophesied, but after readjustment of tariffs, waiving of the couverts, etc., Harlem is doing a valiant comeback, flourishing on the psychology of slumming in the black-and-tans. Connie's Inn, however, decided to physically transplant itself into the old Palais Royal at Broadway and 48th street.

Barney Gallant 'retired' and his erstwhile partner, Arnold Rossfield, with Nick Prounis (ex-Nick and John), backed by a Greenwich Village syndicate opened the Versailles on East 50th street. It's been cleaning up ever since. Whereupon Gallant established an East 54th street Gallant's, after many years in the Village.

Joe Zelli forsook Paris for several New York ventures, all not so good, and Boris Thomashefsky, dean of the Yiddish tragedians, transplanted his thespianism to the accompaniment of a mixed shiksa-kosher chorus into an East Side nitery known as the Roumanian. Fan dancers also became part of the new East Side night life.

The cabaret-theatre vogue forecast a whole string of 'em, but not until the late fall did the first such spot open outside of N. Y., the Mayfair Casino, Cleveland. Initial fever of converting theatres into cabarets finally prompted somebody to suggest ripping out the tables and chairs putting seats into the place and converting it into a theatre. But so far it's a bust, probably too big for the town.

West 52d street, New York, heritage of the prohibition era, with its row upon row of speakeasies, is the 'Montmartre of New York.' There are now between 20 and 30 niteries of all types, prices and ranges congested within one block on West 52d, Fifth to Sixth avenues. It eclipses the bistros, bars and boites of Paris' famous hilltop Montmartre when they were scattered all over Place de Clichy, Rue Pigalle, and Boulevard de Clichy.

Last New Year's grosses of $25,000 for the Big Night indicated to the class hotels that there was big coin in this nitery racket. Accordingly all started simulating the class speakeasy atmosphere of the pre-repeal era, installing attractions in trickily decorated rooms. In recent months a wholesale name-band comeback was essayed. This brought back also the 50c and 75c couvert (doubled on Saturdays and holiday eves).

Fancy Coin

Nitery attractions became limited and good ones enjoyed fancy figures. To this day there's but a handful of surefires, and the tops can get from $2,000 up to $3,500 a week.

Hotels also became class-conscious on the formal dress and otherwise, as did some of the other spots. Few have been able to get away with it, and the hotels found it wisest to operate two rooms, one for the informal patronage and the other for strictly formal supper dansants.

Socialite entertaining vogue continues with Eve Symington at the Hotel St. Regis' King Cole room (N. Y.) proving a big draw. Hector's Club New Yorker clicked with Beatrice (Timmie) Dobbin, schoolmarm from the fashionable Foxcroft (Middleburg, Va.) finishing school who gives out hotcha at the ivories, and now has Alice Hathaway Burrage of the Boston Back Bay sector. Chateau Moderne even advertised for a debutante chanteuse. Others likewise essayed it. Elsa Maxwell extended her socialite party m. c.'ing into framing galas in the niteries, latterly at the Versailles. She started at the Casino de Paris, now no more. Place Piquale, which flourished with the first socialite songstress, Miss Symington (Senator Wadsworth's daughter) is likewise no more.

The Fred Astaire filmusical vogue was and still is reflected in increasing scope for ballroom teams. All the hoofers credit Astaire with having made America more dance-minded, and reflecting accordingly in their favor, on renewed vogue, increasing salaries, etc. As result, Tony and Renee DeMarco, Veloz and Yolando, Ramon and Renita, Rosita and Fontana, Dario and Diane, Lydia and Jeresco, Medrano and Donna, Maurice and Cordoba, Minor and Root, Gomez and Winona, Stone and Collins, Fowler and Tamara, David and Hilda Murray and kindred combinations became name attractions in the smart spots.

Philip Morris cigarettes conceived the idea of free shows by routing Marshall Montgomery, vet vaude monologist into the better hotels and cafes, to plug the cigaret brand as a free attraction. The ventriloquial dummy was the keynote in the free sampling of the P. M. cigs.

$3 Tax

The $3 tax thing for a time jazzed up the radio wires for the hotels and cafes and hurt biz. Some name bands preferred Jersey summer engagements rather than in N. Y. in order to land that wire, deemed so valuable for the national exploitation. That's been adjusted now. When business brodied the N. Y. Hotels Ass'n had to make a deal with the musicians union.

Summer saw a paradox nationally. Roadhouses didn't do as well as expected for the reason that the better cafes, hotel grillrooms and restaurants had fortified themselves with cooling plants. People refused to risk the congested highways (a problem around New York's Pelham and Merrick roads, as well as in Chicago) and found it more expedient to cool off right in midtown, in an air-cooled grill or roof-garden, a taxi drive away. That may become an acute factor for the caravanseries next summer as well. It augurs the washup of the roadhouses whose chief appeal anyway is the gambling. If the gaming casinos are tabu they can't get out even.

The NRA in the spring and summer, before the historical U. S. Supreme Court ruling, had put everything on a five-day week and accordingly the in-town spots thrived solely from Monday through Thursday. Friday night they all scrammed town for the weekends and the niteries suffered, although there was some compensation from the heretofore poor Mondays and Tuesday now becoming live nights.

F. P.'s Out

License Commissioner Paul Moss in N. Y. nixed female impersonators on a wholesale basis, but the saucy lyric songsters continued in the smaller joints, another heritage of the hideaway speaks.

Last winter Havana looked set to reclaim its share of the American tourist trade until the internal political strife again scared cruise ships away. It's a gamble for this winter.

The money-making Hollywood cabaret-restaurant on Broadway sold 50% of itself to Abe Lyman, the band leader, who also acquired a piece of the Pavillon Royal (N. Y.) roadhouse with Joe Moss.

A new gag was Leblanging niteries—a blanket cut-rate system for the lesser joints which made deals for reduced combination rates to tourists, visiting fireman, hillbilly trade 'n' such.

Gang murder of Chink Sherman upset the Paradise restaurant operations and N. T. G. (Graniund), m. c. and show stager from its inception, was out.

Jack Rockefeller's saloon, as the kiddies started calling the swank Rainbow Room atop the 65th floor of the RCA Bldg. in Radio City, engaged the Market Research Corp. of America to cross-check a selected list of nite loafers who voted 85% in favor of snappy dansapation as the first requisite; 11% who put food, service, nice environment and other entertainment on top of the list; and 4% who didn't care for anything in particular, but for some indefinable reason patronized this or that spot.

On the economic side, there were a few usualities. Marie Voisin, Inc. (Jim Healy's spot on West 52d street where Jack Whité and Joe Frisco hold forth) filing one of those 77b reorgs. So did the Central Park Casino, Cafe Rene, Inc. (Vincent Sorey), Barney Gallant, Inc., along with other minor fold-ups. The Auditores essayed Le Mirage, smart room, but little biz.

Money-making outstanders remain, as in recent years, the madhouse known as Leon & Eddie's with a $15,000 weekly gross, some weeks, which means plenty of net, considering the nut. Bill's Gay Nineties has also been a clicker. The very snooty El Morocco on East 54th street, almost right under the Third avenue L (and, hence, a not particularly swank locale) is said to be netting $6,000 a week, some weeks, to John Perona. It's another speakeasy holdover and Perona's attempt at exclusivity remains per usual. Ditto Jack and Charlie's, alias No. 21, with its high-hat attitude, fancy tariffs and turnaway trade.

GermanBands

Berlin, Dec. 22.

Ultra-swank niteries, such as the Casanova, the Eden-Pavillon, the Gurmenia Palace, Circ's and a few others make no secret of their regret that present conditions do not permit bringing foreign name bands back again.

In the case of the Casanova, this once famous resort has given up hope and put down the shutters after losing quite a little fortune with its last ray of hope, Bernhard Ette's orchestra, once regarded here as the biggest magnet among German dance bands.

May be it wasn't entirely the fault of this congregation—times had changed and the foreign suckers were not coming any more, while the home suckers stayed away entirely. Not from lack of coin, diplomacy told them to behave in public.

The happy days when Paul Whiteman jammed 'em in at the Gross Schausspielhaus, Max Reinhardt's large playhouse; when Sam Woodling came direct from New York to the Gurmenia with 15 colored boys and received four grand per week for two solid months; when Babe Egan's Hollywood Redheads and the 10 Bon John Girls played at the Barberina after a month each at the Wintergarten—those days are gone, probably for a long time.

Yet, it would be unfair to say that Berlin has no more class orchestras.

Bands like Adalbert Lutter, Willi Rooss, Barnabo von Geczy, Oscar Joost, Emanuel Rambour, Juan Llossas, Georges Boulanger, Will Glahe, Jose Wolff, Heinz Huppertz, and some others would pass muster in any nitery of note. They can play classics and dance tunes and know all about rhythm—except for clowning.

And they are restricted in their numbers here, for there is a 'negro jazz' ban which is a great handicap.

Year in Vaudeville

By Joe Schoenfeld

The past year in vaudeville could just as well have been five seconds. What's left is just the spirit of a once tremendous business. Now it is a decadent art, blasted by a combination of circumstances which forestall even the wildest dreams of a comeback.

In '35 vaudeville practically remained at a standstill. An act could get the same amount of work as in '34, but that was all. The business stood still while most other forms of amusement at least partially recovered their pre-depression standing.

Working against vaudeville was vaudeville itself. It failed again to come up with something new in '35 to expedite its own salvation. As strictly vaudeville, it no longer held box office appeal. Stage shows or not, it has become increasingly plain to theatre operators that its the screen feature that counts nine times out of 10. Vaudeville has as much as told the circuits, 'My showmen, writers and headliners are gone, but hold me on for sentiment's sake.' the circuits prefer black ink to sympathy losses.

That the circuits had dropped even their faintest vestige of sentiment towards vaudeville was clearly shown last summer, when Loew's, which became vaude's foster-father after RKO lost interest, shaved its playing time from 11½ weeks to three. Vaude had failed too long at the boxoffice, so out it went, the circuit retaining stage shows only at the State, N. Y., and in Washington and Baltimore. The banner of vaudevile leadership again whipped over RKO because of its 10 weeks, but in the old days the smallest independent booking office had this much playing time, and in most cases more. RKO retains vaude in certain spots only as a necessity and its theatre operating department is apparently still looking for an out.

Just A Buffer

To the circuits vaudeville is now only a buffer in competitive positions, or to bolster exceptionally weak film product. But even in the latter instance, the circuits think that vaudeville is a less profitable cure than double-features. With vaude there are the usual attendant booking, stagehand and musician worries, while pictures come in cans and there's only the operators, who are there anyhow, to think about.

Vaudeville is easily dispensed with—and the public hasn't as yet howled very loud. If the public would support vaude, the operators, who in the past six years have become 100%-picture minded, would not and could not jerk the stage shows. Regardless of what propagandists say, the dollar sign still speaks louder to a theatre operator than his personal likes and dislikes.

One of vaude's major weaknesses is its complete lack of strictly vaudeville headliners who can draw to the wicket. This means that theatres must go into the outside brackets of show business for box office attractions. In '35, with the exception of two or three units, the stage show biz had but two box-office smashes—Major Bowes' Amateurs and Jack Benny—the former coming strictly from radio and the latter built up by radio. Amateur night was originally born in the old time music halls, later becoming a popular gag in the burlesque and variety houses, but never in the past did it reach the b.o. heights it attained in '35.

Bowes found himself in the $1,000,000-a-year earning class within three months after his first amateur unit opened in a theatre. He staged 10 units, but all the staging entailed was putting together 10 simon-pures acts with a couple of pianists; no scenery; no costumes. Each unit got $4,500 weekly guarantees, plus percentages, and Bowes' profits were enormous.

Success of the Bowes' units started anew the amateur cycle all over the country. Smaller theatres which could not afford the stiff price asked by Bowes, staged their own amateur nights. In many cases they tied in with local radio stations—in some instances the amateur contests were unsponsored—and on the average the theatres stopped up.

The local amateur shows were an extremely cheap type of entertainment, the tyros in hardly any instance costing the theatres more than $100 (prize money) weekly—and musicians (with the exception of a pianist) and stage-hands were unnecessary. The cheapest vaude show costs a theatre $750 a week, not counting the expense of pit and stage crews. So, besides talking pictures, radio and pro-picture theatre operators, the vaudevillian had something else to squawk about in '35. Amateurs had shown the operators another way of getting rid of vaude.

But the almost incredible success of theatres with the sponsored and otherwise simon-pures could only have been possible at vaudeville's lowest ebb. When variety was at its height, with its horde of known headliners, the amateur contest was strictly a gag either for comedy or locality good-will. In those days vaudeville itself held the box-office lure along with all the necessary entertainment values. It would have taken a truly great psychic to foresee an amateur troupe getting more than $10,000 for one week in theatre.

When the amateur fad passes out, as it has already started to do, the theatres will have to find another box-o ce hypo, but they don't seem to be looking for it in vaudeville. The latter now lacks too much and holds too little to look like an important future factor in the entertainment world. Besides its headliners, vaudeville's comedy acts are also passing out. Comedy formed the base of vaudeville's popularity. Without it, a vaudeville show is just a parade of specialty acts which belie the word 'vaudeville.'

Units

Aside from the amateurs, about the only existing barrier against the complete extinction of popular stage shows is in their form of units. With or without names, these productions maintained a better average pace at the box-office than the straight five-act vaude shows. But the barrier began to display the same deficiencies which stifled the picture house presentations almost as quickly as they came into being and under ined vaudeville. The units started to all look alike. Patrons of those theatres which played units steadily could see a difference in the shows only in the titles.

It was in connection with units that vaudeville received its most deadly blow in '35. Nudity entered its ranks for the first ti Producers with short bankrolls and few ideas, who wouldn't think up a means of changing the already too-familiar pattern of the units, went in for burlesque-showmanship to satisfy booking office demands for box office attractions. The fan dancer was almost puritan in comparison with the unit producers' innovations. Burlesque strippers came into vaude for the first time and, going even further, whole troupes of chorus girls were stripped down to the outicle.

Stripping, more than anything else, killed burlesque. Vaudeville should know that, because it superseded burlesque, which was the family entertainment in the old days. When burlesque got smutty and nude, vaudeville displaced it. That vaudeville should turn around and make the same mistake is not only a sad commentary on the intelligence of those currently in control of the business, but also sure-fire notice that vaudeville had named its own poison.

With nudity, vaudeville loses its last distinction. It passes out of the picture as a family entertainment.

What's Left

All that's left of vaudeville at the start of '36 is 24 weeks booked by the major circuits out of New York, and slightly less than that by all the indie bookers combined. There's but two weeks of circuit vaudeville in New York City, Loew's RKO's Tilyou, Coney Island, a four-day stand, and Jefferson, also four days. The presentations at the Roxy and Music Hall comprise the remainder of the major stage time in the Metropolis.

An illuminating fact on how r vaudeville has fallen—and from where—can be gleaned fro the route lists of eight years ago. In October, 1928, the subway route in New York comprised 35½ weeks of major circuit time alone. Loew's had 11½ weeks in New York and its immediate vicinity; RKO had 18 weeks; Pantages had one week and there were five picture houses playing presentations. At that time there were at least 15 weeks; of independent vaudeville in Greater New York, for a grand total of more than 50 weeks.

As '35 drew to a close, there were hardly more than 50 weeks of vaudeville, circuit and indie, in the entire country and a good portion of this time, because of the low budgets, was unplayable for most acts.

Acts in and above the $500 weekly class today cannot hope for more than 20 weeks work a year, and in most cases the average is 15 weeks. Playable acts below the $500 salary (but usually far below) can rate about 40 weeks if they can stand the gaff of one and two-day stands as a steady diet.

The major portion of stage time currently in the United States is for $150-a-day units. Enough theaters to comprise about 40 weeks of playing time are now using such shows, almost all of them turkeys containing no more than 20 people and in some cases as little as 14. They make their jumps in automobiles, sleep in boarding houses, and usually play the type of theatres that have been depicted so often when a writer pictures the rise of a performer and the road he had to travel to get to the top. In comparison to these houses, the old family-time was strictly a route of Radio City Music Halls. But, more so than the theatres themselves, the conditions encountered in playing them are heart breaking.

A single comic can hope for $75 top per week in these units; two, three and four-people acts from $125 to $200; chorus girls rate $20 to $27.50 weekly, and rarely the latter.

ings

Considering times, perhaps these salaries aren't so bad, but the actors can't always collect. Strandings of $150-a-day units were common during '35. Four different American shows were stranded in Canada alone; several were left holding the bag in the south and midwest. The acts took it on the chin and had to pass it off—the NRA and its complaint bureau were gone and the policing of the Variety Managers Association (VMPA) had faded long before that. A performer's recourse now against gyppery is in the civil courts, but with most of the producers on a shoe-string and irresponsible, a civil suit is practically hopeless right from the start.

Besides the strandings, acts in the cheap units also have to worry about imminent salary cuts. Producers out on any excuse, and many times without an alibi, and for an act in these shows to receive only partial payment for a week's work is more common than not.

All in all, between the cheap units and the 'new faces' supposedly being supplied by amateur shows, it would seem that vaudeville is starting all over again. But it looks more like a last dying effort to hold on to the little that's left. The ghost of the present is living with the ghost of the past.

Those M. C. Days

By Joe Bigelow

From 192 to 1929—those were happy days. The gold rush period of the stage show business; more acts working and more theatres open than at any time before or since. Higher salaries and bigger audiences than variety entertainment ever enjoyed.

But those days are gone, and even the memory scarcely lingers on. They have left their mark, however, on the show business of today. They were the storm before the lull. They, more than any other factor, sent vaudeville on its way to the embalmer's. They spawned shows and salaries with which sluggish vaudeville could not compete. They licked vaudeville, and after vaudeville died they died too. The result is the present vaudeless era.

But beyond cause and effect, what about the people of the presentation shows? Where are the m. c.'s who remained as long as four years in one theatre, whose local popularity was fanatical, who were the backbone of the presentation policy? And what about the acts that played and played and played—the satellites of the m. c.'s and the secondary but strong favorites in the affections of a push-over public? There were names in those days that have been forgotten, but in those days they were really names.

Of the many players theatrically born in the presentation era, a few have since gone on to greater triumphs, but not so many have even succeeded in hanging on in show business. Of all hectic periods in stage show annals, this last upward surge of stage entertainment was the most fruitful financially but the least productive of talent which could stand the test of time.

Present day names that sprouted from in front of stage bands are not numerous. They include Ginger Rogers, Ruth Etting, Nelson Eddy, Bing Crosby, Ruby Keeler, Mitzi Mayfair, Helen Kane, Lyda Roberti, Ray Bolger, Hannah Williams (Williams Sisters), Dave Rubinoff, Jackie Heller, Ben Blue, Horace Heidt, Walter O'Keefe, Johnny Perkins, George Givot and Benny Meroff.

There were m. c.'s who, in their respective best towns, had more influence and were better known than the governor of the state. Paul Ash was the top example, the leading figure of the presentation era and the symbol of his time. Another was Dick Powell who went from Pittsburgh to pictures, and another was Vic Meyers who now owns a Sattle night club and is Lieut. Gov. of Washington.

Other similar idols of that day were Freddie Stritt, Georgie Stoll, Charlie Lutz, Charles Kaley, Walter Blaufuss, Walt Roesner, Dave Schooler, Owen Sweeten, Sammy Kahn, Art Kahn, Al Morey, Ben Black, Charles Melson, Walter Davidson, Verne Buck, Emerson Gill, Jules Buffano, Gene Rodemich, Frankie Masters, Buddy Fisher, Monk Watson, Cliff Nazarro, Del Delbridge, Mark Fisher, Al Short, Ted Leary, Bennie Kreuger, Al Evans, Brooke Johns, Bert Frohamn, Eddie Lawton, Charlie Craft, Russell Cooke, Lou Kosloff, Lynn Cowan, Al Mitchell, Eddie Magill, Eddie Moran, Roy Dietrich, Al Lyons, Hermie King, Harry MacDonald, Roy Sedley, Wesley Eddy, Frank Jenks, Frank Beaston, Charles Dornberger, Dell Lampe, Joe Kayser, Sam Jack Kaufman, Gene Morgan, Ted Claire, Ed Lowry, Al Belusco, Al Kvale, Rube Wolfe, Benny Ross, Bob Nelson, Eddie Perry, and Eddie Peabody.

Organists

But of all figures in the presentation days, none was so typical of overnight elevation than the organist. They came from schools, churches, and all over. Many were ex-pianists who never could have attained such eminence at the keyboard. Most of the boys used slides and asked the audience to join in the chorus. In those days audiences had little else on their minds. So the organists were a vital part of the entertainment and lots of 'em were unquestionably boxo ce faetors.

Almost all the pipers were famous in their communities. That was only six years or so ago, and some of them were . . Henry Murtagh, Henri Keats, John Hammond, Eddie Dundstedter, Leo Terry, Albert Brown, Albert Malotte, Edward K. House, Jim Thomas, Edmond Fitch, Ed Meikel, Chauncey Haines, Herb Koch, C. Sharpe Minor, Arthur Gutow, Cy Graves, Melvin Ogden, Homed McDonald, Larry Goldberg, Merle Clark, Al Hegbom, Milton Charles. Of the organists Jesse Crawford seems the most prominent in holding on past the decline of the presentation.

Presentations arrived overnight and departed the same way. They were the offspring of a mad era in which heavy coin was to be had without much preparation. A stage band, a pleasant m. c., a backdrop and three or four acts was the recipe. Theatres were so big the audiences seldom saw the actors' faces, and the actors didn't care to see the audiences. Conditions were directly opposed to the general development of great talent, since everything went and the acts were not required to exert much effort in order to be successful. Singers and dancers with any natural ability were surefire. They are not surefire today because few learned the ropes in the easy-going presentation days.

The most neglected entertainment phase of the period was comedy. The theatres were too big to permit it. Few comedians of note emerged from the stage band shows, and that more than anything else was, perhaps, the reason for the gaudy but unimportant imprint left by the good old m. c. days.

Coffee Without Cake

By Joe Schoenfeld

Aside from the sudden metamorphosis in the positions of the Loew and RKO-franchised agents last last season, the general condition of the vaudeville agency business was unchanged in 1935. Circuit and indie booking setups remained the same, and, while playing time varied in certain booking offices, the aggregate afforded the agents no more of an income in '35 than '34 dribbled upon them.

Yet '35 holds one distinction, dubious though it is: It saw most of the hard-tack agents toss in the sponge so far as holding out any hope for a vaude comeback is concerned. It saw the agents reduced to a Hopeless Brigade as well as a Starvation Brigade.

The convineer was in seeing almost other phases of show business at least partially come out of the depresh, while vaude still remained in the doldrums. Otherwise '35 was almost a twin to '34. Even Lleense Commissioner Paul Moss hounded the reps as zealously as he had done the year before.

Considering the extremely low state of vaudeville—the shrunken time and the low budgets established by theatres for stage shows—the agency ranks remained remarkably at full strength. Many of the reps claimed they would step out of the business, but, because they either couldn't find anything else, or else a lingering spark of vaudeville hope remained with them, all of them stuck. Many of them, however, remained in name only, their selling being practically nil.

A conservative estimate of the number of vaude reps in New York is 150. Against this number there are less than 40 weeks of circuit and indie playing time being booked out of N. Y., which boils down to 200 acts bought weekly. This gives each agent the average sale of 1¼ acts weekly, with the result that at least 75 agents have had to reduce their operating expenses to such an extent that their offices are virtually in their hats. An agent with a paid-up secretary is a wealthy man.

The switch in the positions of RKO and Loew agents occurred last August, when Loew's, with strong film product expected, suddenly returned its vaude book from 12 to three weeks. A couple of weeks later RKO amplified its playing time from five to 11 weeks, and the control of acts switched to the RKO agents after being nearly four years with Loew's. It was a severe blow to the incomes and prestige of the Loew salesmen, yet the windfall for the RKO reps was not as great as it seemed.

For one thing, there are twice as many RKO-franchised agents as there are Loew's, and a virtual monopoly had been established on the RKO booking floor by the Simon Agency and nearly all of its confreres were left strictly holding their franchises.

A combination of circumstances permitted the Simon office to establish the freeze-out. One is the fact that it is the RKO rep for the William Morris agency list of acts (the cream of the vaude acts still in the business), while the Simon's slide-thera are Loew's and indie weeks in the midwest exerts considerable influence on unit producers, who, for two immediate weeks, grant the Simon office representation of their productions. This was sharply illustrated at the beginning of the season, when Ferdie Simon obtained representation for practically every worthwhile unit produced in Chicago.

Without units, which bring the largest com issions aside from the occasional selling of a name, agents must be content with what amounts to a 5-and-10c business. If they can maintain a volume of sales, they can earn a living, but hardly more than that because of the little available playing time and its nature. Of the approximately 40 weeks booked out of New York, only 26 weeks are major circuit time and the remainder in indie theatres.

Circuits have tri med their budgets, true, but not quite as much as the indies.

Latter were formerly the coffee 'n' cake houses, but in the past year they dropped the cake.

BUFF. GAYETY'S VAUDE

Buffalo, Dec. 2.

Gayety, former burlesque house, reopened with vaudfilms Christmas Day under management of Dewey Michaels and Nate Boasberg, also operators of the Palace (burlesque).

Six acts booked from New York by George Godfrey and picture. Four a day and five on Sundays.

IN THE GOOD OLD DAYS

With Walter S. Butterfield

Just 51 years ago, May 1, 1884, I walked into the old Grand Opera House in Columbus, O., as a door boy and thought I was a showman. Very quickly, I advanced to inner door swinger, usher, chief usher and door keeper. Two years later I became treasurer of the Comstock Opera House, as well as the Grand Opera House in Columbus.

During my treasurership I sold tickets for Booth and Barrett, Robson and Crane, Minnie Palmer, Lotta Crabtree, Clate Claxton (who was in the big Brooklyn fire, later), Joseph Jefferson, A. M. Palmer's company, Henry Irving and Ada Rehan. Later on came Minnie Maddern Fiske, Maurice Barrymore, E. H. Sothern, Richard Mansfield and Maude Adams, to whom I was introduced when she was with her mother, Annie Adams in Charlie Hoyt's farce, 'A Midnight Bell.'

1890—'Running Wild'

At 21, I fell in love. er sister, Madeline Merlie, was an actress starring under the management of Fred Schwartz, of Philadelphia. That summer they decided to make a tour to Portland, Ore., over the Northern Pacific and back to Chicago on the Southern Pacific in a farce comedy called 'Running Wild'. They came home to Columbus to rest and rehearse (also to eat). My financee decided to take this trip with her sister and become an actress. However, she refused to go unless Mr. Schwartz made a place in the company for me. I was to act as treasurer and play a small part in one of the plays.

There were 16 people in the company when we started, and I soon began to recognize how bad business was and that Schwartz must have a lot of money to keep the thing going. But in one of the small towns I overheard him telling the landlord that he could give him only so much money and an I. O. U. To secure the I. O. U. he would have to leave with him his dear old mother's watch which had been in the family 50 years. After listening to Schwartz tell this to eight or nine landlords, I found out what kept his troupe traveling.

But business got worse, we decided to get married (in Ellenburg, Wash.), wired home for money to take us back to Columbus, where I found that owing to the burning down of the Comstock Opera House I was out of a position.

During my treasurership at the Grand Opera House, I had an opportunity to do a favor for Samuel Cohen, who afterward was the partned of Abe Spitz of Providence, R. I., in four or five popular priced theatres. While at the time the favor seemed nothing to me, it was a big thing to him, and six months later I was looking for a position and had to go to New York to find it. While parading Broadway I ran into Sam Cohen. The next day he took me to the office of H. R. Jacobs, who was the general manager of the Jacobs and Proctor circuit of melodramatic theatres. He engaged me as treasurer of the Academy of Music in Chicago and I went to work in August, staying a full year at this house which was on Halsted street.

This was the original World's Fair year and, believe me, Halsted lived up to its name as the worst street in Chicago. In the next three weeks I saw one man killed next to the lobby of the theatre and another one held up.

As our first baby was coming the following August, I asked Mr. Jacobs to give me a raise in salary, as it was impossible to live on $20 a week. He increased my salary to $25 and made me treasurer of the Alhambra theatre. This was my downfall. The man I replaced had friends and most of them worked in this theatre. Marcus Jacobs, son of the boss, came in the Saturday evening before Christmas, counted my tickets and boxoffice change, paid me that week's salary and discharged me. I demanded to know why. He said he and his father had made up their minds that it was easier to replace a treasurer than a manager, advertising agent, doorkeepers and stagehands.

1892—'Breezy Time'

I took Mrs. Butterfield and the baby to her people in Buffalo, and left for New York. On arrival I picked up the Dramatic Clipper (or maybe it was the Dramatic News or the Mirror) and my eyes fell on an advertisement where they wanted a treasurer with a traveling company. The next morning, I walked up to a room on a fourth floor where I met the vaudeville team named Fitz and Webster. It was E. B. Fitz and Catherine Webster. She, in her heyday was a soubrette and a serio-comic singer, but at that time had taken on some weight.

Mr. Fitz explained the position and I sold myself at $25 a week. The show was called a musical comedy and the title was "A Breezy Time". There were about 15 or 16 people, all vaudeville acts, and as the owners did all the work all I did was stand at the door, count tickets, put the money in the little handbag and take it back to Catherine. She and Fitz even bought the railroad tickets.

Having plenty of time on my hands, the Dutch comedian suggested that I sell song books at 15c and 25c apiece. I wheedled Catherine Webster into permitting me this privilege and I used to average a profit of $25 to $35 a week. But I told a member of the company, and the firm had me in their room demanding their half.

We were playing a small town in Kansas. It was cold and it was impossible to give a show without some heat in the Town Hall, so we tried to find the manager but found only the janitor. We told him he would have to have a fire in all the stoves if he expected to have a show. He told us that if we expected heat, we would have to buy the wood. So Fitz gave the fellow $2 for wood and demanded to know how the public would know we were going to have heat in the opera house that night. The janitor calmly told him, 'Oh, we'll fix that. I have some signs'. He dug up two sign boards with handles, and on each side of them was painted in large letters—'HOT OPERA TONIGHT.'

'Waifs of New York'

I signed with Harry Williams, husband and manager of the Irish soubrette, Katie Emmett, as manager of his 'Waifs of New York' company. I was treasurer and business manager, for this season. He had a private car in which he carried the entire production, including a very fine, practical fire engine used for street parades.

I played a part in this show. Williams never told me that I was to play the defending lawyer in the third act. I could do because in those days we usually counted the house and made the settlement of the night's receipts by the time the second act was over. This company opened at the Academy of Music, where I had been treasurer the year before, and I was quick enough to speak to the manager, treasurer, doorkeepers and ushers that I would have to have them boost my acting because Williams would be there. Williams said I played the part better than any manager he ever had, but when I no longer had the boys to applaud for me, I became a very mediocre actor. At first, I made up and tried to look important. But when we played one night stands, I went on without any make-up, and with my overcoat when the weather was cold.

In Kansas City we played the old Gillis Opera House. Old timers will remember that it was an extra wide theatre. We set the stage rather close, on account of the fire scene and, in doing so, we left about 100 feet on each side of the openings. I used to go back stage every performance to ride this run of the fire engine. The boys were able to get the horses on a dead run by the time they made the middle of the stage and could stop them before they hit the brick wall on the other side. In fact, the ride was so exciting that the stagehands and actors quarrelled each night to be permitted to ride the engine.

Charles Blaney's Attractions

The seasons of '95, '96 and '97, I was with Charles E. Blaney and his attractions. First started out as Treasurer and Business Manager of a farce entitled 'The Baggage Check' (Blaney and Joe E. Gaites and myself were schoolmates and ushers in the Comstock Opera House in Columbus). Business was only fair with 'The Baggage Check' and I am pretty sure that this was the only show that Blaney had at that time as he was traveling with us, trying to make the company show a profit.

It was Christmas week in '95 that we played a theatre managed by Bard Worrell in Philadelphia. The cast at time consisted of Jimmy Kelly, leading comedian; Lizzy Melrose, soubrette; Madge York, principal singer; a low comedian by the name of Red McGee; a chorus girl by the name of Lida Clark, and an acrobatic comedian named Martinetti, who was the hit of the show.

At this time, Madge York was in love with Jim Gentry who was playing with another company in Boston. They were exchanging letters daily, but on account of snow and the poor mail service, Gentry had not heard from her in six or seven days. He came on to see her, and in the midst of a quarrel shot her dead with Lida Clark in the room as a witness. It was the biggest sensation in the theatrical business that year. We used the press notices that Lida Clark, the eye witness, was still with the show when we went out to play six or eight weeks of one night stands.

Rose Stahl and William Bonelli

After three years with Blaney, I had accumulated a small bankroll and decided to put on a show of my own in '79. Going home to Columbus to loaf (without paying board) I read an ad in the Dramatic Mirror where a man wanted a business manager and booker who would put up one-third of the money in a three-way partnership. I answered the ad and, lo and behold, a letter came back from William Bonelli, husband of Rose Stahl, who was one of the best leading women in stock throughout the country. She had been a big success in Syracuse, Rochester and Albany, as well as Trenton, N. J., her home town, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Columbus.

In answering my letter Bonelli told me to call on Lee Boda, manager of the Grand Opera House, who was there when I was treasurer. Miss Stahl had played for Boda in stock, so we knew all about them. Fortunately, Boda gave me a good report and wrote them a letter giving me a good report. So we got together and made a three-way agreement, Bonelli and Miss Stahl to put up two-thirds and I one-third. I bluffed them that I could put up $2,000 and Bonelli bluffed that he could put up $4,000. So we agreed to put up $500 apiece and signed an agreement.

With this $1,500 we made a deposit on the printing, a deposit on the scenery, advanced the actors some money and got all the properties and everything to start. We were so unknown that when we came to hire regular actors we couldn't find any. We went to the Sargent School of Acting and found Helen Ware, who afterward became a dramatic star in her own name, and a man named Powell Slaggett for the heavy. He was a poor actor, but afterward became business manager of Charlie Frohman's attractions and was very successful. Bonelli was leading man and Miss Stahl leading woman and they made the show a success in spite of the cast. We kept the company on the road two years and made a profit the second season.

'Man to Man'

After my two years with Bonelli and Rose Stahl, we separated with friendly feelings. I was ambitious to do a play by myself. This quickly proved to me how little I knew. But out of my knowledge came a play entitled "Man to Man" which worked out the season of 1900. This was just about as bad a show as was out that season. To try and help it we had a part written in for an acting bear which wrestled in the show with his owner, and was the street attraction for the one night stands. By this time I was strictly a one night stand manager.

'Arah-na-Pogue'

For the season of 1901 I not only put out 'Man to Man,' but found two angels—one that put a small amount of money into a farce called 'Funny Side of Broadway,' written and promoted by a German comedian named Charles E. Loder. In those days road managers were ambitious and thought nothing of having five or six road shows. So, as soon as we got out 'Man to Man' and the Charlie Loder show I found another angel who put up about $4,500 to buy Andrew Mack's production, 'Arah-na-Pogue,' which William Harris had built for him, and was used only the season before. Mack had a new play for the next year.

We engaged John T. Murray, a singer on the style of Andrew Mack, and his wife, Clara Lane, who played the colleen. We had a good cast.

After seeing that the company had opened we in Providence, I decided to take the second Mrs. Butterfield and our first girl baby home. Never shall I forget the morning of our arrival in Pittsburgh on our way to Columbus. As I was getting dressed for breakfast and the train stopped the newsboys came through calling out the catastrophe in Chicago—the burning of the Iroquois theatre. Instinctively I was able to see the picture coming, and in three months my three shows were closed and we were all broke.

1902—'Man From China'

I went back to New York and joined Mrs. Butterfield and the baby. In seeking work I approached an old friend, Melville B. Raymond, who was then putting together a musical show entitled 'The Man From China,' in which Vera Michelini was the featured woman. John Slocum was the manager and I believe Charlie Bigelow was the comedian.

Mrs. Butterfield had agreed to go into the chorus if it became necessary, so Raymond gave her $35 a week as a show girl; she was tall and very good looking. After three or four weeks' rehearsing in New York, the company of 109 people went to the Ford theatre in Baltimore to open. Raymond offered me $25 to act as treasurer and bookkeeper, and I went along with the show.

The show opened and was an immediate hit. The success went to the heads of several of the principals which caused dissension and quarrels. Raymond lost his temper and discharged Michelini on Friday, but we opened Monday at the Majestic theatre in New York. As Slocum was interested in the future of Michelini, this caused the break. Raymond let them both out and opened with a chorus girl playing the principal part in New York. This was too much. The play was a failure. It afterwards made some money on the road as a $1 show with the Klaw and Erlanger circuit.

Raymond had Tad Outcault's cartoon play, 'Buster Brown,' as a musical show and it was an enormous success. It was these profits that helped carry 'Man from China.' He was ambitious and let me put out a number two company of 'Buster Brown' for one night stands for the next year, and had also agreed to go out with two old negro minstrels, Gorman Brothers. I think he also had another show in rehearsal. I was getting along fine in my bookings and was proud of my show. I met an old agent on Broadway and, as was the custom in those days, he asked me the usual question: 'Say, Butterfield, who do you go out with next season?' I proudly said, 'M. B. Raymond's 'Buster Brown' Company.' He laughed and winked at me. He said: 'Why, Raymond's broke now and don't know it. He owes $180,000 at the New Amsterdam Bank and they won't give him another nickel.'

This bowled me over. That afternoon I demanded an interview with Raymond. He was in his private office with his head in his hands. I asked him about the story of the money and he laughed and said it was true. The only way he figured he could get the shows out was to go back and tell the bank that if they didn't loan him $20,000 more he would lay down on the debt. I said, 'That sounds great, Mel. Now is the time. You must get some money to get things going.' He slapped on his hat and two hours later he came back with a credit slip for $20,000 to his account.

It may interest the old timers to know that Raymond quit about $500,000 in debt.

$22,000 Profit

Our 'Buster Brown' company opened in August and never stopped until the middle of May and had $22,000 profit for the season. My contract with Raymond called for $75 a week and 15% of the net profits, and Mrs. Butterfield was to play Buster's mother at $50 a week. So, you see, we were getting up in the world. My contract with Raymond was half of an envelope on which he wrote: 'This agreement is for $75 a week salary and 15% of the net profits.' I said, 'Date it, Mel.' He did sign his name to it. So, when April came and we were playing in Michigan, it finally dawned on me that I was sending all the profits to M. B. each week, and he was spending it trying to keep the minstrel show and 'The Man from China' out. I began to inquire how the season would wind up with him. His managers and agents wrote me that he would wind up either in jail or the poorhouse by the middle of the summer. So, unbeknown to him or any of the company, I took a train to Chicago and paid $50 to the then famous Adolph Marks who was handling all of the theatrical business in Chicago. I showed him Raymond's agreement on the envelope. He laughed and said, 'That's a better agreement than if I drew it and used up three pages.' He advised me to go back to the show and start to build up a fund to take care of my 15%. He said: 'Refuse to send Raymond any more money until you have enough money to pay you the 15% of the profits up to date.'

I shall never forget the day I got a wire in Adrian, Michigan, demanding that I send him $1,500 immediately, as I had about $2,500 on hand. I did not answer his wire and never answered any more of his letters, or wires, until the day we closed in Ft. Wayne. After paying all the expenses of closing the show, and sending the company to New York, I had about $3,500 on hand, and when I figured out my 15% I had about $2,700, my bit. I wired Raymond that the show was coming in, in charge of the stage manager; that I was going to Columbus to rest and that when I came to New York would give him a settlement of the profits. In Columbus I consulted with a few friends and a good lawyer. They all agreed with me that I was entitled to these profits. My lawyer drew up a receipt in full on all agreements, after I had made a thorough statement of the expenses, and I bought a money order for about $500 or $600, which was what Raymond was entitled to and got under my settlement.

Starting A Circuit

It was that $2,700 that took me into Michigan to create the circuit of which I am now head. To give an idea how theatrical business was looked upon by small town bankers in those days, the cashier of the bank where I deposited this $2,700 said to my face: 'I have never met a theatrical man in my life who had $2,700 at one time his own.' He afterward became my secretary and treasurer. I needed him so badly to do my financing for me when we built a $700,000 theatre in Lansing, with a bankroll of only $150,000 to start, that I hired him away from the bank in Battle Creek on a five-year iron-clad contract at $12,000 a year and 1% of my net profits. And this was the best stroke of business that I have made up to this date. He stayed six years with me, put my business in fine financial shape and left me only to go back to the bank as president. I refer to the late Herbert A. Rowles.

This was my entrance into Michigan where for the past 32 years I have lived, fought, bled and worked until we created what is known as the W. S. Butterfield Theatres, Inc., and the Butterfield-Michigan Theatres.

Just a Dream at Twilight

By Billy Diamond

(Independent Vaudeville Booker)

Chicago, Dec.

Let's say I've just returned from lunch at Henrici's and am sitting behind my desk puffing a cigar donated by Sam Roberts—who must be looking for a favor. I am set all over the book, therefore no agents and managers are around, I doze....

I hear a rumbling flash of light, real Howard Thurston effect and an old man stands before me. But in the next instant he isn't an old man at all; he becomes, successively, Nat Wills, Jack Norworth, Joe Smith of the Avon Comedy Four, Joe Cook, Ted Healy, Elsie Janis, Herb Williams. He passes through all these characters, then for a flash becomes one of our radio headliners, and then back to himself.

'Boy,' he says paternally, 'I heard everything said at your luncheon table and I agree with your general attitude. But I've come to offer you some sound arguments for your next discussion. People want variety, but they want it presented differently, and the man who can conceive a new slant will be the Messiah of stage shows.

'Bear in mind,' continued the old gent, 'that everything new in the theatre is founded on something old; a re-hashing, a dressing up, a changing around of old forms. Presentations are a throwback to the minstrel show 'first part'; even the spectacle division of Radio City borrows from minstrel days. The old New York Hippodrome shows paralleled the modern presentations and they, themselves, were antedated by Hanlon's 'Superba' and the Kiraify Brothers style of entertainment. Billy Rose's 'Jumbo' is merely the smart combination of old forms, and the current unit show is either a glorified flash act or a modernistic version of burlesque.

Up to the Actor

'The first step must be made by the new vaudeville actor. In the past, this actor, because of his individualism, has been both the greatest maker and the greatest destroyer of vaudeville. His initiative, inventiveness and determination largely built vaudeville and then egotism, laziness and a general smart alecky attitude helped tear it down.

'The nut comedian era prefaced the deflation of audience awe of the performer. The first of this type were novelties, and the 'Don't-give-a-damn' pose met with great favor. Yet, following the 'Nothing New' theory, Peter Dailey and Charlie Igelow worked in this style long ago. But when most of the male vaudevillians adopted similar habits —street clothes, no makeup, ad lib gags in poor taste, what was to prevent the public from feeling that vaudeville was more of a racket than a profession; that brashness and vulgarity were superseding talent and industry?

'Today humor has been replaced by filth. In the last seasons gags based on the natural functions of the human system; on the 'so-you-can't-take-it?' formula, and on pathological creatures have formed the main topics of vaudeville material.

'In New Vaudeville humor will be pertinent and topical, but not dirty. Alert and human, unquestionably, but not smutty.

'Actors not writing their own material will be serviced continually. Acts with business or situation comedy will be aided by gag men working as they do in films. Most acts will be situation turns with relevant talk and the thrown together pater turn will seldom be heard.

Improved Music

'Music will be vastly improved in new vaudeville, through the selection of better pieces and more able musicians. Through closer union co-operation, houses will be able to improve upon orchestra personnel and also, for a fair price, use more than the orthodox piano, violin, drums, trumpet and trombone combination. Players of the latter two instruments, who think they are still leading circus parades, will be ruled off, and drummers, in a body, will learn that eight banging cymbal crashes for eight consecutive cartwheels do not build to a climax and only give everybody headaches.

'Theatres will have a fresh aspect in new vaudeville. Because vaudeville will come back in the intermediate, independently owned houses in each town. Not the sugar loaf edifices the chains built, nor the old opera house where Walker Whiteside and 'Flo-Flo' played for one night, but in the comfortable middle-sized theatre. Of course, alterations will be required, plenty of them, and just because people are getting a lot for the money—a prime selling point of new vaudeville—just because of this, there can be no cheating on accommodations and newness. The old seats can't be just dusted off, and the same old drops and oilos used, not even for the acrobats who today work in the 'woods' or the 'house plush'. There will have to be plenty of new scenery, brand new lighting systems, and new decorations, inside and outside.

'Then—the managers of these new vaudeville houses. Admittedly they won't be expected to be of genius proportions, but they will have to be more than glorified office boys or regime pets. They will need more than average intelligence, some imagination and a good comprehension of what is taking place in their business, which brings us to the booker.

'This gentleman should have an acquaintance with the tradition and background of his business, but won't necessarily have to be steeped in the knowledge of why Waterbury Brothers and Tenny were, how much Pantages paid the Watson Sisters, or why Elsie Janis left the bill with Jim Barton. These items are all good legend for historians of dyed in the wool fans, but what have they to do with supplying five good acts to Erie or seven acts to Omaha?

'The new vaudeville booker will have to believe in his job, enjoy it, and show a full understanding of the artist, the manager, and the public. He will be a business man with a good sense of artistic value; he will be uninfluenced by politics, friendships and whims. In buying material he will be wary of headliners who can't entertain. This is the spot where he will have to decide in each instance the status of public intelligence as regards the headliner under consideration. But his problem will be simplified somewhat when all so-called names condescending to appear in vaudeville will be obliged to show before being engaged.

'Then, the actor's agent will have to be a man of brighter distinction in new vaudeville. No more of that equivocating speech, 'Yeah, there's something the matter with your act, something lacking—but I don't know just what it is. Go out and get the act in shape, then come back to see me—maybe I can do something then'. The new agent will be a discoverer and developer of talent in actuality, not just a list-submitter.

'Now with all this set up exactly nothing will happen without publicity of a kind alien to present day small priced theatricals. First, new vaudeville will have to be rediscovered by the leaders of popular American thought; commentators, columnists like risbane, Seldes, Lippman and Broun.

'After that, my friend,' the old man breaks off abruptly, hovers before my gaze a second and then disappears.

'Wake orders secretary. 'There's a committee from a lodge in Manitowac waiting to see you. The chairman of this committee says he wants you to give him something new. He wants to know if you can book him for cheap money a fan dancer, two blue singers and some refined hostesses for election night.'

Mackerel for Xmas

By Groucho Marx

Beverly Hills, Dec. 25.

Here I am sitting at home Xmas day, clutching the swag presented to me by admiring friends and relatives. Pajamas and briar sets, sets of books, costly wines and a year's subscription to the Reporter (I dare you to print it).

What a racket. I have two cars, two kids, two servants, two suits of clothes, two overcoats, and two pictures to make under our present contract.

I remember a Xmas day 25 years ago with mother, Harpo, Gummo and myself. We were playing Passaic, N. J., at a theatre called the Bijou, Majestic, or Family, and we were living at a boarding house which had been highly touted to us by the Empire Comedy Four, and Pipifax and Panlo, boarding house epicures of no mean standing. The place was conducted by a lady called Mrs. Abernathy who had suspiciously red streaked hair, a tightly corseted figure and giant and phony earings. The rates were a little higher than we usually paid—$8 a week double and $9 single American plan. But it was Xmas week, we had been working pretty steady, so what the hell.

Our first meal, breakfast, was around 11 a.m. and it wasn't bad. Choice of fruit, half orange, or prunes, griddle cakes and a compote that the landlady swore was coffee. We inquired about Xmas dinner. Would it be around 1 or after the matinee? Mrs. Abernathy said she always had it after the matinee as the actors were then more in the mood. We gave two shows a night and, as we didn't go on until about 8:30 for the first performance, we felt that after the matinee would be perfect. It would give us plenty of time to gorge and recuperate before we panicked Passaic with that classy act known as 'The Three Nightingales.'

Mrs. Abernathy had two dining rooms. One was for the townspeople (mostly bachelors, with a sprinkling of school teachers and clerical workers) and the other was for the actors. This was necessary as the actors had been known to throw food at each other in discussing material priority. Some of the boarders didn't like their food served that way. Personally we didn't care how our food was served, as long as they served it.

All through the matinee we thought of nothing but the turkey, cranberry sauce and pumpkin pie that awaited at Mrs. Abernathy's. At 5 o'clock we were up and down the halls in eager anticipation of that pungent Xmas dinner. At 5:10 we were all at the table discussing routes, layoffs, agents and Albee. At 5:30 a big dish arrived and on it was a huge baked mackeral and a dish of cranberry sauce. At first we suspected Mrs. Abernathy of having turned comic for the moment and that pretty soon this offensive dish would be removed. But there sat the mackerel and there sat us and for five minutes neither the fish or the actors moved. And then with a bitterness too deep for violence we realized that the turkey was for the regular boarders.

The local theatregoers must have been slightly bewildered that Xmas night to see and hear five acts give a complete performance about mackerel. I doubt if a more hysterical and insane performance has ever been given in the history of vaudeville.

After the show we returned to the boarding house and sneaked into the kitchen, broke into the icebox and found the carcass of a cold turkey and cranberry sauce. So there we sat, five vaudeville acts grouped on the floor of a cold dark kitchen, ravenously eating a belated Xmas dinner.

Burlesque, If Any

By Joe Bigelow

Although its influence was extended, in form of strip shows for vaudeville and a couple of flop legit opuses based on the burlesque subject, burlesque failed to do itself any good in 1935. It was just another catch-as-catch-can year for the business and the people in it.

An effort to improve the appearance of shows in a productional way was noticeable generally, particularly in the highly competitive New York area, but otherwise burlesque as an amusement device continued unchanged. The routine remained 99% strip, with the other 1% just there to pad out the running time. Since there was no change in formula, no change, except for the worse, was possible in a business way.

While to all outward appearances burlesque in 1935 was an exact reproduction of previous years, there were some internal shiftings, notably the development of the burlesque actors' nion (Burlesque rtists' Association) into an or ization with power, and the consequent realization of the managers that they too, must at least go through the motions of organizing or else start taking orders instead of giving them.

First B.A.A. Stri

The B.A.A., under the aggressive leadership of Tom Phillips, former straight man, called its first strike at the commencement of the '34-'35 season—and won it. A new agreement for actors demanded by the B.A.A. was the cause for the dispute. About 60 principals and 100 chorus girls walked out of five theatres in New York on Sept. 5 at noon, and returned to work only when the managers decided to accede to their demands three days later.

As a result of the strike, and to combat it and deal with any si liar emergencies in the future, the managers put together the Eastern Burlesque Managers Association. What has been accomplished to date by the managers' organization isn't known, but the arrangement does offer one benefit in that it permits the boys to stab each other according to strict parliamentary procedure, rather than in the haphazard manner of the past.

I. H. Herk, formerly the ringleader in all burlesque managers' affairs, made up his mind that he had enough dealing with his contemporaries and surprised one and all by adopting a 100% lone-wolf attitude throughout the strike and ever since. Herk had agreed to sign the B.A.A. contract to which the others objected, with the result that his Gaiety on Broadway was the only New York burlesque theatre open during the walkout and enjoyed a landoffice business.

Principals—$40

In winning out, the B.A.A. succeeded in gaining for its members greater protection against the once prevalent no-payoff evil, slightly better working conditions and a somewhat higher inimum wage scale. But the salary scale is the best indication of the status of burlesque today: chorus girls, $22.50 in stock and $25 on the road; principals, $40. And these are increases over salaries previously and generally paid!

Among other things unchanged in burlesque was Ann Corio. She remained the No. 1 name of the business and the only personality to rate in the real money. ther principal women, such as Countess Nadja and Hinda Wassau, played as added attractions and were credited with drawing busine s, but Miss Corio stood out as the lone big coingetter and the only burlesque player whose rep extended outside the burlesque fold.

But beyond the inside incidentals, none of which seemed to have had any effect on the advancement of burlesque as a popular amusement enterprise, 1935 in burlesque was just a rehash year—turkey rehash.

Units—The Thing In Midwest

By Dan Goldberg

Chicago, Dec. 29.

Vaudeville, pretty weak in 1934, dropped several additional points during 1935 and at present appears in the poorest condition since the start of variety. Both the public and theatres have about stopped all consideration of vaudeville as vaudeville. The regulation line-up of five acts on a small budget has proved itself without box-office value as a special attraction, and the theatres in this territory won't take the financial risk of establishing vaudeville as a policy. If vaudeville fails to spring the gross into new highs within two or three weeks, the managers are simply calling vaude a has-been and kicking it into the alley.

Out of the decline of vaude in the midwest, however, comes one major change: that is, the sharp increase of units. Formerly an occasional outcropping to change the pattern of the week-in and week-out five-act vaude shows, the unit today has become the single i portant factor in live talent shows on the midwestern stages. More acts today are working in units than as singly booked vaude acts.

Theatres have proved that units will do business where the straight vaude shows fail; that the public reaction to the production type of show is better than towards vaudeville, and that a houes can better achieve a policy-patronage with units than with vaude. Where formerly the theatres brought in units every six or eight week up the string of vaude shows, th situation is now midwest and theatres are in a merry battle for the iparatively few units available.

are not enough to go around, with several houses fighting desperately for these attractions. These fights are centering in Kansas City, Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit, Indianapolis, Toledo, Louisville, Madison, Minneapolis. In Chicago it's between the Balaban & Katz Oriental and the Aaron Jones State-Lake; Milwaukee, between the indie Eddie Welsfeit Riverside and the Fox Palace; Detroit, between the indie Dave Idzal Fox, the RKO Downtown and Paramount's Michigan; Toledo, between the indie Howard Feighley Rivoli and the Balaban Paramount; Indianapolis, between the indie Charles Olson Lyric and the Feld-Chatkin Indiana; Madison, between the Capitol and the Ascher Levy Orpheum; Louisville, between the National and the Rialto; Minneapolis, between the Orpheum and the Minnesota; Kansas City, between RKO Mainstreet and the indie Tower.

. & K.'s Terms

In Chicago alone the tussle between the B. & K. Oriental and the Jones, Linick & Schaefer State-Lake indicates the situation throughout the midwest. B. & K. has frankly gone out to corral all the available units that are at all playable at a price. In order to get as good a break as possible, B. & K. has held out the Publix-Great States time through Rockford, Peoria, Springfield, Danville, Decator, Joliet and South Bend. Booking manager Louis Lipstone has given strict orders that no units may be booked for the Great States time until they have been either accepted or rejected for the loop Oriental. In many instances, B. & K. insists that the unit specify a price for which it will play the Oriental on a straight purchase deal before it will allow the unit to use the smaller Great States houses as break ins.

But despite this, the State-Lake has stepped out and secured several units of both midwestern and eastern origin. State-Lake has the advantage over the Oriental in that it will book shows four and five months in advance, while the B. & K. house is rarely booked more than two or three weeks ahead. State-Lake has gotten the advantage in many instances by the price squeeze tactics on the part of the Balaban & Katz firm.

Among the more important money units turned out within the past few months here and which are playing throughout the midwest and the east are 'Platinum Blondes,' 'Cocoanut Grove Revels,' 'Hit Parade,' 'Bring on the Dames,' 'Gee Women,' 'Follies de Parce,' 'Cocktails of 1936,' 'Band Box Revue,' 'International Follies,' 'Blue Venus Revue.' Prices of these units range from $2,500 to $5,000. Average unit price has been $3,750 and split over house average figure.

Acts have been flocking for the unit jobs, and even accepting salary cuts on the realization that there is a greater possibility of consecutive work when tied up with a unit than in working alone. They know that a unit producer has a $2,750 to $3,750 weekly nut, plus a production cost ranging from $2,500 to $15,000, and that it is essential that the unit keep working if he's going to get his investment back. Besides, the vaude agents themselves work harder in booking a unit than a single vaude act because of the naturally greater commission return.

But in the final analysis, the real basis of the boom of units in the midwest is at the front wicket. Theatres have found that the units will do better business on the average than regular vaude shows, and the box-office is the final judge in booking shows. If it's a box-office attraction, it's in.

When the Minstrels Came to Town

By Epes W. Sargent

With vaudeville, second generation from its parent, Negro Minstrelsy, pretty well into the moth balls, it is interesting to note that several air programs are reviving the minstrel idea, apparently with some success. It is not probable however, that minstrelsy will spread from the air to the auditorium. It's a bit too one-sided. And there are few who understand the minstrel business as it was when Charles Frohman was regarded as the foremost advance man and minstrel manager in the country; a fact which kept C. F. from Broadway for a half dozen years.

It is customary to refer to minstrelsy as the parent of variety, which became vaudeville when it had its nose wiped, but that is not exactly true. Minstrelsy originated in the middle 40's, and at that time there was already established a low form of the specialty performance, known as variety and held largely to the beer gardens. People who developed entertainment ability always found some outlet for their talents, but most found the cheap beer garden their limit, with the straight variety show coming later and forming the next step up.

The main difference between the beer garden and the variety theatre lay in the fact that in the beer garden the show was secondary, while in the theatre the bar and not the stage was the annex. Until the 90's no theatre would think of operating without a liquor permit, and, even where the tables were not used, beer was freely sold and harder drinks could be ordered from the seats, the occupants of the chairs between the aisle waiter and the thirsty one relaying the beer to the customer and his money to the waiter. It detracted somewhat from the full enjoyment of the performance, but there was little in the performance to enjoy, for that matter.

rass-Knuckle Days

Variety was frankly and determinedly touch. It was a fine and hard school for those who later became ornaments to the legitimate stage. Denman Thompson, whose wholesome 'Old Homestead' was successful for years, developed the play from 'Josiah Whitcomb,' a mass of filthy lines and indecent business. And he was only one.

The result was that decent women would not dare to be seen entering a variety theatre, let alone a beer garden. In the course of time, Tony Pastor got the idea of cleaning his shows to appeal to the women, but that was in the 60's.

Around 1840 the circus clown was one of the most important persons on the show. Some could quote page after page of Shakespeare, applying the lines to their discussions, as they circled the ring bank. Others trusted more to their acrobatics or songs. One of the latter was Dan Rice, who probably was the first to introduce Negro music into any form of entertainment. His 'Jump Jim Crow' and 'Shoo Fly' were immensely popular.

As is the case today, Rice had his imitators, singing the crude melodies of the south. It was only logical that some should conceive the idea of a blackface—makeup to give emphasis to the characterization. Some of them used cork, which they burned for themselves. Others used paint or stain. Ed Mills, who was property man at Jim Donaldson's London theatre, on the Bowery, in New York, was the first to make a side business of preparing cork. When he died, his widow carried on the business, later selling out to Harry C. Miner, who had handled the sales for her along with his own line of cosmetics. For several decades his cork was standard.

First instrel Impresarios

Dan Emmett, with Dick Pelham, Billy Whitlock and Frank Brower were probably the first to put out a minstrel show. Edwin P. Christie followed shortly after. Christy was fortunate in getting hold of Stephen Foster, the first white writer to become interested in Negro music. That gave him a source of supply the others envied.

The success of the early ventures varied with the importance of the company, but no good organization had to walk home in those days. It was a new form, a novel one, and about the only departure from the stage shows that women could enjoy without danger of losing caste. A little later on, touring shows revived the old idea of specialists between the acts, but they could not displace the minstrels.

Christy used his own name for his troupe, but most of the companies selected fanciful titles. Gargantuan, Gigantean, Mammoth were not titles and frequently infringed, but in time the fanciful title was accepted as denoting an inferior troupe. Frohman used Callender for his handle, frequently having several troupes out in various sections, some of them actual Negroes. Jack Haverly usually had two or three companies out until he came his sensational cropper after building a theatre chain extending clear to California.

W. C. Cleveland made his name a trade mark, while Sam Hague worked 'British' into the title of his troupes. He was an Englishman and in a way a rival to Charles Davis (Alvin Joslin), who was not a minstrel man but who used minstrel tactics. The difference was that where Davis wore about eight pounds of diamonds on his person, Hague placed his in some prominent shop window and listed the pieces in his ads. Other names were Thatcher, Primrose, West, Barlow, Wilson, Evans, Miles, Hoey (Evans and Hoey quit minstrelsy when Charles E. Hoey developed one of their minstrel skits into 'A Parlor Match'), Dockstader, McIntyre & Heath, Emerson and a host of others.

In Philadelphia Charles Dumont had a permanent home for his minstrels, which later became Carncross' and was the last house to regularly play the season through with cork. In New York was the San Francisco minstrels, in what was later the Bijou and last, the Sam T. Jack theatre, in Broadway near 29th street. Billy Emerson had a permanent troupe in San Francisco for a couple of years and called it the New York minstrels.

Similar Routines

Most of the performances were pretty much the same. All opened in the first part, an ollo followed and then an afterpiece. The big idea seemed to be numbers, and long before Al G. Fields originated his '40—Count 'em—40' slogan, the troupes ran from 25 to 40 men, of whom many might be sleepers. Even the property man went into the first part.

This was practically permanent until around 1885, the orchestra (it was a brass band on parade, whence the expression 'dazzling in brass') with a half circle in front. The interlocutor sat in the center, with the end men on either extreme. Between was the 'grand circle,' composed of the singers and dancers. There were usually two or three men on each end until increasing competition demanded more. But there were only three seats on either end for the comedians. If more were carried, they opened with the least competent and these retired as each fresh pair was announced. On one end the comedians carried tambourines (tambos), while on the other were the 'bones,' experts in the use of bones; originally beef bones but later replaced by mahogany or rosewood. Frequently the entire circle carried either bones or tambos, though not many were expert in their use. The rising curtain always disclosed them standing and lustily caroling an opening chorus. The interlocutor announced 'Gentlemen, be seated' and all sat down, with a double click of the bones and double thumps on the tambos.

The interlocutor was the forerunner of the present master of ceremonies, announcing the turns and playing straight for the end men's jokes. He was picked for his size and composity, and many were noted for their specialty. One or two jokes were exchanged with a comedian, to be followed by a solo by a 'golden voiced' tenor. Sometimes it was 'silver' instead of gold, but always metallic and never brass. When they used up the end men, the first part ended.

In the ollo there was always a balladist, a 'pathetic' act, perhaps also a stump speaker and some eccentric and dance work. The dances were either mass buck and wing, or pedestal dancers, the latter working on three foot squares elevated from 7 to 10 feet above the stage.

Gabbers Got the Duke

The talking acts were favorites. The stump speaker discussed timely topics. Hughey Dougherty was the outstander, with Senator Frank Bell and others on his heels. Lew Dockstader, after he split with his brother, Charles, sometimes did a stump, and at others a 'pathetic.' The latter was purely a trade term. They were supposed to be funny. Luke Schoolcraft and Willis P. Swetnam headed the latter. Many of their jokes are still working.

The after-piece was either one of the old standards, or a burlesque on a current theatrical attraction. Birch and Wambold, of the San Franciscos, were top lighters in these, and Dumont wrote not only his own but supplied other troupes. Such obvious butts as 'Patience,' 'Mikado' and the like brought out scores of skits, often markedly clever. Even Sardou was not immune and 'Theodora' was burlesqued by scores of instrel troupes, each with a different trick title. There were no women in any of the companies, but many of the men were notably good as wenches, comedy or otherwise.

About 1885 there was a glut of novelty production. Up to that time the only variant had been using court costumes instead of the conventional tails. Now they suddenly went in for production, with first parts aboard a yacht, at a garden party or whatever the stager could think of.

There were those who contended at the time that this departure would spell the knell of minstrelsy. Perhaps they were right. It is more likely, however, that the turn to specialty acts about that time was the major cause. The Austins were playing their Australian Novelty Company in regular theatres and Alexander Herrmann and George Lederer put out 'Herrmann's Transatlantiques' for a season. Hoyt's success with 'A Rag Baby' and 'A Parlor Match,' the latter with a second act practically all vaudeville, led to the appearance of numerous others largely built on specialties. That detracted from the monopoly practically held by the minstrels.

The Toboggan Begins

In any event, it was about that time that minstrelsy started downgrade.

The emphasis placed on the minstrels on numbers was the outgrowth of the street parade. No matter what the size of the show, the street parade was essential. It was timed to end up at the theatre about noon, with a brief band concert. Then they all hustled the midday meal before the matinee.

Great stress was put on appearance. In many troupes the performers all dressed alike even when not on parade, and uniform dressing while on the march was imperative. Frequently the parade suits were paid for by the management and in some companies the recruits were supplied with a complete equipment, including two suits, generally fawn or other light color, sometimes faced with gaudy satin, and always the 'Hi Henry,' or top hat. It took the name from a minstrel owner who was first to stress this headgear. Generally the band was tricked out in resplendent uniform, but was supplied with the frock coat outfit for after parade.

In the smaller troupes, the men were spaced widely apart, two to a row, one on either side of the street, and 10 feet intervals between the men. And rain or shine, dust or mud, they made the parade and at least pretended to like it. A good turnout on parade often meant double ordinary business.

Generally they traveled in special cars, owned or leased by the manager. If they stopped at hotels, the management paid for accommodation. One of Frohman's companies traveled in two cars, which were provided with benches on the roofs, and the troupe came into town riding high and tooting high, wide and handsome.

Minstrels made the next best money to the circus and it was unbeatable opposition to regular players. More than once a medium minstrel show has beaten the records of Booth, Barrett, Modjeska and similar stars in spite of the fact that the minstrels played to lower scales.

But the opposition which developed around 1885 was the turning point. In that year there were about 40 troupes out, of which nearly a dozen were top notchers. But Frohman was having financial troubles with some of his companies, and others were in deep water. By 1890 half of them had folded and in another five years most minstrels were schemed for the smaller towns. They no longer were the financial knockouts in the big towns.

Then pictures came along and made it still tougher, but that was 10 years later. By that time most of the old companies had shut down. Minstrelsy had lived its turn. George M. Cohan and George (Honey Boy) Evans revived it briefly, and Gus Hill had a lady minstrel troupe out for a time, but 15 years ago Hill and Al Woods met to discuss a permanent home for minstrelsy in New York and, fortunately for them, decided they did not want any part of it.

The jokes live on, about all.

Stella Mayhew: A Tribute

By G. A. Johnson Ross, D.D.

Honolulu, Dec. 10.

A short while ago I saw the following paragraph in an old news magazine:

'Died. Stella Mayhew, 59, oldtime music comedienne; of erysipelas and septicemia after gashing an ankle; in Manhattan. Once rich, she had four cents at the time of her death.'

I had met Miss Mayhew only twice in my life, but one of these occasions is associated with so much warm admiration on my part of her character that I cannot refrain from telling the story now. Whatever merit the story has lies in its being true.

A good many years ago I happened to be traveling from New York to Liverpool on the old Cunarder S. S. Lucania. At the last moment before the ship moved out of New York two young women rushed aboard. My recollection is that two suitcases were flung after them as the gangway was being withdrawn.

We sailed on a Saturday. The following Tuesday the ship's doctor came to my stateroom and told me that one of the young women had committed suicide. She had been found lying fully dressed, wearing satin slippers, with a revolver in her right hand, and a napkin under her head to prevent the staining of the bedclothes. She had left a little note under the mirror. The note contained $11, 'to be given to the stewardess, or to anyone to whom I have caused trouble.' It was a thoughtful suicide, although how the doctor and myself could have imagined it was suicide, I cannot now understand. The second young woman denied all knowledge of her roommate and the 'suicide,' which had taken place in the upper berth, behind drawn curtains, while she had been at breakfast. The body had been discovered by the stewardess. The doctor asked if I would bury the young woman at 5 the next morning. I did.

Two Days Later

Two days later the second young woman had so far recovered from the shock as to play quoits on deck. The same evening the doctor came again to my room. He explained that it was desirable to hold a concert that evening, as the suicide story had 'got about the ship' and on shipboard, under certain conditions, suicide is apt to be infectious. He could not himself, he said, preside over the concert, as a man in another stateroom was 'playing with a gun.' The man had been drinking heavily, and the doctor would have to stay beside him, and if possible get the gun from h . The doctor's request to me was that I be chairman at the concert.

Just before the concert I was summoned, for the first time in my life, to the captain's office on the bridge. I found the captain, an old man on his last voyage, very much agitated. He told me that he had just been informed that the second young woman had also committed suicide; that in her hand had been found a revolver of the same calibre as that used by her companion; and a note in the same hand-writing, containing the same statement and the same amount of money.

The captain's problem was this: should he have this second body buried at sea, or should he postpone the burial until we reached Queenstown (Cobh)? He knew that if he detained ship and passengers for an inquest at Cobh, it would mean a delay of 10 days, very costly to the owners. I asked him whereabout we were at the moment, and when he informed me I took it on myself to advise the burial at sea.

Meanwhile, the concert had to go on. One of the performers was Stella Mayhew. She had never been to sea before; she was mortally afraid; both of the sea and the macabre atmosphere hanging over the ship. But she braced herself for an effort, sang songs, and suppressed every sign of anxiety. I retired to my room after the concert with the feeling that I had witnessed an exhibition of unselfish character and great will power on the part of Miss Mayhew.

A Second Burial

Next morning, again at 5 a. m., I was asked to bury a young woman. By this time we knew that she had killed her companion some days before. They had given a false address. There may have been a death pact of some kind. Although the sea was in fairly quiet mood, I was surprised to find it roared so much when I went to the lower deck from which the burial was to take place. The captain, one or two officers and I stood in a space which had been roped off. The railing had been taken down and the captain, while I read the burial service, stood with his arm across my chest to keep me from falling into the sea. As I came to the words, 'We therefore commit her body to the deep' the coffin was pushed over by a sailor, who peering after it as it bobbed its way aft, and forgetting the duty of silence, turned and screamed, 'God! The propeller's got that!'

Some weeks later I saw in the English illustrated papers a photograph of Miss Mayhew, and learned for the first time her profession. An undergraduate friend in Cambridge described to me her performance at the (then unreformed) musichalls. It seemed to be a little too broad for English taste and I fear her tour was not altogether a success.

Years afterward I saw her for a moment in a New York theatre. She greeted me with the single word, 'Lucania,' her voice was husky and overstrained.

I do not know any more about Stella Mayhew. But if this universe is built on justice, somehow and somewhere the vein of courage, unselfishness and compassion in her character will be recognized, even though she only had four cents at the time of her death.

HOLIDAY CRUISE FEATURING TALENT

Talent bookings on pleasure cruise jaunts over the holiday season spurted to new activity this year, with big shows on board for most all of the trips, and extra stage and ether dates included wherever the boats stopped at a southern port. Lines reported record passenger travel, some of them closing their books three weeks prior to the departure date.

Majestic has the following aboard: Bernard Granville, Wee Willie Robyn, Larry Taylor, Corina Mura, Lillian Wagner, Nordstrum Sisters, Claire Vermonte, Virginia Dinworth, Theodore and Denesha, plus three orchestras under the direction of Jean Goldkette, Henry Sharf and Bob Stanley, respectively. On Sunday (29), some of the talent was used in a floor show spread at the Jungle Club, otel Fort Montague, Nassau.

Empress of Britain has Joh Uppman, Lucy Lane, Martin Sunshine, Larbara and George, Loui Richardson, Grant Kimball, in Valenti and Adelaide Finch, with a club date included at the Glass Bucket, in Kingston, New Year's Eve.

Georgic has the following aboard: Paige Brothers, Helen Charlton, Two Sophisticates, Russell and Owens, Harrison Kay, Rosa Rio, Paul Bartells, Paula Howard an Sylvia Loew. Statendam, is out with Wesley Boynton, Alice Wellman, Harriet Brent, Sylvia Sims, Watson and Ingraham, Bobbie Bernard, Jeanne Gordon, Roy Adler and orchestra under Lou Polanski. Troupe also due for airing over sidtion YV 3 RC, Caracas, if country is free from revolution at the moment per itting the broadcasting. A si liar U. S. show went over the outlet last spri Bremen, New York, and Kungsholm ar playing up excursions entertainment.

VAUDEVILLE IN EUROPE

IN LONDON

London, Dec. 22.

Another year, and vaudeville is still lingering. Something always seems to crop up to keep it afloat. Vaudeville's most recent shock over here is undoubtedly the Piccadilly theatre. Here is a house practically in the heart of the West End which has tried everything—films, legit, musical comedy, and even minstrel shows. And it flopped with them all. Then Charles Cloze and Alfred Esdalle started a vaude policy there and put it over to the extent the house has the major vaude execs plenty worried.

Americans coming over, and getting over, can now line up more than a full year's work in England without touching the big circuits.

Following is a list of playing time using medium priced acts:

Paramount Astorias—12 weeks. Any importations up to $500. Higher on percentage.

H. & G. Circuit (Hyams Bros.)—2 weeks. Up to $1,000. If higher will consider percentage.

A. B. C. (John Maxwell)—4 weeks. Circuit numbers nearly 250 houses, but several more may play vaude this year. Top is $400.

Stoll Circuit—4 weeks. Pays up to $500. Above that figure percentage is solicited.

Fred Collins—4 weeks. Up to $500, or percentage. Collins has just returned from America and has lined up several acts.

Buxton Bros.—2 weeks. Top is $400.

Gerrard Heath (Booker)—5 weeks. Up to $500. Above that percentage.

Syndicate Halls—2 weeks. Up to $500. Above that percentage.

Union Cinemas—4 weeks. Top is $300, but company building more houses and will eventually play big acts.

Will Sley (Midlands)—4 weeks. Top is $400.

Montague Lyons—3 weeks. Top is $500.

Bernstein Circuit—4 weeks; Bert Montague (2 houses), 2 weeks; Mile End Empire, 1 week; Theatre Royal, Dublin, 1 week; Blackpool Tower Co., 1 week; Hippodrome, 1 week.

Few New Names

New talent, or names, are negligible. Practically every English drawing card has migrated from the ether. Some of the big names for vaudeville the past year were Elsie Carlisle and Sam Browne, made by their weekly broadcast with the Ambrose Band. Act finished only playing on percentage. Team has split, as a business move, figuring they can draw individually.

Elsie and Doris Waters, another team shunned by vaudeville magnates till they became air favorites. Now cleaning up with their own combinations, playing on percentage.

Stanley Holloway, former 'Co-Optimist,' and now attaining quite a film following, helped by his radio reputation

Brian Lawrence, former Jack Hylton crooner. A definite attraction on his own. Has built up a film reputation and has just turned down 26 weeks from Moss Empires, due to film work.

Sandy Powell was a favorite in the sticks for years, but never really connected until broadcasting came along.

Charles Kunz, band leader at Casani's Club, has succeeded in a short time and can be placed in the front rank.

Les Allen, one of the first crooners with Henry Hall's BBC orchestra, now headlining in vaudeville and doing picture work.

Two who made the vaude grade, but were shunned by BBC, are Nat Goncila and Teddy Joyce. Gonella was formerly Stone's 'scat' singer. Has built up a fine vaude reputation. Same with Joyce.

The following also migrated from the air, but are not strong enough to headline as yet: Phyllis Robins, Kitty Masters (with Henry Hall band), Eve Becke, Troise and his Mandoli , Mantovani and Tipica band, Claude Dampi Carlyle Cousins and Stanelli.

Then there are those who have been established for years and are still top due to their radio work—Jack Hylton, Ambrose, Henry Hall, Geraldo's Gaucho Band, Jack Payne, Lew Stone, Roy Fox, Alfredo's band, and Harry Roy.

Ishes Come Back

Flesh revues, which a few years ago were an integral part of vaudeville, are again coming into favor. They are fewer but of better standard. Biggest producers are Prince of Wales Productions, Ltd., Tom Arnold, Jack Taylor, William Henshall and Bert Montague.

The trouble over here, and always will be, lack of novelty acts.

Bernhard's Intent

Undoubtedly the most important vaudeville move in England next year will come from Fred Bernhard, head of Union Cinemas. Bernhard controlling close to 150 picture houses, is favorably disposed toward a vaudfilm policy although at present only about six of his houses are playing acts.

Montague Lyons, indie agent, has been appointed Bernhard's exclusive booker with a definite vaudeville policy to become a reality around March. This will include the importing of American talent.

IN PARIS

By Robert Stern

Paris, Dec. 22.

Paris in 1935 went conscious.

While variety in America slumped, a fluke movement put the two-a-day back on the map in France, and today vaudeville is the most successful form of entertainment in this capital.

Reason is probably to be found in the appearance of a group of vaudeville showmen on the local scene just when conditions were getting ready for them. Those conditions were a slump in French legit, decline of the traditional revues such as the Casino de Paris and the Folles Bergere, and confusion of the French film business, which reduced drastically the quality of pictures. All this left a hole in the places to which people could go and have a good time, and the vaudeville impresari stepped in and filled it at prices in accord with hard times.

Heroes of this little piece are two teams of showmen: Rottembourg & Goldin and Robitchek & Bizos. Last season they were all just one team, but the Robitchek outfit broke away during the summer, and this season it is giving the mother firm some strenuous competition.

In 1933 Paris vaudeville was in a complete decline. The Alhambra, owned by Gaumont-British, had tried to get back into a vaudefilm policy and failed, changing policy repeatedly and never finding one that would work. There was a little variety, mostly of the French straight singing kind, in some small neighborhood houses, but international acts could get bookings only in the two big Gaumont houses, the Rex and the Gaumont-Palace, which used (and still uses) acts in connection with films, and also once in a while at the Paramount in a Jacques Charles stage show. Plus the circuses, which weren't doing so well at that period either.

Then Rottembourg and Goldin got hold of a small boulevard theatre known as the Pavilion, changed its name to the A. B. C., put on a good vaudeville program (still with emphasis on French acts) and made good in a hurry. With it they had a couple of neighborhood theatres, Bobino in Montparnasse and Europeen in Montmartre, which, like the A. B. C., they subleased on a percentage basis from Pathe-Natan. This gave them a little chain to book, and put them in a very favorable position.

At the end of 1934 (opening of last season) Pathe Natan, banking on the success of the A. B. C., reopened on a vaudefilm basis the Empire, old vaudeville house. Rottembourg and Goldin were installed as bookers and managers. Here they did things on an international scale, booking big acts. At reasonable prices, 66c. anywhere in the afternoon and most seats for $1 at night, they kept the house pretty full most of the season.

They tried the same thing at the Moulin Rouge, also a Pathe-Natan house, but here it didn't work, and the Moulin went back to dual films early in 1935.

This, while a reawakening of vaudeville, was really only preliminary. Big splash came when Robitchek and Bizos, who had been working for Rottembourg and Goldin, decided to go in for themselves. Over the summer they made a deal with the Hakim Brothers and Gaumont-British for the Alhambra, getting it on a percentage basis instead of rent, just as the old firm has the A. B. C. and the rest of its chain. Then, this past fall, in a roar of advertising, they opened up the place, which will hold close to 3,000, as a real big time vaudeville house.

So far they have got away with it. Changing bills every two weeks, as is the custom here, they have almost always been able to get a top-notch local or foreign act to head their bill and form a basis for heavy publicity. They pay big money for their topliners, but most of the other acts on the bill, although they have uniformly been of high quality, get only average pay, so the bill does not cost as much over the normal allotted sum as the amount of noise they make might indicate.

By the use of this system they have been able, in 1935, to keep the house working pretty steadily, playing to approximate capacity on Saturdays and Sundays both afternoons and evenings, and getting fair crowds during the week. Profits have been there, despite the warnings of the sceptics at the beginning of the season, who said it couldn't be done.

But, say the sceptics, this is just a start. Wait until the acts get harder to get and the public gets tired of the novelty. Robitchek and Bizos are waiting, with confidence. They don't expect that slump.

American acts have been the backbone of their show from the start.

Headliners, however, have usually been French, because better known here and of more pulling power on the bills; Lorenne Boyer, Lys Gauty, Cecile Sorel, etc. Outstanding exception is Borrah Minevitch and his gang.

Success of the Alhambra has naturally meant a pickup all around in local vaudeville. Rottembourg and Goldin have splashed at the A.B.C. to keep pace with the rebels and they have done very well too. They kept up the same policy which had been successful for them last season, emphasizing French acts but using a bit of international leaven. only they advertise a little harder and, therefore, are still filling their little house.

And the vaudefilm spots, Gaumont Palace and Rex, each of which uses three acts on most bills, and all those acts international, have had new impetus. They have been joined by the Olympia, taken back by Jacques Haik, who called in Francis A. Mangan to put on his stage shows. Mangan, as always, puts on productions, but he often uses an act or two in them.

Neighborhood houses, likewise, have benefited from the new attention which the Alhambra and A.B.C. called to vaude. Spot in the Avenue de Clichy neighborhood called the Moncey went back to vaude from films, and put on some pretty good programs at the beginning of the season.

Rottembourg and Goldin's outlying spots also are in the swim but, as formerly, they are getting a revue or an operetta from time to time, to vary the monotony. You have to change in this town more often than in most places.

Circuses, too, are making a comeback. The fixed circus in Paris is in many respects like a vaudeville show. It has just one ring, and is intimate enough to permit patter and a little singing, although the latter is frowned on. Dancing is oke, especially if it has an acro angle.

When vaude was in a slump, the local circuses were down, too. The old Cirque de Paris passed out some years ago, and with the decline of the Fratellini brothers the Cirque d'Hiver, until then a leader, virtually did the same, and was dark for a while. Medrano remained the steadiest.

Then the Bouglione Brothers, who previously had just a traveling tent, camped on the outskirts of Paris and did good business. This prompted them to take over the languishing Cirque d'Hiver, which they are exploiting this season. And the Medrano, in Montmartre, feeling the threat of vaudeville competition and the revival of its old competitor, put on extra steam in 1935, both in the composition of its programs and promotion. Result is that circus habitues have plenty of entertainment to go to, and the acts have plenty market.

Medrano, particularly, is after American acts, and has used a lot of them in 1935. Pay is not like that the Alhambra gives to topliners, but spot is nevertheless considered a good engagement for all but the most expensive attractions.

With all this, Paris is not the mecca for vaudeville acts that it might be. Reason is this: the length of time a number can expect to play Paris is limited. In London an act can go from theatre to theatre, chain to chain, doubling in night clubs and ringing the changes indefinitely for a year or more, whereas in Paris a month at a time is about maximum. For the most part, when an act has played one house it can't go to the others for a while. Maybe once, getting two fortnight's work, but not much more.

This prevents numbers from making Paris a first objective in coming to Europe. They all go to London, and from there try to get Paris bookings. While on the continent, there are other places to go to—maybe a month in Italy, a little time in Switzerland, maybe Spain—but it's not long-time stuff. Continental tourin is tough.

That's why artists coming over to cash in on that much-advertised continental boom—which really exists—should see to it that the backbone of their business remain in Britain.

Numbers with the best chance for long stays on the continent are those which can play either circus or vaudeville. Albert Powell, the trapezist, for instance, is an example of a player who can go most anywhere and stay a long while, and his continental travels are extensive.

One big limitation is that for France only sight acts and instrumentalists are good. This il its the field to dancers—especially the knockabout kind—acrobats, skaters, animal numbers and others whose effects do not depend on getting anything across in the English language.

A field which is beginning to open up, with the vaudeville boom, is the French provinces. Circuits for personal appearances are being formed, and the film houses in some towns are even alternating weeks of music hall with pictures—much to the disgust of picture distributors. It is a trend by which local talent, for the most part, has profited up to now, but some Americans are horning in—Joan Warner, for instance. And towns such as Nice are giving a certain amount of business to Americans, as follow up to Paris appearances. Belgium and Switzerland, also.

IN BERLIN

By Claire Trask

Berlin, Dec. 22.

It's still straight vaude in the Fatherland, and as such plenty popular and successful, thanks to the complete absence of circuits and tours, such as govern show biz in England and in the States.

With every house independent, and what is more, in competish to the other guy across the street, vaude in Germany stands a good chance to outlive all other variety-minded countries.

The late H. B. Marinelli tried very hard to effect what he termed a 'booking combine' on lines of American vaude, but he could not convince the German managers of the wisdom of such a move. They listened to his arguments, which culminated in the catch that by forming such a German U.B.O. and appointing him booking head they would save 25 to 50% in salaries.

Marinelli, although of German descent and never naturalized, had spent most of his years in Paris, London and New York. He did not grasp the mentality of the average 'Herr Director,' whose first and foremost thought was distrust of his opponent in general and the whole crowd of his fellow-directors in particular. Too numerous were cases of big star bookings having gone completely floppo through indiscreet disclosure of terms and nature of act by the opposition house putting on a similar attraction a month ahead.

How then could Marinelli expect to bring this round table conference to any tangible result?

Nothing ever came of it—so German vaudeville was saved.

Today, it's not in danger of a wash-up, in spite of picture opposition and extreme low salaries, explainable only by a multitude of celebrity good acts and consequent large choice for bookers. Recent stipulation of minimum salary $3.20 per day by the Reichs Theatrekammer (Chamber of Theatre) speaks volumes. This in face of good biz done by the theatres.

Typical example of vaude popularity in Berlin, aside from the Scala and Wintergarten, both doing practically capacity all the year round, is Carow's Lachbuchne, a family house in the northern section of town, which has opposition in the shape of two film houses adjoining and one legit theatre on top, it being situated in the basement of the Wallalla theatre.

Lachbuehne outlived the latter's multitude of lessees and policies, ranging from grand opera to melodrama, by popularity of the vaude presented by Eric Carow, owner of the place and slapstick comedian. He puts on eight vaude acts, plus appearing in a hokum sketch, which admittedly is the highlight of show. Lachbuehne opens its doors at 7 p.m. and is completely sold out one hour later. Only one show per day, lasting from nine till after midnight, and all sticking it out. Top admission is 30c, but the profit from the beer and sausage consumption is not to be sneezed at.

Si ilar resort in Berlin is Bendow's Bunte Buehne, another comedian depending on his drawing power for vaude offerings, but of a different nature. Carow and Bendow know quite well that without the vaude section their sketches alone wouldn't be enough.

Plaza, a 3,000-seater in the eastern part of the city, was a similar gold mine as long as it stuck to vaude. Now, with operctta, it is n.s.g.

American acts are now scattered all over the Reich, taking advantage of the vaude boom and the Yanks seemingly are getting a kick out of it. It's mostly a full month, or at least 15 days in one spot, with sometimes only one show per day.

German managers display a great liking for American acts and in some cases go out of their way in spending money that is considered reckless by natives. Four Franks, Americans, were offered $2,000 for a 15-day engagement at Leipzig, Cristall Palast, when they played the Scala. An outrageous figure to a home-defender's mind. They nixed it too; more outrageous.

Enormous number of cabarets reveals the fact that German cabarets are really vaude spots in most instances. They play all sorts of specialty acts, from jugglers to animal turns. A lion act is current at the Eden-Arcadia, Leipzig's best-known cabaret, although a tame lion, fully grown and shown without a cage on the stage, where he has his dinner with his trainer. Never experienced any trouble with police and never any complaints. Berlin has dozens of such cabarets employing vaude acts up to 90% of the bill.

Curious fact about German vaude is that bills are not studded with names that spell box office. It's the show in full that draws them; they come to be entertained and in good mood.

Houses like the Scala can tell a tale about depending on names. A Spanish singer with a rep from gramophone records was booked at $20,000 for a month and did the worst flop ever. A w.k. English orch, whose leader is now in the States, was terrific the first time and terribly disappointing on a return date.

Vaude in Germany is straight vaude and will remain so if they leave it alone.

Quickie Vaudeville Dates Prove a Pull For Chi Radio Acts

Chicago, Dec. 29.

Radio in the Midwest are starting a trail of week-end stage dates, shooting out into the surrounding territory for Friday-Saturday-Sunday bookings and flipping right back to the loop to continue their regular broadcasts. Most of the acts are offered full week stands in the key cities in the district, but rejecting these offers because they would necessitate the payment of line charges which would eat up the bulk of their salaries.

Among the acts playing dates are 'Uncle Ezra' (Pat ett), 'Lum ' ' er,' Merri Gus Van.

All the acts have worked out elaborate train, plane and auto schedules in order to meet both vaude and other obligations. Barrett, for one, has purchased a new Laird plane with a special Wright Whirlwind engine for quick transportation.

The Vanishing Headliner

By Joe Schoenfeld

Vaudeville's backbone, the headliner, is almost extinct. The headliner of today, and that's practically without reservation, is from pictures and radio, or was built into the name class in those branches. The headliner of yesterday was strictly vaudeville, each having in proportion its large layman followers the same as a film star or radio artist enjoys today.

Vaudeville wasn't built on headliners, true, but the b.o. appeal of the variety favorites unquestionably kept it going for the three or four years just before the dialog-screen and up-and-coming radio finally strangled it. The debut of talkers quickened vaudeville's demise, but vaudeville was on its last legs even before.

The flow of headliners had stopped three years before talkers, for it was around 1924 that showmen were turned from vaudeville to the lucrative bids from mammoth circuit-builders, leaving vaude to shift for itself for the time being. That was fatal. The development ground of variety, the family time and burlesque, was still there, but the high-powered exploitation, the costly buildups by the operators, had suspended. The mental energy of the showmen versed in vaudeville h.i. turned to theatre mergers and picture buying, and, just as they were about to return their efforts to vaudeville, sound came in and clamped an icy hand on the popular stage.

But still it kept going, on the impetus of entertainment and the headliner. Radio was still quite crude, not yet holding enough in 1927 in the way of variety to keep the public at home. Sound was still a debatable factor among theatre men. Vaude held them in a weakening grip, just as it had from 1924 to '27, only because there was nothing else to turn to. When sound did become nationwide, and radio came out of its cocoon in brilliant form, vaudeville had no brakes and the toboggan was on in full motion.

First to feel it was the family time, the small-time towns which afforded acts their break-in ground and provided the fodder to feed the big-time maw. These low-budgeted spots couldn't afford sound and vaude, so vaude went.

Burlesque's Decline

Burlesque, which had been invaluable in producing comedy acts for vaudeville consumption, also began to slip into its present state of strippers first and comedy last. The Fannie Brices, Jack Pearls, Bert Lahrs, James Bartons, et al., had already graduated from its ranks, and the studes who took their place in burlesque seemed satisfied to stay there, or else did not hold enough for promotion.

Popular stage entertainment received its last impetus in 1925, when the presentation vogue in picture houses started to boom. This lasted two years and then came sound, and presentations slid down to the level of vaudeville and they went to the bottom together. Once the public fancy had turned to something else there was nothing to stop the debacle.

Vaudeville may have continued on a big-time scale for a few years past talkers' advent had not the family books been closed. When the Poli, Junior Orpheum, Pantages and Delmar time, plus the many independents booked on Keith's Fifth Floor, passed out, the first notes of vaudeville's requiem were sounded. It marked the end of the development of new acts, it placed the brunt on the headliners already in the biz to keep it going. But the majority of them were already on the downgrade.

Fact that many of the vaude names had already become passe did not quicken vude's demise so much as the exhorbitant salary demands growing out of the competition for name acts that arose between the deluxers.

Acts, which in 1924 and '25 considered $500-$750 salaries proportionate to their headlining reputations, were paid $1,500 to $2,500 and up. The picture houses could afford that kind of money because of their large seating capacities, but vaudeville theatres couldn't.

Another thing the vaudeville headliner couldn't compete with beginning around 1928 was the growing importation of outside names for vaude dates. Film personalities, then radio and legit started to come in. This was in itself a sure sign that vaudeville wasn't developing anything, and that the vaudeville headliner, with few exceptions, had lost the public fancy.

2,000 in '26

A year before the sound era was ushered in, there were 2,000 vaudefilm houses in the U. S., besides 28 straight vaudeville theatres. Eighteen of the latter were on the Keith Circuit in the east, the other 10 on the Orpheum time. Around 6,500 acts found more work than they could use in the 2,000 vaudefilmers, while the strictly vaudeville spots played an average of 220 acts weekly.

When it's considered from where vaudeville started to slide, it's hard to imagine that it could have fallen so far so quickly. In less than seven years vaudeville has been reduced from 2,000 vaudfilmers and 28 strictly variety houses to less than 50 weeks in all over the entire country. There hasn't been a continuous straight vaude theatre in the U. S. for almost four years, and even the most rabid vaude optimist has given up all hope of there ever being one again.

Another sign of the times: Hardly half the strictly vaudeville headliners who were around seven years ago, and no further back than 10 years ago, are remembered today. And most of them are recalled only when their names and acts are fully detailed.

Where the headliner of seven and 10 years ago is today is also unknown in most instances. Some are still in show business, still headliners, but the majority seem to have passed out of the picture entirely.

It is claimed by some dyed in the wool vaudevillians that if the headliner of 10 years ago was around today, vaudeville could come back. That's doubted by those more versed in what happened to vaudeville and what's happening today. Sound, though aided somewhat by the headliners' salary demands, licked vaudeville practically by itself. Today vaudeville would have radio to fight as well. The names of yesteryear's vaudeville, with extremely few exceptions, could not hope to drag the public from their homes and the type of entertainment now broadcast. It's the vaudeville of the air, the modern idea of popular entertainment, with headliners who count their followers in the millions. That's something vaudeville of the past never dreamed of competing with.

DANCE PORTRAITS (5)
Flash Act
14 Mins.; Three
G. O. H., N. Y.

Someone concerned in this act must have a flair for the palette. Lighting, togs and scenery attest to this.

Opening shot is a studious recreation of an artist's habitat. Three girls and a male terp team comprise it. Can't detect the boss because everyone works hard and all succeed in their endeavors. Titian haired nifty dances on her toes. Male team dustify their inclusion, as do a statuesque femme tapper and a soprano, who also tickles the ivories when not singing.

HERBERT, LYNN and MITZI
Trapezists
6 Mins.; Full
Jefferson, N. Y.

Excellent dumb act of novel membership and routines. Zips through a speedy six minutes and is sure-fire for applause. Man is discovered in inverted posture hanging from trapeze just under the overhead drape line. Arrangement of ropes and special gadgetry enables the trio (two of them girls) to reveal dexterity, strength and daring while staying away from the familiar.

Top stunt has the man doing a fast spin hanging by his teeth while carrying one of the girls, neck and legs, with his feet only. Land.

SHEPPARD, CARLTONS HERMANN
Dance Revue
10 Mins.; One and Full (Spec)
Jefferson, N. Y.

This is fast. And on its fastness plus a special set act probably has an obvious utility by present booking standards. A certain slap-dash crudeness mars the advantage of the speed somewhat. Less frenzy and more finesse would get smarter results.

Composed entirely of hoofing specialties and pretty much of a single pattern. Land.

Waring at N. Y. Par, Lyman Deal Falls Through

Fred Waring's band, already set for five weeks by Paramount opening Jan. 24 in Minneapolis, goes into the circuit's Broadway Par in March for a two weeks' stay. Opening date has not been set.

Deal for Abe Lyman to follow the Casa Loma band's current two weeks' run fell through. Negotiations are on for another name band.

The Two-Man Act

By JOE LAURIE, Jr.

The 'two-man' act has gone the way of the monologist, the sketch artist and the single woman.

But from the beginning of the old variety days up to the peak of vaudeville, two-man act was the standby of all programs.

Most of the two-man acts had 'belly-laugh' material. Their comedy was broad, physical and rowdy. They could use stuff that the mixed teams couldn't use. They could get bigger laughs than the single man because they could 'feed' each other and help build up the laughs; and so, having a two-man act on a vaudeville bill usually insured the next-to-closing spot against a flop.

The first variety programs consisted of many two-man acts, most of them blackface teams. The minstrel show was really the beginning of the variety show. After the first part they would have an olio where specialties were presented and when variety bill replaced the old minstrel shows it was these same specialty artists that stepped in and laid the amusement foundation for a business that entertained a nation under the name of vaudeville.

The two man acts of the early 80's were mostly knockabout comedians. They worked in blackface, some of them did Irish, and many of them made up eccentric. Their acts consisted of almost everything—song and dance, crossfire talk, musical instruments and acrobatics. Their talk would run to a series of disconnected 'gags' and they would depend on their song and dance and tumbling for a finish.

Harry and John Kernell, Lester and Allen, Schoolcraft and Coss, Scanlon and Cronin, Sandford and Wilson, Lamont and DuCrow, Johnson and Bruno, Harrigan and Hart, Wild and Bradley, Bryant and Hoey, Niles and Evans, Fields and Hanson, Emerson and Clark, Daly Brothers, Harris and Carroll, Fox and Ward and McIntyre and Heath are just a few of the top notchers of those days. People who remember them say that they have never been equalled.

Changing Styles

In the late '90's the style of two-man acts changed. Instead of both members of team dressing 'funny' the members started to draw a distinct line between the 'comic' and the 'straight man'. The comedian would wear a funny makeup and the straight man would dress in flashy street clothes. Instead of just a series of unrelated gags they now had regular 'routines' and some of them even had 'skits'. They began to depend more on 'talk' than on the song and dance and knockabout comedy. In 1900 many of the teams would use a song or a dance only for a finish and some of them would even 'walk-off' on a gag.

The 'straight man' was just as important to the success of a two-man act as the comedian. He had to make a fine appearance, have sex appeal, a good speaking and singing voice. A good straight man usually was an educated and well read man, and in the majority of cases also had to handle the business for the act.

The average two-man act was temperamental and seldom remained intact for over 10 years. Of course, there were teams like McIntyre and Heath, Fox and Ward, Kenny and Hollis, Howard and North, Smith and Campbell, Conroy and LeMaire, Hussey and Boyle, Clark and McCullough, Weber and Fields, Hoey and Lee, Kenny and Platt, Klien brothers, Roger brothers, Eugene and Willie Howard, Gallagher and Shean, Aveling and Lloyd, Lewis and Dody, Mathews and Ashley, Miller and Lyles, Cole and Johnson, Williams and Walker, Avery and Hart, Miller and Mack, Moss and Fry, Mack and Orth, Bill and Gordon Dooley, Needham and Kelly, Cooper and Robinson, Barnes and Barron, Cook and Lorenze, Hawthorne and Cook, Savoy and Brennan, Carson and Willard, Raymond and Caverly, Otto brothers, Wilson brothers, Tom and Fred McNaughton, McKay and Cantwell, Quinlan and Mack, Russell brothers, Morton and Moore, Smith and Austin, Swor brothers, Shaw and Lee, Jans and Whalen, Mercer and James Templeton, Jack Wilson and Franklyn Battle, Val and Ernie Stanton, Buck and Bubbles, Snyder and Buckley, Clark and Verdi, Dillon brothers, DeHaven and Nicee, Fenton and Fields, Fiddler and Shelton, Havel brothers, and others that stuck to each other for up to 20 years. But most of them would split and try other partners and many would re-team with their original partners after being separated for a few seasons.

There were many things that contributed to the splitting of successful two-man acts. 'Woman trouble' and 'the bottle' were two of the main reasons. If one of the partners were married or keeping company, the other would feel that it would be only a matter of time when he would leave him and do an act with 'the wife' so the money could go in one pocket. There were a number of two-man acts that never spoke to each other 'off stage'. McIntyre and Heath, the Russell brothers and Montgomery and Stone didn't speak to each other except on business for many years. Many of the really great teams were made up of one 'mixer' and the other member a 'lone wolf'. They would live in different hotels, eat at different restaurants and travel with different companions. These teams seemed to get along better and for a longer period than the ones that became 'pally' with each other.

Inseparables

Of course there were many two-man acts that were inseparable on and off the stage: Aveling and Lloyd, Lewis and Dody, Havel Boys, Wilson brothers, Olsen and Johnson, Raymond and Caverly, Savoy and Brennan, Shaw and Lee, and others too numerous to mention. There were a lot of two-man acts where the straight man or comic would receive an offer for a show as a single and would refuse it to keep the act together. Others left their partners and became stars in musical comedy and the legitimate field, and some of them broke up their partnerships to enter the business world. Eddie Cantor (Cantor and Lee), Doc Rockwell (Rockwell and Woods), Tom McNaughton (McNaughtons), Bill Robinson (Cooper and Robinson), Henry Lewis (Browning and Lewis), Solly Ward (Leonard and Ward), Ed Wynn (Wynn and Lewis), Rex Weber (Wilton and Weber), Bert Wheeler (Wheeler and Moran), Ford Sterling (McAvoy and Sterling), Frank Tinney (Tinney brothers), Bill Mahoney (Mahoney brothers), Charlie Murray (Murray and Mack), Willie Howard (Howard and Mack), Harry Kelly (Kelly and Harrison), Don Barclay (Barclay and Chain), Jack Pearl (Bard and Pearl), Cliff Edwards (Clayton and Edwards), Harry Green (Fisher and Green), Bernard Granville (Granville and Rogers), Jack Benny (Benny and Woods), Charlie Allen (Morris and Allen) were a few.

The two-man act was usually great company, spending money freely and mostly out for laughs. They had many adventures that the 'man and wife' act didn't have. They would make many friends, standing up against bars and meeting gamblers, jockeys, baseball players, bartenders and big business men. They usually belonged to many lodges and clubs and built up followings all over the country, which reflected at the box office and raised their salaries.

To mention all of the two man acts would read like the 'Who's Who of comedy. Names like Merrill and Otto, Burk and McDonald, Shean and Warren, Gallagher and Carlin, Hawthorne and Inglis, Bickle and Watson, Harry Cooper and Charles Henderson, Webb and Burns, Comfort and King, Ed and Lou Miller, Dyer and Fay, Glenn and Jenkins, Gordon brothers, Hibbitt and Malle, Hines and Fox, Hufford and Chain, Hurst and Voight, Handis and Millis, Hanlon and Morrisey, Harris and Manion, Jerome and Herbert, Kane and Herman, Kaufman brothers, Kay and Sayre, King and Beatty, Kramer and Morton, Kramer and Boyle, Kranz and White, Kelly and Galvin, Kelso brothers, Lane and O'Donnell, LeMaire and Phillips, LeMair and Hayes, Lloyd and Britt, McAvoy and Powers, Lloyd and Wells, Lydell and Higgins, Moran and Mack, Montgomery and Perry, Mathews and Shayne, Mayo and Tally, Mitchell and Durante, Morton and Moore, Mullen and Coogan, Murray and Allen, Allen and Howard, Alexander and Scott, Armstrong and Ford, Ashley and Lee, Bobby and Nelson, Bennett and Richards, Burns and Fabrito, Freda and Palace, Cook and Ste-

. . . Just a thought

IN every field of human endeavor, he that is first must perpetually live in the white light of publicity. Whether the leadership be vested in a person or in a product, emulation and envy are ever at work. In , in literature, in music, in industry, in politics, the reward and the punishment are always the same. The reward is widespread recognition, the punishment, fierce denial and detraction. When a person's work becomes a standard for the whole world, it also becomes a target for the shafts of the envious few. If their work be merely mediocre, they will be left severely alone—if they achieve a masterpiece, it will set a million tongues a-wagging. Jealousy does not protude its forked tongue at the artist who produces a commonplace effort. Whatsoever you write, or paint, or play, or sing, or build, no one will strive to surpass or to slander you, unless your work be stamped ith the seal of greatness. Failing to equal or to excel, the follower seeks to depreciate and to destroy—but only confirms once more the superiority of that which he strives to supplant. There is nothing new in this. It is as old as the world and as old as the human passions. And it all avails nothing. If the leader truly leads, he remains—the leader. Master-poet, master-painter, master-workman, each in his turn is assailed, and each holds his laurels. That which is good or great makes itself known, no matter how loud the clamor of denial. That which deserves to live—lives.

Two-Man Act

vens, Joe and Lou Cooper, Cole and Snyder, Chic and Archer, Carson and Willard, Billy Van and James Corbett, Cameron and Edwards, Duffy and Sweeney, Donovan and McDonald, DeVoe and Steiger, Freeman and Dunham, Fenton and Green, Orth and Fern, Mayo and Tally, Abel and Irwin, McInnes brothers, Smith and Dale, Leighton brothers,

And today we still have the two-man act with us, but only a handful. Think of it, from a list of over a thousand. Of course, we have the act that's billed as a two-man act, but it now has stooges, and girls. Girls come on and do a bit and then go into a rhumba—or a series of bumps—or a song and dance—and that isn't new, either.

Years ago when one of the partners of a two-act had a sweetheart or wife traveling with him, he would stick her in the act for a 'flirtation bit', to put 'class' in the act, and the partner would pay half the railroad fares—and maybe pay half of the costume. But it was just a bit, and that little bit has now grown into a part where the women should be billed as assisted by the two-man act.

And so the two-man act is gone ...gone with the tandem bicycle... the crystal set...gone with vaudeville...they have rejuvenated them over 'the air'...Pearl and Sharlie Hall...Wynn and Graham McNamee...Benny and Beator...but somehow they don't sound the same ...We can't see the straight man fixing his tie and pulling down his cuff...mulling and shaking the comic...looking out front between lines dating up a 'town-gal'...and glancing off stage to see how the single woman is 'taking it'...we miss hearing the partners 'pan' each other and telling us how 'my partner is holding me back'.

Amen.

STRIP GALS ON BIKES FOR B&K'S EVE DATES

Chicago, Dec. 28.

All vaude houses on the Balaban & Katz circuit and the Great States time are having special New Year's Eve and New Year's Day shows.

Booking Manager Lou Lipstone is setting a fan of strip dancer for appearances in all of the outlying theatres, among those set being Faith Bacon, Sondra, Corinne and Countess Alabassa. Not enough of the s.a. gals to go around for the hotcha New Year's Eve shows, which will necessitate plenty of bicycling of the gals to cover the B. & K. outlying spots.

Henry Back to Morris

Dick Henry, who was let out by Curtis & Allen, will join the foreign department of the William Morris agency in New York. Complete arrangements have not been set.

He will either work with Lou Wolfson, now in charge of foreign bookings, or Wolfson may step into another department in the office. Henry originally left the Morris agency to go with C. & A.

Kreutzberg Feb. 2 in N. Y.

Harald Kreutzberg returns early in the year from an extensive European tour, and will appear in New York at the Guild on Feb. 2 and 7.

He's been soloing on the continent for several months.

SEASON'S GREETINGS TO ALL

UNIT REVIEWS

International Follies

(ORPHEUM, LINCOLN)

Lincoln, Dec. 26.

Out since October, 'International Follies' is one of the large units of its type to still have a future, although others went to the barn after touring the few spots in this territory. Routing from here after Sioux City, Ia., is to points south via St. Joseph, Kaycee, etc. It's carrying b. o. potency for the cornfed circuits, since it has the girl talking point, a dozen in line, as many more in the band, besides an additional sprinkling in the acts. Costumes are good and the three full stage scenes oke.

Free of superfluous smut and with its nude number handled in unobjectionable manner, it's no poke at family trade. In the billing it's mostly Jackie Heller. None of the other acts is especially well known, although Gresham and Blake deliver outstanding comedy.

Orph's house band in the pit takes care of two-thirds of the show, before the girl musical organization with the unit takes up the score. The girls in line, looking trim in long lace gowns, move in when the curtain is taken away. Stepping is good and fast. Additional terp flash is the Kings, Dorothy, Johnny and Frank, and later some singing from Sylvia Tucker, who's introduced as the 'niece of Sophie Tucker.' Would be better if they'd lay off that, since the audience expects better than it gets.

King Bros. in some more dance and then the Three Waltons, who clown over inebriety, work before the traveler while the set changes. Waltons are oke pantomimers, but the audience here was quiet, not generally fast enough to know what was going on. Interest is revived again by the dolls in a hoop number, their best routine. Jean Gregory and Eleo, dancers, are featured. The femme's purple hair is the only standout in the turn, the stepping just fair. Gresham and Blake, fast with the wisecracks, to which the girl, a cute number, is of yeoman service, are the followup. Ideal for the spot.

The girl band, backing up a full-stage set, takes up the accompaniment from this point on. They first back Gregory and Eleo and a comic takeoff by Gresham and Blake, latter the best; then Heller. Latter sells his stuff expertly. A fine-looking, diminutive boy, Heller has a very good stage personality, radiating charm all over the place.

Dorothy King in a bit of Russian kicking and then the 'Parade of Nations' for the finale. Girls are all undressed alike for the stunt, but the Irish girl has a green brassiere; the Spanish girl some red beads, etc. It's the nude number, and not bad. Feature is Mlle. De Leys, iron jaw spinner, who works in the finale.

Owners are Jack Kalcheim and Al Weston of Chi; Elmer Jerome is company manager, and H. Sistaire ahead. Business here was good enough, considering tariff at b. o. hopped to 40c, 15c above usual.

Barney.

WBBM AIR THEATRE

(PALACE, CHICAGO)

Chicago, Dec. 27.

Band show unit, primarily, using five acts in front of the Dell Coon aggregation of musicians, and basing its box office assumption on the power of the CBS ether outlet in Chicago. Which means an audience of 100 or so miles from the loop and therefore likely to be a box office show in that radius. Question is whether WBBM and its 'Air Theatre' tag will mean anything at all beyond the radius of the transmitter's activity.

Fairly good show this, with its five turns, 12 girls and 12 musicians. Tommy Mack and his stooges headline on sock appeal generally, though this week the RKO booking office has spotted in Frank Gaby on top of the show and it's Gaby this week for the majority of laughs. Mack is up rather early in the show, but pounds out a surefire turn on his lowdown comedy.

Additional strength are the Three Byrons on their knockabout acrobatics. Hard-working fellows who prattfall themselves silly. Dancers and harmonica players are Horne, Day and Franks, who work diligently but without particular inspiration. Warbling duties are held down by Alice Dawn as a hotcha torcher and the Three Kittens for the wah-wah stuff. The line is in for a number of good hoofing routines and doubles to a glee club sequence that gets over on excellent handling on production. They do particularly well on their tap dance exposition of 'Poet and Peasant,' a difficult routine but worth the trouble.

Unit brings in a regular CBS-WBBM announcer, Franklyn McCormick, for this week's engagement with McCormick spieling in front of each number in the manner of straight radio style. It's a good effect, adding strength and meaning to the numbers and to the unit as a whole.

Gold.

Prod. Stuff Out for Straight Vaude in Cleve

RKO contemplates dropping the production type of stage show currently at the Palace, Cleveland, and reverting to regulation vaude layouts.

Present policy entails an m.c., changed weekly, for every show.

Montrose-Evelyn Merger

Chicago, Dec. 29.

Belle Montrose and Ivy Evelyn hitched for a two-girl act.

Doing a talking comedy turn.

Convict Leo Hall as Killer of Vode Team

Seattle, Dec. 29.

With sentence of Leo Hall to hang within next 90 days, following jury's verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, officers have marked the Erlands Point massacre of six people as solved. Hall, however, still protests innocence and is moving for a new trial.

Two of the six victims, robbed and brutally beaten to death at Erlands Point 18 months ago, were Bert and Peggy Vincent, standard vaudeville team.

Waring's 2 Chi Weeks

Chicago, Dec. 29.

Fred Waring's band comes into the Balaban & Katz Chicago for a return engagement late this month.

Will play it as a two-week stand the weeks of Jan. 31 and Feb. 7.

15 YEARS AGO

(From Variety and Clipper)

Vaudeville actors and agents were turning brokers to cash in on the stock craze. Nice while it lasted.

Jane and Katherine Lee were using 'vaudeville's smallest and biggest headliner'. Just kids then.

Legit shows still cutting prices. The Shuberts had just established a $2.50 top for Boston. Broadway still used the $3 level, but shaky.

Estate of the late Alfred T. Ringling set at $1,056,543.

'Sally' was tops on B'way with $34,000 on seven shows. In the pre-Christmas week, too. Most shows slumped.

Joe Leblang bought half of the Cohan theatre and the Fitzgerald building for $300,000. Eventually got it all.

Germany sought to ban American pictures. Getting too popular and hurting local product.

Arbitrators awarded an up of from $2.50 to $5 to music printers. Added to rising paper costs it made the 10c sheet music impossible.

Chicago moving for men ushers in theatres on grounds they would be more reliable in an emergency.

The Day Before Yesterday

By John C. Fli

Walking up Broadway of a spring night you started from down below 27th street, in the Madison Square section, presided over by the Flat-iron building and St. Gauden's Diana atop the old Garden. Proctor's Fifth Avenue, playing big time, is popular, and the billing out front leads off with Truly Shattuck, Jack Norworth and Nora Bayes are billed for next week. There is a one-sheet in the lobby which announces, 'Coming—Eva Tanguay—Cyclonic.'

On the opposite side of the street at Wallack's, George Arliss is finishing an all season engagement in 'Disraeli.' Charlie Burnham is in that little office off the lobby talking about the good old A. M. Palmer days, when Broadway was roadway. The Weber & Fields Music Hall is struggling with uncertain motion pictures, mostly foreign made one-reelers. The Bijou is dark, but the sign still carries the name, 'Nazimova,' although the pale incandescents have been taken down. At Daly's is a summer musical, Helen Lowell in 'The Red Petticoat.'

A short block west on Sixth avenue the Haymarket is open, and college boys in timid groups are watching the girls, in big picture hats and dragging skirts, dancing on the floor. Beer is a dime at the Haymarket; hard drinks a quarter.

It was Herald Square in those days and every out-of-town rube whistled the melodies from 'Little Johnny Jones.' The Herald was still a great paper, housed in a Stanford White structure. John G. Logan was dramatic editor, and the best in town. Hourly the gaunt bronze figures on top of the building and facing the Square moved awkardly and struck the bell on the Herald clock, while the eyes of the gargoyle owls, spaced around the facade, blinked off the quarter hours. People lined the Broadway side and watched the whirling presses through large plate glass windows.

Plenty of night action around the West 30th street police station (named the Tenderloin by Captain Williams because the district was the choicest in town), and Bill Reitmeyer, of the World; Dan Markel and Manny Levine, of the Hearst papers; Wally Hamm, of the Sun, and all the top notch police reporters made their headquarters there.

John J. McGraw was operating a billiard room in the Marbridge building. Tom Gallagher, one of New York's most widely known sporting figures who never drank, smoked or wore an overcoat and lived to a ripe old age, was usually there. A new sensational caromist from Chicago, named Calvin Demarest, had lately arrived. Members of the Giants and visiting ball players were frequently present. Rube Marquard had just run his string of consecutive victories to 19, still the record. Mike Donlin played a good game of Kelly-pool. The Yankees were then known as the Highlanders and played 'way up town at Broadway and 168th street.

The Herald Square theatre had lately turned to films after a long and honorable legitimate career. Recently there had appeared Bessie McCoy in 'Three Twins' with her Yama-Yama girls, the Henry W. Savage production of 'Everywoman,' and Eddie Foy in 'Mr. Hamlet of Broadway.' Billy Rock and Maude Fulton had closed in a show. They danced to the tune of 'Glow-worm.'

Out-of-towners, standing in front of the Herald Square theatre and looking sky-ward, watched the great chariot-race sign, 'Rice Leaders of the World,' atop the Normandie, at 41st street.

Fritzi Scheff had finished at the Knickerbocker in Victor Herbert's 'Mlle. Modiste,' and Montgomery and Stone were playing in 'The Red Mill.' Everyone was whistling 'In Old New York.' Harry Somers was in charge at the Knickerbocker, which had a long serics of successes. Otis Skinner played there in 'Kismet,' with Rita Jolivet, produced by arrison Grey Fiske. Later came the Julia Sanderson-Donald Brian-Joseph Cawthorn musicals.

The Casino was never dark in those days. Louise Gunning and Robert Warwick in 'Balkan Princess,' the Winthrop Ames importation of the newly discovered Max Reinhardt's 'Sumurun'—one after another they came, played to profit, and left for the road.

In front of the Empire you usually could find, just before curtain ti , Alf Hayman, John D. Williams and William Seymour, key men in the Charles Frohman organization, engaged in conference which usually moved by unanimous consent int Browne's Chop House, next door. The Empire was the outstanding legitimate theatre of New York and small wonder, considering the Frohman management and stars. John Drew opened each theatrical season on Labor Day. After he left for the road, just before Christmas, he was followed by Ethel Barrymore, or Billie Burke, or William Gillette, or Maude Adams. Sometimes the Frohman stars played at the Lyceum or the Criterion and other syndicate theatres.

Charles Frohman, whose name was known to thousands, was never seen in public. He lived at the Hotel Knickerbocker, seldom gave newspaper interviews, was only occasionally photographed upon his return from frequent European trips.

When the Lusitania went down Frohman was aboard, and Broadway lost something it has never regained. Broadway lost illusion.

The Maxine Elliott theatre in 39th street has recently opened, and A. Toxen Worm's press story about the plasterer who was discharged for bathing in the star's porcelain tub, is still being reprinted in the press.

Elisabeth Marbury had her o ces in 40th street, and she has just launched in the theatre, and upon society, two sensational ballroom dancers, Vernon and Irene Castle, who made their stage debut with Julia Sanderson in 'The Sunshine Girl.' Vernon previously had appeared as an eccentric comedian with Lew Fields at the Broadway. Mrs. Castle came from New Rochelle. They have opened a high price night club called the Sans Souci, downstairs on 42nd street, opposite the Times building.

Miss Marbury was a dominant figure then, and for many years afterwards, in New York. Her versatility was amazing; her friendship lasting.

The etropolitan Opera House is in its hey-dey. Peace has been made with Oscar Hammerstein and his Manhattan competition. Gatti-Casazza is in charge and Toscanini is conducting. A summer three-sheet carries the names of the principal singers—Caruso, Scotti, Farrar, Destinn, Gadski and Fremstad. Bill Guard presides for the press. Nightly in the critics' room, off the grand t.r, you meet Henry Krehbiel, of the Tribune; W. B. Henderson, of the Sun; Ed Ziegler, of the Herald; Algernon St. John Brenon, of the Morning Telegraph; Pitts Sanborn of the Globe, and Pierre S. Key, of the World. The brothers Meyer, who publish Theatre magazine and print the house program, are nightly visitors in the press room. John Brown and Earl Lewis are in charge of the front of the house. John Bull, who knew by name more prominent society, business and professional people in New York than anyone except Frank Baker, takes the tickets. Charlie Foley handles libretos.

Around the corner in 40th street, near Seventh Avenue, was the German Village. And the women who walked at night in the shadows.

You pass Kid McCoy's place and the Metropole. Jack Johnson was heavyweight champ then. At the Hermitage bar Sandy Dingwall, Joseph M. Brooks, Theodore Mitchell, Jack Murray and the K & E agents and managers always are found in that golden hour between 6 and 7 p.m. Jim Shesgren, from the Savage office, and Walter Kingsley drop in frequently.

Regan's Hotel Knickerbocker reigns supreme. The Maxfield Parrish painting of Old King Cole stretches the length of the bar, and the central figure of the monarch himself smiles delightfully on the customers. Only the insiders know the legend about his mirth. Irvin Cobb and Martin Green drop in via the subway from Park Row. Sam Bernard, Louis Mann, Arthur Voegtlin and Wells Hawks there too. Also Harry Reichenback and Sam Freedman. In the white dining room at the Knickerbocker most managers meet for lunch. Sam Harris is usually there with Walter Moore and A. H. Woods. It is also a meeting place for the motion picture pioneers—Adolph Zukor, Sam Goldfish; Jesse L. Lasky and Arthur S. Friend, of the soon to be organized Paramount company; Carl Laemmle, P. A. Powers and R. H. Cochrane.

42nd Street is clean and attractive. 'Ziegfeld Follies,' lately moved from the New York theatre roof garden, played the New Amsterdam year after year. The casts included all the best musical comedy stars and comedians of the period. Leon Errol, Bert Williams, Frank Tinney, the Dolly Sisters, Lillian Lorraine, Ina Claire, Fanny Brice appeared in a succession of revues, several of them written by Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf. Everyone went to the 'Follies.' Diamond Jim was a constant repeater. So was William R. Hearst. Sam Harrison and Malcolm Douglas were always in the lobby until counting up time. Jack Francis and Gene Buck were there too.

The Ziegfeld Roof, above the New Amsterdam, had just opened with Bernard Granville and Will Rogers who told jokes about President Taft. A new black-face comic named Eddie Cantor makes a hit. The customers, sitting at small square tables, have little wooden hammers (revolutionary innovation) for applauding, and the big girl number is on a glass floor with changing lights from underneath. Julian Mitchell staged the show.

At the Liberty where Christine MacDonald has finished in 'The Spring Maid,' is a $2 motion picture called 'Birth of a Nation,' produced by D. W. Griffith, who used to direct for Biograph. J. J. McCarthy and Theodore Mitchell handle the management. The wiseacres say the public never will pay $2 for a film. The 'Nation' runs 39 weeks, and few who see it realize that from this showing is to spring a new amusement industry which in time is to take over Broadway, rip it wide open and erect giant theatres. Broadway's metamorphosis starts with this memorable engagement at the Liberty. Old theatres have given place to new ones on favored sites. The Liberty, a monument to a former era, still stands.

Rose Stahl is playing a return engagement in James Forbes' 'The Chorus Lady" at the Harris, and David Belasco's production of William DeMille's, 'The Woman,' with Mary Nash, is at the Republic. A new playhouse, the Eltinge, has opened on 42nd street and Al Woods, Martin Herman and Jack Welsh have moved their offices from the Putnam building. The opening is a smash hit, 'Within the Law,' by Bayard Veiller, the most popular melodrama since Eugene Walters' 'The Easiest Way.' Jane Cowl and Florence Nash have the big parts. It's on a new theatrical theme, police persecution, and an actor for the first time uses a Maxim silencer. There is timeliness to the story because earlier in the summer a gambler named Rosenthal, who boasted he intended to go 'down town' and tell all he knew, was shot down one morning in front of the Metropole, and the newspapers are full of stories about 'Gyp the Blood,' Jack Rose, 'Whitey' Lewis, Sam Schepps and his white hose, and a police lieutenant named Becker. Charles S. Whitman is district attorney and the Becker case commands almost as much local newspaper space as the Thaw case which preceded it by 10 years.

The George M. Cohan theatre has another hit in 'Get Rich Quick Wallingford,' based on the George Randolph Chester Saturday Evening Post stories. Hale Hamilton has the title role, and the cast includes the excellent Edward Ellis and Frances Ring, wife of Tommy Meighan. Cohan & Harris occupy offices on the fifth floor of the Fitzgerald building, adjoining the theatre. Eddie Dunn is in charge of the press department. Bert Feibleman and Dan McCarthy are busy handling the booking of the dozen companies which are on tour.

The New York Times is published in the flat-iron building on the triangle. Alexander Woollcott and Brock Pemberton are cub reporters on the staff. Adolph Klauber is dramatic critic and editor. Other critics on the dailies are Louis Defoe, of the World; Lawrence Reamer, Acton Davies, of the Evening Sun; Charles Darnton, of the Evening World; Alan Dale of the American; Louis Sherwin, of the Globe; John G. Logan, of the Her-

WhereDoCriticsComeFrom?

By Wolfe Kaufman

The managers have been pretty quiet about the New York critics of late. When business is bad there are always a lot of squawks, and th critics are one of the easiest phases of show business to squawk about. But business just now, on Broadway, is pretty good. So the critics, for the time being, have not got their noggins through the canvas with the managers trying to locate the pate.

Which makes it as good a time as any to route 'em out. What makes critics, anyway? Where do they come from? And how do they get that way?

Taking them alphabetically, the facts are these:

John Anderson. Born in 1896 in Pensacola, Fla. A private school education, ending with a spell at the University of Virginia. When he got through with that, came to New York, hit the New York Post for a job and connected. Reporter, rewrites, feature writer and columnist. In 1929 the Post's drama critic spot was open and Anderson was nothing loath. Four years later Hearst offered him the same spot on the Journal. He moved over and is still there. In between reporting on the new shows, he translated three foreign plays ('The Inspector General' was the most prominent, though a flop) and knocked off two books—which were published.

J. Brooks Atkinson (maybe he doesn't spell out the front name because it's Justine). Comes from Melrose, Mass., where he was born, he says, 'about 40 years ago.' Went to college in another Boston suburb, Cambridge, getting a B.A. without a Harvard accent. That was '17. The next years still sticking close to home, set himself as assistant to the dramatic critic on the Boston Transcript. That dramatic critic was H. T. (Hell-to-Pay) Parker, who died about a year ago, and was one of the ablest legit connoisseurs in the country. He taught Atkinson plenty. In 1922 Atkinson figured he had had enough of Boston, so New York got him. No drama job around but he talked himself into the post of literary editor of the New York Times. A good paper, he thought, and figured he'd done enough wandering anyway. He's still there, but in '26 the Times drama spot was open. It hasn't since even been ajar.

John Mason Brown is the youngest of the Manhattan critics. Born in Louisville, Ky., class of '00, he was educated there and in Morristown, N. J. Then to Harvard (that makes two of 'em) class of '23. Home to Louisville for a while, where he did some cubbing for the Courier-Journal, but wanted to see Europe. There for a year, sending in pieces to his Louisville paper and the Boston Transcript. In 1926 he became assistant editor of Theatre Arts Monthly. Two years later, when Kenneth Macgowan got ambitious, Brown succeeded him as assistant editor of the mag. Two more years and Anderson listened to Hearst, and Brown replaced him on the Post. The same year, his first as a dramatic critic anywhere, he won VARIETY's box-score for drama criticism. To date he has written four books, all about the theatre, and he also lectures at six or 20 paces, standing or sitting.

Gilbert Gabriel is the only New Yorker among the New York drama men. He was born in Brooklyn and is 46. Educated at Williams College, Poly Prep and Peekskill Military Academy. In '12 he started as a reporter on the New York Sun. Three years later he became that paper's literary editor. Two years after that he switched to music criticism. In 1924 the New York Telegram needed a drama critic and Gabriel figuring he might as well try everything, took over. One year and the Sun asked him to come home. There was nothing to forgive, either. He did, and remained with the Sun until 1929 when Hearst sent him a letter. Lo, an invitation and a check. Gabriel is on the American and is the most prolific book writer of all the boys. Most of his books are fiction, but some are about music and musicians they say.

Robert Garland is from Baltimore, where he was born in 1896. He was raised, educated and got his first job there—the Baltimore News—as a reporter. He also chased fire engines for the Baltimore Sun. Then he moved over to the Baltimore Post, completing the round trip, which let him try his hand at columning and dramatic criticism. In '27 he came to the New York Telegram as columnist. When Gabriel left that paper, Garland grabbed the drama reporting job and kept it when the paper merged with the World into the World-Telegram. He hasn't written any books but he's tossed off some one-act plays, and almost anyone interested can have them for production.

Percy Hammond. Some question as to whether Hammond or Burns Mantle is the Dean of the New York critics. They both started about the same time. Hammond was born in Cadiz, Ohio, in 1873 and was graduated from Franklin College. When 25 he took an excursion train to Chicago, and by the time the train returned he was a reporter on the Chicago Post. That lasted 10 years, during which time he moved up the line to dramatic criticism via editorial writing. In 1908 he moved to the Chicago Tribune and was the dramatic critic there for 13 years. In 1921, the New York Herald sent for him and he answered. He's been there, through the switch to the Herald Tribune, for 14 years. A restless soul.

Richard Lockridge is another mid-westerner. St. Joseph, Mo., claims him as of 1898. An edusation in Kansas City schools and K. C. Junior College left him with a desire to see the world. So he took the easiest way—the navy. He took a look at the world, figured to hell with it, and went back to school—the University of Missouri this time. That was in '19. When '20 came around he moved over to George Washington University for a year. A hot man for his schoolin'. Eligibility rules against 'tramp' students forced hi to New York and newspaper work. The Scrap Metal Reporter was his debut, but the Kansas flats were in his heart and he returned there for a personal debate on whether to haunt any more professors. This switched to two years as reporter between the K. C. Journal and the K. C. Star. Then New York again. After trying for a year landed with the New York Sun. Having once gotten his name on that payroll, Lockridge finally dropped anchor. For five years he was a rewrite man, joining the drama savants in 1928.

Burns Mantle can almost remember back to Born at Watertown, N. Y. (his first stage wait), he attended school in both Denver and San Diego. He would have commuted, but the Watertown trolley couldn't make it. A slight pause and then a job with the Denver Times, starting right off as dramatic editor. The actors must have loved him. In 1901 he moved over to the Denver Republican, but that lasted only a few months, and off to join the Chicago Inter-Ocean for six years. In 1906 the Chicago Tribune found a spot for him and in 1907 he became Sunday editor of that paper. He held that job until 1910, the two last years of which coincided with Hammond's tenancy on the same paper. In 1910, the New York Evening Mail sent for Mantle and he hopped the first train. There he remained for 12 years and in 1922 moved over to the News.

So that's the lot of 'em. The oldest is 62, the youngest 35. One got a job as drama prognosticator right off the bat, although most had to work up to it through devious channels. Only two did any studying abroad to speak of. Almost all went to college somewhere, sometime. Two are Harvard, but there's not a Yale or Princeton man on the team. It all ought to make it very easy as to how to become a dramatic critic.

SHOW BIZ FROM 1905-1935

By Epes W. Sargent

No similar period in the history of the American theatre is fraught with such great significance as the past three decades. It witnessed the rise to the heights of the lesque show, the vaudeville performance and the legiti stage. It witnessed the rise, and the passing, of the de luxe theatres. It has seen a complete change in the amusements.

With the closing of the period the legitimate theatre pauses hesitant on the threshold, not yet certain whether it is still on its way out or is about to be recalled. There seems to be little question about vaudeville. It would take a mighty hand to lift burlesque out of the slough of filth into which it has fallen.

It is unthinkable that the theatre should die out. Some form of appeal will be found. Trouble is that most of the guesses do not appear to be the right answer. The one definite fact is that within the 30 years' period a complete and far-flung change has been accomplished.

It might be possible to go back of the 1905 deadline—to include the previous 15 formative years. Selection is made of 1905 as the real start of the present developments.

It was shortly before 1890 that Marc Klaw and Abraham Lincoln Erlanger opened their theatre booking agency. That in itself was a vital stride forward. Up until the middle 80's each manager had to come to New York in the summer to book attractions for his theatre, running from this office to that and digging out the smaller fry in their cubbyholes in the lithograph printers. They went back home with their books fairly well dated up. If a company closed it meant digging up another attraction somehow, somewhere. John J. Coleman had an office where he represented a few southern houses. Will A. McConnell also had a representation, but not until Klaw and Erlanger was it possible to book a season's attractions in one spot. It completely altered the business methods of the dramatic theatres.

Then in 1892 B. F. Keith brought to New York the clean continuous performance idea he had inaugurated in Boston. Tony Pastor beat him to the clean show, and F. F. Proctor had anticipated the continuous angle. Keith always used the word 'stole' when speaking of the Proctor setup. But it was the Keith entry which gave a spurt to the idea because J. Austin Fynes, his resident manager, and Sam K. Hodgdon, who booked the Boston house, managed to control the bookings and make the Keith house a better bargain than the Proctor shows. He set the pace for the country, with Percy G. Williams coming along and setting up a different style of two-a-day in his New York and Brooklyn houses.

It was somewhere around this time that the talk began of a burlesque wheel, and in the 90's that Oscar Hammerstein skidded across 42nd street and took the business with him.

It was in 1895 that motion pictures were announced to become a permanent attraction in vaudeville houses. Lyman B. Howe toured the country with a few reels and a carload of sound effects. Vitagraph gave Sunday shows in several spots and William A. Brady headed the Hale's Tours idea of a store show. But it was only around 1905 that the store shows came along and in the course of time completely redrew the theatrical map. That's why 1905 is marked as the commencement of an era.

In 1905

Here, then, was the situation in that year.

Klaw & Erlanger were beginning to feel their power. They were autocrats instead of agents. They could save a poor show by forcing dates. They could kill the best shows with poor routes. The drama houses had traded King Log for King Stork.

B. F. Keith had forced through the booking office, originally, the idea of Pat Shea, of Springfield, Mass., and Jo Paige Smith, of Wilson & Smith, booking agents. Everyone of importance was in except Williams who later had to go in.

The burlesque wheels were in the making, and were cleaning up their shows. They were building their appeal with smarter shows, better production and were making the comedians be funny rather than dirty. The once despised burlesque had its face washed and in many spots was on its way to a $1.50 top. Sam Scribner, L. Lawrence Webber, Harry Morris and others of their class realized that better shows meant bigger money.

Florenz Ziegfeld had worked into the business following the Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1893, and had gotten the idea of his 'Follies' which was nothing more than a burlesque show on a productional scale almost beyond the comprehension of the old timers.

The drama was doing nicely with the plays of Clyde Fitch, James M. Barrie, Arthur Wing Pinero, David Belasco and the elder William de Mille, W. H. Gillette, with Owen Davis and his ilk supplying the flash melodramas that kept the smaller combination houses alive. Every town of appreciable size had its permanent stock company, with the entire troupe stars so far as the villagers were concer

It was the heyday of the stage.

Then Came Pix

Then came the picture theatre, offering three one-reel subjects for a nickel, shortly going to a dime. In their 50 and 100 foot lengths it was not a simple matter to hold patronage or to adv rtise successfully, but with the accidental success of 'The Great Train Robbery' the answer to that problem was found.

But it was not in the rapid growth of these houses that the menace was greatest. The strongest influence of the picture was to educate the rural patrons to a better grade of acting than could be had from the one-night stand troupes which then afforded the tanks their only dramatic diversion. In the face of increasingly good casting and better direction, the yokels became dissatisfied with the brand of acting supplied them. They turned from the 'East Lynne' and 'Uncle Tom' troupes. Even 'St. Elmo' when it finally escaped the shackles of copyright was not a draw for more than the first time around. It was impossible for the tankers, with their small casts costing between $200 and $300 a week to compete with Mary Pickford (then known only as 'Little Mary'), Florence Lawrence, Jim Kirkwood and Maurice Costello. The turkeys had their wings clipped. Presently they ceased to fly. The former constituency knew them for the hams most of them were.

The road show of the better type fared better, though there were mutterings about No. 2 casts and one or two state legislatures considered bills making it a felony to advertise 'with the original New York cast' without producing the original actors. The bills never passed, but they showed the temper of the times.

Then came the war. Munitions trains sidetracked the theatrical troupes. There was a lack of rolling stock, and presently the Government took over the railroads and not only raised the rates but turned a deaf ear to the appeals of the companies for the old 'rates.' No longer could a car be moved 25 tickets, bought at reduced fare, and if the troupe carried more than the 150 pounds of baggage per person, the rest was excess, for no longer was a 60-foot express car tossed in. Sometimes it was impossible obtain a car even by paying the current high prices.

When peace came it did not bring peace to the theatrical companies. Rates were still up. Cars were still scarce, and the railroads, still under Government management, were not competing for business. No concessions were given, and things were tough.

Not only that, but the unions were getting exacting. The war had given labor a new idea of its importance. Not only those unions concerned with manufacture, but all federations. Living costs were going up, and this was the lever used to boost wages for musicians and stage-hands. Moreover the managers and owners no longer had the say. If a house manager wanted an orchestra of six men and the union said 10, he hired 10. The same applied to stage crews. The business manager of the grips told the employer what he had to do, and the employer had to like it.

How the Road Died

It was a discouraging state of affairs. Many houses were converted into picture houses, partly because of labor troubles but also because it was becoming increasingly difficult to keep the house constantly lighted through the season. The overheads were larger than receipts.

When it became increasingly difficult to obtain shows, it drove more houses over to pictures and that, in its turn, made it more difficult for shows to book routes. The road was dead.

Today there is an attempt being made to revive it. The drive has been on for several years. This year is the first real indication there may be a chance. Last year Katharine Cornell made a successful Coast trip. Eva LeGallienne did very well, but most of the others hit only the high spots. This year several shows have done well, but the road is a long way from being back. It will not come back until there is some assurance that the supply of productions will at least approximate the number of open dates. Playing auditoriums and dark picture theatres is not going to be the answer. There must be theatres regularly devoted to stage shows and as regularly open.

That's the position of the road, today. It's a matter of 'if' and 'maybe.'

The success of the New York season is in some degree dependent on the re-establishment of the road. Comparatively few shows can break the nut on a New York run alone. There must be a supplemental season on the road to wipe the slate clean and then chalk up a profit.

Vaudeville, out of town, long since became an adjunct to the picture showings. The old-style two-a-day show is absolutely out. There is not a single theatre in the country playing eight or nine acts with only a newsreel or a short for the picture representation. The Palace was the last to go—and how it went!

Vaude's Passing

The decline of vaudeville has, of course, been blamed on the pictures, but really there are two other reasons. These are smut and economy. The smut era virtually began with the production of 'Salome' as an opera at the Metropolitan opera house. More attention was centered on the Dance of the Seven Veils than on the Strauss score. This was not the fault of the opera house which had staged the production in all good faith. It was merely that just as Little Egypt and Ayesha brought the danse du ventre into vaudeville and burlesque in 1893, the title of the Salome dance appealed in a later year. Eva Tanguay electrified the vaudeville patrons by discarding all the veils. Maude Odell (an English actress, not the current American player), did a strip act for Bill Morris the year he had the American theatre. On occasion he posed absolutely in the nude, though usually she sported some drapes.

Every burlesque show had the Salome dance that season. All vaudeville bills strove for a nude act. And they were not difficult to find. The revues had gone strip before this, but vaudeville was more of a family affair. Lots of families stayed away.

The other handicap was economy. Keith and Albee had their booking office, but so long as Percy Williams would pay an act what it was worth to him, the booking office had to follow suit. Albee bought Williams out for a sum around $6,000,000 and is reputed to have taken it out of the acts inside of five years. More than that, he could set his own standards, and they were not set as the Williams shows. Now and then an act would be hired at a formidable sum, but as a rule the lists were small. Albee was getting square—as he had promised.

Keith & Proctor had gone mildly crazy about pictures in an earlier day. Most of their theatres had been converted into straight picture shows, and it proved difficult to bring the old patrons back. In fact, they never did. Martin Beck was doing much the same thing in the west. Pictures replaced acts, but not of their own weight. They were drafted into vaudeville, and killed it off like a parasitical vine around a tree trunk.

And so, today, there isn't any vaudeville, and no outlook for vaudeville since the old sources of supply, burlesque and the family houses are all gone.

—And Burlesque

Burlesque started on the downgrade when it got too self-important and instead of sticking to its genre aspired to be musical comedy. As burlesque it had a certain native tang. As a diluted edition of the musicals and revues it merely advertised its own mediocrity. Like vaudeville it sought to turn to flesh. The comedians were regarded as less important than the strippers, and the strippers became less important as they reached the limit of stripping. They have arrived at a point where they can go no further, so they no longer carry the same appeal. The days of Mortimer Thiess' 'Wine, Women and Song' and Harry Morris' 'A Night on Broadway' have gone. Perhaps never to return.

The split between Klaw & Erlanger was not as important as it appeared to be at the time. There was less need for them as the number of roadhouses decreased. The Shuberts had bored in, but were never quite as important, either as bookers or productionally. Presently there were no places to book.

Today it seems to be the pictures that are at the top of the slippery day stairs, with the League of Decency ready and too willing to spring the trap. The addition of talk made it tough for the producers. That has always been the handicap of stage drama. Many good ideas were swamped by poor dialog. The same thing is happening in Hollywood. In an effort to prove to the clergy that the pictures have been cleaned up, they have been made too clean to suit the average taste. Moreover the addition of dialog stresses the fact that a picture is merely a bobtailed drama. With color it is not unlikely that the last sense of illusion will be lost. That may help the return of the more animate spoken drama. Maybe not. No one knows.

One only knows that in the past 30 years the theatrical map has been completely remade. With a no-man's-land still to be charted. One only knows that in no similar term of years has the history of the stage been so sweepingly rewritten.

One only knows that the theatre never has been completely expunged. There is no reason to suppose it will be now. The big question is merely what the next 30 years will bring back. And there's money for anyone who can anticipate the answer.

Du Roy Loses Judgment In Appellate Decision For Equity; Reversal

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of New York reversed the lower courts in a four to one ruling in the matter of Robert Du Roy, who won a judgment of $40,000 against Equity last spring for the closing of his play 'Right of Happiness,' a 10-day flop in 1931. Complaint was dismissed, but the fact that the decision favoring Equity was not unanimous permits appealing the case to the Court of Appeals.

Award had been reduced to $13,000 by mutual agreement shortly after the suit was tried. It was contended that Equity by calling out the play's lead (Anne Sutherland), who had not received salary, and refusing to permit an understudy to go in, had forced the show off the boards. Others in the cast had waived the salary guarantee, no longer permitted. Du Roy and his partner, LeMaistre, said to be a college professor also claimed the closing had crimped the chances to sell the picture rights.

Appellate decision included the ruling: 'We believe that the evidence fails far short of indicating that the Actors Equity Association maliciously, willfully, intentionally and wrongfully, and without just cause or excuse induced, enticed and persuaded the actors and actresses to break their contracts, and to refuse to continue to perform.'

Chi City Hall Mulls 'Children's Hour' Okay

Chicago, Dec. 29.

City Hall has ordered the American Theatre Society to send over a full script of 'Children's Hour' and it is now being sniffed over by Barnet Hodes, who has just written an exposition of the taxation system and therefore considered proper supervisor of a dramatic composition.

Hodes is Mayor elly's right hand man in matters of this kind.

Erlanger theatre and American Theatre Society are waiting the word to stop or go in the booking of the show into Chicago.

B'WAY LEGIT'S 38 TUNGSTEN NAMES

Despite the abundance of hits on Broadway at present, there are today only nine stars on the street. Three of the nine are in limited engagement revivals.

Added to that are 29 names of featured players which, considering the musicals and the number of shows in town, still is an extra low figure. In all, 38 players' names are in lights on 35 legits.

Several of the outstanders have no names. 'Winterset' doesn't feature or star any players; neither do 'Children's Hour', 'Remember the Day', 'Porgy and Bess', 'Joy Meets Girl', 'Dead End' or 'Night of January 16'.

Only actors really starred on Broadway at the moment are Beatrice Lillie and Ethel Waters ('At Home Abroad'), Jane Cowl ('First Lady'), Mary Boland ('Jubilee'), Helen Hayes ('Victoria Regina') and James Barton ('Tobacco Road'). In revivals, Nazimova ('Ghosts'), Katharine Cornell ('Romeo and Juliet') and Lucienne Boyer ('Continental Varieties').

Featured players are Rudy Vallee, Bert Lahr, Willie and Eugene Howard ('Scandals'); Jimmy Durante, Paul Whiteman ('Jumbo'); Herb Williams, Eleanor Powell ('At Home Abroad'); Roy Hargrave, George Coulouris ('Blind Alley'); Louis Calhern, John Litel, Myron McCormick ('Hell Freezes Over'); June Knight, Melville Cooper ('Jubilee'); Colin Clive ('Libel'); Walter Woolf King, Nancy McCord, Walter Slezak ('May Wine'); Leon Janney ('Mulatto'); Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne ('Taming of the Shrew'); Elissa Landi, Melvyn Douglas ('Tapestry in Gray'); George Curzon, Margaret Rawlings, Effie Shannon ('Parnell'); Adrienne Allen, Lucille Watson, Colin Keith-Johnston, Helen Chandler ('Pride and Prejudice').

London Madrigal Group, singers, to give a Yule program at Town Hall, Jan. 7. Their first American appearance.

NO BUY YET FOR 'SCANDALS'

Proposed buy on which opened at the New Amsterdam, N. Y., Wednesday (25) was not arranged for up to Saturday (28). George White demanded a deal covering 16 weeks, but the larger brokers refused to sign up and are slated to talk it over further with the manager.

'Scandals' tickets were alloted to the major agencies in the meantime with full returns to the box office.

Management of the Cort, where 'Boy Meets Girl' is housed, has called all matinee tickets back from the agencies. Too many ducats were dumped back to the box office at the last minute and it was decided to sell tickets for all matinees at the b. o. direct. New arrangement with the agencies will be made on 'Dead End,' Belasco, effective Jan. 6.

THE YEAR IN LEGIT

By Jack Pulaski

Highlights of the calendar year in the legitimate theatre include legalizing of Sunday performances, followed by Equity's voiding procedure; internal wrangling within Equity, the most turbulent since the strik times of 1919; pay for rehearsals; expansion of federal relief to actors; dropping of the legit code, accompanied by disappearance of its ticket control plan; much better business on Broadway accompanied by road improvement; Hollywood's interest in Broadway production expressed by increased financing of shows with film money.

Campaign for Sunday legit shows was thought to have been ended successfully when the New York State Legislature adopted measures legalizing them. But Equity jammed the works and the managers are still trying to make Manhattan a seven-day town. Even before the city authorities okayed the state measure, which is a local option law, it was known that Broadway would not see plays regularly presented on Sunday.

Sunday matter was neatly put on the shelf when Equity ruled that players must receive double pay on that day or night. Stage hands followed suit as a protective measure. Law called for at least one day's rest weekly for actors. Managers readily conceded that the double salary requirement defeats the law and apparently there is nothing to do about it. Added cost is prohibitive. Equity leaders are allegedly in favor of Sunday, some saying it will eventually come but not just when. Attitude of some players is in favor of giving Sundays a trial on the grounds that a fresh audience which doesn't get a change to visit the metopolis on other days is attracted and because such added trade might prolong engagements of in-between shows. There may yet be a split in Equity over the issue. Vote by referendum on the matter was evenly divided, half being against such performances entirely, others agreeing to try Sundays for a year but with double pay. Very few are said to have okayed Sundays without strings.

Equity's anti-Sunday stand in this was something of a surprise because it proved the only labor union in the state that opposed the legislation. Stage hands' leader went on the air appealing to the public to ask its assemblymen to vote for the bills. Hearings in Albany saw the State's federation union leaders present to urge passage of the laws.

Result is that all other types of stage presentations, not to say sports, are on the New York Sunday amusement calendar except legit—as illogical a situation as anything in show business. Out of town the Sunday towns continue, with Equity's assent, but Equity doesn't explain why Broadway is made an exception.

Equity leaders were much more concerned with affairs within its ranks, internal strife stirred up by the younger group calling itself the Actors Forum. One crisis was reached at the quarterly meeting last March, which was the first test of strength between the administration and the Forumites. The militant group was sharply defeated, the council nominees (officers had been elected for three year terms last year) on the regular ticket being named by a two to one vote over the slate presented by the Forum. Latter failed to place a single candidate on the ticket and its supposed plan to control Equity by dominating the council failed. Group also failed to disturb the $40-$25 minimum wage regulations.

Equity hadn't witnessed so hot a meeting in a decade. Leaders sent letters to members urging attendance, with the warning that radical elements might bring about the disintegration of the association. The annual meeting resulted in the regular slate being elected.

Early in the fall Frank Gillmore, president of the association, and Paul Dulzell, its executive secretary, again steamed up the membership by threatening to resign. They demanded a showdown, seeking a vote of confidence at a special meeting late in November. Either the members wished the leaders to stick or preferred turning over the affairs of the association to the Forum.

The session was even wilder and at times riotous, but again the Forum was beaten, this time by a vote of two and one-half to one.

Squabble started mildly enough, Forum people on the council asking further consideration of plans for Equity's end of the Works Progress Administration relief shows, which the leaders figured could be handled properly by themselves. Late December quarterly meeting also concerning WPA broke up in a row and almost became a free for all.

Just what status the Forum will have is indefinite. Indications are that it will quiet down. Its leaders deny any communistic trend but declare the group to be a minority faction striving for the good of the actor.

While the Forum was repudiated, one of its proposals, at least, was adopted—rehearsal pay. Determined opposition meant nothing and the fear that the added expense might reduce the number of shows produced has not yet materialized. It was known that rehearsal pay would be ruled in by Equity as early as April but it was thought that such payments would apply to moderate salaried players getting $100 or less weekly.

Equity sprang a surprise by establishing $20 weekly for all senior members and $15 weekly for juniors and choristers. It was realized that straight plays might not have been much affected but that musical production costs would mount. When pay for rehearsals started in September the managers took the situation more calmly. They admitted that the actor would really pay the money himself because the $100 a week actor would be dropped to $80, while the chorus pay would be lowered towards the minimum. That apparently is just what is happening, for there is little squawking from the managers.

Showmen, however, are seeking a term basic agreement to stop further policy changes on Equity's part. They will probably get such a contract since the Forum, which objected, has been squelched.

Relief shows continued throughout the year, presented in school, church and institution auditoriums, also in 200 Civilian Conservation Camps, funds coming from the federal and state emergency funds until the entire project was taken over by the WPA under an allotment of $27,215,000. Understood that about $10,000,000 will be expended on wages to actors, writers and other wage-earners in or around the theatre.

There had been attempts to secure loans, managers applying to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Washington's reply to all such applications and the various plans to revive show business on the road was that the government would not go into show business. It was stated that funds for relief were for that purpose only. Yet it was proposed to form a circuit of theatres with relief shows charging small admission, and another plan which got the nod from the WPA Theatre Project's administrators was to tour musical comedies and vaudeville units playing showless towns at similar admission scales. Under such a plan it was hoped that shows might be self supporting. At least one WPA show project is slated for Broadway although opposed by managers and stage hands.

Something like 2,000 actors and 1,000 others were announced as on the relief payrolls in the city and state of New York early in December. A varied program of such activities was started under Elmer Rice, regional director. One division calls for the managers to try out new plays, using theatres in Brooklyn, Queens and the Bronx, New York's neighborhood localities. Admissions are to be charged, but such ventures are not expected to be opposition to other houses.

Legit code and its accompanying ticket plans and troubles occupied the managers during the winter. As previously, tickets occupied most of the time of the Code Authority. Before the NRA was nixed by the Supreme Court the ticket thing had become such a nuisance that those on the CA started wondering whether ticket control was rightfully in the hands of the committee, since it was not inter-state and certainly not national.

Ticket control scheme which was finally drawn up in Washington immediately was fired on by so-called independent brokers, who refused to be licensed, as required by the code. It was charged that there was a secret alliance by the three leading agencies whereby the lesser agencies would be forced out of business or placed at a disadvantage. The CA was ready to drop tickets after a decision which apparently did not give the best of it to the control system. Court ruling was instituted by the indie ticket men. While it was never clarified and Washington was about to insist on enforcement the whole code passed out.

Tickets immediately ceased to be a matter of importance. Reports of high prices simmered down and the way was open to ticket buys. Rule against buys was about the only one in the code's ticket set-up that was adhered to. This fall managers have been seeking buys, but not with the same insistence of boom years. Brokers are wary about entering such deals, what with short bankrolls.

There has developed a distinctly better business tone in the legit field during the year. Summer found more shows surviving than during the previous heated period. Autumn saw shows of the kind which formerly would have passed out quickly getting patronage. Indications that the public is again more show-minded than during the depression have been clear. While legit does not approximate the business of 1929 it seems definitely up. Even a theatre shortage was in the offing but the flops corrected that. There are 16 houses available for legit on Broadway this season.

Two major musicals remained on the road most of the time and the tours included the coast. This season started later, October seeing flocks of arrivals, when in previous seasons the premieres were a month earlier. Same partly applies to the road.

Experiment that converted the Center, Radio City, into a legit house with 'The Great Waltz' last season is matched by the return of the Hippodrome, N. Y., with a circus play 'Jumbo' this season. Both called for vast expenditures. 'Waltz' is drawing heavy coin on the road now and the indications are that 'Jumbo' will average $65,000 or better at the Hipp regularly. Talk of the novelty at the Hipp started last January. Show actually opened Nov. 16, after many problems and rehearsals.

Hollywood's increasing interest in Broadway productions again ties up both coasts as inseparable. It is predicted that picture money will figure in about 25% of the season's new shows and that may prove to be so. Most active in that direction are Warners, Paramount and Metro. There has been little activity in the purchase of picture rights this fall, but last season Hollywood paid approximately $1,000,000 for the film rights of plays on Broadway. Towards the close of the theatrical year three shows brought around $500,000 alone.

VARIETY's critics' box score was won by John Mason Brown of the Evening Post, N. Y., for the fourth time, his percentage being .855. It was really a toss-up for first place, Gilbert Gabriel of the American being only one point behind at .854. John Anderson of the Journal was in the 'show' spot with .836. VARIETY's combined score was .925. Season's count was 13 hits, 12 moderate successes and 95 flops, 120 new productions in all.

A Review of Reviewers

By George Burns and Gracie Allen

Scene: Gracie Allen's home. Time: What's time to an inmate of Gracie's home?

(George Burns enters and finds Gracie trying to dip a typewriter in an inkwell. Outside of that ever thing seems pretty normal.)

George: 'Well, Gracie, what are you doing with the typewriter? Don't tell me you're going to knit your grandfather wristlets to keep his handcuffs war .'

Gracie: 'No George. But you were pretty hot for a minute. As soon as I get this inked I'm going to write something.'

'A Christmas poem?'

Gracie: 'Of course it won't be a poem! This is going to be about something. It's a sort of a kind of a review.'

George: 'A review? an intimate review?'

racie: 'No, just review of reviewers.'

George: 'An intimate review of reviewers? What reviewers?

Gracie: 'The ones who write for VARIETY. They write reviews about plays, acts and actors, so I'm going to write a review about them.'

George: 'Well, that's nice work if you can get it. But Gracie, you're too idiotic to write anything.'

Gracie:
George.'

George: 'Look, racie, in the first place, do you even know why they write reviews about plays, moving pictures, radio programs, and so on?'

Gracie: 'No, but then I don't know why it's as broad as it's long.'

George: 'What's as broad as it's long?'

Gracie: 'An oyster.'

George: 'An oyster? racie, an oyster isn't broad or it isn't long.'

Gracie: 'All right, then we'll leave it out of my review. It was your idea anyway. Now, George, how does this sound?'

George: 'It sounds terrible. What is it?'

Gracie: 'It's the way I'm starting off my review. Start: A reviewer is a person whose parents wanted a boy.'

George: 'Wait a minute. You mean the parents were disappointed?'

Gracie: 'No, the reviewer was. A reviewer would be disappointed in his own father and mother. He wouldn't even like Heaven if he could get there.'

George: 'That's very good. I didn't know you ever did any real thinking.'

Gracie: 'I don't. I really should be a reviewer; know what I mean?'

George: 'Yeah, I know what you mean. What else are you going to say?'

Gracie: 'Second paragraph. reviewer is a person who think plays always sound just alike.'

George: 'How do know he thinks that?'

Gracie: 'He must think that. All the things all reviewers say about all plays always sound exactly alike. Am I right?'

George: 'You're right, Gracie. What else have you got in mind besides vacuum.'

Gracie: 'Third paragraph. A reviewer is smart though. He knows enough to keep people away from the theatres.'

George: 'Do you call that smart?'

Gracie: 'Certainly. With the theatres nearly empty it's lots easier to get passes to see the shows.'

George: 'Why should the reviewers want to see shows over over?'

Gracie: 'It's their business. Don't tell me they could get so confused and muddled up seeing a play only once.'

George: 'Well, Gracie, I'm going I can see you're going to make a lot of friends among the reviewers.'

Gracie: 'Wait, George. Fourth paragraph. A reviewer always says if all actors and actresses didn't steal each other's stuff, they wouldn't have anything.'

George: 'Well, is that right or wrong.'

Gracie: 'It's right. But it leaves the poor reviewers in a bad spot.'

George: 'How does it leave them in a tough spot?'

Gracie: 'It sets the reviewers a bad example. And even if the reviewers stole each other's stuff, they still wouldn't have anything.'

Economics of Buys

By Jack Pulaski

Ticket buys on Broadway have existed almost as long as show business, but there was a hiatus during the depression, especially when a legit code was conceived as part of the NRA scheme. Now that the blue Eagle is back in the forest the managers and ticket brokers are again entering into ticket deals whereby each one wants protection.

There is, however, a distinct difference in present-day transactions between managers and agencies in the so-called 'buy-outs.' This, the first season in several in which buys have been made, finds the broker cautious and the manager not so insistent as in the 'good old days.' Deals such as were entered into in the past are simply not being made at this time.

Time was when managers would call in the agency people and tell 'em just about how many tickets they had to guarantee to handle. Brokers sometimes grumbled but there was big money in tickets along Broadway and there was a goodly profit seasonally. When the code ruled out buys on the ground that such practices made for high prices, the time had come when premiums —the excess over the box office price—had dropped down to reasonable levels.

There is little question that high prices for tickets and the ups and downs of the stock market had a direct relation. When Wall Street quotations dived, the demand for theatre tickets acted similarly. Ticket men are fully aware of that and the few deals made with the managers since Labor Day have been of a temperate nature.

Demand

Buys are possible only if there are hits. Demands that the agencies make buys for as long as 16 weeks have been nimbly ducked by the agencies on the simple grounds that they haven't got the coin to gamble ith over such a period. It is likely that most brokers are broke—certainly they haven't the kind of surplus that was on hand formerly, for they were nipped in the market in flush days and were caught in the depresh that followed.

Several years back one reaction to high prices asked by the agencies was a federal investigation, the excuse being that the brokers were copping the government's share of the profits. Admissions tax law then stipulated that 10% of the premiums up to 75c. should be paid and all money in excess was to be split with the collector on a 50-50 basis. Agencies didn't think the government could check up on them, but the hearings brought out much inside stuff and the brokers had to put it on the line. Several who were broke took the pauper's oath and spent three months in the federal pen.

Box-office men were involved in the investigation because of gratuities and the law then stated that if the theatre received any excess over box-office price, half was payable to the government. Law was later changed and 10% applies to all ticket prices over 40c. now, whether sold by the box office or the agency. Government did not hold the treasurers but made the theatre responsible, with the managers putting it up to the box office men. Some made substantial payments, but later most of the coin was refunded when it was ruled that gratuities are not taxable under the intent of the law.

One-ti vil

That ticket buys were at one time an evil certainly is a fact. That was during seasons when the same producers had a flock of shows running on Broadway. If the manager had one outstanding success he sometimes made it a rule that brokers must buy tickets for several intermediate attractions in order to secure allotments for the hit. Result was that agencies forced the sale of tickets for so-so shows while other managers squawked they were being discriminated against.

But those seasons when Broadway had more than 60 shows running are over, probably forever, and the old scheme of forcing agencies to buy more ducats than they can sell is a. k., too.

Provisions on buys include the privilege of returning about 10% to the box office by seven o'clock on the evening of performance. Formerly the real sugar in agency sales was gotten around that time. Exclusive clubs would call up, ordering the best tickets for the hits. But the monied people of boom years went broke, and most late sales are way off. Declared by brokers during this fall that if the tickets are not sold by six o'clock they aren't sold at all now, so that problem doesn't exist.

The economics of buys is elementary, regardless of complaints from managers or brokers. Agencies have preferred customers who may be regarded as the bulwark of the theatre, a class of patronage which wants choice seats and is willing to pay for them. There is a personal contact between the brokers' clerks and the customers, most of the sales being made by telephone. Managers know that they will get the widest possible class distribution by allotting tickets to the dozen or more leading agencies. The-first-come-first-saved idea at the theatre b.o. never has really worked on Broadway. Any showman who refused to do business with brokers quickly found out that the little speculators got possession of their tickets, and the public was gyped more than ordinarily.

ut another important item is that when the agencies have a liberal amount of tickets the theatre is protected against bad weather and the resultant attendance drop. When making a buy the broker takes that chance, and if he is caught with unsold tickets of an amount greater than the returnable percentage, he takes it on the chin. That is one reason why the brokers are careful of the number of tickets they contract for these days. In other years, when the specs held tickets too long and could not get rid of them, they either dumped the pasteboards into cut-rates for sale at any price, sent runners to the sidewalks in front of the theatres or just 'ate 'em.' Tickets which they could not sell were sometimes on view in agency windows. It was the prize excuse given by brokers when taxed with gypping.

Formerly by brokers were able, if not willing, to back producers in a sense by contracting for tickets in advance of opening or during rehearsal. That was true of some of the Ziegfeld 'Follies.' No similar deal has been reported since the agency bankrolls were shrunk.

Longest buy on record was a deal covering 32 weeks for one of the 'Vanities' editions. Brokers were required to pay for the last four weeks in advance, and made a weekly settlement in addition. Show moved at the end of six months, and the agencies were stuck, not having secured a refund. Still another show which they backed in a peculiar manner was not a buy at all. Specs advanced about $60,000, in exchange for which they were given the privilege of getting fixed allotments of tickets, which they settled for weekly. Manager paid back gradually, but the coin was not fully refunded until late the next season, when the producer had another hit to supply the wherewithal.

Tendency

There was a tendency early this season to drop the buys system, although the bars were down with the ousting of Repeal. It was shown that a hit could get along just as well without a buy, instance being 'At Home Abroad' (Winter Garden). Other managers, however, sought buys along limited lines, with the result that 'Abroad' got in on the same basis.

Formerly the specs were keen judges of show values and traveled to the layouts to look over new productions. They made buys on their own judgment and that was an index to the producer as to the show's chances. Noticed, too, this season that the agency people were not in accord on some of the good things when tried out. Either they are out of practice or the merit of the productions was questionable. Specs couldn't make up their minds until the shows came to Broadway, and even then some were puzzled. Critics were not in accord, either, making it unanimous.

Indications are that buys are not as pertinent to the theatre as formerly. Allotments of tickets, as during the seasons when buys were out, seems just as good a method of distribution. There isn't as much competition as in boom seasons, nor are there as many ticket buyers.

As for prices secured for good tickets, brokers appear content to do business enough to get by. There are reports that good tickets for some shows are being sold for $8.80 or $9.90, but the indications are that such sales are in the minority, broker sales in the bulk being for 75c over the box office price, plus federal tax.

—And Piano Tuner

Salt Lake City, Dec. 29.

Definite plans are being mapped out for the employment of professional musicians from the family relief rolls of the Utah WPA, Reginald Beales, state director of the project, announced. A survey of the field in Utah was recently completed by Dr. Bruno David Usher, regional director for 11 western states.

There are about 100 free musicians, and these will be put on the government pay-rolls as members of the following projects: symphony orchestra, trios, several piano music librarian and a piano tuner.

Project will get under way by the first of the year.

WPA SHOWS MAY NOT GET GOING TILL MARCH 1

It is hoped that some of the federal theatre project relief shows in New York under the Works Progress Administration will have opened by the end of January, but because of the cumbersome administrative bureaus, doubt is expressed whether the 15 shows now rehearsing will be operating before the first of March.

At the project's headquarters it was stated late last week that 3,175 persons were on the payroll. In addition to okayed requisitions the National Re-employment Service, which investigates applications, turned back 250 requisitions, giving three different reasons—wrong information as to qualifications, incorrect address as indicated by returned postcards, and because the applicant was not getting home relief by Nov. 1.

Elmer Rice, regional director of the project, protested to NRS over the latter disqualification reason. Rules say that persons not on home relief by the deadline date can secure work relief jobs, but because registered applicants had not actually been paid the dole by that time and therefore could not qualify was charged as an over-cautious interpretation by NRS. It is permitted to take on 10% of such persons and others not registered on home relief, but the quota has been taken up. Continued efforts are being made to raise the exemptions to Nov. 1 rule up to 25% but Washington has made no concession as yet.

Henry Moskowitz of the Theatre League (managers) and James Brennan of the stage hands' union, Local No. 1, conferred with Rice on using the Manhattan theatre for relief shows, to which admission is to be charged. Union head said his people would go along with the managers, who protested the intrusion of relief shows onto Broadway after it was specified that the managerial try-outs under WPA financing must be made outside the borough of Manhattan. Just how complaints against the Manhattan idea will be adjusted has not been indicated. Lease on the house has been signed. Rice is expectant the situation will be clarified. It was claimed that Equity is not opposed to the Broadway relief show idea, but the council had not considered the matter.

A concession from the WPA heads in New York permits the theatre project to purchase used props and other stage accessories and that is expected to speed the 'productions.' As yet there are no settings designed, but that is not figured to hold up the shows when casts are fully rehearsed.

Of the total number of persons on the project's payroll in New York there are about 1,800 actors, including vaudevillians. Others are office workers and theatre employees of all types. Equity figures that only 2,000 legit actors are employed by the project throughout the country. Yet to come on the New York payroll are 2,000 more people, half of them actors.

Ruth Page, director of the Chicago City Opera ballet, is negotiating for a New York date, either in early January or February bringing her entire troupe of 30 dancers on from the Windy City for the engagement.

(Press Agent, '20-'35)

After 15 years on Broadway I have learned one thing:

If you can't live it away, you can't sell it.

All the phony buildups, all the importance of author, actor and announcer, won't get 25c if the theatre-goer walks out with a dead pan and a pan on his lips. This, followed by a deadly set of notices, ought to be the signal for all concerned to go home and try to get a ni ht's rest. Yet nothing will ever be done about it. There's always the gent with a $700 payroll for a gimerack who'll argue he can lick adverse comment.

Trick advertising, smart items in the paper, delightful picture displays and stars won't help if the public doesn't want it. Of course, there are exceptions. 'Ted Squall,' 10 years ago, was joshed through Nubi, Bad Girl, into success, but in most cases wherein a play has grown to solvency despite a slow start, it had some emotional quality to save it.

They'll tell you on the street that 'Able's Irish Rose' couldn't be given away, but they finally bought it. But don't forget that 'Able' exhibited for a long run in Los Angeles before it ever came to New York, and Anne Nichols' reasoning that if a show is good in one place it is good in another established an all-time five year record. She put up a little and won. And because she did, hundreds of producers have gone to the cleaners.

A Couple of Rules

The old rule of Wagenhals and Kemper, first leaseholders of the Astor theatre and producers of 'Paid in Full' and 'The Bat' among many hits, still holds good: 'Spend nothing for bally-ho until you're sure they want it.' And to the p.a.: 'Keep away from rehearsals because you may lose your enthusiasm for the play.'

George M. Cohan finances his own enterprises and he sits tight until after the opening. If business isn't good he doesn't distress everybody in sight. He says simply: 'They don't like us.' Then pays off and starts again. There is no hint that he ever stalled a creditor.

The Broadway play is sold in a single store. That is something too few have learned. Expensive campaigns cannot be launched, national radio hookups and the like, because even if the play then sold out it couldn't pay off. The late Flo Ziegfeld never believed in this thought. Some of his smashes played a year or more on Broadway and came out in the red. Unlike soap or sour grapes the stage shouldn't forget it has a lone market place.

There have been advance agents who spent $1,500 for heralding a one-nighter that could only gross $1,400. To be sure, it's crazy business. And being crazy it needs a crazy press agent. He should count the pennies and he should pick his spots. If, for instance, the upper tiers aren't selling he should concentrate on the tabloids. And if he isn't getting the Jewish trade it is okay to snare an indorsement from Rabbi Wise.

I may be entirely wrong, but I firmly believe in advertising prices. Also, I believe in sticking to as near the truth as possible. Certain theatregoers want a comedy, so say the play is a comedy in the ads, or a musical comedy, or revue, or whatever it is. Caviar and hamburger both sell handsomely.

Digging Answers

It isn't only writing pieces for the paper, dashing off the ads, dodging free-listers, humoring the impresario, jollying authors, hanging out with newspapermen, writing copy for house signs, softening the blow of bad reviews, fixing scales of prices, arranging cuff radio boosts, fibbing about the gross, writing radio dialog for the company, seeing strange people with strange ideas, reading manuscripts, laying out copy for printing and taking the raps for errors that often slip into the public prints that weigh down the p.a. It's the constant demand from everyone around a theatre—'Why don't they buy tickets? Why can't we clean out the balcony? What's the matter with the lower floor?'

You cannot dismiss these pleas with the right answer: 'What's the matter with the play?' Instead, you go around to Mike's place.

A good play makes a good p.a., although the best agents have been catapulted into fame by lifting a doubtful show into the money. Once a p.a. has saved (which he really hasn't) a show he becomes Clarence Darrow. Every manager in trouble summons him. Life imprisonment is better than a death sentence. That's what Mr. Darrow once told me. I'm afraid he told some producers the same thing.

All a fellow can do is try. If I like a play that's in trouble, and I'm offered the job to attempt to give it a lift, I do so. But if it's a play, which, in my opinion, hasn't a chance, I just won't step in. Regarding this, I have my own formula. I send my grocer, my Queens neighbors and a few scattered non-Broadwayites to the show. If these strangers to the white lights report favorably I feel the enterprise has a chance. Yet this rule is far from secure. I sent my milkman to see a play I liked and asked for his opinion. 'I didn't care for it,' said. When pressed for a reason, he replied: 'No music between the acts.'

Most important of all, regardless of a hit or a staggering sweetheart, is to keep harmony in the troupe. Nothing will kill off a boxoffice sale so quickly as discordant note backstage.

A good actor, it must be remembered, is like anybody else who is good—he is different and cannot be treated as a regular human being. His slant on his dressing room or his complaints about the billing are the licks of a king. Truthfully, I love 'em for it. And if I devote two-thirds of my time trying to please actors and to make them happy (after all, they're the meal ticket and let's not fool ourselves) it is because I want a grand performance every performance. No bi blasts in the paper, no posting campaign and no glorious set of reviews will save the day if the players are bickering. You first have to give a show.

When in Doubt

If a fellow has a doubtful play, instead of inquiring about his second act he should ask: "How's the free list?" Whenever the phone stops ringing for ducats it's time to close up. In other words, if a person takes the trouble to beg a pair of seats he's interested, and in most cases he'll buy if turned down. Of course, he may not buy then and there and the stage needs quick action. But it gives the producer the tip that his show isn't entirely cold.

Under present conditions it isn't smart, unless the star is an exceptional draw on his own, to make too much fuss in advance. New Yorkers catches on quickly, too quickly in fact. The town likes to make discoveries, breaking doors down for what it likes. Advertising spreads, after the stamp of success is indelibly printed on the show, should be wide and heavy, merely to protect the advance sale and to guarantee a run.

As an editor remarked: 'The play is safe. The newspaper is only water on the wheel.'

The press agent, therefore, needs but remember to stick to water.

Last spring Mr. Washburn was employed by the Theatre Guild to herald the tryout of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in 'Taming of the Shrew.'

Flustered by the job, Washburn inquired of Mr. Lunt the reason he was engaged, 'Was it because you had heard I was good?' asked the p.a.

'No,' replied Lunt, 'My mother's name is Washburn.'

Albany Stock Surprise Click, Now in 15th Wk.

Albany, Dec. 29.

The year's big surprise in local theatricals is the success of stage plays. The Capitol completely reversed past records of flop after flop with stock.

Guy Palmerton's Manhattan Players will begin its 15th week Monday (30). Excited stay upset all advance dope of the crepe-hangers, who gave the outfit a couple of weeks at the most.

Troupe, headed by Frank Lyon and Nancy Duncan, sticks closely to comedy rather than drama.

DAVE FLEISCHER'S AMBISH

Dave Fleischer, brother of Max, creator of 'Popeye' and 'Betty Boop' cartoons, wants to become a legit producer. He has commissioned Hugh Wellock and Howard Snyder to write a play for him.

Pair of column contributors are already at work on their assignment.

Like other recent productions in a show field which has lost its best writing talent to Hollywood and radio, this 12th George White 'Scandals,' the first in a couple of years, mainly lacks humor. The other necessary revue ingredients are there. On merit it's moderate and will probably do that kind of business.

The comedy department isn't lacking entirely in laughs, thanks —and how—to the presence of Willie Howard and Bert Lahr in the cast. Two such comedians in one show in this day of extreme comedy talent drought is a break for the audience. Besides which the production numbers are okay.

Cliff Edwards is another comic, but his reasons for being unfrowned won't be able to understand he's held down to a few brief bits. Show's other name, and top-billed, is Rudy Vallee. According to what he's doing in the show Vallee is in chiefly for box office purposes.

In its femme lineup the show has no names, but a pair of talented youngsters in Gracie Barrie and Jane Cooper both rate individual mention. The latter is the former Betty Jane Cooper, whose dancing act with the Lathrop Bros. has been standard for several years. Miss Barrie handles most of the singing and very nicely. Miss Cooper, who has changed her hair as well as her name and is now a blonde, rings the bell in each of her two dancing numbers.

Productionally, the show may be heavy, but it doesn't look it. The settings are neat, but not lavish, and most of the color is in the costumes. An effort to tie the show together with a 'theme' is made. To introduce his numbers White uses a running 'television' gag, with two show girls walking on before each opening and dialing a mock electrical gadgets located where the announciators used to be on the proscenium arches. It's a corny idea, used extensively before in pictures and vaudeville revues.

Music averages up well, being the most consistent phase of the production, and contains at least two and possibly three hits. 'Life Begins at Seven 10,' 'Anything Can Happen' and 'I'm the Fellow Who Loves You' are the most likely numbers.

Routined to make his first appearance after nine o'clock so as not to interfere with his 8-9 Thursday night broadcasts, Vallee gets off to an unfortunate start in essaying to compete with Howard and Lahr in a comedy song number. To the tune of 'Fellow Who Loves You,' the three men alternate in singing a comedy parody, each to a girl. Opening night it was every man for himself, with Howard and Lahr managing to get their share of laughs personally and despite weak tag lines. Vallee was lost. A spot between those two boys is a tough assignment for anybody. Later in the show, as the number leader in 'Pied Piper of Harlem,' a swell production bit, Vallee is on again and at 11 o'clock he appears only five minutes or so of a Fred Allen imitation, with the impersonation no good reason for the ancient gags used to illustrate it. The item itself has no place in the show.

The best of a not very generous supply of laugh numbers arrive in one-two order just under the finale. One is 'Soup,' a radio demonstration on making canned soup, played by Lahr and perfect for his 'scallion' style. It's similar to a standard burlesque bartender bit, but the radio and soup departures make it different and Lahr builds it into a howl. The other is the Howard Bros.' 'Rigoletto' quartet, a classic among time-honored pieces of American comedy business and as good in the replaying as ever. That this is by far the best that Howard has to offer indicates how poorly he's been equipped. His 'French Lesson' depends entirely on an understanding of Yiddish, and even though the wordage is as simple as possible, the non-members won't get it. Should go out, among other things, if not clipped already. Show can stand a loss of 15 minutes or so anyway.

Other sketches run mostly on the blue, from navy to baby, and none is a sustained laugh provoker.

Smash specialty turn of the show is the colored dancing trio, Sam, Ted and Ray. A Halle Selassie introduction gets them off to a novel start, and from then on the hoofery, the threesome, and the personality of the tall boy turns the trick. His work is mostly the old-fashioned slide, but old enough to look new again, and rhythm sliding has always been among the toughest kinds of dancing.

Stanley Twins, from the nite clubs, in their 'shadow dance' are another one-number hit. Jane Cooper, on her individual showing in this show, rates two bows. She looks splendid and dances beautifully, with the best pair of femme tap dancing feet in vaudeville her forte. As a technician many pros think Miss Cooper outshines Eleanor Powell, although her style is not so showy. Miss Barrie, who does most of the vocal number leading otherwise, gets her solo chance with 'I've Got a Heart,' which makes the grade with it, although the highly sophisticated lyrical number isn't suited to her girlish appearance and manner. Harold Willard shows a good voice in opportunities he never gets another. Hal Forde and Estelle Jayne are the support players in the sketches, both capable and doing excellent work throughout the show.

Best of several good girl numbers is a top hat idea, which is the only really original item in the show. The girls are tucked down to the neck by huge silk toppers, with their torsos dressed to resemble faces; blue brassiere decorations for the eyes, large bow ties at the hips, etc. Bumps and a slight case of grinding combine to bring about some novel effects. 'Boondoggling,' novelty lyric, provides for another well-staged girl number. Dancing girls are okay on the hoof and charmingly costumed, with the usual share of White lookers among the showgirls.

Among the latter is Jean Gale who, as one of the Gale Quadruplets, was a principal in another 'Scandals' not so long ago. Dressing of the line is sometimes sparse, but there is no cut and cut stripping.

That the 'Scandals' stands up better on its Broadway debut than it did on the road means that White's lengthy fixing experiments on the show were worthwhile. But it's not a sock show, because the script material isn't there. Bige.

VICTORIA REGINA

Drama in three acts presented at the Broadhurst, N. Y., Dec. 23, '35, by Gilbert Miller; Helen Hayes starred; written by Laurence Housman; staged by Reginald Footman.

Queen Victoria	Alfred Helton
Lord Conyngham	H. Hellenden-Clarke
Archbishop of Canterbury	Harry Plimmer
A Maidservant	Mary Austin
Duchess of Kent	Babette Feist
Victoria	Helen Hayes
Lord Melbourne	Lewis Casson
Prince Albert	Vincent Price
Prince Ernest	George Macready
Mr. Richards	Albert Proom
Mr. Anson	Arnold Marshall
1st Queen's Gentleman	Arthur Gould-Porter
A Court Usher	Edward Martin
Lady Muriel	Mary Hinton
Lady Grace	Renee Macready
Lady-in-Waiting	Mary Newnham-Davis
2nd Queen's Gentleman	Fothringham
Mr. Oakley	James Bedford
Duchess of Sutherland	Cherry Hardy
Lehzen	Helen Tremaine
General Grey	Tom Woods
Queen's Gentleman	Edward Jones
John Brown	James Woodburn
Benjamin Disraeli	George Zucco
A Footman	Robert von Rieh
Sir Arthur Bigge	Herschel Martin
An Imperial Highness	Felix Brown
Princess	Nancy Hayes
Princess	Shirley Gale
Princess	Elizabeth Munn

'Victoria Regina' further enriches Broadway, both productively and as worth while theatre. It should have an extensive feminine draw.

It is a long play and at time seems to lag in detailing the story of the long-reigning Queen Victoria, spanning her life from girlhood to old age. But with Helen Hayes on the stage it is engrossing and the fineness of her acting makes 'Regina' a standout.

Much has been written about Queen Victoria but this version has her all-woman. It opens when she is awakened early in the morning to be told she is the queen. Next scene has her advised to wed and given a list of eligibles. Before she sees any of them she decides to ask her German cousin, Albert, to bring fallen in love with his photograph.

Their marriage in 1839 proves a love match and, while there are little spats, her royal highness becomes jealous quite often during their wedded life of 22 years, the couple maintain tender regard for each other. Though Albert is devoted, he exhibits a mind of his own and it is his counsel that she seeks, rather than the prime minister's. It is just after he rewrites the minister's note of protest to America at the start of the Civil War that he collapses, it being a fatal attack.

Third act, which is the shortest, is the most diverting. There, under a tent in the garden at Balmoral (Scotland) Victoria sits. So well does Miss Hayes impersonate the elderly Queen that the first-nighters burst into immediate applause. Her appearance is a triumph of make-up, which, too, applies to her aged woman (1897) portrayal, confined to a wheel chair.

Third act rings some laughs when the Scotch gardener chats with her royal highness as though she was just an old friend. Scene then turns quietly dramatic when Disraeli, start of Beaconsfield, arrives at her bidding. His devotion to her is marked when he drinks her health and breaks the glass.

Miss Hayes has some sterling support and not the least is that of Georgs Zucco as Disraeli. It has no resemblance to George Arliss' impression of that statesman, but is effective.

Most interesting, however, is the appearance of Vincent Price, whose faithful adherance to a slight German dialect helps make his Albert a splendid characterization. Price is from London and is claimed that this is his first professional and American appearance. He played in amateur casts over there. James Woodburn's John Brown is an outstanding part.

There are not so many important feminine parts, but Cherry Hardy as the Duchess of Sutherland and Helen Trenholm as Lady Jane do very well.

Mountings aroused admiration, scenes mostly being in Windsor Castle, Kensington Palace and Buckingham Castle. Gilbert Miller, in presenting the play, announced the cost as exceeding that of most straight plays and that is obvious. Ibee.

TAPESTRY IN GRAY

Drama in three acts (37 scenes) by Martin Flavin; presented by B. F. Schuberg; features Elissa Landi, Melvyn Douglas; staged by Marion Gering; at Donald Gallagher; at Shubert, N. Y., Dec. 27, '35; $3.30 top.

Dr. Marius	Arnold Korff
Erik	elvyn Douglas
Iris	Elissa Landi
Stephen	Minor Watson
A Servant	Henry Vincent
Ballet Master	Anderson Lawlor
MacManus	Jack Lescoulie
A Medical Corps Major	Franklyn Fox
Stretcher Bearer	Edgar Murdock
Young Doctor	George Lamar
Old Doctor	John M. Kline
Waiter	Auguste Aramini
Editor	Frederick Forrester
Steward	Georgia Blondell
Maid	Audrey Barlow
Waiter	Joseph Olney
Newsboy	Billy Daniels
Street Walker	Miriam Battista
Hotel Porter	Alan Morrill
Patient	Paul Gallo
Nurse	Muriel Brassler
Child	Ichabod Paiten
Governess	Cornelia Bell
Policeman	Jack Harwood
Hospital Nurse	Anna Dorney
Surgical Nurse	Helene Bunn
Anaesthetist	Mudge Vincent
O'Neill	Starr West Jones
Patient	C. Russell Sage
Gunman	Jack Carey
Woman	June Leslie
Beggar	Samuel Roland
Man	Arling Alcine
Soldiers, Hospital Orderlies, Waiters, Stewards, Dancers, Nurses	Paul Howard Kent, Tippins Brown, Sylvia Altman, Victor Myers, Shirley Beckman, Hope Hall, Jullan Altman, Doris Bahr, Thelma Wunder, Alice Sherbon.

Lots of Hollywood talent involved in this production, which is obvious after a few scenes. It's not a Hollywood type story—anything but. It is told, however, in a sort of motion picture technique, with 37 scenes, a lot of flashbacks, some closeups and with no real warmth or heart. It is a sort of duplication of loads of ideas, tons of chatter, much emoting, but never anything more than puppets strutting the stage.

B. P. Schulberg, former production head of Paramount, presents this Martin Flavin opus, and has invested it with a splendid and costly production. Marion Gering, who is program credited as having conceived and staged the whole production, also probably rates a bow, although there is just a mite of hesitancy here. Probably the fault lies in the fact that he became so enamored of the whole thing as manager set and the lighting and decorative possibilities thereof that he forgot all about his actors. The set and staging badly overshadow the play.

Play is a very involved one, actually a tragedy, though it passes as a drama through the fact of the death being hidden for the most part and a sort of hopeful message tagged on for the final curtain.

Starts with a psychologist being called in by a famous surgeon's wife to treat her husband, who is suffering from aphasia. Patient doesn't want to see the prof, so the wife suggests that the wife and the friend of the family (male) tell him something about the past, history, etc. They do, the telling occupying a series of flashbacks, plus some switching to the central scene for thread pickup purposes. And the telling of the play is as involved.

Seems that Erik and Stephen were college students together, both studying to be doctors. Erik had a gift for surgery, Stephen for research. Comes the war, and Erik one night bumps into Stephen's body, wounded by shrapnel. Alone in the open field he operates on his friend, performing some miraculous plastic surgery. But it's against orders, and he's punished, losing sight of the future of his pal. In the hospital, Stephen is suffering.

Dr.	Edward Emerson
Waiter	Regis Joyce
Edward Sothern Paul	Edward Trevor

Zoe Akins' latest play, 'O Evening Star,' goes in for that ever-popular sports of baiting the cinema. At the same time it manages to include a goodly dose of this playwright's sentimentality and also her shrewd sense of theatrical values. Although by no means faultless, it looks to be for a moderate success, especially with the feminine clientele.

'O Evening Star' is quite obviously and without any question a story of Marie Dressler, although there are features in it that don't parallel in the late screen star's career but, instead, tally very closely with the character of a veteran stage star, still living.

Play opens with a prolog laid in Amy Bellaire's Riverside drive home in 1917. Hard times have struck this former toast of Broadway, and she has been forced to get rid of many of the best pieces of her belongings.

Scene jumps to Hollywood and time to 1931, with Agnes Jessey, a loyal friend of Amy's, entertaining the latter at an afternoon tea. Prominent directors, producers, etc., have been invited, idea being that some of them might be able to find a place for Amy in pix. Instead, they all high-hat the poor gal, none of them having ever heard of her stage work. She won't impose on Agnes Jessey any longer and leaves for destinations unknown.

Next scene shows Amy in a stuffy little Hollywood apartment five months later. She is eking out a precarious existence by teaching elocution to kids at 10 per hour at a dollar. To make matters worse a young doctor informs her she hasn't got many years to live.

Amy puts her pride in her pocket and goes around to some of the studios to get an extra's job, having heard that there has been a call for the pioneer women type. She is seen acting as an actress playing a bit collapses after rehearsing one scene 40 odd times, Amy gets her chance. Scene—a meller with Indians and such—was to have been played by Jessie Ralph but was ill and has the whole studio laughing. Director is inclined to get sore, but his boss, the producer, likes the laugh and hires her.

Next act, two and a half years later, shows Amy a very successful screen star, besieged with offers. Trouble is that she's worn out, but can't get time off for a vacation. Same doctor tells her that her end is near, but Amy is such a game trouper she passes up her vacation plans and is ready to work on any picture that comes along. Kids Akins goes typically sentimental at the end and reminds of her earlier 'Declassee' and 'The Varying Shore.' Amy's son by a man whom she had married and left before she got famous and with whom she had an affair, is the author of one of the star's most successful scripts. On the night of a big birthday party in her honor the lad flies in from New York, bringing with him a box of white violets to her from his father. Boy, of course, doesn't know the relationship, but Amy does. Alone in his departure and, at the end, is gazing soulfully at the flowers.

Jobyna Howland, who once scored a personal success in Miss Akins' 'Texas Nightingale,' does a grand job by Amy Bellaire and after a week or two she'll be doing even better. Part is one of the juiciest, with plenty of hoke comedy and lots of tearful sentiment. Actress is more or less new to Miss Howland. Frank Conroy as an eccentric and rude film director is capital and nice performances are contributed by Merle Maddern as the loyal friend, Vera Hurst as a film-mad scrub lady, and James Todd as the doctor.

Scenes are extraordinarily beautiful; also faithful to type. Leontine Sagan's staging could be improved in spots, especially in scenes where a number of extras are used, in which timing is sometimes faulty.

As in all Akins plays, dialog is sometimes given to floridness, but there's no denying she gets her characters across in great style. Waters.

I Want a Policeman

Philadelphia, Dec. 27.

A play by Sturus King and Milton Lazurus; produced by Francis Curtis and Richard Myers; staged by Anton Bundsmann; settings by Clinton Throckmorton. Presented at the Broad Street theatre, Dec. 26, '35.

Erlo Davidson	Norman Hammond
Karl	Con MacSunday
Fern Davidson	Judith Wood
Police Commissioner	Baldwin
	Clyde Franklin
Alfaro	Weldon Heyburn
John Davidson	Eric Wollencott
Jepson	Robert Barton
Dennis	Harold Moffet
Charles Talbot	Clinton Sundberg
Eleanore Breen	Wendy Atkin
Lady Breen	Estelle Winwood
Cotswold	Larry Bolton
Captain Lyons	Berry Sullivan
Arthur Semple	rederick Graham

Here's a mystery piece that deserves to get to first-base and ought to stretch as extra base or so. Play possesses intelligence and humor and, above all, the cast has been chosen with an amazing regard for type and personal aptitude.

On its opening here, 'I Want a Policeman' had one very big handicap to overcome but it was one that won't be difficult. Show is in two acts, with five scenes in the first and six in the second. A form of jack-knife stage is used and plenty of space is needed. According to the management the stage here isn't the required dimensions. Anyway the result is a series of waits between scenes out of all proportion to the length of the scenes themselves. Means an unnecessary choppy effect and also an impression of length that amounts sometimes almost to tedium.

'I Want a Policeman' is fortunate in that it possesses a bubbling, sometimes effectively 'nutty' sense of characterization and an easy and spontaneous ability to spurn the more annoying and most familiar aspects of the mystery drama. 'Policeman' hasn't got the most novel plot of its type that has been seen, but it does possess intelligence, a novel manner of working out old ideas and a very sensible sense of humor. Also it busts wide open a number of the usual so-called rules of its species.

Show opens with an effective scene (badly lighted here) showing a bedroom in the Long Island home of Eric Davidson, middle-aged married man with an obsession that his life is being threatened, presumably by his wife. Davidson has had a heart attack and the scene culminates with his verbal attack on his wife, declaring that he is sure she is going to murder him and adding that he has sent a document to his lawyer which, in case of his sudden demise, will definitely implicate her. There's a scuffle with a gun at the end of the scene, a light that goes out, a shot and that's that.

Second scene, two weeks later, is at Police Headquarters. What are apparently crank letters have been received declaring that Davidson's death was not by apoplexy as the doctor decreed. Commissioner of Police is a little suspicious of young Mrs. Davidson, a former chorus gal, despite the fact that crank letters have threatened her. Two dicks are detailed to guard her. In the meantime a stepson has been questioned, as well as a young friend of the family, both of whom are among the authors' crazier and more delightful characters.

From then on the two detectives, Alfaro and Dennis, play important roles in the authors' plot plunders. Watchfulness another murder is committed at the Davidson household just about the time it is discovered that Davidson himself was really murdered. Authors thereupon openly disclose to the audience the guilty party, but instead of being harmful their plan is most effective. Audience knows who the killer is and is in quivvy every time the villain gets a chance to commit his next crime. Authors also do not worry about secret passage ways and sliding panels; they kid them but use them very effectively just the same.

In the last act, recourse is made to plenty of hoke meller but it is still interpersed with a relieving sense of comedy, evil dialogue and corking characterizations.

Play's biggest asset, however, seems to be ideal casting. Some of the parts may have nothing much to do with the main action but all the characters are unusually interesting. For example there's a high-toned English dame with bibulous proclivities, played up to the hilt by Estelle Winwood. Part's a wow, although not even dimly connected to the story. Among other characters whose roles have the delightfully insane undertones are those played by Eric Wollencott and Clinton Sundberg.

An outstander from the comedy angle is Harold Moffet as the dumb flat-foot, Dennis. Judith Wood is a properly seductive and glamorous Mrs. Davidson. Weldon Heyburn is nicely typed as the younger and more polished dick and Norman Hammon, Con MacSunday, Clyde Franklin and Frederick Graham are most effective. Waters.

THE ROAD

By JACK PULASKI

First half of the calendar year witnessed the recording of new high grosses by touring attractions. Stars heading two dramas turned the trick. George M. Cohan with 'Ah, Wilderness' completed a six months' tour which grossed $400,000. Helen Hayes with 'Mary of Scotland' drew $34,000 in one week playing Ohio stands and scored a $38,000 gross within the same period on mid-western one-niters.

So far this season there are more attractions on tour than last season, but the expectation of materially increasing the number of road shows was given fresh impetus late this fall when the Interstate Commerce Commission ordered the eastern trunk lines to reduce fares to 2c. ile. Transportation costs has been but one of the handicaps, however, what with other diversions affecting legit attendance more out of town than on Broadway.

The decline of the road is dated from the rise of motion pictures, but it also started slipping when the railways boosted passenger rates and abolished the party rate. Some lines again offer party tickets as one way to compete with busses which have invaded the field of transportation offering travel at half the cost of the railways in many instances. It has, too, forced some rail lines to add busses to their systems.

Until the I.C.C. took action the rate of 3½c. per mile continued in effect on roads which tap the populous eastern stands. The midwest dropped to 2c. on special trips more than a year ago and that partly explains the frequency of road show bookings within the Mississippi valley. That the citizenry want to see shows is proven by the excellent money drawn to the box offices in that territory, same going for the middle south and Texas.

New Schedule

Under the reduced fares schedule ordered in by the government control body, the present rate will be kept for Pullman travel and extra fare train rates will not be disturbed, but the surcharges will be dropped. Latter levy is one of the cost increases which came in during the war. The importance of fare reductions and the reintroduction of party rates gave impetus to the touring of two major musical shows to the Coast last winter, for the first time in years.

There is little indication that the road will ever reach the proportions that it was before pictures, radio and motor car usage developed to the present state. At one time there were 1,200 one-nighters alone which were frequently supplied with traveling attractions. But the remnants of those small stands are filling the till now every time a Broadway favorite comes to town, and that indicates that there is still gold in those hills for at least a fair number of attractions.

Several seasons ago supposedly astute managers declared the road all washed up and said they would produce only for Broadway and possibly Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago with the other one-week stands thrown in. But the situation is far different at present for producers realize that the sticks are show hungry and Broadway's current hits are being fabricated. That is comparatively easy because most of the original dramatic and comedy standouts' casts have no stars.

Road Co.'

There will be No. 2 companies of 'Dead End,' 'Boy Meets Girl' and 'Night of January 16,' while several moderate gross shows are also to be duplicated for the road. During the fall there were three companies of 'Three Men On a Horse' on tour in addition to the original show which is nearing the year mark on Broadway. Two companies of 'Tobacco Road' are in the hinterland cleaning up, grosses being far higher than the original show ever got—it is in its third year in New York.

While it is true that road profits are there to be gotten by the good things, there is another angle in the roadshowing of 'End' and 'Boy.' That has to do with picture rights. Hollywood will make both plays into films and managers do not propose to take chances with having the picturizations crimp the tours of the hits.

Fact that picture money is backing a number of Broadway productions brings in another road angle. Producers have complained for years that it is difficult to get bookings because the legit theatres are tied up by picture people. It is logical for the situation to ease since pressure by Hollywood can open up the stands that have been tied up.

Films and Stock

Picture people are blamed for the decline in stock performances and it has been pointed out to them that such stage activities should be supported if Hollywood is to obtain the new talent that it needs. There are few stocks and while their absence makes it all the better for road shows, the latter are prospering in stands which never supported stocks.

So far this season the most consistent big road grosser has been 'The Great Waltz' with weekly takings frequently going to $30,000 and more. But Katharine Cornell played to amazing attendance in the midwest, getting more than $33,000 in seven performances of 'Juliet,' while Helen Hayes, trying out 'Regina Victoria' in Washington, broke the house record with a gross of $27,000 the week before Christmas.

4 SHOWS IN PHILLY; 'EVENING STAR' $7,000

Philadelphia, Dec. 29.

For the traditionally productive period between Christmas and New Year's Philly finds itself with four shows. Two of them opened Christmas night, one the night after and the fourth 'Personal Appearance' rode right through and starts its sixth week Dec. 30.

Business on the whole is fairly good, but not up to the standard of some of the earlier fall trade. 'Evening Star,' which bowed in at the Chestnut Dec. 25, got good notices on the whole. Figured for strong femme trade, but Thursday matinee was not big. In first four days (six performances) Harry Moses' productions figured around $8,000.

'I Want a Policeman' had a fine money house at its Thursday opening (incidentally the classiest first night audience Philly has seen in years) and also was well treated by the critics with one exception. In four performances intake hit $5,000. 'My Maryland,' opening at the Forrest Christmas night, gave three matinees and repeated $10,000 in seven performances at $1.50 top.

'Personal Appearance' cut out its Christmas Eve show and also gave an extra matinee (Friday) with $8,500 reported for its week at the Garrick.

Only newcomer for New Year's week is 'Black Pit,' presented by a local group at the Erlanger. Outfit is playing that Theatre.

Sometime during the week of Jan. 6, 'Ethan Frome' a Max Gordon tryout, arrives at the Garrick; only other booking is Williams (Gilette's) revival of 'Three Wise Fools' at the Chestnut on the 20th. Other shows are expected at all houses except the Erlanger, which will probably get films.

'Winterset,' 'Blind Alley,' 'Constant Wife' and several others have been mentioned.

Estimates for Last Week

'O Evening Star' (Chestnut, 1st week). In six performances (opened Christmas night) this tryout reported $7,000. Another week for it.

'I Want a Policeman' (Broad, 1st week). In four performances (opened Thursday night). This tryout hit $5,000, largely due to big first night house. Another week.

'My Maryland' (Forrest, 1st week). Arrival opened Christmas night; $10,000 in seven performances due to extra matinee.

'Personal Appearance' (Garrick, 5th week). On Christmas Eve show, but extra matinee; $8,500. Another week, then 'Ethan Frome.'

'Road' $10,000, Mpls.

Minneapolis, Dec. 29.

'Tobacco Road' pulled approximately $10,000 at the Metropolitan last week, very good considering below zero weather and the pre-Christmas handicap. Show holds over for a second week, taking the time originally spotted for St. Paul, where authorities have prohibited its appearance.

Attraction received splendid publicity here and the big-league exploitation undoubtedly stimulated trade.

'Road' for Youngstown

Youngstown, Dec. 29.

Second legit attraction of the current season is booked for the Park theatre, Jan. 8, when 'Tobacco Road,' starring Henry Hull, will be presented at matinee and night performances.

'The Old Maid' played the same house several weeks ago.

'Maid' $13,000, 'Goes' $22,000; 6 Plays in Chi

Chicago, Dec. 29.

All six Chicago legit houses are lighted and going. It's history in the making; something this town hasn't seen in many a year. Five standard legit attractions and Ruth Draper in her protean cycle, and all of them proving the old loop show biz axiom that the more shows there are in town the better it is for everybody.

All six are doing well this week, and only with the reaction after the holiday spree will the weaklegs begin to show their flabbiness and start to fall off.

Auditorium, under Fred Crowe, is back as a legit house for the Max Gordon 'Great Waltz' and, with its 3,700 seats, is giving the town an experience. Scaled at $2.75, the house can gross around $50,000 for the week, and early indications from its Thursday (26) opening make it certain that the first week will hit close to that.

'Anything Goes' is the other musical in town, and will do a snappy opening session, despite three days of pre-Xmas going. With its subscription backing, 'Old Maid' is a cinch for three good weeks. Going it alone are 'Personal Appearance,' which fought the toboggan of pre-Xmas also, and 'Squaring the Circle' at the Blackstone. Ruth Draner opened last night at the Selwyn for her first appearance in Chicago since 1929.

Estimates for Last Week

'Anything Goes,' Grand (1,200; $3.30) (2d week). Opened Dec. 22 and managed a bang-up $22,000 on its initial session, in spite of the pre-holiday hindrances. Cinch to hike to capacity now for the next few weeks.

'Great Waltz,' Auditorium (3,700; $2.75) (1st week). Opened Thursday (26). House can do about $5,500 on nights at capacity and around $5,000 for its matinees at scalc. Just slightly under capacity since opening, and will hit around $43,000 on first full week.

'Personal Appearance,' Harris (1,000; $2.75) (2d week). Opened Dec. 20 in the face of the pre-Christmas slump, but mirmed over $10,000 on the first week. Another cinch to build.

'Squaring the Circle,' lackstone (1,000; $2.20) (1st week). Started on Xmas night (25) at the smallest top in the loop, due to one-setter, smaller cast and generally easier overhead. Figured to get its share of the general legit take. Around $9,000 indicated for first session, after taking $5,000 on first five performances.

'The Old Maid,' Erlanger (1,200; $2.75) (2d week). Subscription show on the American Theatre Society list, took $13,000 on its first week following opening on Monday (23). Will make it three weeks.

Ruth Draper, Selwyn (1,000; $2.75) (1st week). Opens tonight (31) and looks an easy winner on past performances and reputation.

Kate Keith Field, New York soprano, was guest artist on concert series at Davidson college, North Carolina.

B'way Off on Holiday Biz, but 'Lady,' 'Jumbo' Hit New Highs, $21,000, $78,000

After unprecedented legit theatre attendance the two days before Christmas there was a sharp decline which had Broadway looking for alibis. However, with the holiday falling on Wednesday and the period up to New Year's being bisected, it was natural that business would drop until the populace got over good-timing.

Indications are that this week will be much better, what with ringing in of the New Year. Christmas matinees were off without exception and that night the standouts didn't go clean, either. It was somewhat better Thursday, while Friday saw business back to big figures again.

Despite the mid-week dip the leaders went to new high gross marks, with extra matinees counting on Thursday or Friday. 'The First Lady' around $21,000; 'Boy Meets Girl,' $19,000; 'Dead End' $18,000; 'Pride and Prejudice' over $18,500 (as much as it had grossed previously), and 'Taming of the Shrew' $17,000, virtual capacity.

'Jumbo' also went to its best mark yet, more than $78,000. It sagged on the holiday night also.

'Jubilee,' with one added performance, topped $36,000. 'Porgy and Bess' improved somewhat at an indicated $23,000.

Newest musical, 'Scandals,' was a mid-week premiere, getting a mixed press and there was some ticket confusion, indication of its chances not being clear. 'Victoria Regina' came in Thursday (26) and won a strong press, with indications it will stand. 'Tapestry in Gray' opened Friday night and 'Hell Freezes Over,' Saturday.

'The Season Changes' started the week, but drew thumbs down and closed Saturday (28). Katharine Cornell withdraws 'Juliet' this Saturday as scheduled (two weeks). 'Continental Varieties' stops Wednesday (1), being booked in for only one week.

Due next week: 'O Evening Star,' Empire ('Ghosts' probably moving); 'I Want a Policeman,' Lyceum ('Winterset' may move) and 'Truly Valiant,' 49th Street.

Estimates for Last Week

'At Home Abroad,' Winter Garden (16th week) (R-1,493-$4.40). Early arrival was front-runner for several months but slipped; last week came back somewhat; round $33,000 in nine times.

'Blind Alley,' Morosco (15th week) (CD-914-$2.75). Not certain after this week; rated fairly for bit more, but profitable; 'Ghosts' moves in from Empire next Monday.

'Boy Meets Girl,' Cort (6th week) (C-1,059-$3.30). Went to new high, with takings topping $19,000 in nine times; would have gotten more but for theatre party Monday, arranged before comedy smash opened.

'Children's Hour,' Belasco (59th week) (D-923-$3.30). Dropped Monday night show last week and gave three matinees for takings of around $8,000; holdover sock.

'Dead End,' Belasco (10th week) (D-1,000-$3.30). Capacity draw; dramatic leader also to new high last week in nine times, grossing $18,000 or more.

'First Lady,' Music Box (8th week) (C-1,000-$3.30). Some reaction on Christmas night and Thursday, but around $21,000 in nine times for another new high.

'Hell Freezes Over,' Ritz (1st week) (D-918-$3.30). Bowed in Saturday night.

'Jubilee,' Imperial (12th week) (M-1,468-$4.40). In the big money, with capacity most performances last week; in nine times over $35,000.

'Jumbo,' Hippodrome (7th week) (M-4,327-$4.40). Several performances weak, which was the rule along Broadway last week; quoted new high gross marked last week at more than $78,000.

'Libel,' Henry Miller (3rd week) (D-891-$3.30). Early reaction indicates show slated for class patronage; English melier around $9,000 and may do better.

'May Wine,' St. James (5th week) (M-1,520-$3.85). Operetta highly regarded by audiences and has shown improvement; last week estimated well over $15,000.

'Moon Over Mulberry Street,' 44th St. (18th week) (C-1,328-$3.30). Has been going along at quoted average of $4,000 weekly; claimed better takings last week.

'Mulatto,' Vanderbilt (11th week) (D-894-$3.30). Around $5,000 for mixed cast drama; will close or move after another week; house gets 'Granite' Jan. 13.

'Night of Jan. 16,' Ambassador (16th week) (D-1,156-$2.75). Held to eight performances last week; business improved, with estl ated takings over $11,000.

'One Good Year,' Fulton (6th week) (C-913-$3.30). Moved here from the Lyceum; show paced around $1,000 which betters even break.

'Parnell,' Barrymore (8th week) (D-1,096-$3.30). Dipped unexpectedly, but did well enough at weekend; estimated around $6,500.

'Paradise Lost,' Longacre (4th week) (D-1,019-$3.30). Not getting much outside of theatre parties up to now; held to eight performances last week with gross around $7,500.

'Porgy and Bess,' Alvin (13th week) (M-1,355-$3.30). No extra matinee here, either, but holiday sent takings upward, ith gross approximating $23,000.

'Pride and Prejudice,' Plymouth (9th week) (D-1,036-$3.30). Matinees especially strong, topping some of the other leaders; nine times last week with better than $18,500 indicated.

'Remember the Day,' National (15th week) (CD-1,164-$3.30). Dropped Monday night and played three matinees; takings around $8,000 should be topped this week.

'Scandals,' New Amsterdam (2nd week) (R-1,717-$4.40). Opened middle of last week, drawing mixed notices; not hot in agencies; better line this week.

'Squaring the Circle,' 48th St. (13th week) (D-969-$2.75). Another two weeks here according to bookings, which spots the Illustrators Show in; around $6,000 and may move again.

'Taming of the Shrew,' Guild (14th week) (CD-941-$3.30). Came back to virtual capacity last week, with takings around $17,000; no extra performance.

'Tapestry in Gray,' (1st week) (C-1,325-$3.30). last week (Friday, 27); notices.

'Tomorrow's a Holiday,' Golden (1st week) (C-1,156-$3.30). Presented by John Golden in association with Joseph Schildkraut; slated to open Monday (30).

'The Season Changes,' Booth. Yanked Saturday; panned; one week.

'Three Men on a Horse,' Playhouse (49th week) (C-869-$3.30). Long run laugh show played four matinees last week and in 10 performances got $13,500; under expectations.

'Tobacco Road,' Forrest (109th week) (C-1,017-$4.65). Still in the money; nine performances last week, with estimated takings over $11,000.

'Victoria Regina,' Broadhurst (2nd week) (D-1,154-$3.30). Opened late last week; drew favorable notices and should click.

'Winterset,' Lyceum (15th week) (D-957-$3.30). Moved here last week but regarded the first two night performances; good attendance on resumption.

Other Attractions

Katharine Cornell, Martin Beck; two week repeat of 'Juliet' concludes Saturday; 'Winterset' moves back Jan. 6.

'Ghosts,' Empire; revival got $6,500, with matinees better than nights; moves to Morosco Monday (6).

'Let Freedom Ring,' Civic Rep Theatre; propaganda play at one dollar top on 14th street.

Charlotte Greenwood Good for $8,000 in L. A.

Hollywood, Dec. 29.

Christmas business at the two local legits was on and off. Charlotte Greenwood in 'Leaning on Letty,' Hollywood version of 'Post Road,' got estimated $8,000 last week with an added Xmas matinee. Actress, strongest attraction Henry Duffy ever played at the El Capitan with the exception of Will Rogers, returned after a two years' absence. Her personal following is figured strong enough to keep the show running several weeks.

Barney Gerard's 'Follies of the Day' was away to a bad start Xmas night, but held its own for the first four days, getting around $2,800. Indicates it will build with new acts and sketches pepping it up.

'HORSE' $11,000, BOSTON

Comedy's Eighth Week Strong and Play Hangs On

Boston, Dec. 29.

'Three Men on a Horse,' at the Plymouth, ran through its eighth week on a fast track to a nice finish and is now into a ninth frame. Three matinees last week and this.

'Ceiling Zero' is now playing at the Copley for two weeks or better.

'Ziegfeld Follies' opens tonight (30) at the Opera House for at least two weeks. 'Mid-West,' another new one, by James Hagan, author of 'One Sunday Afternoon,' opens at the Shubert New Year's Eve.

Cornelia Otis Skinner is slated for repertoire one week at the Shubert, starting Jan. 20.

Estimate Last Week

'Three Men on a Horse' (Plymouth; $2.75) (eighth week). Perked up last week, with help of holiday, to $11,000, okc. Enthusiastic forecasting see it here until March.

PARIS AND LONDON LEGIT

Paris, Dec. 22.

Pretty tough to contend that 1935 has been a satisfactory year for the French stage. There have been a few bright spots on a grey background, but for the most part the picture is that of a decline.

Lots of discussion has kept tongues wagging and ink flowing as to why the current theatre is so weak. Authors say it's because managers won't take chances and produce plays by new blood, and managers retort that the authors aren't writing anything worth producing.

It's almost reached the point where one can say that there are only two authors in France on whom you can count definitely for money plays: Henry Bernstein and Sacha Guitry. And Guitry, at that had a terrible flop in the first piece he put out this season. He redeemed himself shortly after by opening with one of the rare successes of the current semester: 'The End of the World.'

Bernstein's 1934 success, 'Hope,' ran right to the end of the year, and at the present writing his new attempt hasn't been tried out yet.

Most successes are purely sporadic, and without significance as to trend. Anybody asked to define a trench for the French theatre today is up against it. The old is weakening and nothing very big has appeared which is new.

Drama and comedy being in this condition, there have been attempts during the past year to get out of the rut via musicals. Here again nothing much seems to have happened. At times half a dozen musical shows would be running in Paris at the same moment, and everybody would start talking about an operetta revival, and then one by one they'd fall off and it would appear that the public wasn't much interested in them, either.

Revivals seem to be about the best bet. The Isola Brothers manage to keep the Mcgador going with 'White Horse Inn,' varied occasionally by resuscitations of 'Rose Marie' and 'No, No, Nanette.' Business also goes to the Chatelet, still for productions of the old New York Hippodrome variety.

Of really new musickers, just one was an outstanding success during the year: 'You're Me,' at the Bouffes Parisiens, which started in 1934 and ran on and on. This must be considered really just a fluke, and due largely to casting. The Bouffes tried to repeat in the fall with another operetta that was hailed as a new success, only to be pulled after a bit over a month.

Adaptations from the English did pretty well during the year, on the whole. Louis Jouvet was able to keep going a whole season with 'The Constant Nymph,' and two Noel Coward plays had long runs, 'Private Lives,' after keeping the Michel going in the spring, was dragged out of limbo in the fall to fill the hole left by the Guitry flop at the Theatre de Paris. And 'Barretts,' after a 1934 success under Marie Bell's tutelage at the Ambassadeurs, was revived in the fall by Cora Laparcerie to occupy the Renaissance after an ill-fated Maeterlinck 'comeback.'

One type of Paris legit show that, in its old form, seems definitely under a cloud, but which may redeem itself by finding a new way, is revue. In the old days, when foreigners were rife, there were at least four leading revue houses doing good business: Folies Bergere, Casino de Paris, Moulin Rouge and Palace. Of these, only two are at the stand in 1935—Folies and Casino—and what a difference!

Both dragged through last spring, no one could see just how, and both reopened in the fall with new shows. The Casino has a big hit, but not so much because of the success of Maurice Chevalier, who does nearly an hour's vaudeville turn in the midst of the show and without relation to it. The Folies new show is very weak. And what is going to happen to the Casino when Chevalier leaves—his engagement is strictly limited to three months—is not yet clear.

New trend has been found by Henri Varna, of the Casino, in the show he has put at the Alcazar, formerly the Palace. This is supposed to be based on American burlesque, but it's lots more daring than that. Of course, this isn't new for Paris—the old Casino and Folies shows used nudes—but the emphasis is different, and that may save the pieces.

Concert Mayol, one of the old revue houses, but inor, has tried a comeback along the same lines, nd seems to be getting by.

From time to time during the year there has been talk, quickly suppressed, of the Opera and Opera Comique merging, to leave Paris with just one opera house. Since the two houses can't both get along, that would seem a logical move, but it would take years of discussion and miles of red tape to acomplish it, so there is really little use thinking about it.

The Comique is getting by better than the big house, having a more popular repertory. The Opera, on the other hand, is very-low, giving only three performances a week for a good part of the year, and attracting attention only to its dance programs, where Serge Lifar produces enough eccentricities to arouse publicity. Here, as in the case of the Folies Bergere, the foreign tourists used to be the big customers, and they aren't coming any more.

The big fuss-maker of the state theatres is the Comedie Francaise, and that has been in a state of ructions all year long. First there was talk of a strike because of some appointments made to the governing committee, and then actors began to resign in protest against this, that, or the other thing. Then one of the 'comedians' made a speech at a meeting pointing out how precarious was the situation of the House of Moliere. Upshot was that the Minister of National Education, who has the last say about state theatres, promised to appoint a committee to study a complete plan for reform of the Comedie.

Tax reduction, such as it is, has been acquired, but it hasn't done the theatres much good. There is a general feeling of unrest in France that is not consistent with a flourishing stage. The threat of a general European war is continually hanging over everybody's head. Internally, the nation feels that it is always on the very edge of a revolution, although it never seems to break.

Business in general is bad, and seems continually to be getting worse. Everybody feels that something is going to happen, but nobody knows just what.

London, 22.

Jubilee year will go down in theatrical history as a mass of contradictions.

During the early part of 1935 business was about normal, but all the anticipated clean-up in the early summer season fizzled out pathetically. Despite thousands of overseas and provicinal visitors at the capital for the royal celebrations managers reported woefully that their hopes were blasted.

London was well supplied with open stage doors throughout the prolonged fine summer, comparing more favorably with Paris and New York, but the hoped-for boom was absent.

Fall and early winter has more than made up for the earlier delinquencies, and big box office smiles are visible on all the managerial faces now.

Although there were not many outstanding sensations in the way of legit productions, the past year has, in many respects, been a most satisfactory one. An atmosphere of stability prevails that has contributed in no small manner to the loosening of purse strings of the amusement-seeking public. even the pre-election bogey, so dreaded by theatre magnates, failed for about the first time in memory to cast a gloom over stage productions and to lower the takings.

Of the musical shows, 'Glamorous Night' heads the list at Drury Lane with seven months' run, with the business so prosperous at the end that only a previously contracted pantomime season precluded it from running well into the new year.

Next in order 'Gay Deceivers,' which had four months at the Gaiety and Collseum. Another flourishing career foreshortened through the departure of two of the stars for America.

Charles Cochran's 'Anything Goes' is set for a healthy run at the Palace, having played six months so far. The new Hippodrome show, 'Please Teacher,' starring Bobby Howes, seems another that will settle down comfortably for a long span.

Musical flops, 'Dancing City' at the Coliseum, and 'My Kingdom for a Cow' at the Savoy, both continental and on the heavy side, lasted seven and two weeks, respectively. 'The Flying Trapeze' at the Alhambra ran two months and was a disappointment to Jack Buchanan fans. He knew himself to be miscast. 'Love Laughs' at the Hippdrome was not much of a show, but served to tilt Renee Houston and the vaude Houston Sisters) to stellar musical comedy heights. It ran 10 weeks.

Andre Charlot was responsible for three revues. 'Shall We Reverse' at the Comedy, 'Charabang' and 'Stop—Go' at the Vaudeville. First ran five weeks; second 13 weeks, and the last will have stayed two months when it makes way for this manager's 'Sleeping Beauty' Christmas panto.

Other revues were 'Stop Press,' Clifford Whitley's artistic and witty production, which ran five months at the Adelphi; and 'Let's Go' Gay,' moved down from the Embassy to the Shaftesbury, but which despite favorable notices, ran only five weeks. 'Don't Spare the Horsss,' a revue starring an Australlan comedian, died after four days at the Garrick.

Two twice-nightly musicals have started off well, and look like playing profitably over the holidays: 'Tulip Time' at the Alhambra, and 'Twenty to One' at the Colesium.

First legit production of the year was 'The Dominant Sex,' which, after starting at the Embassy, has changed theatres twice and will run over into 1936 at two-for-one prices at the Aldwych. 'Love on the Dole,' produced at the end of January, has also moved to another theatre, and looks like staying on over Christmas, after 10 months to date.

'Tovarich' and '1066 and All That' are still doing splendidly after seven months each. 'Night Must Fall,' an emphatic success starring author, Emlyn Williams, has been on for six months, and shows no signs of waning. It will continue till the show goes to New York.

Of the more recent productions, 'Two Mrs. Carrolls,' 'Nina,' 'The Unguarded Hour,' St. John Ervine's 'Anthony and Anna,' Walter Hackett's 'Espionage,' 'Tread Softly,' James Bridie's 'The Black Eye,' 'Someone at the Door' and Dodie Smith's 'Call It a Day' look set for good innings, as does 'Distinguished Gathering,' just staged at the St. Martin's after try-out at the Embassy. Another recruit from the Embassy, a two-character drama, 'Close Quarters,' with Flora Robson and Oscar Homolka, sustained interest for nine weeks at the Haymarket and Savoy.

Although only having two productions current in the West End at this writing, Cochran remains the chief stage producer of this country. His immediate plans are 'Follow the Sun,' revue; Elisabeth Bergner in a new J. M. Barrie play; Renee Houston and two other stars in a musical play by James Bridie, set to open in Manchester at Easter, and 'Dalliance,' a musical version of 'Liebelei' by Edward Knoblock and John Hastings Turner with music by Oscar Straus.

With the exception of Seymour Hicks, who has scored with his revival of 'Vintage Wine,' John Gielgud is the only actor-manager who has clicked this season. His stagings of 'Noah,' 'Hamlet' and 'Romeo and Juliet' have proved him a big personal magnet. 'Noah,' a weird adaptation from the French, ran three months, with the youthful star disguised behind biblical whiskers, and he and Laurence Olivier are alternating the role of Romeo and Mercutio in the current production, with conspicuous box office success.

Of the holdovers from last year, the most remarkable is the unpretentious comedy, 'The Wind and the Rain,' which is in its third year. Diana Wynyard's personal success has carried 'Sweet Aloes' over past its first anniversary, while 'Lady Precious Stream,' ancient Chinese play, is also in its second year.

About the usual number of revivals came and went, also ballet seasons, Shakespearean productions, etc. Of the latter, the most interesting experiment was that of George Robey, low vaude comedian, as Falstaff in 'Henry IV.'

Most notable point about the successes of 1935 is the fact that they were mostly native. Of the three American ones, 'Hervey House' (by Jane Cowl) and 'Accent on Youth' were both flops, lasting five and four weeks, respectively, the saving grace being 'Anything Gbes.' Not for a decade has there been such a paucity of contrib-tions from the U. S.

TAPESTRY IN GRAY

although the operation has been successful; it's a matter of time. A kind-hearted nurse, hearing his moaning, thinks to help some by easing some of the bandages. That scars his face for life, and the girl is discharged.

Later the girl accidentally (one of too many coincidents in the play) meets Erik, and they fall in love, spending a week together in a Paris hotel, and later getting married. Years later Iris and Erik go for a vacation trip to Europe, and on the boat (another coincidence) they meet Stephen, returning from highly successful S. A. adventures.

Iris now realizes that she has scarred her husband's best friend (it seems that the famous scientist, researcher, doctor, is nevertheless very self-conscious about that scar), and, feeling afraid that the knowledge of the truth might alienate her husband, she separates the two friends, forbidding Erik from seeing Stephen. And she gets away with it. But now he begins to fail to the point where he's about to collapse. Their son is hurt in an automobile accident, and Iris insists on Erik performing the operation. He doesn't want to do it at first, but is won over. Operation flops and the child dies.

That's a sort of final blast, things go to pot completely, he makes several false moves and kills his patients, finally he is stricken with aphasia (inability to speak through a stroke to his brain) and locks himself in a room.

When the story is unwound this far, a detective enters and wants information about a man who has jumped out of the window. Iris confesses, she has ruined everything because she was such a failure herself she wanted to possess her husband, body and soul, thus ruining his complete mental equilibrium.

But that isn't the end of the play. Now she also realizes that she loves Stephen, too, and that he loves her. But she renounces him and sends him off to China to chase more microbes—her first unselfish gesture, she calls it. Her last speech is to the dead Erik, 'I hope you can forgive me now.' Maybe he can, but the audience isn't like that.

There's a big cast in the piece, but actually only three main performances. Melvyn Douglas as Erik is splendid, likeable and believable. Acting of Miss Landi as Iris, Minor Watson as Stephen and Arnold Korff as the prof do not ring true. They seem to be puppets—hollow, not believing the lines they are speaking nor, even, understanding them. Kauf.

VARIETIES OF 1936

Variety show starring Lucienne Boyer, featuring Pils and Tabet. Presented by Henry Carson at Masque, N. Y., Dec. 26, '35; $2.75 top.

A year ago Lucienne Boyer made a triumphant entry into America in a Continental 'Varieties' at the Little theatre, at $5.50 top. She worked of five vaude acts with Nikita Baliceff as m. c. and attracted the smart mob for a while, though not a click. Now Mlle. Boyer is back in a '36 version of the show, with all new acts (although still only five acts) and at a mere $2.75 top. It's still not likely to throw New York for a loss, although it may do a bit of business, if smartly sold, on a one-night tour. In its brief road career, prior to Broadway, this new edition did fairly well.

Lucienne Boyer is by now pretty well established on this side as a chanteuse. Her throaty voice and sobby delivery are not unknown via the disks and class niteries, and a few of her songs have clicked generally. She is a good entertainer and, if only she can be kept from singing too many songs, will please most any customer.

The rest of the show is (individually) pretty good but not more than that. Almost all of the turns impress as possibilities on their own, or in a different setting, despite the fact that the combination actually doesn't jell.

Pils and Tabet, for instance, are featured. They're two personable young men who ought to be very good in a night club. They're a sort of Ross and Seagert in French versions. One is at a piano, the other sings. Their songs are fast and somewhat racy. They seem to have a better sense of rhythm than the average European and can actually swing in pleasant rhythm. They both speak pretty fair English, with just enough of a French accent to pique. All the time they're on, in this show, they give the feeling that they probably would sound much better in a night club. (They're slated for the Club Versailles, N. Y., where Mlle. Boyer has already appeared and clicked.)

George-Andre Martin is another clever gent. He has a unique finger-dancing act which is actually the applause hit of the show. Also he acts as m. c. throughout the show but that is something that could very nicely be dispensed with. His finger dancing is good and, with more appropriate surroundings, could go anywhere. He, too, is a Versailles nitery alumnus.

Helen Gray and the Rocky Twins is really an American act, although the Rockys played in Paris a long time. They're nice dancers but fail to impress here. In a regular vaude theatre, with scenery and an orchestra, they're oke. They've done so. But here—well, it's just flat. Also okay for cafes. King Lan Chew is a Chinese danseuse who doesn't fit at all. Maybe on the concert stage, she'd mean something.

Iza Volpin's Continental Ensemble is a string quartet which accompanies Miss Boyer (also records discs with her) and plays the overtures for the first and second halves of the show. An okay string quartet.

Why the show is called 'Continental Varieties' is still a secret except that the acts are mostly from abroad. On the continent, of course, there are no such shows to be seen. On the Continent a variety show calls for eight or nine turns and a fast American act or two. And how they would help the current show!

Sudden Heart Attack Fatal to Leo Newman

Sudden death of Leo Newman, veteran Broadway ticket broker, last week, followed a heart attack in his agency.

On the day of his passing he was highly excited when failing to secure an allotment of tickets for 'Scandals,' having refused to make a buy along lines demanded by the management. When talking it over with other ticket men he complained of a pain in his chest.

Phil Gurlan, who has virtually conducted the business for the past several years, will continue the agency.

Equity's 'Discussion'

First of Equity's monthly discussion' meetings will take place at the Astor hotel, New York, Friday (3). Session is to be informal and no topic not submitted to council beforehand is slated to be considered.

Eva Le Gallienne has been invited to address the meeting.

'Ghost' Walking

'Ghosts,' currently at the Empire, N. Y., on a three weeks' booking will move to the Morosco, Jan. 6. Ibsen drama has been doing fairly good business, with matinees especially strong because of the Nazimova draw. 'Blind Alley,' now at the Morosco, will probably close.

It was intended to move 'Alley,' but Roy Hargrave will withdraw from the cast and no successor has been selected. Hargrave is staging his 'A Room in Red and White' now in rehearsal. He also has commitments to direct in Hollywood and to stage 'Alley' in London.

Vanities in Detroit

Detroit, Dec. 29.

Earl Carroll's Vanities opens tonight (29) for a week's run at the Cass, at top price of $2.75. Advance ticket sales are heavy for regular performances as well as the special New Year's Eve show, when top will be $3.85. Only one matinee, instead of the usual two, is slated and that for Saturday (4).

ONE OUT

One show on the Christmas premiere card was a quick fold, 'The Season Changes' being taken off at the Booth after one week. Severely panned.

'THE SEASON CHANGES'

Opened Dec. 23. Gabri (American) called it 'A pretty unexciting exerfiscide in family chit chat,' and all of the other first-stringers were of the same opi . Brown (Post) said, 'During the third act the cast was laboring frantically over a corpse, but it was no use.' VARIETY (Ibee) said: 'Shouldn't take long for this one to run its course.'

Broadway will probably lose several shows this week in addition to the carded closings, such as 'Juliet,' Beck,' and 'Continental Varieties,' Masque. Latter was booked for one week only.

ald, and Frank T. Pope of the Commercial.

The United Booking Office, and most of the vaudeville agents, are situated in the Putnam building. Mike Shea drops in from Buffalo. Pat Casey, Max Hart, Martinelli and Eddie Darling are important vaudeville figures.

Charles B. Dillingham operates the Globe, first of the air-cooled theatres. The roof opens to the sky on summer evening. Elsie Janis is at the Globe and all the Montgomery & Stone musicals play the house following 'The Red Mill.' Bruce Edwards is the Dillingham general manager, and there is no better liked man on Broadway.

The Shuberts have converted the old sales stable at 50th street into a musichall and have named it the Winter Garden. Melville Ellis is preparing the costumes and sets for 'The Passing Show of 1912,' and a new blackface comedian, named Al Jolson, and a very beautiful girl, named Shirley Kellogg, have the leads. In the spring Morris Gest makes his first pretentious venture as a producer at the Winter Garden by offering the Ballet Russe, an Americanized version of the then spectacular Diagheief presentation which has started to sweep Europe. Gertrude Hoffman is the ballerina. A hot summer and the engagement is disappointing.

All that remains of the ill-fated New Theatre movement is the great building at 63rd and Central Park South, recently re-named the Century and taken over for operation by George C. Tyler, of Liebler & Co. A power in the theatre of his time, Mr. Tyler directs the management of many well-known stars, among them Eleanor Robeson, Margaret Anglin and Viola Allen. The opening production at the Century is 'The Garden of Allah,' starring Mary Mannering and Lewis Waller, noted English romantic player.

They are tearing down the Brewster block at 47th street, and Mitchell Mark is building a big picture house to be called the Strand. Where is he going to get pictures to fill an auditorium so big? Not even the Metropolitan Opera House is as large. A young chap named Sam Rothapfel, or something like that, is coming down from the Regent at 116th street to run the place. It is reported that Roxy, as some call him, contemplates putting in a symphony orchestra of 35 and a chorus of mixed voices to sing back of the screen. Whoever heard of such a thing? 3,000 seats. Continuous show. Matinee prices, 25c; nights, 40c. It can't last. The place is too big. Too bad.

Lecture Showmanship Genteel

By ROBERT BARAL

Lecture platform is one branch of show business which shuns Barnumesque exploitation and merchandizing of its front-page heroes. Explorers, scientists, aviators, naturalists, pioneers, writers and theatre personalities all cashing in on their feats and because of these individual careers getting a certain amount of automatic publicity avoid the spectacular and obvious. Stunting is usually nixed by bureau's handling such attractions.

Showmanship consists of interviews, literary teas, travel bureau tie-ups and personal appearances in bookstores, etc. An effort is made to make the city desk come to the attraction rather than the reverse.

Platform business in general is on the upswing this season, especially in the small towns, where demand is steady. Chautauqua and lyceum courses are largely stale, but the modern platform lecturer, a shade more sophisticated than the chautauqua boys, finds 20 weeks of spieling still obtainable.

Admiral Byrd and Alexander Woolleott vie for top position in platform earnings. The former may get a bigger check for a one-night performance, but he appears infrequently. Woollcott, on the other hand, works at the lecturing business steadily and fills three engagements to one of Byrd's.

Emil Ludwig is another headliner in the coin class. He makes capital of the 'limited engagement' gag, declaring he's only able to accept a certain number of dates, with managers outbidding each other to land him.

Lecture fees fluctuate greatly, as a speaker may accept an engagement in St. Louis at $2,000, and then turn around and deliver the same talk on the way back in Peoria for a figurative $25, just to garner some extra pocket change. Season for lecturers is from Oct. 1 to May.

Draws in the field include: Father Hubbard, Capt. Bruce Bairnsfather, William Rose Benet, Margaret Ayer Barnes, William Lyons Phelps, Sigmund Spaeth, William Beebe, Irvin Cobb, H. V. Kaltenborn, Thornton Wilder, Stanley High, Herbert Agar, Everitt Dean Martin, Maurice Hindus, Stuart Chase, Dr. Alfred Adler, Sir Norman Angell, Dr. Thomas Poulter, Lowell Thomas, Lt. Com. George Noville, Gen. Smedley Butler, Private Peat, John Mason Brown, John T. Flynn, Norman Hapgood and Amelia Earhart.

NBC FILLS IN DULL STRETCHES AT MET

NBC's broadcast of the Metropolitan Opera performances on Saturday afternoons over WEAF and WJZ, are using guesters to fill draggy spaces on the programs, picking out notables from the audience and doing it on the spur of the moment. No advance publicity given the quickies. David Sarnoff was one of the first to be pushed into service. Series is now in its third week.

Narration in general runs out when the music gets too heavy, so the added business is being injected regularly. Also judging from early foreign mail response, most of the continent is listening in watching the current season under the new Edward Johnson regime. Series, unsponsored this year is short-wave around the globe to all distant points.

New Opera

Berlin, Dec. 22.

Civic Opera House in Hanover has acquired a new opera by Max Peters, 'Sons of the Sun,' dealing with ancient Egypt.

It's mostly about old Pharaoh Amenhotep IV. of Egypt, and story includes a ballet and a three-act prolog.

Hampton College Idea

Negro dance students from Hampton College Institute, Hampton, Va., are dickering for a New York showing some time this winter, to present strictly native fare. Harlemania is ruled out.

Hawkins office may handle.

Ted Shawn and his group are now filling dates on the Coast, and will not be back in eastern territory until March. A New York appearance is tentative late in the spring.

Norfolk Symph Okay

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 29.

Three more concerts by the Norfolk Symphony Orchestra are set for 1936. This local venture has been blossoming under the rays of good attendance and its next sponsorship is to be that of a Children's Concert on the afternoon of Jan. 17 in the Maury High School auditorium.

Orchestra in its first appearance at the Colonial theatre Dec. 16 under Henry Cowles Whitehead made good impression. Although not heavy, the program was a test of the ability of those participating. Principal offering was Schubert's Seventh Symphony in C major.

YVONNE GEORGI MAY RETURN WITH GROUP

Before departing for Holland, Yvonne Georgi, ballet mistress of Amsterdam, who gave a one-nighter at the Guild three weeks ago under Frances Hawkins' banner, started negotiations to bring her entire ballet over next year. She'll be free from state duties next season, and is anxious to show her wares extensively on this side.

She was over less than two weeks.

WOR on Verge Again

February may see WOR, New York, opening its contemplated concert bureau, which was announced several months ago. Department has been on the verge of opening on various occasions, but nothing jelled.

Will be adjunct to station's artists' bureau.

Hearst Reporter's Opera

On Jan. 5, NBC will air the world premiere of 'Leon und Erdrita,' new opera by Charles Flick-Steger, Berlin correspondent of Hearst papers, direct from Krefeld, Germany. Broadcast to be over WEAF, and will run for 30 minutes.

It's his third opera.

NEW YORK IS MUSIC TOPS OF WORLD?

New York city is practically unchallenged as music center No. 1 of the world today. Philadelphia is in second groove for America, with Boston next in importance. West coast looms more important than ever, especially for its summer season, and the San Francisco Opera company, is now rated second to the Metropolitan Opera in the U. S.

It's been estimated that a singer earns one-third of intake within a 100-mile radius of New York.

Factors comprising a music center include recognized music schools, an active student body, influx of music lovers, and a sufficient number of musicians on hand to form a substantial music colony. N. Y. is replete with all of these items, and to such an extent that some of those higher up, say it's 20 ordinary music centers rolled into one.

In addition to Philly and Boston there are Rochester, Cincinnati, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco. Detroit, Cleveland, St. Louis and Minneapolis also on the active American list. Symphonies exist in all of these cities.

Chicago; Oh, Yes Chicago, That Was Once a City!

By Frederick Donaghey

Chicago, Dec. 29.

Chicago playgoers are in a ferment and the newspapers are running across-the-page ribbons of black type because Christmas week this year brought five new shows to the stage; and one may look any day now for a bad outbreak of the old rash about the town's being ready once more for such credit and honors are supposed to belong to a 'production center.'

Observers of the theatrical scene with a memory for two decades note that, when Chicago really possessed a reason for being regarded as a 'production center,' the location was never used, and the fresh and original stage-activities in the city were taken as a matter of course.

Excitement now because of five new shows—each with a New York record of measurable success—is explicable, however, inasmuch as five Yuletides have passed without even that much of either activity or novelty in the theatres. Chicago was quick to turn from expenditures on theatre seats when money tightened. Producers who persisted in sending plays here were mostly sorry; and the Christmas holidays of '32, '33, and '34 found them grown wary and afraid.

Yet, there was a Yuletide tradition in Chicago. Insistence on regarding the Christmas-Day matinee as gala—an occasion of social importance and high profit—was still strong here long after the holiday's afternoon had been dropped from the theatrical schedule in New York, Philadelphia and Boston.

Indeed, even when the population was half (or less) than now, Chicago had a voracious appetite for shows of all kinds and at all times; and this never-satisfied hunger was always immensely deepened at Christmas.

This Yuletide outburst for stage plays was nothing in the mere seasonal emotional orgy, forgotten the morning of Jan. 2, but was a true and felt observance not unlike a ritual imposed by a custom running back into the ages. Nobody who has known Chicago as a show town through two decades or more is lacking in a veritable repertoire of tales having to do with Christmas and its popular tieup with the theatre.

For example, there is the story of the LaSalle, where 'Louisiana Lou' was staged the first Sunday in September, and by the following Thursday night more than 400 Christmas-night seats had been reserved and paid for.

And that of 'The Deep Purple,' staged in the Princess in October, with the ticket-broker lady dealing with a new, young and raw assistant in the box-office, paying in cash the following week for the entire capacity of the house at regular prices for Christmas night, and, as the bundle of about 1,000 tickets was handed to her, casually penciling a memorandum offering a dollar premium per seat for the capacity for New Year's Eve.

And that of the late Harry Askin, pressed for $1,750 cash in July, getting it by the simple process of selling seats in that sum for the following Christmas in the Grand Opera-House to another broker, although at the time there was no booking for the holidays—nor, indeed, owing to the hot fight of that year, 1910, between the Shuberts and Klaw & Erlanger over the 'open-door' issue, any booking after September in the independently run Grand.

And now, with the resident and tributary poulation just short of 5,000,000, the cities are affectedly moaning at the terrific chore imposed on them by five new shows in six days!

Here was the Christmas lay-out in Chicago theaters 10 years ago:

Al Jolson in 'Big Boy' at the Apollo (now United Artists); Eddie Cantor in 'Kid Boots' at the Woods; Ziegfeld Follies, Illinois; 'The Student-Prince' (10 months), Great Northern; 'Castles in the Air,' Olympic (now Apollo); 'The Dove,' Blackstone; 'Rain,' Harris; 'The Kiss in a Taxi,' Adelphi; 'What Price Glory?' Studebaker; 'Pigs,' Cort; 'Dancing Mothers,' Selwyn; 'Magda' (Bertha Kalisch), Princess; 'Nobody's Wife,' Playhouse; 'Jack of Hearts,' Central.

Fourteen shows, all save the two box-office successes, and with the count shy three theaters: the Grand Opera-House was being rebuilt by George M. Cohan; the Garrick was used by a talked-about picture, 'The Big Parade,' at a large rental; and the LaSalle had been left dark by the folding of a booked play before it could reach Chicago.

Even the Yuletide following hard upon the '29 Wall Street Goetterdaemmerung found on view here 15 plays charging from $3 top up, with most of them to the town's liking. These were:

The Marx Brothers in 'Animal Crackers,' Grand; 'Show-Boat,' Illinois; 'The Infinite Shoebiack,' Princess; 'The New Moon,' Great Northern; 'Bird in Hand,' Harris; 'June Moon,' Selwyn; 'Blackbirds,' Adelphi; 'Blue Heaven,' Garrick; 'A Night in Venice,' Majestic; 'Illegal Practice,' Playhouse; 'Strange Interlude,' Blackstone; 'R. U. R.' (making two Theater Guild shows in town on subscription), Studebaker; 'Brothers,' Erlanger; 'Queen Bee,' Cort; Street-Scene,' Apollo (formerly Olympic).

The Woods had just been taken by RKO for films; and the little LaSalle had been turned into a dime grind on last-run pictures, the Shuberts having let it go because the owner wouldn't give a long lease.

Changes have been made in the critics' line-up, also, since the '29 Yuletide. The 'dean,' Amy Leslie, soon thereafter went into retirement, with Lloyd Lewis, historian, taking her place on the Daily News. Clarence Bullitt, then on the Evening Post, was taken by the News to do art when the Post went out of business. Margaret Mann, Miss Leslie's assistant on the News, is dead. Ashton Stevens, then on the Herald and Examiner, is now on the American, where he succeeded Fritz Blocki, while his former chore on the Herald is looked after as a sideline by Carol Frink. Claudia Cassidy, for the Journal of Commerce, still looks after plays when opera doesn't get in his way; and Gail Borden continues to use the first-night seats for the Times and is now a daily columnist as well. Charles W. Collins, critic for the Inter-Ocean a quarter-century ago and later for the Post, succeeded this writer on the Tribune in 1930 and is still at it.

Opera Singers Versatile Sing in Opera, Radio, Films

By ROBERT BARAL

Class operatic talent today is doing practically everything but sing at the Metropolitan Opera.

In the Golden Era (1902-1925) the platform artist stuck to the diamond horseshoe and Carnegie hall. Anything else was slumming. A five-way career, radio, films, records and testimonials rolled into one. Yet in spite of this widened field, the class singers are none the wealthier. Caruso was, and remains, tops at $10,000 a night.

Golden Era was a period lush with feathered boas and spaghetti suppers. Now a star gets more kick out of being listed in the N. Y. to L. A. column or vice versa to show that they're really in the swim.

Top earnings today run around $200,000 and considered average, though some do better when they screen especially well or etherize with marked s. a.

Radio is the main sauce for the big voices, getting anywhere from $1,000 to $4,000 for a single air performance. Pictures come next with a star signatured for two to three films a year, though so far only a minority have been able to come through bravely in Hollywood. Grace Moore, Lawrence Tibbett, Nelson Eddy are the best examples.

Concert bureaus have this partiality angle to contend with in setting courses throughout the country. Hinterland managers in charge of the usual $5 subscription series, cry for the radio and film star first, and sulk when they have to take rising newcomers.

Opera it, if is fourth, lending a prestige to a singer, but little else. Recordings used to be a tremendous side-line, but slumped when radio came in. Testimonials for beauty-packs, cold creams, etc., have loomed into prominence, and now an average fee for a turn of the wrist is $1,000. And the class artist is most in demand by the advertising agencies in putting over a campaign.

So much has been heard about the Golden Era, that the decade has taken on exaggerated proportions and frequently so ends like a myth. Caruso is the monument to this era. His recordings alon were huge. In 1920, the year following his death, the estate received approximately $500,000 from his discs it's reported.

Popularity of platters between 1915-25 were big with Caruso, McCormack, Galli-Curci, Kreisler the best sellers of the day. Incidentally, Kreisler, still a radio hold-out, remains in the money class, drawing about $5,000 in most spots for an evening's program.

Argentina's $10,000

Argentina in a series of three N. Y. recitals, last of which was Saturday afternoon (28) at Town Hall, grossed approximately $10,000. Final performance Saturday was solid. Spanish hoofer has been touring since last fall, mostly through the South, coveri iversities, etc.

She departs for Cuba Jan. 2 for two more performances and then returns to Europe for the remainder of the season.

SAN CARLO SIDESTEPS NEW YORK BOOKINGS

Deal for a New York engagement late in the spring for San Carlo Opera company has cooled. Fortune Gallo has nixed the idea altogether and is sticking to the hinterland for coin.

Company of 90 assembles in St. Louis for its opening Jan. 4. Longest bookings on the second-half of the tour are in Los Angeles, Feb. 7-19 and San Francisco, Feb. 23-March 8. Company also swings through the southwest for the first time, taking in many towns which probably have never seen opera.

Newcomers to company are Belle Vreta and Lyuba Senderowna, both of whom were pacted in New York during the holidays. A total of 44 cities will be visited this year. Return date in Chicago is scheduled for April.

Columbia Concerts in Direct Spanish Deals

Deal for services of Andreas Segovia, guitarist who aired on the RCA show Sunday over NBC from Madrid, was made directly through Columbia Concerts, instead of being handled through a foreign office, as is usually the custom. Artist picked up from Kolp, Madrid.

Same kind of deal is being negotiated for Pablo Casals, cellist who's now in Barcelona, for the same hour. It's the first time that the N. Y. office has handled an ether appearance in this manner.

OBITUARIES

LEO NEWMAN

Leo Newman, 63, who had been in the theatre ticket brokerage business for the past 35 years, died in New York Dec. 24 of coronary thrombosis. He was the dean of ticket speculators and is said to have sold more than a million seats at advances over the box office price, but his open handed charity found him comparatively poor when death came.

Born in Chicago, he ran away to go on a ranch, but six years later he tired of the long hours and arduous work. He was for a time a ticket scalper in Chicago, dealing in the unused halves of round trip tickets. When this business was legislated out of existence he turned eventually to the sale of theatre tickets at a time when sales were made in front of the theatres and the dealers were licensed. He opened a store on the advice of the late Charles Dillingham and sold tickets to a large section of the town's notables.

He developed an uncanny accuracy in sizing up the hits and managers learned to rely on his buys as indication of the success or otherwise of their productions. Now and then he slipped and is said to have dropped as much as $20,000 on a single show.

He is survived by his mother, a brother and a sister. He was twice married, both wives predeceasing hi

EDWARD LAROCHE

Edward LaRoche, 56, died in New York Dec. Born in France, he served in the Foreign Legion at the age of 16. It was for this reason he was appointed technical advisor on the film production of 'Beau Geste.' He had also seen military service in the Argentine, in China and with Roosevelt's Rough Riders in Cuba.

He played for a short while in vaudeville, then turning to the dramatic stage, played with Katharine Cornell, Jean Arthur and others and in numerous Broadway productions. Recently he had been forced to appeal to Equity for assistance and was an applicant for home relief.

ALBAN BERG

Alban Berg, 50, one of the most noted of the radical modern composers, died in Vienna Dec. 24 of blood poisoning due to a carbuncle. He had composed many operas, the most notable being 'Wozzeck.' He died with the score of his latest, 'Lulu,' incomplete.

Because of the extreme radicalism of his work he was not popularly known on this side, though many of his instrumental works have been performed here.

JOHN KELLY

John Kelly, 68, one-time sports editor and theatrical promoter, died last week in Samaritan Hospital, Troy, where he had been a patient a fortnight.

His theatrical activities included the bringing to Troy of such stars as George M. Cohan, Jefferson De Angelis and Julia Sanderson. He also served as secretary of the Troy baseball club in the orl inal Eastern league.

Two sons, a sister and a brother survive.

JOHN D. FARSON

John D. Farson, 71, bandmaster and dance promoter, died Dec. 24, in Baltimore.

For more than 50 years an orch leader, was active until week before his death, which was attributed to heart attack. He was 71 years old.

Survived by widow and daughter.

ROYAL LEE VINES

Royal Lee Vines, 62, one of the founders of and secretary to the National Council of the Society of American Magicians, died in Westport, Conn., Dec. 24.

His interest in magic was that of a virtuoso, his real employment having been with the Dupont-De-Nemours Co.

O. L. RECTOR

O. L. Rector, manager of the Strand, Sioux Rapids, Ia., was fatally injured in an automobile accident near Spencer, Ia., early Christmas Day.

Mrs. Rector was seriously injured in the accident.

JAMES HASWELL

James Haswell, former Coast theatre manager for Morosco, Charles E. Blaney and others, died in the Elk's National Home, Bedford, Va., Dec. 9.

CHARLES M. AUSTI

Charles M. Austin, for more than 40 years active in the promotion of the annual Greene County, Ohio, fair, a member of the board of directors, died Dec. 14 at his home near Xenia, O. Burial was locally.

Mother of Eric Ergenbright, western editor of Fawcett fan magazines, died Dec. 25 in Los Angeles after brief illness.

of Harold Deal, announcer of WDEV, Waterbury, Vt., died Dec. 21, in Waterbury.

HIGH COST OF ZOOS BOTHERS HAGENBECK

Lorenz Hagenbeck, co-owner of famous Animal Park at Hamburg-Stellington and of Circus Carl Hagenbeck says that current dealings in wild animals are not so forte.

Reasons are manifold. Too many zoological gardens everywhere, difficulties in bringing certain animals through imposed quarantine, and heavy expenses in bringing baby animals up, especially lions, which cost in first year 1,000 marks ($400) in feeding and supervision. Selling such a cat hardly fetches more than 700 marks ($280).

Lions between the age of three and four years are rated at 2,000 marks ($800), which represents just the amount of their net cost to Hagenbeck.

Horse meat, their main food, is 35 pfennings (14 cents) a pound, and fifteen pounds a day just suits their appetite. Elephants, once they are tame and trained, fetch 12,000 marks ($4,800).

Hagenbeck's circus leaves this week for London in four special ships, being booked for the Xmas season at Agricultural Hall with 10 elephants, 15 tigers, polar bears, seals, camels, etc.

Berlin Circus Notes

Berlin, Dec. 22.

Just outside the Circus Busch building, dark since last Xmas, another circus has opened its doors, Schaefer's Liliputians, comprising forty midgets and thirty baby animals.

Show has only recently returned from Brussels where in the amusement park it claims having done good biz.

Berlin date was supposed to locate again at Christmas Carnival Show outside the former Royal Castle at Unter den Linden, but prohibitive charges by municipality caused Schaefer to nix the spot and move a couple of hundred yards further on where he expects to catch the overflow from the Carnival Show.

Circus Busch building dark on account of Paula, present owner and daughter of late Paul Busch, reported being in dutch with municipality, which refuses to okay permit for her enterprise as long as building isn't completely overhauled. Permit was granted a year ago to another tenant who arranged wrestling matches in same building and turned them away nightly.

St. Loui ion Conv. Went $13,000 in Hole

t. Louis, Dec. 29.

American Legion convention last September did not reach expectation and the American Legion Convention Corp. found itself $13,000 in hole when final audit was made. Deficit will be met by $50,000 appropriation made by State Legislature for event. Convention leaders anticipated an income of $60,000 from registrations but only $13,484 was laid on line by the boys.

Registration fee of $2 included medal on ribbon, book of reduced price tickets for various entertainments, guide of city, etc. Cleveland is the next convention centre.

Outdoors' Good Year

Chicago, Dec. 29.

Indication that the trend is up is the happy smiles of the carney, circus and fair men here for the winter hibernation after a season on the roads of the nation. All report the same results—a much better season the past year, better by 50-60% than 1934 and 100% better than '33 and '32 when business dropped into the cellar.

Most circuses and fairs made money during 1935, and so good were some of the results that fairs are again back in the good graces of their various state legislatures.

Fairs in the midwest all agree that the big item was the absence of the Chicago Century of Progress, which for two seasons was powerful opposition. In its two years ('33-'34) the Chicago Exposition played to 38,000,000 people and the bulk came from the great centers which hold autumn and late summer fairs.

Not only were attendance figures up at all fairs but money spent at the gate increased inside the grounds. Admission prices were in the process of climbing back to former high marks, 25c. signs being taken down all over the country to be replaced by 50c. and 75c. tariffs.

ust Be Sponsored

The carnies made most of their money at the fairs, as they have been doing the past five years. Carnivals have about satisfied themselves that only at fairs, and other sponsored festivals, can they get off the nut. The straight date has become a loser for even the best carnivals.

Without auspices, or some sort of official recognition, there is no chance for the modern carnival to operate; people are suspicious of the various concessions and won't attend unsponsored events.

But that doesn't mean that there was no gaffing and gimmicking. There was plenty with, perhaps, '35 a top year in this respect.

The carnivals themselves, however, are not to blame. Many are forced into grifting operation by the officials who are supposed to see that no cheating is permitted. In one section of the country gaff was forced through pressure of fair officials who insisted on such a large portion of the take for themselves that carnivals in the territory were forced to operate with 100% gimmick joints.

Some fairs asked such figures as $30,000 rentals for six day stand, and fair officials then told the carnivals to run wide open. Such spots were running for cash, candy and foodstuffs being passed up in order to get winter sugar.

Eastern Parks

In spite of an exceptionally good weather break, New York did not enjoy a very prosperous season. Money conditions were much better in the middle west than on either coast.

Around New York the amusement parks fared poorly. Playland Park, municipally operated at Rye Beach, in Westchester, did better than an even break, but Coney Island suffered. Bagatelle games took much of the ready money, and even these did not get the strong play hoped for. Ten-in-ones were down to a nickel, with an ostensible dime admission waived except on the few crowded days when mere numbers argued the possibility of getting the dime. One show off the line of travel was down to 3c and many stands offered 3c helpings of frozen custard, and even hot dogs at that price. The bath houses, as usual, were unsuccessful in their drives against beach dressing, in spite of the assistance of the police, and none of the bath house takes were good though the pools did slightly better.

It is probable that unless conditions are much better before next June, Coney Island will organize itself on a 5c basis. With the nut schemed to the probable intake the result will be more satisfactory, though rentals will be fewer. Plenty of spots were dark on the Island this year, both on Surf Avenue and the Bowery, and a few of the Boardwalk concessions suggested they were in on a cut rental basis. The walks from Surf Avenue to the Boardwalk were all in bad shape.

One trouble was that the moneyed Manhattan trade has largely been diverted to Jones' Beach, which made a successful bid with water sports and other features. Rockaway was in the doldrums but Rlls park did fairly well with bathing and the restaurant concession pulled through, and to spare, on weekend business. The Manhattan and Brighton bathing beaches did better since they appealed to a more select crowd.

Fairs

Most of the agricultural fairs in the north and east managed to keep the cork in the red ink and some even were able to pay off deficits from previous years in part. The Toronto exposition, most important outdoor operation in the eastern sector, registered heavy gains over recent years. Not only were the productions well-patronized, but the carnival company operating the amusement concessions had no kick. It was feared that the newly imposed Canadian amusement tax might hurt, but this did not appear to affect business materially.

A healthy condition was reported all through eastern Canada with many of the smaller spots able to hold their heads up for the first time in this decade. In one or two places concessionaires got themselves in a jam through operation of crooked games, but in general the shows appeared to be free from the usual grift.

In many spots in New England the legalizing of mutuel betting helped the fairs though nowhere does this appear to have been as helpful as out west. Fair ground betting will have to adjust itself next season.

In the southeast conditions were greatly improved, due in no small measure to the stabilization of cotton prices. Amusement parks were not unifor ly successful during the hot months., but after the cotton and tobacco crops were in things perked up and most fairs were solidly black. Cole-Beatty invaded the Piedmont event just after the tobacco auctions began and in spite of an infantile paralysis epidemic played to excellent business. In addition there were a number of smaller tricks working their way back to winter quarters through the Carolinas and Georgia. There seemed to be room for all, since the one-ringers did not invade the larger towns.

An outstanding feature of the year is the number of fairs which will either rebuild or do additional building during the winter. Much, if not most of it, is being done on federal funds, but it makes for larger plants and more attractive grounds. By and large the year was not so tough for outdoors, and the boys expect the coming season will be better.

Takes a Tumble

Capetown, Dec. 5.

Ernest, trapeze performer in Pagel's circus at East London, missed his hold whilst doing his show, and crashed 80 feet to the ground.

He was rushed to the hospital, where doctors located a smashed left wrist, back injuries, and concussion.

Reports say his condition is fair.

Ohio Parks Splurging

Canton, Dec. 29.

Outlook for eastern Ohio amusement parks in 1936 is the best in more than five years, resort executives indicated this week.

First construction since the depression is planned for early in the spring, to include new rides, concession buildings and a general revamping of midways. Meyers Lake park here, one of the largest in the district, will spend more than $100,000 on new features next year.

BURWELL TO WEED

Norfolk, Dec. 29.

Edward W. Burwell, production manager at WTAR, has moved to WEED, Rocky Mount, N. C., as announcer-writer. Burwell was formerly program director of WTEL, Philadelphia.

Replacing hi WTAR Vaughn Bradshaw.

Renewals at WFIL

Philadelphia, Dec. 29.

Series of Monday 15-minute musical shows over WFIL has been renewed for 52-week run by F. G. Vogt, meat packers. Station has also signed bi-weekly E. T. series by John Morrell Dog Foods. It'll be spiel on 'What's in a Name' topic, also running 15 minutes, for indefinite period. Handled by Henry, Hurst and MacDonald agency.

RADIO'S $86,000,000 YEAR

Music on the Air

With Warner ros.' withdrawal of its music from the air, pending its own new licenses, apart from the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers, the schism in but a few days has evidenced the dire need to radio for the music which ASCAP (with, and now without, Warners) has been feeding it.

Loss of the WB catalogs (Harms, T. B. Harms, Remick, Witmark, Shubert, New World, Victoria and sundry other subsids) to radio music unquestionably makes a difference. Despite the resurrection of any number of old tunes and the ASCAP music publishers' extraordinary concentrated campaign on a flock of new tunes, there is a definite void.

Apart from the merits of the WB-ASCAP situation, it forcibly evidences the extreme value of music to the furtherance of radio and almost every other branch of show business touching on the usages of musical copyrights. It may well be that despite the present tiff between Warners and the Society—which is an intra-trade argument that has been discussed at length before—that WB may be doing ASCAP its biggest economic favor in short order. If WB is successful in capitalizing to a greater extent on its music rights, it can't help but react in favor of every other music publisher and songwriter, on either side of the fence.

Already the ASCAP officials laconically observe that the radio and other interests which heretofore fought, and are still fighting the Society as an alleged 'music trust,' now seem anxious to buy its music rights from two sources—the Society and Warners, paying bigger fees and frankly admitting the need of the very thing they have combatted so bitterly.

DR. J. F. CONDON (JAFSIE) DOES A CAGEY ACT

By JOE BIGELOW

Willie Hammerstein would have known what to do with Jafsie. For Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, at this moment and with the Lindbergh case at its new front-page peak, would have been right down Willie's alley.

But there's no Willie Hammerstein around, which leaves Jafsie more or less on his own. For his New York debut as a stage attraction, the elderly educator picked a small neighborhood house, the New Forum in his native borough, the Bronx, N. Y. It was a Saturday-Sunday-Monday engagement, three-a-day, and Jafsie and the theatre opened up to a house packed with the regular Saturday matinee kids a. 10c. a kid. He did 15 minutes in

[Since opening at the New Forum, a blast from a group of New Jersey clergymen, who specifically protested his booking at Plainfield this week, has resulted in Jafsie calling off all dates. New Forum engagement was cancelled after opening day, with Jafsie reported being ill.]

The kids were in to see the picture, not to hear a discourse on crime, and they showed it by talking loudly in regular kid fashion during most of Jafsie's 'act.' For one thing Jafsie is no loud speaker, so he couldn't be heard beyond the first few rows, especially in the din. When they finally got the p. a. system working for him he was almost

Midgets to Replace Kids in 'Old Maid'

Chicago, Jan. 7.

Helen Magna, Lilliputian, replaces Yvonne Mann as one of the child characters in 'Old Maid,' now at the Erlanger here. Stated that the reason for the switch is the fact that Yvonne has grown too large for the role, but understood that another reason for the shift is a desire to avoid any difficulties with the midwest child labor commissions, which are pretty tough about employment of minors. Cops got after the producers in Buffalo recently.

'MILE' AS SCHOOLBOOK CAUSES N. C. FURORE

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 7.

John Wexley's play 'The Last Mile' has caused quite a furore in school and municipal circles here.

A high school girl brought a copy home and was reading it as parallel English reading. Her mother picked it up, noted some of the rather salty language, and went to a daily newspaper with a protest that her 16-year-old daughter be assigned such a book. From that various persons took it up and the thing developed into quite a dispute.

Appears to be near an end now with announcement from the chairman of the city school board that the play has been removed from the school library and the required reading list.

New Mutual Web Just Under $700,000 for First Fiscal Half-Year—Radio Industry as a Whole $13,000,000 Over 1934

RECORD BILLINGS

NBC and Columbia wound up 1935 with joint tally of $48,786,735 from the sale of time. Year brought NBC a gross of $31,148,931, which represented a boost of 11.9% over the web's take for 1934, while CBS garnered $17,637,804, or 19% better than it had been for the previous 12 months. With the addition of the $697,821 which Mutual drew for its basic four stations during the second half of 1935, the gross billings for all the crosscountry links figures $49,484,556.

In the case of both NBC and CBS the 1935 billings established records by a wide margin, while the Mutual Network in its six months of existence has given evidence of slow but firm development in the field of hookup broadcasting. NBC is ex-

GOLDWYN'S 8 TO COST $10,000,000

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Samuel Goldwyn now has eight pix on his season's schedule budgeted at $10,000,000. Lead-off will be Sinclair Lewis' novel 'Dodsworth,' bought for $160,000 in its stage play form. It is budgeted at $1,000,000.

Edna Ferber's 'Come and Get It' is next in lineup. Author worked out film adaptation herself. Virginia Bruce will be one of the toppers.

'Hurricane,' by Charles Nordhoff and James Hall, is slated as the third. It will be filmed in its South Seas locale. 'Perfectly Good Woman,' by Rachael Crothers, to star Miriam Hopkins; Eddie Cantor's 'Pony Boy,' orig by Harry Selby; a Merle Oberon starrer not yet selected, and two other pix will round out the 1935-36 program.

Washington, Jan. 7.

High salaries paid film industry executives, actors, and writers were disclosed Monday (6) when the long-awaited U. S. Treasury department report on incomes of individuals receiving more than $15,000 a year went to Congress. Report may be the basis for legislation limiting the size of individual earnings.

Dope about many prominent film industry personages, notably directors and executives, was missing, but numerous stars whose income had been described as running into six figures had the truth told.

One of the highest incomes on the list is that of Mae West, who drew $329,166 from Paramount during 1934. Other individuals in the six-figure bracket are Charles Chaplin, $143,000; Joseph M. Schenck, $104,000; A. L. Lichtman, $161,088; W. C. Fields, $155,083.

Mary Pickford was paid $52,750 as president of Pickford Corp., report showed. Bing Crosby, Ltd., collected $104,499 for the crooner. Walt Disney was good for $78,000. Marlene Dietrich got $145,000.

Cecil B. DeMille got $30,450. Richard Arlen knocked down $57,666; Lionel Atwill, $16,333; George Bancroft, $36,166; Joan Bennett, $36,979; Mary Boland, $89,583; Kitty Carlisle, $52,083; Emanuel Cohen, $78,826.

As the reports were submitted by various corporations, it was believed

Radio script comic has one of those leases in a midtown hotel that's contingent on every 13-weeks of commercial renewals. If options are taken up, the hotel management is assured of the tenant for another three months.

Last week the manager of the hostelry approached the comedian and his wife, saying, 'You know, that script you did last night—well, I didn't like it so much.'

$3,000 NEW HIGH FOR PIC SONG WRITERS

Harry Warren and Al Dubin have had their contract with Warner Bros. revamped. Deal which the pair worked out with Buddy Morris, v.p. of the WB music interests, and Jack Warner ties them up for another year and gives them an increase in salary.

New arrangement provides for a joint salary of $3,000 a week, which is the highest sum paid any writing team in the business. Next top income among the Hollywood songsmiths is the $2,500 jointly paid E. Y. Harburg and Harold Arlen by the same producer. These weekly stipends per term contract, differ from the fancy figures paid certain name songsmiths such as Irving Berlin's flat $75,000 for 'Top Hat,' plus percentage.

REDS' GAMES ON AIR, $20,000 TOP PRICE

Cincinnati, Jan. 7.

Socony Vacuum Oil Co., has bought the broadcasting rights of the Reds games this season for a reported $20,000. Highest radio price yet received by Cincinnati Baseball Club Co., of which Powel Crosley, Jr., head of Crosley Radio Corp., has been president and biggest stockholder for past two years.

Newsreels Pass Up Rose Bowl Game And Parade; Indie's 10G Sews It Up

Five major newsreels passed up both the Rose Bowl game and Tournament of Roses parade in Pasadena New Year's Day, after exclusive film rights to the Stanford-Southern Methodist grid affair had been sold to Reliable Pictures, independent concern, for an advance of $10,000.

Contract stipulated that Reliable was to have an exclusive on the game, but would allow each newsreel to shoot not more than 100 feet of negative in the Bowl. When apprised of this situation, newsreel officials here called a meeting and after conferring with eastern execs of the reels, tossed ultimatum to Pasadena bigwigs that restrictions imposed on them for shooting the game were not satisfactory, and the newsreels would not make any shots of the Tournament of Roses parade. Pass-up by the reels of the latter gave Pasadena officials a headache, as film publicity of the event is estimated to be worth at least $500,000.

Newsreel cameramen working for the five major weeklies entered protest against use of other cameramen by Reliable in shooting the grid contest for less than union scale for roduction work. This protest blew up and Indie concern had full use of fil ing the Rose Bowl tilt.

Although Stanford's win over SMU cost the film concern plenty, Reliable syndicate figures to get out okay. If it does, it will be the first time that a filmed grid game has gotten out of red ink. Several previous atempts to market big games in the Rose Bowl or Los Angeles Coliseum put backers far in the red, and major companies are shying off any football games so far as putting out for negative and camera crews are concerned.

Reliable promised first prints of the game for Thursday night (2) at 6 p.m., but one reel had to be redubbed and laboratory did not start shooting through prints until Friday. Fanchon & Marco nabbed the film for L. A.'s first run at the Paramount and other houses operated by them. Picture hit the Par screen for second show on Friday (3).

Texas will take at least 31 prints of the football picture, according to Reliable officials here. Distribution in that state is being handled by Tom Branon, A. H. McLaughlin is handling eastern deals for circuit houses, while Ben Judell has rights around Chicago.

Picture drew distinction of being first film to be shipped across the Pacific on the Clipper plane. Print went out Saturday (4) for Honoluiu, for bookings in houses of the Hawaiian islands.

Refusal of Rose Bowl o cials to permit newsreel companies to take pictures of Stanford-SMU football game New Year's day probably will keep all newsreel companies out of Rose Bowl next year. Some newsreel executives this week indicated that they may even eliminate photographing contests next fall leading up to the Rose Bowl annual classic.

Home office executives here figure that the Rose Bowl authorities tossed aside something like $1,000,000 in free advertising not only of the game but for the Rose Bowl parade just because $10,000 paid by one company for the exclusive rights. Picture officials figure that each newsreel company saved about $1,000 on specials that would have been necessary to supply the California market.

LUCENAY SUING ROACH OVER RINGER POOCH

Harry Lucenay has retained Julius Kendler in a claim against Hal Roach Studios, Inc., over Pete, the one-eyed dog. Lucenay drew $250 a week from Roach for five years on Pete, the bulldog with an artificial ring around his right eye, who appeared in many Our Gang comedies for Roach. When the contract expired Roach Studios allegedly substituted its own brindle bull dog, called him Pete also, and put an artificial ring around the left eye.

Lucenay's contention is that of unfair trade competition because his Pete has been making personal appearances, etc., and seeks an injunction against Roach's present 'Pete.' Attorney Kendler will also petition for $100,000 damages.

., Dec. 29.

Is the saga of a Mexican star, a high-sounding French firm name and a distinguished English booking agent.

Lupe Velez arrived here safely last week. Leaving the boat train, she announced she had come to make a French film. Local reporters, joyous that another American star was coming to enrich their industry, got all the dope from a man who said he was the producing company's press agent. Miss Velez went to the Hotel Crillon and a suite hired by the Union Francaise Cinematographique to rest up.

Just one of the papers printed a humorous little railway station incident. According to this, a reporter asked Miss Velez how good her French was. So Miss Velez, according to the story, turned to her manager and said: 'Why, you told me I didn't need to know any French!'

The Union Francaise Cinematographique has an office in a big building with a good address: 116 bis, Avenue des Champs Elysees. There are a lot of concerns here with fine motion picture names like that. Sometimes they make or distribute films. They usually have a desk, a chair and a telephone. Union Francaise Cinematographique has several desks and several chairs but no telephone.

In the office was Sam Temkin, a slight young man with hair drooping over the back of his collar. He is the head of the firm.

Asked if he was French, Temkin said, in French:

'Yes. Well, not exactly. I'm Spanish; that's why Miss Velez and I understand each other so well.'

He said he was going to make this picture with Lupe Velez from a story by Andre Heuze called 'Valse de Paris' ('Waltz of Paris'). Temkin gave a list of the supporting cast, and added that when this picture was finished he was going to make another with Lucien Muratore, the tenor.

Asked who was with him in the firm, Temkin said: 'Oh, it's just me, and my mother-in-law, and my father-in-law.'

He admitted the company hadn't made a French picture yet, but said it had dubbed two American films.

Asked how he had booked Miss Velez, he said: 'Through England: the Foster agency.'

So the VARIETY mugg, who had seen Harry Foster, the English booker, the night before at the George V, hopped to that hotel.

Foster said his o ce in London had fixed up the contract while he was in America. The Union Francaise Cinematographique was a responsible firm, he said, because it had been vouched for by someone who ought to know about French cinema. Also, he understood, it had already made two fil s.

'Does it own the st asked.

'Of course it does, or it couldn't make the film,' Foster replied indignantly, and vanished.

But Andre Heuze, the author, maintains that the Union Francaise Cinematographique has not yet bought the rights. And Paul Schiller, who had been announced in the newspapers as directing the fil , prepared a statement publicly denying he had any arrangement, and in view of Foster's reputation, went to the booker to see if he couldn't co-operate with him on straightening out the mess.

Foster admitted to Schiller that there was something wrong. Temkin was to have paid Miss Velez $3,300 on getting his copy of the contract, said Foster, but hasn't paid yet.

Maybe the $3,300 has now been paid, but there's no one to ask about it any more. Because Miss Velez, scarcely recovered from her sea voyage, quietly slipped off to Monte Carlo. And Foster has gone back to London. Before leaving he paid Miss Velez's bill at the Crillon, all except a luncheon check which had been picked up by Temkin.

And when the mugg called at the U.F.P. office again it was dark.

DRAMATISTS' %, ALTERNATE IDEA

Playwrights Would Cut Out Legit Producers Entirely —Film Rights of Hollywood-Financed Plays Is Crux of New Grievances

MGRS. INDIFFERENT

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Dramatists have made up their minds to try and get all the film rights on plays from now on, rather than cut in the producers of plays, but it is indicated here that they will be willing to compromise on a 75 or 80 per cent basis. Louise Silcox, secretary of the Guild, made a hurried trip here from N. Y., over the week-end, to confab with Marc Connelly, president of the Authors' League; Sidney Howard, president of the Dramatists Guild, and Ernest Pascal, president of the Screen Writers Guild, on the matter. All three are in Hollywood at the moment.

Making no o cial statements, the quartet has decided to go ahead on the presentation of a drama writers' ultimatum to get every dollar of screen rights for the scribblers after March 1, instead of the 50-50 split with producers as at present, and has been done during the past five years, in accordance with the Minimum Basic Agreement.

Miss Silcox remains here a week, then returns to New York for further confabs with the dramatists at headquarters before any action is taken.

Legits Don't Care

On Broadway, the managers continue not to consider the dramatists' situation as serious. Some producers insist that it may even result in a good break for them. There can be no huddle between the writers and the managers for at least another month, meaning that thus far there has been much guessing on both sides.

Members of the Dramatists League have been sworn to secrecy on their plans and proposal. Only intimation that the producers have of the impending action is a short official announcement by the Dramatists Guild, sent to all producers individually, that the current Minimum Basic Agreement, which expires at the end of February, will not be renewed and that the Guild has not made up its mind yet as to terms of the new agreement to be offered. This indicates only that the Guild intends to be arbitrary about its actions.

League of New York Theatres (managers) can take no action, since the Agreement is signed by each manager individually. League met last week, nevertheless, to con-

Denny Vs. Tax Dept. a Draw; U. S. Rulings on Publicity Expenses

Washington, Jan. 7.

Reginald Denny's 10-year bout with the Internal Revenue Bureau over income taxes wound up last week in a draw, with both the Government and the film actor winning points when the U. S. Board of Tax Appeals handed down its decision. Involving alleged deficiencies of $1,354 and $4,743 for 1925 and 1926, tiff centered around deductions which Denny contends should be allowed because they represented expenditures for business rather than personal purposes. Entertainment bills, central issue in numerous other rows between film actors and tax collectors, figured in this case, with the Government winning again because Denny was unable to prove conclusively how much he dished out for 'commercial' amusement.

Giving Denny and Uncle Sam each four rounds, the Tax Appeals judges allowed several deductions, including $400 spent to repair high-class dentistry damaged in a fight picture, the cost of wigs and make-up required in his occupation, and payments for physical training, but said the picture pug must include as income the sum of $11,000 loaned by Universal in 1935 and never repaid. Board also held Denny could not write off cost of an automobile given a bit player who doubled as his valet and handyman and limited the deductions Denny claimed for upkeep of an airplane.

'Entertainment' ille

Revealing that Denny's household expenses for 1926 ran to $20,465 the board stuck to its former position on the question of entertainment bills, declaring 'we have no evidence here of any connection between petitioner's outlay and the furtherance of his business' and upholding the Internal Revenue Bureau's claim. Included in the 'business expenses,' the board noted, were Denny's outlays for club dues and a motor boat, which, like many of the household outlays, the actor said were intended to Meantime, deals which were commenced in a preliminary way, looking to shooting in the East of plays currently on engagements in New York, under special arrangements with their legit sponsors, remain status quo.

Mag Passes Up Picture Stars As 'Colorless'; Go for Characters

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Indicative of a change in public fancy and taking the wind out of many a publicity sail is Collier's decision to drop articles about picture stars in favor of pieces about character players.

Kyle Chrichton, the mag's feature writer on the theatre and pictures, is currently in Hollywood for a month. He will do articles on Zasu Pitts, Edward Everett Horton, Francis Ford, Patsy Kelly, Edwin Arnold, W. C. Fields, Jean Hersholt and others of their type. The s.a. stars will be passed up as colorless material.

Main reason for the change in theory that the public has tired of what's been written about the stars.

FILM BIZ BACKS N. Y. MAYOR REGARDING ADMISSION OF KIDS TO PIX

New Legislation for Special Children's Hours Would Benefit B.O.'s Considerably—Drive on 59 Picture Houses in Manhattan

Repeal of present laws in New York state which restrict attendance of kids under 16 at picture theatres unescorted would mean added millions at the box office, in the opinion of distributors and exhibitors who are expected to lend ever support toward new regulations.

Over the weekend, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York announced he would press for passage at this legislative session of laws which would permit children to attend film theatres where suitable means for protection of youngsters would be provided. His idea is to have theatres set aside a portion of the house just for kids and have a matron in charge for their protection. Plans of New York's mayor to press for changes in the child laws followed issuance of summonses to 59 theatres in the Greater New York area on Saturday (4) for alleged violation of present laws.

For many years children under 16 have not been permitted to attend theatres when not accompanied by a parent or guardian. This law was forced onto the statute books largely by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, whose agents are constantly watching theatres to see that kids are not improperly admitted. The SPCC attitude always was that kids are in danger in film houses when alone because they might be picked up or misled by cranks, kidnapers or others or befall other harm such as panic in case of fire.

Mayor LaGuardia believes certain hours should be set aside for kids unescorted if a new bill can be put through and film booked for kids which would be suitable for their consumption. Theatres point out they couldn't throw in pictures only for kids on certain hours, although special Saturday morning matinees and other features for kids at appointed times could be arranged.

Expectation is that the theatre interests of the state will get squarely behind Mayor LaGuardia and any others sponsoring modification of the present children's laws as affects film. Plans so far are more or less preliminary.

PIX SEES DUFFY BILL'S ENACTMENT AS LIKELY

Only the Duffy Copyright bill is expected to receive serious consideration in present session of Congress, in the opinion of some of legal minds in the industry. Other proposed or contemplated measures affecting the picture industry are expected to be side-tracked during press of other business and rush to adjourn early.

Duffy measure, which already has passed the Senate, is generally considered as aiding exhibitors slightly in matter of music tax. Bill does away with mandatory penalty on infringements, feature which has brought opposition from ASCAP in previous sessions.

Many of industry's legal lights believe the bill will go before the house at this session, with good chance for it becoming a law.

Mae Clarke Wants Court Ruling on Her Contract

Los Angeles, Jan. 7.

Seeking to have her contract with the Lee Morrison agency clarified, Mae Clarke has filed suit alleging she did not understand document at the time it was signed.

Morrison filed a suit sometime ago demanding $836 from the actress, allegedly a loan. He also asked court to make valid claim to 10% of actress' earnings through February, 1940, when seven-year contract expires.

Chi Censors 'Human'

Chicago, Jan. 7.

First censor slicing in many weeks occurred here last week when the local reviewing board tore into 'We're Only Human' (RKO).

Took several healthy cuts in the picture, but exchange is readying another screening for the board to revise the list of snips.

CANADIAN FILM BIZ $25,280,300 IN 1934

Ottawa, Jan. 7.

Just a year behind in its report, The Dominion Bureau of Statistics has announced that the aggregate gross of picture theatres in Canada during the calendar year 1934 was $25,280,300, an increase of 1.5% over the take of $24,897,100 for 1933. The number of theatres which provided returns to the government bureau was 799.

The figures show that the film exchanges did relatively better than the theatres with gross revenue during 1934 of $7,418,700, or an increase in film rentals and accessories of 9.4%, compared with the previous year. Returns were recorded from exchanges operating 64 main and branch offices in the six key centres of the Dominion.

Blow by Blow

Chicago, Jan. 7.

First active recognition of the President of the United States on the radio as a competitive factor in show business occurred here last Friday (3) when Ralph Kettering, local manager for the Brock Pemberton enterprises, took a large ad spread in the dailies to tell the public that they could come to the theatre to see 'Personal Appearance' without missing the President's message.

Kettering rigged up a radio and p. a. system in the theatre and President Roosevelt's annual message to Congress was broadcast from the stage of the Harris theatre from 8-8:30 p. m., due to the difference in ti

ANOTHER YEAR FOR 10% U.S. TAX

Washington, Jan. 7.

No relief from the 10% admissions tax is in sight for another year, under President Roosevelt's financing plans for fiscal year 1936-37 as revealed to Congress Monday (6).

Declaring that new taxes are unnecessary, unless Congress imposes expenditures exceeding those recommended by the Budget Bureau, the Treasury Department expects to collect unprecedented sum of $19,500,000 from box office in year starting July 1. Simultaneously, Chief Executive boosted estimated income from amusement levy for current year, figuring Government will pocket $17,000,000 between July 1, 1935 and June 30, 1936, instead of original estimate of $16,500,000. Actual receipts for fiscal year 1935 were $379,397 over Treasury predictions, reaching $15,379,397.

That's a Premeer!

Ottawa, Jan. 7.

There was plenty of gold braid and brass hats at the Rideau theatre, Friday (3) night when the greater part of the diplomatic corps in the Canadian Capitol turned out for a performance of 'The 39 Steps' under the personal patronage of Lord Tweedsmuir, Canada's new Governor-General who wrote the book. Attended by a retinue from Government House, His Excellency was accompanied by Lady Tweedsmuir.

Diplomatic representatives from six countries were in attendance along with their attaches, the official parties including Sir Francis Floud, British High Commissioner to Canada; Hon. Norman Armour, United States Minister; Signor Luigi Perucci, Italian Consul-General, and the French and Japanese ambassadors.

WELSH OFF REPUBLIC LOT IN CONTRACT TIFF

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Five-year contract held by Robert E. Welsh as an executive producer with Republic Productions is being disputed by the latter company, with Welsh off the lot for the past week by request of company heads.

Welsh, who was executive producer at Monogram under Trem Carr prior to formation of Republic, which resulted in latter organization retaining key execs of Monogram on five-year contracts, held a ticket for the stretch without options, and calling for semi-annual increases in salary. First six-month tilt was given him Dec. 1.

Prior to decision of Republic to dispute legality of Welsh's contract, company endeavored to settle ticket with the producer, but the two sides were apparently far apart on payoff.

MORE CHARGES OF FRAUD IN FWC BKPTCY

Los Angeles, Jan. 7.

Alleging various acts of fraud, T. L. Tally and Corbar Corp. have filed amendment to their petition seeking to set aside adjudication of Judge William P. James declaring Fox-West Coast bankrupt in 1933. Petitioners declare that Albert W. Leeds, attorney, and son-in-law of Judge James was director and secretary of bankrupt concern, but resigned at a meeting in which assets of outfit were transferred to new company, Fox West Coast Theatres Corp. However, Leeds remained in his position with similar authority, petition states.

Complaint also asserts that Samuel W. McNabb, who was U. S. district attorney in Southern California, resigned that job for the purpose of accepting the F-WC bankruptcy. Another charge made is that the four referees in bankruptcy here had a pool of all their fees to be divided equally among themselves.

SEC Recounts Rubin, Bernstein's Deals in Loew Common Stock

Washington, Jan. 7.

David Bernstein, treasurer of Loew's, Inc., last month gave away 10,000 shares of Loew common to unidentified persons, the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission revealed Friday (3) in its semi-monthly report on December transactions. Biggest change in pic stocks by an officer or director in recent months sliced Bernstein's holdings to 1,890 shares of common.

Transactions by J. Robert Rubin, v. p. of Loew's, Inc., and M-G-M, also were brought to light by the S.E.C. statement. Rubin sold 1,000 shares in two lots and bought 1,500, making a net gain of 500 shares in his Loew common holdings and bringing his interest up to 2,500 shares. Rubin also owns, through a holding company, 350 shares of $6.50 cumulative preferred.

Only other transaction in amusement stocks during the first part of December involved purchase of 10,200 certificates of deposit of General Theatres Equipment debentures by Seton Porter, New York, member of one of the G.T.E. protective committees. Porter bought two lots, one of 8,200 and another of 2,000. Previously he was listed as owning no G.T.E. paper.

Delayed report from Columbia Pictures showed that Jack Cohn during June bought seven shares of his firm's common, added 11 common shares through the voting trust agreement, and increased his holdings to 321 common and 55 preferred owned directly, with 25,089 common owned through the trust agreement.

Studios Breast 1936 Tape with Heaviest Sked; 37 Go, 60 Waiting

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Studios started the new year with the heaviest production schedule in years, having 37 pictures in work and 60 yarns being prepared to start some time within this month.

Paramount heads the list with six before the cameras and seven in the story workshop.

Twentieth-Fox has four shooting and eight being readied.

Four are in production at Radio, with a half dozen in preparation.

Warners is next, with two in work and nine to go.

Six are shooting at Metro, with three nearing the production tape.

Republic has two under the klieg, with six in various story stages.

Four are being lensed at Universal, three being prepared.

At Columbia, three are in production, four set to start soon.

United Artists has a single in work, two to go. Pickford-Lasky is starting one, and Pioneer also has one to go this month.

Walter Wanger will start two pix, and Selznick International has one about set to start shooting.

Smaller indies have four in production and five being readied.

$63,000 Fees on Fox, Det.

Detroit, Jan.

Hearing on petition for attorney and receiver fees, totaling $63,000, in the administration of Fox theatre building will be held Friday (10) in Circuit Court. Adjournment from before Xmas was granted when Oscar A. Kaufman, assistant attorney general representing public trust commission, objected that bondholders had not been notified of claims of fees made against receivership.

Elroy O. Jones, of Dykema, Jones & Wheat, attorneys for Union Guardian Trust Co., receiver for property, presented the claims. The receiver, already paid $3,000, is asking $32,200 and the attorneys $30,000. He argued that the fees should be paid because no payment except the $3,000 has been made since the building went into receivership in 1931, and because New York bondholders agreed the sums mentioned were reasonable.

St. L. Film Case (Civil Action) Goes to Trial as Judge Molyneaux Denies Pix Co.'s Motion to Dismiss

St. Louis, Jan.

U. S. Judge Joseph W. Molyneaux, of Minneapolis, sitting in the equity case in which the Department of Justice is seeking an injunction against Warner Bros., RKO, Paramount and affiliated companies from continuing to refuse first run films to the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres (F & M-owned) today (Tuesday) handed down his decision refusing to dismiss the Government's case, after listening to arguments that consumed more than six hours on Monday (6). Appointed to succeed U. S. District Judge George H. Moore, before whom government's anti-trust conspiracy case was tried and which resulted in acquittal for film executives, Judge Molyneaux wasted no time on Monday in getting down to business.

Judge Molyneaux also overruled the defense's motion for an amended petition whereby it hoped to bring into this case a charge that F&M was seeking control of first-run business here. Judge's decision means that the taking of testimony will start Thursday (9) at 10 a. m.

The court held that a verdict of acquittal in the criminal case was merely the findings of a jury in that trial, and that the court was not convinced of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, leaving the Government free to proceed with its injunction case. Abel Cary Thomas, WB exec and general counsel, who was unable, because of illness, to be tried with other defendants in the conspiracy case last November, appeared in court today as a defense witness.

A defense motion for continuance, by former Senator James A. Reed, on grounds that Frederick Wood, counsel for Warner Bros., was ill with influenza in New York and could not reach here until latter part of the week was protested by Russell Hardy, of U. S. Attorney-General Cummings' office, and brushed aside by Judge Molyneaux who announced he would hear motions pending in case. Later he declared he would decide whether to hear testimony of minor witnesses pending Wood's arrival.

Motion for dismissal was based on contention that issues in injunction case were definitely determined when jury in Judge Moore's court found defendants not guilty.

Reed Again

Reed, heading six defence attorneys, deferred to answer in case filed previously by Warner Bros., in which it was charged that operators of five of St. Louis' six first-run film houses had combined against defendant companies to control the business here. This fact, he said, justified defendants in any acts they performed. He denied, however, any conspiracy by defendants and quoted rulings that a judgment in a criminal case is conclusive in a civil case.

'Had defendants been convicted in the criminal case,' Reed declared, 'they would not have been allowed to file answers in this civil case. The same rule is binding upon the Government since the defendants were acquitted.' Other defense attorneys argued along the same line.

Hardy and Walter Rice, who handled the famed NRA poultry case for the Government in New York, headed a battery of six government attorneys, and all argued against the motions. Thirty government witnesses are on hand. Harry Arthur and Jack Partington planed here Saturday (4). Marco and Fanchon Wolfe arrived here by train from Los Angeles on Sunday (5).

U DROPS 30 IN PROD. SLOW-UP

ollywood, Jan.

roduction axe fell on 30 employees at Universal Saturday (4), reason given studio wants to slow up until the purchase deal with Charles R. Rogers-J. Cheever Cowdin (Standard Capital Corp.) is settled Feb. 1.

Carl Laemmle, who was due to go east last weekend, has deferred his trek until advised of the status of the deal. Option holders still are working on financial arrangements.

Studio canned two pix last week—'Dangerous Waters' and 'Don't Get Personal' (James Dunn - Sally Eilers). Pictures shooting are 'Sutter's Gold,' 'Show Boat' and 'Love Before reakfast.' 'Dracula's Daughter' is being readied for start within two weeks.

However, there's doubt whether 'Dracula's Daughter' will be produced at this time, in view of the fact that Edward A. Sutherland on Saturday (4) pulled out of the directorial spot. David O. Selznick released yarn to Universal, with understanding that film would be made by certain date, but final extension ends Jan. 25. Carl Laemmle, Jr., recently turned over production supervision to E. M. Asher. Sutherland has two offers, one from 20th-Fox.

U had 705 extras working Saturday (4) in four pix, more than had been on the lot at one time since studio did 'All Quiet on the Western Front.'

SCHAEFER HELD IN U.S. BY ST. L.'S 2D TRIAL

Paramount, and not the prosecution in the Government case at St. Louis against Warner Bros, Paramount, RKO and individuals, has served a subpoena on George J. Schaefer. The company handed the former Par vice president the summons issued in its behalf on Monday (6) after Schaefer had made arrangements to sail for Europe. He had a reservation to pull out today (Wed.) for London.

In serving Schaefer, Paramount, as a defendant in the resumed St. Louis trial, believes it may need his testimony. As result of this development, Schaefer is planning to vacation in Florida instead of Europe and will maintain hi self on call from there if Par wants him to take the stand. His European plans were merely for vacation and to visit relatives on the other side.

Schaefer testified in St. Louis at the first trial but was not subpoenaed by the Government on reopening of the case. It was resumed Monday (6) and many individuals were summoned, including, in Par, John E. Otterson, Austin C. Keough and Neil F. Agnew.

Otterson was going to St. Louis Saturday afternoon (4) but by arrangement will be on call for testimony if and when his presence

WB-ASCAP TANGLE HALTS AIR PLUGS

Warner Bros. Music Copyright Control of 'Showboat' (U), 'Anything Goes' (Par), 'Rose-Marie' (MG), Balks Network Radio Ballyhoo

WB'S STANCE

Efforts of United Artists last week to obtain a release of the 'Strike Me Pink' score from Warner Bros. proved of no avail. UA wants the picture's tunes transferred to some other publishing source so that Eddie Cantor, the star of the film, may be able to use them on his own program over Columbia. Also to allow for general air exploitation of the production.

Warner has also rejected similar release bids made by Paramount, Metro and Universal. With the former company it's the 'Anything Goes' (Cole Porter) score, also controlled by WB through the Harms, Inc., catalog, while Universal seeks to be free to get network plugs for the score of its 'Showboat' (Kern-Hammerstein 2d) which it currently has in production. Likewise tied up by the Harms catalog are the songs in Metro's forthcoming 'Rose-Marie' (Frimi) version.

In the cases of the Goldwyn and Metro films offers of lump sum payments have accompanied the release requests, but Warners holds that the producers involved have nothing to worry about since the scores will get ample play over the local outlets which have taken out WB licenses and that in the end this local exploitation may prove more valuable to the films than the overplaying they would receive over the networks.

Webs Reverse Selves

CBS and NBC yesterday (Tuesday) reversed themselves on the attitude they had taken against all music published by the Warner group and announced that the 'Scandals' (Geo. White) and Jumbo' (Billy Rose) scores (both legits), and 'I Dream too Much' (RKO) music would be permitted to be aired over their hookups. WB had at no time broached any objection to the use of these scores on the ground that the small performing rights were not owned by them. As producers of 'Scandals' and 'Jumbo,' White and Rose, respectively, retained the small rights to the scores, while the 'Dream' tunes are controlled by Max Dreyfus personally.

CBS specifically also announced that an examination of the Victor Herbert music indicated that the 'great majority' of the composer's works were not controlled by Warner but by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and that these scores would also shortly be released for network airing.

Par Still Working Out Theatre Pard Deals with Hoblitzelle-O'D. And Blank; Require Modifications

Jeeves, My Tub

A former dominant figure in the film industry is reported preparing bankruptcy papers in his own behalf.

BRISKIN'S RKO SCENARIO O.O.

ollywood, Jan. 7.

Radio's new production schedule is being tied up three weeks while Sam Briski okays scripts being readied. New production head called in all yarns, figuring to start at the source to determine quality of stories as he is held responsible for the finished product.

Likelihood that several yarns will be shelved, with new material substituted.

Sam Briskin contemplates no exec changes at Radio, although he is negotiating with two producers to join the outfit to handle Class A pix. He will take up option on contract of Pandro S. Berman for another year, starting in March, and after the new producers join the studio, Briskin will allocate pix that the newcomers, Berman and others will handle on the season's sked.

Lou Lusty, who was Briskin's executive assistant at Columbia, has gone over to Radio in a similar capacity.

HY DAAB NEW AD-PUB HEAD OF COLUMBIA PIX

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Hy Daab leaves here today (Tuesday) for New York to succeed Bruce Gallup in charge of publicity and advertising for Columbia Pictures. Daab gets into N. Y. on Saturday.

Daab, since resigning from RKO-Radio Pictures some years ago as pub and ad head, has been on the Coast, confining himself to writing mostly. He only joined Columbia's studio exploitation division a month ago.

HILLES SOLE PAR TRUSTEE

Charles D. Hilles is now sole trustee on Par reorganization matters which may be still under court supervision as a bankruptcy hangover. Eugene W. Leake, other trustee, resigned effective Monday (6).

Leake's final fee for services are deferred until accounting is had for other trustees.

Paramount is still taken up with solutions for the Hoblitzelle-O'Donnell partnership for Texas, and the A. H. Blank deal for Southern Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska. The idea apparently is to work out an amicable adjustment between parties whereby the existing manpower and properties can be kept intact for operation of the theatres involved without impairing Par's own financial interest in the circuits.

While there seems to be an inclination on the part of the company to continue the existing arrangements, it is felt that this can be accomplished with modifications only. Such modifications apparently are such that would provide Par itself with a voice as to declaration of dividends.

During the past week it was reported that Par had okayed the Hoblitzelle - O'Donnell partnership and the Blank deals, as is, and also that the company's higher-ups later reconsidered. The expiration period for the option extension on the Hoblitzelle-O'Donnell partnership is understood to be at hand, but another extension is quite likely in order to permit for further negotiation.

To take up the repurchase option on the Hoblitzelle-O'Donnell theatres, including the old Interstate, and now aggregating around 80 houses, would require around $2,500,000 or upwards. The partnership is handed as capable of earning around $1,000,000 net yearly.

Par's Original Basis

Like other partnerships which were created during Par's bankruptcy period, Par owns the mortgage bonds on same and divvies the stock interest 50-50 with the partners, who have provided a certain amount of working capital for their 50% stock equity. The repurchase option clause in such agreements are in favor of Paramount, and under certain specified conditions, Par could reclaim, through certain payments, full control of the theatres in these partnerships.

The partnerships arranged during

Downtown Sees a Balanced Par Acct. For 1935 After Interest Charges

Wall Street is hopeful that Paramount will show a balanced account after interest charges for 1935. There are some who are speculating even on a slight profit after interest charges for the company in that period. These optimistic views are accountable to the larger volume of cash income which the company is stated to have received during the last quarter of 1935.

Opinion is that cash received from Par theatre affiliates during the last quarter of 1935 may have aggregated around $1,000,000 or more.

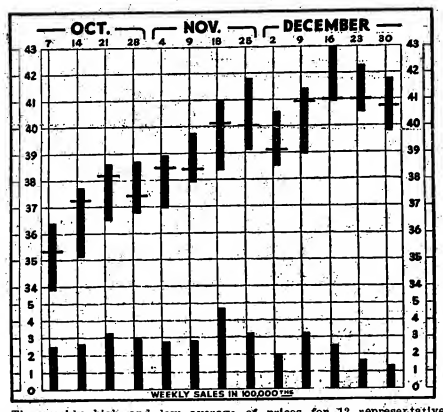
Other su s have been added to Par's balance through amounts received from certain liquidated subsidiaries which were wholly owned by the parent company, according to downtown opinion. Such cash, it is figured, could amount to more than $700,000.

Whether the company will meet interest due on the outstanding first preferred stock is something about which there is no official comment. But that the firm will have the cash with which to meet such interest, now, is fairly well believed.

Par's interest requirements for the year is estimated roughly at around $3,600,000.

Amusement Group Averages

(4th Quarter, '35)



The weekly high and low average of prices for 12 representative amusement stocks on the N. Y. Stock and Curb exchanges is indicated by the vertical bars in the upper part of above chart. Closing prices for group each week are shown by means of short crossbar. Lower part of chart depicts trend in volume weekly.

Outstanding feature of this quarter (October, November and December) was fashion in which the group pressed consistently upwards until a new high for more than two years was registered at 43 in week ended Dec. 16. After this peak was reached, trend for remainder of month was to lower levels. Biggest week was that of Nov. 18, when volume reached 462,400 shares. Lowest point recorded in this quarter was in week ending Oct. 7 when averages slipped to 33⅞.

After pushing forward to new high marks for seven successive weeks, the group dipped sharply in week ending on Dec. 2, thereby following trend of whole stock market. Volume slipped to lowest point in week ended on Dec. 30, with close on that date at 40¾. Only 135,200 shares changed hands in that abbreviated week of trading.

5 Amus. Issues Hit New Tops in Traditional New Year Market Rise

IKE WEAR

Bulk of market joined the advance of food, packing and other issues benefiting by AAA ruling in yesterday's (Tues.) stock market as transactions held to a 3,000,000 pace. Amusements joined in advance. Technicolor jumped 2 points to 20; Columbia Plx pfd. climbed 1 point to 49; Radio B shot up 2¼ points to 87¾; Eastman Kodak hit 160½, gain of 1⅛; General Electric advanced 1⅞ to 39½; Paramount 1st pfd. hit 81½, an advance of 1 point and Westinghouse climbed into century class, first time in several years, by getting to 100¼. Last-named issue was up 3¾ at close, 99½.

Lesser gains were scored by Paramount common and second preferred, Radio common (which closed at 13), Warner Bros. common, and both 20th-Fox issues. Bonds were steady, sole exception being RKO 6s, which fell back 2¼ points.

Following precedent established in a majority of last 25 years, stock prices pushed forward in first week of 1936. After a sloppy close on final days of 1935, the market reversed its recent downward trend and rallied sharply.

Amusements followed general trend, with Amusement Group nearly touching previous peak for more than two years at 42⅞, as measured by averages for 12 representative issues. Despite some early weakness and tendency to sell near close Monday (6), averages for the group wound up at 41¾. This represented a gain of 0.718 of a point.

This advance was comparatively as favorable as the advance by industrials. Dow-Jones industrial averages closed at 143.11, an advance of about 3 points on the week.

Losses were an exception in the amusement list at the blow-off. In fact, the upswing Friday (3) swept three amusement stocks and two bonds to new 1935-36 highs. American Seating shot forward about 4 points in Friday's trading to hang up a new top at 24¼. At close, it was up 2¾ points on week. Warner Bros. common edged up to new peak at 10½, but slipped to 10 on Monday, for 50c. gain on week. Preferred issue pushed up to 52¼, but later profit-taking left it un-

'MILKY WAY,' FINISHED, HAD A ROUGH ROAD

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Norman McLeod rought in 'Milky Way' today (Tuesday) after seven months' production. Harold Lloyd, starrer, has been held up by illness of both directors, Leo McCarey and Ray McCarey, and also Adolphe Menjou.

Yarn was changed midway to eliminate Menjou at finish due to inability to build up star to physical proportions of early sequences.

Green Directs 'Princess'

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Alfred E. Green will direct 'The Cream Princess,' co-starring Kay Francis and George Brent at Warners.

Production starts within 10 days.

METRO SETS 'FEVER'

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Metro's 'Petticoat Fever' will co-star Robert Montgomery and Myrna Loy. George Fitzmaurice directs.

An ad in a Harlem (N.Y.) daily heralding Louise Beaver's 'Imitation of Life' (U) mentions that 'Fredi Washington and Claudette Colbert have supporting roles.'

Miss Washington is likewise a Harlem local.

39 OF WARNERS 60 COMPLETED

Hollywood.

Warners has 37 stories in the mill to complete its quota of 60 pix on the 1935-36 sked. Studio has completed 39, with nine more in production. Twelve will be selected from the 37 yarns to fill the program.

Remaining 25 will be carried over to next season's crop. Titles of new yarns lined up are 'Over the Wall,' three untitled westerns, 'Invitation to a Murder,' 'Angel of Mercy,' 'Nowhere,' 'The Cream Princess,' 'God's Country and the Woman,' 'I Married a Doctor,' 'Green Light,' 'Stage Struck,' 'Lovely Lady,' 'Section 213,' 'Three Men on a Horse,' 'Charge of the Light Brigade,' 'Legionnaire,' 'Sit .' 'Murder in Sing Sing,' 'The Wizard of St. Germaine,' 'You Have to Learn Sometime,' 'Let's Pretend,' 'Lucky Me,' 'San Quentin,' 'Frenchy,' 'Trial of Dr. Beamish,' 'Glit Edge Blondes,' 'Skipper of the Ispahan,' 'Haircut,' 'Case of the Velvet Claws,' 'Money Man,' 'Marry the Girl,' 'Lady in Waiting,' 'LaFitte, the Pirate'; 'Blood of China,' 'Public Enemy's Wife' and 'Bullets or Ballots.'

Bus Berkeley Pays $95,000 Over Crash; 2d Trial Feb. 24

Los Angeles, Jan. 7.

Busby Berkeley paid $95,000 to settle seven damage suits against him, outcome of traffic crash in Santa Monica, in which three persons were killed. Agreement was reached out of court. He had been sued for $250,000 in aggregate.

Jury had been sworn to hear the suits, and first witnesses were called in court when attorneys reached the settlement. Berkeley's attorneys said he did not wish to contest the suit for he wanted to do what he could to aid the bereaved and injured persons, although he did not feel responsible for the accident, which involved his car and two others last Sept. 8. It was said that an insurance company would cover part of the settlement and that Warners, Berkeley's present employer, would advance the remaindcr.

Berkeley was tried on a charge of second degree murder as result of the crash. The jury disagreed, and a second trial on the same charge is skedded for Feb. 24.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

While the Loew, RKO, Skouras and Randforce circuits in Greater New York signed contracts for this year with Local 306, New York Operators, the de luxe houses are planning to go along for the rest of the year on the same basis as before. The de luxers and Local 306 are both satisfied with this situation and neither is asking for signed contracts. Next September, the de luxe houses such as the Music Hall, Paramount, Roxy, Rivoli, etc., will talk a new deal directly with 306 instead of through the so-called managers' committee which, it was claimed, didn't push for as good deals as it might have.

Local 306 has not as yet worked out a scale for independent operators but expects to get around to this shortly. In addition to preferring to wait until Joseph D. Basson, reelected president, and other o cers are inducted into office today (8), it has been hoped that the proposed merger with Empire and Allied could be consummated before an indie scale is effected.

Following the merger, one scale to apply for all independents, whether they have been employing 306 or the rival (Empire-Allied) ops, could be set if agreeable to all sides. Under the merger, it is understood, however, that houses now employing Allied and Empire members will retain them in their posts after they become 306 operators.

Recent reports from St. Louis have credited Fanchon & Marco with starting a new price scrap. But when Harry Arthur was there four weeks ago he called on Fred Wherenberg, president of the MPTOA in eastern Missouri and southern Illinois, to assist him in getting the nabes to hold their matinee prices to 6 p. m, as per an agreement earlier in the season. Most of the nabe houses were extending the matinee tariff to 7:30 p. m., which practice F&M abandoned when it bought the new product and signed to hold matinees to whatever hour the nabes would.

Arthur also appealed to Ben Reingold of Fox, Joe Garrison of Universal, Bill Feldstein of United Artists, and Clarence Hill of Columbia, to advise the nabes they were violating their contracts with the late matinee hour and that unless the hour was returned to its rightful spot Fanchon & Marco would up its matinees to meet the competition. After three weeks F&M raised its change time to 7:30 p. m., whereupon the stories started.

Certain people are getting into the habit of having the same seats reserved at Radio City Music Hall, N. Y., with seats set aside for such steady customers for performances indicated. Hall's mez reserved section gets such a play on certain pictures even at $1.65 a seat, that it is interesting operators of other deluxers who feel that perhaps some fans would patronize their houses more frequently, too, if they knew they could walk in and have seats waiting for them rather than stand in lines. Experience of the Hall has been that frequently a picture which doesn't do a good gross on its total engagement, gets a tremendous play on reserved seats from the carriage trade. One such picture was 'The Scoundrel.'

New electron tube which may enable man to see through the dark and prove a great aid to airplane pilots regarding fog was demonstrated in St. Louis last week by Dr. V. K. Zworykin and Dr. George A. Morton, both from Radio Corporation of America laboratories. Demonstration took place at a session of the American Association for Advancement of Science.

Possible use of the new discovery for motion pictures was revealed in first test. Films projected, or focused, on the tube were converted from light rays into electrons. After electrons had passed through the tube, they reproduced the pictures in enlarged form on a screen.

Charging that the French scientist, Louis Pasteur, practiced cruelty on animals during his experiments in developing anti-rabies serum, antivivisectionist crowd is yelping at Warners and Paul Muni for glorifying his life in the picture, 'The Story of Louis Pasteur.'

Criticism is not directed at anything shown in the film, but merely on the ground that Pasteur should not have been made a hero. Research by Warners writers, Pierre Collings and Sheridan Gibney, who did the script, and by Muni refutes accusation of cruelty against the scientist in his humanitarian laboratory efforts.

The Baedecker Travel Guide, which circulates among tourists, uses stars in rating places of interest to the traveler. It has been using this star system for 14 years and in all that time has given four stars less than a half dozen times, this rating going for such sights as Grand Canyon, Niagara Falls, Lookout Mountain, etc. N. Y. Daily News, tab, which brought star ratings to picture reviews, uses four stars, also, as its top value guide.

Universal contradicts reports that Bill Tilden, the tennis champ, walked out on his contract to appear in 'The Amateur Racket.' Tilden quit the Coast to go east for his pro tennis tour, but the picture is not slated until March 1.

News dispatches said Tilden became 'incensed' at the picture's delay, but execs said script was only finished about time Tilden had to scurry eastward.

Twentieth-Fox, unable to get hotel rooms, had to accommodate 200 members of the 'Under Two Flags' company in tents and private homes when the outfit went on location at Palm Springs. About 2,000 will make the next location trek to Yuma, Ariz.

Same company is having a tough time lining up Chinese cast for 'Charlie Chan at the Circus.' Most of Orientals are tied up in Metro's 'Good Earth.'

Strong sentiment among exhibitors, large and small, in favor of the 2,000-foot reels, is revealed to several of the major distributors who have made a check of sentiment in the industry. Larger spools are scheduled to be placed in use early this summer. Expense of making change-over at the exchanges throughout the U. S. still remains a source of considerable worry to several of the bigger distributing companies.

New sound recording unit recently invented in Vienna has been sent to Karl Freund, Metro director and cameraman on the Coast. System uses entirely different method than present photographed sound track, as recording is accomplished through deposits of iron dust on track for catching sound.

Device has been turned over to Douglas Shearer and Metro sound engineers for research and testing.

Part of the deal under which Herbert J. Yates, head of Consolidated Film Industries, takes over 100% control of Republic, is that W. Ray Johnston, president of Repub, retires from the picture business for five years. Johnston stays another year with Republic under the agreement reached. Understood he will probably go into some other business after stepping out of Rep.

Because American and British film producers are profiting from past experience and making 'better pictures,' censorship rejections at the hands of Canada's eight censor boards during 1935 were down approximately 66⅔% over the '34 figure, according to a survey just completed by Colonel John A. Cooper, president, Motion Picture Distributors & Exhibitors of Canada.

SHOW BIZ BILLS UP AGAIN

Publix-Singer Mpls. Feud Over Stage Show Policies; Dailies' War

Minneapolis, Jan. 7.

New year starts here with some strong animosities and plenty of indications that a good old theatre war and several other fights are brewing. After starting the current season in apparent accord, Publix and Singer circuits at this moment are on the outs.

Publix reputedly took umbrage because the Orpheum, the local Singer house, spotted in a Bowes short during the week that the Bowes amateur unit played the Minnesota and then, on the week before Christmas, advertised that patrons attending the last evening showing of 'In Person' on the final day would be privileged to remain and witness a preview of 'If You Could Only Cook.' It was claimed this constituted double featuring in violation of an unwritten agreement tabooing dual bills.

Now Publix has booked in two name stage hands at the Minnesota directly ahead of Wayne King at the Orpheum. King engagement had been announced by the Orpheum for several months, for week of Jan. 31. At the eleventh hour, it's alleged Publix spotted Ina Ray Hutton and her band the week of Jan. 17 and Waring's Pennsylvanians week of Jan. 24 into the Minnesota. The Singer bunch is plenty riled.

Up to New Year's week, working under an unwritten agreement, Publix theatres and the Singer house had no conflicting stage shows and maintained a minimum top of 55c. for stage shows. On New Year's week, however, the Publix Minnesota and the Singer Orpheum both had flesh-and-blood and now it looks as though the war is on.

Hard feeling exists, too, between the Journal and Tribune over 'best picture' contests. For the past several years the Journal has conducted such a contest for readers. In December, a few weeks in advance of the time when the Journal always announces its contest, the Tribune sprang one along almost identical lines. Despite the fact that the Tribune this time got the jump, the Journal also went through, as usual, with its contest. Both newspapers are offering theatre passes as prizes.

STILL HUDDLING ON VOLUNTARY FILM CODE

Representatives of various major producing-distributing companies in the last few weeks have been conferring individually with Major George Berry, NRA official designated to work out some form of voluntary code enforcement in the industry, at Washington. Main confab which Berry had arranged fizzled when different industry spokesmen differed drastically with the former NRA executive. No definite action was taken by picture officials after these later conferences.

It was pointed out at these and other conferences that legal matters would come under the Federal Trade Commission surveillance and other subjects would be handled by the Dept. of Commerce under the new skeletonized NRA set-up. W. P. Farnsworth, who formerly had charge of the Amusement Code administration, has had his scope of activities enlarged to include banking and insurance business.

8 N. Y. INDIES SUE 306 OPS. FOR $650,000

Suits for damages aggregating $650,000 have been brought in the N.Y. Supreme Court by the owners of eight independent moving picture theatres against Local 306, Moving Picture Machine Operators' Union. The owners charge the local has injured their business to that extent by picketing, coercion and intimidation. The theatres are located in Manhattan, Brooklyn and Queens.

In the complaint the eight members of the Independent Theatre Owners' Association, Inc., accuse Joseph Basson, individually and as president of the local, with causing them trouble since Jan. 1, 1934, when the owners refused to accede to demands that they employ local members and also to pay exorbitant sums to supply operators.

It is also charged that the local displayed false and misleading signs in front of the theatres; that they threw stench bombs into the houses during the showing of pictures and caused riots necessitating in the calling of police protection.

The filing of the eight individual actions became known Tuesday (31) when Justice Bernard L. Shientag denied a motion made by the plaintiffs to consolidate the suits. The Court suggested the plaintiffs might withdraw the original actions and file one general complaint. It was indicated this suggestion would be followed.

In the actions, damages of $100,000 each are asked by the Globe theatre, Fifth avenue and 15th street, Brooklyn, and the Sanders theatre, Prospect Park West and 14th street, Brooklyn.

The others, each asking $75,000, are the Colony, Jackson Heights, Queens; Park, Columbus Circle; Liberty, 234 West 42nd street; Times Square theatre, 219 West 42nd street; Central, 1559 Broadway, and the Globe, Broadway and 47th street.

Independent Theatre Owners' Association has a membership of 300. Since the break with the local, the complaining owners claim, the local has used intimidation, coercion and terrorism in attempting to force the owners to employ its members. The local, among its demands, has insisted the plaintiffs employ two of its members to man each projection booth. Instead of meeting the local's demands, the owners have been employing members of a rival union, the Allied Motion Picture Operators' Union, and, the plaintiffs declare, they have been paying higher wages than Local 306 demands.

CARRYOVERS FROM CONGRESS OF 1935

Lots of Business, but Short Session Hoped for—Duffy Bill Most Likely to Pass

MASS OF STATUTES

Washington, Jan. 7.

Hoping for a short session but facing a terrifying pile of work and many red-hot issues, Congress returned to work Friday (3) to hear from President Roosevelt that the New Deal has made marked progress and that conditions are steadily improving.

Giving few cues about his legislative desires, the President told the legislators in his annual message that, judging from present outlook, no new taxation will be necessary this year and that outlays for unemployment relief can be tapered off because of booming business.

Chief threats to industrial freedom from legislative difficulties are insistence of the American Federation of Labor on the O'Mahoney bill requiring Federal licenses for all individuals engaged in interstate commerce and the Black-Connery measure limiting the work week to 30 hours. The Administration, from all appearances, has abandoned the last vestige of hope of resuscitating the dead NRA, but A.F.L. pressure for new business control legislation is increasing.

Unless President Roosevelt throws his support behind these twin labor proposals, neither the Black-Connery bill nor the O'Mahoney proposition is believed likely to become law.

A new statute requiring Government contractors to observe Federal labor regulations will be pushed and probably will get on the books before the end of the session. This proposition, however, has been extensively modified since last summer and if enacted probably will not cause much trouble.

A mass of bills pertaining to radio, as well as numerous proposals touching on films, are still on the calendars of the two houses, but representatives of the various amusement industries are doubtful that any—save possibly the Duffy copyright law—will make progress.

Copyright Revision

The copyright revision measure, which passed the Senate last year

U. S. Starts 2d Statistical Survey Of Amus. and Broadcasting Industries

Washington, Jan.

Second Governmental effort to compile statistics picturing the economic importance and condition of the amusement and broadcasting industries got under way last week when thousands of enumerators began counting noses for the 1935 census of business.

New survey will cover the same ground as the 1934 quiz but will be more intensive, Census Bureau officials announced, in order that more complete and more informative figures may be obtained. Special effort is planned to remedy deficiencies in the 1934 reports, which were far short in regard to the number of film theatres and the gross box office business and which omitted broadcasting stations in more than half of the states.

Preliminary reports probably will not be available for at least six months, while corrected final figures are not due until near the end of the year. The field work, being supervised by trained census employees in charge of white-collar workers from relief rolls, probably will be cleaned up inside of three months.

Trendle's 13th Theatre

Detroit, Jan. 7.

Continuing expansion policies, United Detroit Theatres Corp. has added two more houses to its chain with acquisition of the Regent and the Rosedale, nabes. George W. Trendle (UD) runs four big houses downtown. With completion of a new 1,500-seater on northwest side, group's total will be raised to 13.

The Regent, a 2,300-seater, and the Rosedale, 1,000 capacity, were originally opened by the late William Klatt and since his death operated by Mrs. Ida Klatt.

J. L. M. Schwartz and Vincent Sullivan, both on executive staff of Fisher theatre for several years, were named this week manager and assistant manager, respectively, of the Regent, 2,300-seater nabe, acquired last week by United Detroit Theatres chain which now has 13 houses, including four downtown.

Vernelle V. Ward appointed manager of the Rosedale, 1,000-seat nabe.

Major Studios Swing to Closed Shop, No Trouble; Browne on Coast was inaugurated in the major studios Thursday (2) for crafts coming under jurisdiction of the five International unions signatory to the basic studio agreement.

Switchover from open shop basis within the gates of the studios was accomplished without difficulty, and although each worker of the various affiliated locals was supposed to carry a union card, labor representatives did not make this condition mandatory at the start, and will not attempt to flag any worker without credentials for a few weeks.

Smoothness of the change, besides co-operative attitude of both the studio o cials and union representatives, proved a surprise to many observes who expected trouble to arise at launching of the proposition within the studios.

On the same day (2), the International Alliance Theatrical Stage Employees returned to the basic studio agreement, after being out since the strike in 1933. Four studio locals of the IA regain recognition of the producers, cameramen (outside of firsts), operators, laboratory workers, and local 37, which includes grips, stage carpenters, props and lamp operators.

President George Browne of the IATSE is on the ground to see that everything functions smoothly, so far as his locals are concerned. Abe Muir, International V. p. of the carpenters' union, is also in town to supervise swing of his locals to closed shop basis.

Nat'l Ad Campaign On RKO's 'Dream' Riles Hub Dailies

Boston,

RKO picture department has thrown Charles W. Koerner, New England division chief, into a local muddle with the Hub newspapers by allocation of advertising of 'Dream Too Much.' The Herald-Traveler got the juiciest appropriation, Inc., specifically 4,800 lines, inaugurated with a double-truck in the Sunday Herald Dec. 29, an unprecedented smash here in show biz advertising, and the other Hub papers which fared not so well squawked.

These protested to Koerner, whose hands are tied and who could only fry on the local griddle. He is in New York this week, ostensibly to show the RKO picture ad department the evidence of the turmoil stirred up in Beantown.

Post allotted a two-paragraph review to the Lily Pons pic; and Sunday (5) gave each RKO house a five-line reader.

KINCEY-WILBY STARTS IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM

Kincey-Wilby (North Carolina) string of theatres is laying plans to improve houses and for possibly some new sites for building. There has been some scattered construction projects determined upon by K-W within the past six months.

The North Carolina Theatres, Inc., the N. C. group in which Kincey-Wilby and Paramount are partners, declared a dividend a couple of weeks ago at a meeting in Atlanta.

PIX EXPECT TO LICK N.Y.C.'S 2% SALES TAX

Although exhibitors are complaining in advance, following decision by distributors to pass on a 2% New York City sales tax on film 'rental' to them, distributor attorneys are confident they can defeat assessment of the tax if forced by the city.

Following argument of a test case brought by the City of N. Y. against United Artists, the city held that the tax on film rentals was to be levied but before anyone starts paying the tax the matter will be taken up by a board of review between now and Jan. 20. Three people, all connected with the NYC sales tax department, will constitute this board.

If the decision is against the distributors, they will have to start paying the tax but, it is promised, will go into the Appellate Division in that event on a writ of certiorari. Defendants have 30 days after the board's decision on the tax in which to appeal to the Appellate Court.

Rafferty, Driscoll & O'Brien, represent United Artists in the test case brought by the city more than six months ago and delayed until now.

'Melody' Lingers On

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Scripting of Metro's 'Broadway Melody of 1937' has been sidetracked temporarily.

Sid Silvers and Jack McGowan, writing the yarn, are collaring with Cole Porter on the studio's revue based on 'As Thousands Cheer.'

RKO SALES REPS HUDDLE

RKO traveling sales representatives held a powwow on distribution of RKO product at the home office over the weekend with A. A. Schubart, manager of the contract department; J. P. Skelly, in charge of branch operations, and Mike Poller, head of the playdate department.

Road reps out of the home office who attended were William McShea, Elmer Sedin, Ned Clarke, Emmett Chasman, Ray O'Brien, J. J. Schnitzer and R. E. Helms.

Biggest New Year Biz Gives L. A. 1st Runs $130,000; Grid, Roses Pic Aids Par to $32,000; 'Blood' 31G

Los Angeles, Jan. .
(Best xploitati Chinese-State)

New year wns inducted plenty okay with the local group of first run houses having the best business in their history for comparative stanza; combined e will run around $130,000.

All of the houses with the exception of the Four Star had special new year openings as well as scale tilting; the Paramount went to a $1.65 top for its special show and had a preview of the current pic besides a stage show. Orpheum charged a similar price with a special stage show; State got $1.10 top for a straight pic show and other houses hopped from 55 to 83c for the night.

Paramount is leader of the pack on the week and will wind off with around $32,000, which figure was considerably speeded through addition to the program of the Stanford-Southern Methodist football game Friday (3); shots not distributed by newsreels this year, which helps here.

Warner houses clipped over the $31,000 mark with 'Captain Blood' which stays at the Hollywood and Downtown after a big initial start. Chinese and State will do close to a total of $25,000 with 'King of Burlesque,' while the Lily Pons opus, 'I Dream Too Much,' at the Pantages and RKO shows promise of getting a combined $21,000.

Top exploitation honors went to the State and Chinese for merchandising 'King of Burlesque.' Houses used transcriptions of song numbers on nine local stations; gave away 10,000 festive hats at each theatre; used street trailers having phonograph records playing the tunes.

Estimates for This Week

Chinese (Grauman) (2,028; 30-40-55)—'Burlesque' (20th). Off to a corking start New Year's eve and settled down to fairly good pace with take around $12,100 for seven and a half day's run. Last week, 'Littlest Rebel' (20th). For the six and a half day jaunt did very good with an even $12,500.

Downtown (WB) (1,800; 30-35-40)—'Captain Blood' (WB). Nothing will stop this from hitting a great $15,500 on the first stanza. Last week, 'Dangerous' (WB). Came through a little short of calculation to a $5,200 finale.

Four Star (Fox) (900; 30-35)—'Mister Hobo' (G-) (2nd week). Holding up nicely and, aided by holidays, will wind up with around $3,800, profit. Last week; much bigger than figured to a windup of around $5,200.

Hollywood (WB) (2,756; 30-35-40-55)—'Captain Blood' (WB). A whale of an attraction for the house which, aided by New Year's eve take, brings it to the $16,000 mark on first week. Last week, 'Dangerous' (WB). Slowed up last two days of run but good with an even $6,100.

Orpheum (Bdwy) (2,270; 25-30-35-40)—'Without Regret' (Par) and vaudeville. Starting off with a $1.65 special New Year's eve show, then adding Leo Carillo to the stage contingent; will hit a big $9,500 on the week. Last week, 'Paddy O'Day' (20th) and vaude, not so forte; but profitable at a $6,000 count.

Pantages (Pan) (2,700; 25-35-40)—'I Dream' (RKO). Pan is filling again, for this Pons opus is sure to hit around the $11,000 mark, great. Last week, 'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO). Not up to anticipated take, finishing with around $6,300.

Paramount (Partmar) (3,595; 30-40-55)—'Collegiate' (Par) and stage show. Biggest week in a long time and a good way to induct the new year. Bill augmented by exclusives of Pasadena Tournament of Roses parade and Stanford-SMU game. Sure to draw a swell $32,000. Last week, 'Mary Burns, Fugitive' (Par) and stage show, came through better than expected to a $23,700 windup, marvelous.

RKO (2,950; 25-35-40-55)—'I Dream' (RKO). Lily Pons pic here not as strong as in Hollywood, but will windup with nice profit at $10,000. Last week, 'Scarlett' (RKO). Disappointing at $5,000.

State (Loew-Fox) (2,024; 30-40-55)—'King of Burlesque' (20th). Coming through in nice style and should provide neat profit with a $12,500 draw. Last week, 'Rebel' (20th). Plenty oke with a windup that tallied $14,700.

United Artists (Fox-UA) (2,100; 30-40-55)—'Rebel' (20th). Moved over from the State and getting all the kids on vacation so sure to draw more than double the regular weekly trade in getting around $7,000. Last week, 'Mutiny' (MG). Fourth week, which established a house run record, proved great at $5,200.

(Best Exploitation: Midland)

All first runs, except the Tower, got away on the current week New Year's eve, with the roughest, wildest, gayest crowd on the street the town has ever seen. The Newman and Mainstreet opened with their new shows at 7.30 and were soon capacity; the Mainstreet changing its policy for the evening, only, to reserved seats, for two performances, at $1.10 top.

Loew's Midland held 'Two Cities' until 11 o'clock and then cleared the house for the start of 'Riff Raff.' No reservations were made, but admission tickets had been sold in advance and the street in front of the house was jammed; in fact a near riot as street cars were stalled, motor cars blockaded, and a surging mass of people trying to reach the box office. Police and theatre attachees were helpless. Had the house opened with its new show early two capacity crowds would have been handled instead of the one for 'Riff Raff. The celebrators did not want the other show.

With Benny Meroff's revue added to 'Sylvia Scarlett,' the Mainstreet is going strong and with its New Year's start will hang up a nice gross. At the Newman, 'Rose of the Rancho' is also doing nicely, helped a lot by this being Gladys Swarthout's home town. She made a personal appearance between trains Sunday evening.

The Uptown will have one of its best weeks for months with 'King of Burlesque,' being held for 10 days.

The Tower held to its regular schedule as to opening last week and cleaned up with a special New Year's eve show, which added $1,000 to its regular weeks take.

For 'Riff Raff' Manager McManus of the Midland, fairly plastered the papers with huge ads; used thousands of special heralds which were distributed by $4 chain stores; given sweet tie-ups in department store display ads; had numerous stills of the picture in prominent department store locations, and many radio spot plugs.

Estimates for This Week

Mainstreet (RKO) (3,200-25-35-50)—'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) and Benny Meroff's revue. Going strong, likely to return $16,000, nice. Last week 'Dream Too Much' (RKO), $8,000, pretty good.

Midland (Loew) (4,000; 35-40)—'Riff Raff' (MG). Going steady after a big holiday eve opening and is slated to get $16,500, good. Last week 'Two Cities' (MG) suffered the final night, but turned in a sweet $16,800.

Newman (Par) (1,900; 35-40)—'Rose of Rancho (Par). Could not handle the customers New Year's eve which has the house on the way for around $10,000, big. Last week 'Bride Comes Home' (Par), six and a half days, $6,000, OK.

Tower (2,200; 25-35)—'Could Only Cook' (Col) and stage show. Many like flesh at popular prices; expects close to $8,000, good. Last week 'Remember Last Night' (U) with extra New Year's show $8,800, fine.

Uptown (Fox) (2,040; 25-40)—'King of Burlesque' (Fox) and 'Navy Wife' (20th), dual. Headed for a swell $10,000 for 10-day run. Last week 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) four days, $4,700, perfect.

Carl Freed-'No Mercy,' $8,000; 'Scarlett' 6G, Harlow $6,800, Indpls.

Indianapol , Jan. 7.
(Best Exploitation: Lyric)

'Show Them No Mercy,' aided considerably by a vaude bill featuring Carl Freed and his harmonica band, is setting the pace for the week with a healthy $8,000 at the Lyric. 'Collegiate' will probably touch $7,400 at the Indiana, which is also okay. 'Riff Raff' at Loew's is set to finish with a good $6,800, while 'Scarlett' adds the Circle to the money class with its prospective $5,900. Apollo trails the pack somewhat with a fair $4,500 expected on 'Monte Carlo.' In general, there is an encouraging activity around the downtown box o ces.

A special screening two weeks in advance for 1,000 members of federal, state, county and municipal law enforcement agencies helped exploit 'No Mercy.' Lyric crew also obtained a special radio tieup for several days prior to the invitational preview to select citizens to attend the advance showing. Bold use of the kidnapping angles in all phases of the campaign as well as a comparison of the story to the Weyerhaeuser case helped attract the natives. Outdoor posters, bumper strips, and a special front also featured the campaign as well as extra plugging received by having Freed's harmonica band from the Lyric's vaude bill on several radio programs and special appearance at the local Press Club.

Estimates for This Week

Apollo (Fourth Ave.) (1,100; 25-40)—'Monte Carlo.' (20th). Moderately good at $4,500; Colman popular enough. Last week 'Bright Eyes' (20th) ended up second week with last minute spurt that brought gross to okay $4,000.

Circle (Katz-Feld) (2,600; 25-40)—'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO). Hepburn and Cary Grant splayed up above title, all right at $6,000. Last week 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) very slow at $3,300.

Indiana (Katz-Feld) (3,100; 25-40)—'Collegiate' (Par). Joe Penner equal with Oakie and rest of cast; business okay at $7,400. Last week 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) ended up five day holdover session with $3,000, mild.

Loew's (2,800; 25-40)—'Riff Raff' (MG). Harlow and her brownette hair strongly emphasized; take good at $6,800. Last week "Two Cities' (MG) finished better than it started, good $7,600. Sub-zero weather held down its opening days.

Lyric (Olson) (2,000; 25-30-40)—'No Mercy' (20th) and vaude. Well-exploited, this bill is receiving favorable comment and will register a healthy profit at $8,000. Last week 'Pacific Fleet' (WB) and vaude excellent $9,250.

HEAT AND YULE SLUMP HIT AUSTRALIAN B.O.'S

Sydney, Dec. 14.

Tropical heat and the Yule slump had managers go into a huddle for new fare. Was originally thought that 'Midsummer Night's Dream' (WB) and 'Three Musketeers' (RKO) might last over Yuletide, but such was not to be and these two move out next week.

'Curly Top' (20th) looks like the best bet right now, although 'Escape Me Never' (B.D.) swings into its 12th week and oke.

So-so bills include 'Flying Trapeze' (Par), 'She Gets Her Man' (U), 'Here's to Romance' (20th) (third week), 'Cuckoo in Nest' (G-B), 'Music Is Magic' (20th) and 'Personal Maid's Secret' (WB).

Melbourne, Dec. 15.

Current bills include 'China Seas' (M-G), 'Crusades' (Par), 'Old Kentucky' (20th), 'Into Your Dance' (WB), 'Lamps of Chine' (WB) and 'Heart's Desire' (B.I.P.).

New Zealand, Dec. 14.

Biz is very good here now, with 'The Three Musketeers' (RKO), 'Men Without Names' (Par), 'Last Days of Pompeii' (RKO) 'Murder Man' (M-G) and 'The Glass Key' (Par) current.

'2 Cities' in 2 Hub Spots, $40,000; 'Bride'-Spitalny 27G, 'Pons' 20G

'Riff Raff' and 'Collegiate' Both $13,000, Prov'd'ce

Providence, Jan. 7.

Swell business in town. Exhibitors plenty happy over grand grosses rolling in since holidays. Unusual slant is that every house in town is doing business, in some instances grosses almost treble of normal. Coin is pretty well distributed, and that is something more to talk about considering that grosses are pretty well over $10,000 all around.

Jockeying bills still going on, houses switching to suit whimsies of the natives. Program changing has been so screwy that it is really remarkable grosses have held up as well as they have. Going back to regular openings still seems to be far away. Some stands are playing current bills eight days to bring them back regular openings, but at other stands it's anybody's guess as to what will happen.

Attractions are plenty forte everywhere. Product is the best town has had in months, and the natives are certainly patronizing more than one theatre if the grosses reported here and there are any criterion.

It's a toss-up which house will take first honors, as closely are the grosses linked together. No one seemed to give a hoot for ballyhooing their bills, probably depending upon the holidays to bring the coin up to a respectable mark. Much money spent on newspaper advertising, but as for pepping things up via extraordinary mediums it was taboo.

Shirley Temple's 'Littlest Rebel' is a holdover, moving from Majestic to Fay's. First week's gross reported to be $12,000.

Estimates for This Week

Loew's State (3,200; 15-25-40)—'Riff Raff' (MG). Ordinarily the marquee strength of this picture would soar things skyward, but opposish too great all around; picture in for indef run, with the aid of a bang-up midnight show and holiday gross should wind up close to the $13,000. Last week 'Two Cities' (MG) started strong but slipped a trifle to $14,700, but still big at that.

Strand (Indie) (2,200; 15-25-40)—'Collegiate' (Par). Getting plenty play, midnight show terrific, and this coupled with a steady pace should bring gross close to $13,000 for eight-day run, beautiful. Last week 'Red the Rose' (Par) and 'Spanish Cape Mystery' (Rep) surprised everyone by copping off $7,500 nice.

RKO Albee (2,500; 15-25-40)—'Dream Too Much' (RKO) and 'Red Salute (UA). Early start and nice comment should bring this one close to $12,000 for eight days. House returns to vaudeville policy Thursday. Last week 'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) and 'Baldpate' (RKO) soured plenty for so-so $6,000 gross.

RKO Victory (1,600; 10-15-25)—'Scarlett' (RKO) and 'Baldpate' (RKO). Doing much better here than at sister house only a block away down Main street; pace indicates that house will come close to $3,500 for the week.

Majestic (Fay) (2,200; 15-25-40)—'Capt. Blood' (WB). Should come through with $9,000 for the week, one of the only two houses in town sticking to regular Friday openings, and taking a chance with the public. Last week 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) jammed them in for a nice $12,000 gross, double of what it has been for the last couple of months at this stand.

Fay's (2,200; 15-25-40)—'Rebel' (20th) and vaudeville. Still going strong, second week gross should near $6,500; vaude helping plenty. Last week 'Man of Iron' (WB) and vaude grent at $7,800; New Year's Eve mirnight show with $1 to helping nicely.

Boston, Jan.
(Best Exploitation: Loew)

'Two Cities,' day and date at State and Orph, making the biggest splash here, at $40,000 pace. 'Capt. Blood' on basis of bango-day-date week at Par and Fenway wins a holdover at both spots.

'Bride Comes Home' will ring home about $27,000 at the Met, with aid of Phil Spitalny's orchestra on stage.

'Dream Too Much' not very awake at the Memorial, so $20,000 will have to satisfy. Keith-Boston more hopeful at $26,000 prospects, relying on stage strength.

Plenty of interest in here in battle between Boston Post and Keith publicity office as result of alleged discriminatory planting of $26,000 worth of national ad copy on Pons pic. Post got short end of deal, along with other papers, except Herald-Traveler, and now, RKO story planters are reaping no harvest in Post pages.

Loew office had something to sell on 'Two Cities' and started early on the job. Fed prelim stuff to local papers three weeks in advance and climaxed with a roto strip in Globe, half-page pictorial in Post, and half-page in Transcript book section. Augmented paper splash with good national campaign, radio transcription and song-guessing contest tieup, and broke a precedent by planting a poster in the public library, to supplement ambitious book-mark tie-up.

Estimates for This Week

Met (M&P) (4,200; 35-50-65)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and Phil Spitalny on stage. A cheery combo, indicating strong $27,000. Last week 'Collegiate' (Par) and Dave Apollon on stage zoomed to good $26,000, with aid of New Year's midnite show, at $1.10, and holiday bullishness.

State (Loew) (3,200; 25-35-40-50)—'Two Cities' (MG). Developing into attractive b. o. at $20,000. Women bolstering matinee take. Good possibility of h. o. here and at Orph for six-day week to bring houses back to normal Thursday openings. Last week 'Wilderness' (MG) and 'Only Cook' (MG), dual, held up satisfactorily to $15,000 finish.

Orpheum (Loew) (3,000; 25-35-40-50)—'Two Cities' (MG). A prize package, aiming at $20,000, very good. 'Wilderness' (MG) and 'Could Only Cook' (MG), double, pleased at $16,500.

Keith Memorial (RKO) (2,900; 25-35-50) — 'Dream Too Much' (RKO). Good but not socko, despite tremendous national ad backup. Played four shows New Year's Eve, then ran at moderate pace; indicates $20,000. Last week 'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) and Edward MacHugh, gospel singer in person, collected fair $11,500.

Keith-Boston (RKO) (2,300; 35-50-65)—'Another Face' (RKO) and stage show headed by Jane Froman. Aiming at good $26,000 for eight days, including N. Y. Eve show. 'Devil's Island' (Col) and stage show hit adequate $21,000 last week.

Paramount (M&P) (1,800; 25-35-50)—'Capt. Blood' (WB), single (2d week). Will romp home with about $10,000. Single bills exceedingly rare at this spot, and last week's $13,500, ditto.

Fenway (M&P) (1,600; 25-30-40-50)—'Capt. Blood' (WB), single. Earned a second week, which will hover around $5,000; opening week bullish at $7,200.

Scollay (M&P) (2,700; 25-35-40-50)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th) and 'Stars Over Broadway' (WB), dual. Auger grandiose $8,000, including midnite show. 'Chan's Secret' (20th) and 'Splendor' (UA), dual, moderate $5,000 last week.

Chi Mgs. Panicked by H. O. Mobs; Burns and Allen-'Whipsaw' $45,000; Bowes, 21G; 'Dream' 38G in 10 Days

Chicago, Jan. 7.

(Best Exploitati Palace).

Throw the red ink out of the window. Zooming out of the cellar like a Texas gusher, the grosses are rushing way up with the biggest set of figures seen around this town in the past 12 months.

Trend is back to the loop, after a year of strictly neighborhood show shopping by the Chicago public. With smacko box-office attractions splashed over the marquees, the public is once more loop-conscious, and the downtown sector is getting enough play to keep every house, big and small, happy.

The Balaban & Katz Chicago, flagship of the circuit, which for months has been going along at a $22,000 average, last week suddenly veered into the profit column. With a flash of names, it smashed out a carousing $39,000 and this week will push through to a walloping $45,000 with 'Whipsaw' and a Burns and Allen unit.

Over at the Palace they are up to the neck in shekels, with the money-making 'I Dream Too Much' plus a Ken Murray-Lillian Roth vaude bill grinding the till to the tune of $38,000 for 10 days. At the Oriental it's a Major Bowes unit with a Jane Withers picture on the screen leading the way to $21,000.

John Joseph is the head man on exploitation currently because of the spread in the dailies and on the air for the Palace show.

Estimates for This Week

Apollo (B&K) (1,200; 25-35-55)—'Mutiny on the Bounty' (MG). Back to the loop for its fifth week after four great weeks at the United Artists. Will do around $3,500, fine. 'Mister Hobo' (GB) replaces here tomorrow (Wednesday). Last week 'Midsummer Dream' (WB) returned to the house for further two-a-daying and turned in an oke $7,800 for the repeat date.

Chicago (B&K) (4,000; 35-55-75)—'Whipsaw' (MG) and a smash Burns and Allen unit. Doing five and six shows daily. Heading for mighty $45,000, biggest take in months. Last week 'Frisco Kid' (WB) zoomed to $39,000 on the New Year's Eve session, powerful.

Garrick (B&K) (900; 25-35-55)—'Monte Carlo' (20th). Ronald Colman flicker will make it two fine weeks, finishing to a good $4,000 for the second session. Last week was great at $8,900. 'Frisco Kid' (WB) slated to replace tomorrow (Wednesday) for additional looping.

Oriental (B&K) (3,290; 25-35-40)—'This Is Life' (20th) and Major Bowes unit on stage. House riding into the big coin figures again with a sturdy $21,000, which means steady sidewalk holdouts. Last week, New Year's prices jacked 'One Way Ticket' (Col) to $27,600.

Palace (RKO) (2,500; 35-55-65)—'Dream Too Much' (RKO) and vaude. Started out on New Year's Eve with two shows at $2.20 for reserved seats, which meant a $9,000 take there, and going on into a 10-day ride which will bring a splendid $38,000 into the till. Last week 'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) managed a neat $21,800 between Xmas and New Year's.

Roosevelt (B&K) (1,500; 35-45-65)—'Rose of Rancho' (Par) will make it 10 days from Dec. 31 and closing on Saturday (11) when 'Night at Opera' (MG) arrives. Picture got a play only on New Year's Eve, with the entire ride not counting to more than $11,000, flabby. Last week 'Collegiate' (Par) with 'Little America' (Par) on the same weak level for 10 days, garnered around $11,300.

State-Lake (Jones) (2,700; 20-25-30-35-40)—'Last Night' (U) and vaude. House is on the right side by a wide margin currently at $12,000. Last week 'Music is Magic' (20th) rose with the entire loop boom to $16,700, terrific.

United Artists (B&K-UA) (1,700; 35-45-65)—'Splendor' (UA). Will make it two weeks and deeamp tomorrow (Wednesday) to make room for 'Captain Blood' (WB). Not a money flicker, heading to so-so $10,000 for its final week after a fairish $11,200 on initial session.

B'ham Biz Perks

Birmingham, Jan. 7.

Another week of splits, brought in to get back to the original opening dates before the holidays.

Business getting back to normal, too, after the biggest Christmas business in years. Department stores tickled pi k.

Estimates for This Week

Alabama (Wilby-Kincey) (2,800; 30-35-40)—'Collegiate' (Par), and 'Littlest Rebel' (20th), split. Looks for nifty $12,500. Last week, 'Top Hat' (RKO) $7,500, good for holiday season.

Ritz (Wilby-Kincey) (1,600; 25-30)—'Splendor' (UA) and 'In Person' (RKO) and Universal traveling unit for auditions on stage. Split week, $3,700 for the two pictures, moderate. Last week, 'Mary Burns' (Par) and 'Splendor' (UA) $3,000.

Strand (Wilby-Kincey) (800; 25)—'Beat Band' (RKO) for three days, $600, light. 'Keeper of Bees' (Mono) $3,000, pretty good, considering long run.

Empire (Acme) (1,100; 25)—'Kids and Queen' (U). At $2,500, light. Last week, 'Stella Parish' (FN) $3,000, good.

BROOKLYN B.O.'S BUSTLE WITH BIG BIZ

rooklyn, Jan. 7.

(Best Expoitation: Paramount)

It's been nothing short of terrific at Fabian's Paramount where 'Captain Blood' is holding sway and mopping up plenty at the b..o. ever since Xmas Day. It is estimated that the Paramount grossed $40,000 for the first seven days, cracking the 'G Men' record which was $28,600.

'Capt. Blood' record is particularly noteworthy in view of the heavy opposition from 'Two Cities' at Loew's Met and the Temple flicker at the Albee. Met, however, proved no dud judging by the steady patronage. 'Cities' is in its second week now with 'Splendor' and 'Perfect Gentleman' due Friday.

Strand, too, in the money for a change, with 'Show Them No Mercy' and '$1,000 a Minute.'

Exploitation by Joe Lee on 'Blood' called for 100 24-sheets spread around town, advance and current; essay and crossword puzzle contest first week in weeklies for adults in five gazettes; color contest for school kids in weeklies; synopsized yarn in one of the Long Island dailies; radio contests and plugs on local ether outlets; 50,000 heralds in advance billing pie and world premiere, tieup with Grossett and Dunlap on novel in local bookstalls; advance heralds to all boys' adventure clubs in Brooklyn, Long Island and Greenpoint, etc.

Estimates for This Week

Paramount (4,000; 25-35-50)—'Captain Blood' (WB) (2d week). Doing amazing biz at all performances. House played to 101,222 people first seven days, grossing $40,000, new record under present policy. Biggest day's gross was New Year's Day when b.o. took in $7,400. Another $24,000 is anticipated at b.o. on nine days until Friday, when 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) comes in.

Fox (4,000; 25-35-50)—'One Way Ticket' (Col) and 'Dance Band' (FD). Doing fairish biz, around $12,000. Will open Thursday morning with 'Could Only Cook' (Col) and 'Mimi' (FD).

Loew's et (3,400; 25-35-50)—'Two Cities' (MG) (2nd week). Bringing in shekels, fine $16,000; first week $25,000.

Albee (3,500; 25-35-50)—'Little Rebel' (20th) and 'Another Face' (2nd week). Nice $16,000; last week $19,000, good.

Strand (2,000; 25-35-50)—'No Mercy' (20th) and $1,000 a Minute' (Rep) (2nd week). At $9,000 fine; last week $13,000, great.

'COLLEGIATE' VERY RAH-RAH 6½G, L'VILLE

Louisville, Jan.

(Best Exploitation: State)

All downtown houses, with the exception of the National, saved their thunder for New Year's Eve openings, most of them springing their new product at midnight, with no upping of the admission price. National boosted ad ish to $1 top for special midnight show of 'Follies de Paree.'

'Riffraff' looks to be the town's leader, with Harlow fans forming in a steady line at the b.o. New Year's Eve show a big boost, and take should land around $7,000. Several other unusually strong pictures which opened N. Y. E. were 'Collegiate' at the Rialto, which has all indications of taking $6,500, while 'Dream Too Much' at the Brown did not receive the warm reception expected from the critics.

'King of Burlesque' is making things hum at the Strand's wicket, and seems headed for a $3,500 and more if breaks are right.

Mary Anderson's 'Capt. Blood' a holdover from previous week is still getting the shekels and should wind up the present stanza with around $3,000.

Loew's State out-advertised the bunch on its 'Riffraff' picture, and put plenty of pressure to selling the show.

Estimates for This Week

Loew's State (3,000; 15-25-40)—'Riffraff' (MG). Will snag best money in town, well over $7,000 mark. Holiday opening and weekend should turn the trick. Last week 'Two Cities' (MG) grossed $6,500, okay.

Rialto (4th ve) (3,000; 15-25-40)—'Collegiate' (Par). Looks like good bet to garner $6,500 despite unpleasant weather. After storm slush making it pretty hard for pedestrians and autoists to navigate, and these handicaps will militate against b.o. grosses. Last week 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) on holdover did a nice $5,200.

Brown (Ind) (1,500; 15-25-40)—'Dream Too Much' (RKO). Pons opus no rave with the public and pace disappointing; probably not over $1,900. Last week 'Annie Oakley' (RKO) limped in with a weak $1,800.

Strand (4th Ave) (1,500; 15-25-40)—'King of Burlesque' (20th). Flynn Stubblefield spread himself on elaborate front which is attracting attention from Fourth Street, town's main stem. Holiday and weekend will give house neat $3,500. Last week 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) not particularly potent, and wound up with around $2,700.

Mary Anderson (Libson) (1,000; 25-40)—'Capt. Blood' (FN). Vying for honors on the street, and getting nice returns from holiday trade and corking exploitation. Will be okay at $3,000. Last week same film grossed a neat $3,600.

National (Ind) (2,400; 15-25-40)—'Forbidden Heaven' (Rep) and vaude. Flesh attractions proving to be consistent draw, with films decidedly on the weak side. Midnite matinee New Year's eve will swell the holiday gross, and momentum should carry house to a nice $4,500, leaving a good margin over the nut. Last week 'Dizzy Dames' (Lib) and Follies de Paree good for $4,000, oke.

Alamo (Ind) (900; 15-25)—'Transatlantic Tunnel' (GB) and 'Whispering Smith' (20th), dual. Getting fair results at $1,500. Last week 'Rainmakers' (RKO) and 'Thunder In Night' (20th), dual, splitting with 'Stormy' (U) and 'Atlantic' (Col), dual, got a better than average play $1,600.

Fancy B'way B.O. Pace Continues; 'Obsession,' 10 Days, $135,000; 'Bride' With Loma Orc, 36G, 2d Wk; State 27G

(Best Exploitation: Par)

The new year started off right on Broadway. Only hangovers the managers have from the New Year holiday is from staying up all night accommodating the big crowds. Par ground until 6:30 a. m., Jan. 1, the State until 6, the Riv until 5, the Roxy until 4, Cap and Strand to 3, and the Radio City theatres until 2 a. m., with people literally pushed into the theatres.

The take for some houses New Year's eve alone ran to more than $15,000 at prices which ranged from $1.10 to $1.50 a seat. But there was plenty of money to be spent this year, and a majority of good shows on which to spend it. A natural drop in business occurred right after New Year's, but on the whole far away from stopping the whistling that came with the holidays.

Most houses brought in their new pictures Christmas morning (25), with second weeks of new attractions on tap for the New Year drain. The Roxy, which brought in 'First Girl' Friday (3) for what looks like an okay $31,000, got the benefit of both Xmas and New Year's on 'If You Could Only Cook,' and on nine days soared to $62,500.

Music Hall brought in 'Magnificent Obsession' Dec. 30 for 10 days, and on that run through tonight (Wed.) will hit around $135,000. It had gotten over $150,000 on 11 days of 'Littlest Rebel' through Xmas (Dec. 19-30). 'Bride Comes Home' and Casa Loma orchestra at the Par took out $55,000, huge, on its first week, and on the second, ending last night (Tues.), was expected to end at $36,000. Loma orchestra, plus the Onyx Club Boys (including Mike Riley and Ed Farley, who wrote 'Round and Around'), opened on a special $10 preview last night (Tues.) under auspices of Mrs. Vincent Astor, for benefit of Musicians Emergency Fund. Show is in for nine days, but may hold longer.

Both 'Captain Blood' and 'Two Cities' stepped out like lions on Xmas day. Former is proving stronger at box office and stays third week at Strand on current pace (2d wk.) of around $35,000. It got $44,300 first seven days. 'Cities' mounted a big $50,000 first week at Cap, and expects around $30,000 on second. Stays two more days, 'Riffraff' in Friday (10).

'Ah, Wilderness' is maintaining a strong pull on its second week at the Center at around $26,000, and stays third week, starting today (Wed.). First week a fancy $37,000. 'Fang and Claw' piled 'em into the new Rialto for $12,000 first week, and on second, ending this afternoon (Wed.) will be about $9,000. Stays until Friday night (10), when in comes 'Crime of Dr. Crespi,' or longer.

State hit a new high over New Year's at $1.50 prices on holiday eve, getting $41,500 with '. Igni at Opera' and Ed Sullivan on stage. This week house continues strong, looking $27,000 or over on 'So Red Rose' and Harry Richman.

'Dangerous' will be about $16,000, mildish, on second week at Riv, ending today (Wed.) and goes out tomorrow, 'Ghost Goes West' opening Friday (10). 'Ghost' is in tentatively for three weeks, with the Chaplin 'Modern Times' opening, originally Jan. 16, set back. Thus this UA high-termer will not conflict with Goldwyn-UA's Eddie Cantor picture, 'Strike Me Pink,' which opens at the Music Hall Jan. 16.

Paramount, with its campaign plugging the 'Round and Around' song currently used by the Casa Loma outfit, as well as the authors of the number, who opened last night (Tues.), did a remarkably good publicity - advertising - exploitation job. A large amount of important space was grabbed during the past week for benefit not only of current show, but the advance bill as well.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (1,012; 25-35-55)—'Annie Oakley' (RKO) (2nd week). Went on the holdover through New Year's, getting over $6,000. First week, with picture off mighty strong, $12,000. 'Last of Pagans' (MG) in on a preview last night (Tues.).

Capitol (4,620; 25-35-55-85-$1.25)—'Two Cities' (MG) (2nd week). Wound up second week last night (Tues.) at around $30,000 and stays but two more days, 'Riffraff' (MG) taking tenaney Friday (10). First week 'Cities' was over $50,000, big.

Center (3,525; 25-35-55-85-$1.10)—'Wilderness' (MG) (2nd week). Doing swell here, getting $37,000 first week and around $26,000 on second ending last night (Tues). Holds over. 'King of Burlesque' (20th) follows.

Hollywood (1,553; 55-$1.10-$1.65-$2.20)—'Dream' (WB). Closed Sunday night (5), getting $7,200 on its final (14th) week. House is dark with no succeeding attraction set.

Palace (1,700; 25-35-55)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th) and 'Bway Hostess' (WB), paired. Doing pretty well, maybe over $9,000. Last week 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) and 'Another Face' (RKO), helped by New Year business to over $10,000.

Paramount (3,664; 25-35-55-85)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par) (2nd week) and Glen Gray Casa Loma Orchestra in pit. Show has what it takes and on holdover week in neighborhood of $36,000, fine. First week was tremendous, $55,000. Loma band, with Onyx Club Boys added, stays on with 'Rose of Rancho' (Par) which had preview last night (Tues.).

Radio City Music Hall (5,989; 40-60-85-99-$1.10-$1.65) — 'Magnificent Obsession' (U) and stage show. Came in Dec. 30 for 10-day run and on that stretch around $135,000, excellent. House ran six shows New Year's eve. Prior attraction, 'Littlest Rebel' (20th), on 11 days, stronger, shading $150,000.

Rialto (750; 25-40-65)—'Fang and Claw' (RKO) (2nd week). Moderately rated animal picture benefited from holidays, getting $12,000 Xmas week and around $9,000 on holdover ending today (Wed.). Stays until Friday night when 'Dr. Crespi' (Rep) opens or longer.

Rivoli (2,092; 35-55-75-85-99)—'Dangerous' (WB) (2nd week). With opposition tough against it only $18,200 first week, but comparatively much better on holdover at around $16,000. Stays until Friday (10) when 'Ghost Goes West' (UA) opens.

Roxy (5,836; 25-35-55)—'First A Girl' (GB) and stage show. Doing fairly good, $31,000 or over. 'Could Cook' (Col) on nine days through both holidays, a magnificent $62,500.

Strand (2,767; 35-55-65-85)—'Capt. Blood' (WB) (2nd week). Ended its second week last night (Tues.) at strong pace of around $35,000, after first week of $44,300, smash. Stays third week.

State (3,450; 35-55-75)—'So Red Rose' (Par) and vaude headed by Harry Richman. Business aw. above average at $27,000 or better. Last week house hit new high by round $100, etting $41,500, with 'Night at Opera' (MG), perfect picture for New Year crowds, and Ed Sullivan revue on stage.

Auto City Vibrates Beaucoup B. O., Lukas-'Bride' $28,000, 'Obsession' 29G

Detroit, Jan. 7.

(Best Exploitation: Fox)

Box-offices zooming again, with New Year's Eve takes swelling the grosses at several downtown houses. Neck-and-neck scramble for top coin honors is on this week between Fox and Michigan, with standees and turnaways marking openings at both spots.

Behind good exploitation with strong local angle on author of book, 'Magnificent Obsession,' is pulling in a terrific $29,000 this stanza at Fox, while Paul Lukas, coupled with 'Bride Comes Home,' looks good for about $28,000, swell, at the Mich. Latter flicker was given early preview New Year's Eve.

'Dream Too Much' opened niftily New Year's Eve at RKO Downtown, continued fine next day and Thursday, but started cooling off Friday and will stagger in for at least $8,000, pretty good. 'Peter Ibbetson' at UA didn't even get a good start Thursday (2) and will be lucky to cross the line with $5,000, okay however. UA brought in 'Captain Blood' for 'surprise preview' New Year's Eve at 65c. top and filled; will hold film out until regular release.

RKO goes back on temporary combo policy this Friday (10) with 'Broadway Hollywood Restaurant Revue' on stage plus 'Mr. Hobo' on screen. Also has Wayne King booked for week starting Jan. 17, as opposish to Clyde Beatty's animal act at Fox and 'One Hour With You' revue at Michigan.

After two bangup sessions at Fox, 'Rebel' moved into Adams this week and figures for another strong b.o., about $7,000. The Europa, German-film house, went into 'theatre of revivals' policy this week, leaving town minus a large downtown foreign-film house.

Not a whole lot of exploitation again this week; but of what there was Fox gathered the lion's share. Had nice tieup with book stores and department stores on 'Obsession,' Authur Lloyd C. Douglass being a Michigander. House also used extra ad space and sent special literature, etc., to ministers, doctors and nurses.

Estimates For This Week

Michigan (United Detroit) (4,000; 25-35-55)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par) with Paul Lukas heading vaude. Lukas not hurting biz and gross should hit around $28,000, terrific. 'Collegiate' (Par) plus Little Jack Little revue, turned in a swell $30,000 last week.

Fox (Indie) (5,000; 25-35-55)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U) with Weaver Bros. on stage. Pie is the thing and b.o. figures around $29,000, excellent. 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) (2nd week) plus amateurs, Molasses 'n' January, and Human Ford, did a jumbo $34,000 last week after grabbing a nifty $26,000 first session.

Downtown (RKO) (2,500; 25-35-55)—'Dream Too Much' (RKO). Started off great but slumped towards end and looks like about $8,000, okay. 'Scarlett' (RKO) gathered in another okay $10,000 last week. House resumes vaude temporarily Friday (10) with 'Broadway ollywood Restaurant Revue' due.

Adams (Balaban) (1,700; 25-40)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th) (3rd week). Shirley still packing 'em in after two hotcha sessions at Fox; $7,000, fine, due this stanza. 'Fang and Claw' (RKO) did swell $7,000 last week for eight days.

United Artists (UD) (2,000; 25-35-55)—'Ibbetson' (Par). Won't do over $5,000, not so bad. 'Two Cities' (MG) came across with a nice $15,000 last stanza.

State (United Detroit) (3,000; 25-40)—'Mary Burns' (Par) plus ' Ind Lady' (MG). Biz very good here this week, about $5,0 0. House hit $7,000 last week on 'Coronado' (Par) and 'Man of Iron' (WB).

SPOTTED WHODUNIT

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

'Murdered by an Aristocrat,' with Frank McDonald directing, is in production at Warners.

C st includes Margaret Lindsay, Lyle Talbot, Claire Dodd, John Eldridge and Richard Purcell.

Temple Tot Toddles Minnesota, Mpls., to $12,000; 'I Dream' $7,000

Inneapolis, Jan. 7.

(Best Exploitation: Minnesota)

This week brings a lull after last week's box o ce storm which pulled $48,000 into two loop theatres alone —a record for the past six years. Currently, Shirley the iggest magnet by and her 'Littlest Rebel' promises to put a sweet $12,000 into the Minnesota coffers.

With Burns and Allen on the stage, the Minnesota crashed through New Year's week to a stupendous $32,000, the biggest take this town has known since 1929. At the same ti the Orpheum, also havin a stage show, went over the top to the tune of $16,000.

'Whipsaw' has the State on the map and that house promises to shoot through to a neat $8,000, best in some weeks. Heavily advertised, 'I Dream Too Much' is off to a fair start at the Orpheum. Another strongly advertised film, 'La Maternelle,' is attracting some attention for the World.

Last week there were four stage shows in town and currently there is only one—the Gayety's stock burlesque offering. Numerous flesh-and-blood attractions impend, however.

A tie-up with one of the loop's largest department stores gives the Minnesota top exploitation honors. Store ran a three column 12-inch ad on 'Littlest Rebel,' distributed fan folders and had a full window display.

Estimates for This Week

Minnesota (Publix) (4,200; 25-35-55)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th) Temple's draw here the brightest of them all. With school vacation on, picture got fine start, despite bad weather. Coming after record New Year's week business, $12,000, or thereabouts, will not be so hard to take. Last week, 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and Burns and Allen in person with stage show, $32,000, town record for over five years, phenomenal.

Orpheum (Singer) (2,390; 25-35-40) 'Dream Too Much' (RKO). Burg not so hot for musicals, but this one helped by critics' favorable comments. May reach pretty good $7,000. Last week, 'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) and 'Cocktails of 1936' on stage, $16,000, fine.

State (Publix) (2,240; 25-35-40)—'Whipsaw' (MG). Myrna Loy a real name draw here and it's telling at box office. House enjoying one of best weeks since Minnesota's reopening which has spelled killing opposition, en route to good $8,000. Last week, 'Ah Wilderness' (MG), $6,500, okeh.

World (Steffes) (350; 25-35-40-55)—'La Maternelle' (French). Mixed audience reaction; same goes for critics. Maybe 1,200, light. Last week, 'Scrooge' (Par), $900, light.

Time (Berger) (290; 15-25)—'Scarlet Pimpernel' (UA). Subsequent run, will do well to hit $900, so-so. Last week, 'Remember Last Night' (U), $800, light.

Lyric (Publix) (1,300; 20-25)—'Pacific Fleet' (WB). Blondell-Farrell mean something at this house, en route to good $2,500. Last week, 'It All' (MG), $1,800, light.

Uptown (Publix) (1,200; 25-35)—'Old Kentucky' (Fox), First neighborhood showing and good for very big $3,000. Last week, 'Mutiny' (MG), $3,200, big.

Century (Publix) (1,600; 20-25)—'Live My Life' (MG). Second loop run, good $3,000 indicated. Last week, 'Broadway Melody' (MG), second loop run, $3,500, good.

Aster (Publix) (900; 15-25)—'Hands Across Table' (Par) and 'Way Down East' (20th) second loop runs, 'Personal Maid' (WB), first run. Looks like good $1,200. Last week, 'Shaughnessy' (MG), second run, and 'Shir Cafe' (Par), first run,$900, fair, with second run film getting most of play.

N. H. HEY-HEY

lood,' $9,000—'Bride,' $10,000 'Rebel,' $11,500

New Haven, Jan.

(Best Exp! itation: Poli)

Nice holiday business all around. 'Two Cities' a holdover and will probably be followed by 'Rebel' for another extended runner. New Year's eve boosted prices helped fatten grosses at Poli's ('Rebel') and Roger Sherman ('Blood').

Getting kinda hard to dig up new exploitation angles on Shirley and Poli's relied on the old standbys for most of the campaign. Window cards, heralds inserted in film mags, menu sheets, overhead leader board, trailers in all local loew houses, photo of Shirley in toy store, co-op advs, window display of Temple dresses, Shirley Temple sundries, etc., were minor bally angles topped off with half-hour broadcast day before opening; advance lobby display of Shirley atop chimney waiting for Santa Claus, 24-sheet pasted to lobby floor and free Libertys with Shirley on cover.

Estimates for This Week

Paramount (M & P) (2,348; 35-50)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and 'Millions in Air' (Par). Big opening and building to swell $10,000 on nine days. Last week, 'Collegiate' (Par) and 'Nevada' (Par) grabbed a peachy $8,300.

Poli (Loew) (3,040; 35-50)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th) and 'Uncle Dudley' (20th). Looks like one of Shirley's boxoffice bests. Holiday prices and a midnite advanced price show helping to a sweet $11,500. Last week 'Two Cities' (MG) snapped out of a mediocre start to clinch better than $8,000; okay.

Roger Sherman (WB) (2,200; 35-50)—'Capt. Blood' (WB) and 'B'way Hostess' (WB). Riding to a big $9,000 on eight days. Last week 'Dangerous' (WB) and 'Hobo' (GB), no complaints at $7,200.

College (Loew) (1,565; 35-50)—'Two Cities' (MG). Holdover from Poli's last week, probably $4,200, satisfactory. Last week, 'Musketeers' (RKO) and 'Too Tough to Kill' (Col), slightly below expectations at $3,700, on 25-35 scale.

Balto's Strong Pix Offset Blah Weather; 'Wilderness,' $21,500

Baltimore, Jan.

(Best Exploitation: Hipp)

Snow, sleet and thaw in alternating doses again irritating the b.o.'s this week, but the flock of pix on tap have been hailed to have such glittering merits that they are managing to greatly overcome the wash-out weather, and are ringing up a round-robin of corking coining.

Century had best start in months with 'Wilderness,' interest being expended in it from opening performance. Some time since glowing advance reports of a flick have permeated the whole town as was case with this film; further the O'Neill play was well liked Hitler, and when crix lauded by proclaiming pic finer than play, mob marched to catch it in unabated swarms. Should soar up to socko $21,500.

Vaudfilm Hipp has 'Dream Too Much' on tap for nine days; started gally and holding up grandly, with prospects for swell $19,000.

Keith's getting crackerjack stanza out of 'Show No Mercy,' cinch for strong $6,000, also a best in months.

To Ted Rouston of the Hipp goes exploitative honors for the week, his hurrahing for Lily Pons in 'Dream Much' ferreting into multitude of media. Best buildup was a blog of star which ran in News-Post first four days of run.

Estimates for This Week

Century (Loew-UA) (3,000; 15-25-35-40-55-66)—'Wilderness' (MG) and vaude headed by Sylvia Froos. Zooming to $21,500, hot-ziggity. Last week, 'Two Cities' (MG) and vaude, better than $20,000, hey-hey.

Hippodrome (Rappaport) (2,300; 15-25-35-40-55-60)—'Dream Comes' (MG)—'Dream Too Much' (RKO) and vaude. Prancing nine days to swell $19,000. Last week, 'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) and vaude dipped under expectations to $13,000, mild.

Keith's (Schanberger) (2,500; 15-25-30-35-40) — 'Show No Mercy' (20th)—At least $6,000, succulent. Last week, 'Invisible Ray' (U) eased closing days into $4,800.

New (Mechanic) (1,800; 15-25-30-35-40-55) — 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) (3d wk)—This, third and final lap, limited to six days, which will pull fine $3,000. Last week, $4,600, nifty. Fact that house is still bustin' out with all sorts of exploitation keeping interest high.

Stanley (WB) (3,450; 15-25-35-40-55)—'Capt Blood' (WB) (2d wk). Still has plenty of that b.o. blood in its veins, making tracks to good $7,000, after the opening week vaunted $15,000, best bag o' bullion house has copped in two years.

OMAHA ON ICE, BUT BIZ OKE; 'DREAM' $5,800

Omaha, Jan. 7.

(Best Exploitation: Brandeis)

Break of the new year considerably changes the opening day schedules, but keeps flowing the stream of good films and money. Orpheum only house to get back on regular opening day-Friday-after a two-day interlude of vaude, the first in town in three months. 'Platinum Blonde' unit here New Year's Eve midnight and Wednesday and Thursday, and then house went back to straight picture fare Friday.

Contest for the lead as usual between Omaha and Orpheum, with Brandeis in for heavier recognition than the past two weeks. Omaha with 'Collegiate' on a New Year's Eve preview showing and holding for eight days gets the decision on strength of capacity opening which has every indication of holding. Orpheum with its picture bill will be in for very acceptable returns. Brandeis on a midwest premier of the new Lily Pons film likewise for eight days getting favorable returns.

Hiking of admissions for New Year's Eve shows helped at Omaha, where 55c was the gate for $1 for the Orpheum's stage show was judged to have held them off a little as nothing that steep has been asked here in moons. Brandeis broke its new program at 6 p.m. of the eve at no increase in prices.

Last week weather was a mighty factor flaying the city with two cold spells, one of which was also a blizzard, on opening days. Holiday biz okay but off from what was expected. Orpheum with Shirley Temple the nearest to steady, and Brandeis and Omaha under estimates.

Exploitation credits a bit scattered, but standout was the Brandeis on strength of newspaper ads, preview showing and general campaign which hit just the right snots to get the talk directed to the class appeal picture there. Omaha in the ken with a campaign notable for coverage.

Estimates for This Week

Omaha (Blank-Tri-States) (2,100; 25-40-55)—'Collegiate' (Par). On a special New Year's Eve showing at 55c and eight following days at the regular prices for some heavy money despite snow and cold varied. Capacity openings and good campaign sent this one up to around $9,500, good money in any seven to 10 days. 'Bad Boy' (20th) as a dual helps some. Last week 'Two Cities' (MG) disappointing. Seven days at $7,800, still good money and creditable with zero weather twice during the week. 'Little America' (Par) as second half of bill no help.

Brandeis (Singer-RKO) (1,250; 25-35-40)—'I Dream Too Much' (RKO). New Year's Eve opening gives it eight full days and a half. Week may total up to $5,800. More credit here too as this one is going it single feature. Last week 'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) and 'Devil's Island' (Col) held its own through the week, but couldn't overcome poor Christmas day opening due to weather; $4,200 not bad, but not good either.

Orpheum (Blank-Tri-States) (2,976; 25-40)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par). Gets this house back to regular opening Friday with 'I Live for Love' (WB) as a dual partner. Will more than hold its own, and $8,300 will be pleasing money. Stage show New Year's Eve and two days following with the eve show at $1 per head and rest of engagement at 55c top was mild, drawing $5,000 with 'Miss Pacific Fleet' (WB) as film fare in connection. Last week 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) was tops at $10,000 despite cold weather. 'Your Uncle Dudley' (20th) dual partner.

CINCY'S '36 B. O. DEBUT OKAY, 'CITIES' 21G

Cincinnati, Jan. 7.

(Best Exploitation: Shubert)

Maiden week of '36 okehs doksie for downtown exhibs, variance of weather over the week-end to the contrary. Best take currently on 'Two Cities,' which is chalking up $21,000 for the Albee on a nine-day stretch. 'Bride Comes Home' is ticketed for $14,000 on eight days at the Palace. Lyric is corralling $7,000 with 'Fang and Claw' and Keith's is pulling $6,000 on 'Dangerous.' 'Littlest Rebel' is fetching $10,000 in nine-day moveover stay at the Capitol.

Shubert, lone picflesh emporium, is having one of its high weeks with a $14,500 tug on 'Another Face' and the 'Bring on the Dames' revue. Stage attraction copped press laurels of the week, having a beauty contest tie-up with the Times-Star for ticket prizes, and a 'name-the-penguin' contest in the Post for cash awards. Troupe drew dandy notices.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (3,300; 35-42)—'Two Cities' (MG). Nine days, Colman lugged in with a swell $21,000. Last week 'Dream Too Much' (RKO), replaced at 6 p.m. on seventh day to allow for New Year's Eve start on 'Cities,' $8,000.

Palace (RKO) (2,600; 35-42)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par). Eight days, $14,000, okay. Last week 'Littlest Rebel' (Fox) $16,000.

Shubert (RKO) (2,150; 35-55)—'Another Face' (RKO) and 'Bring on Dames' revue. Nice exploitation job on flame dance and penguin features of stage show and, with snappy title a b.o. builder-upper. Heavy biz in first half points to a bang-up $14,500. Last week same figure on 'Perfect Gentleman' (MG) and 'Hollywood Cabaret' unit, aided by two New Year's Eve performances on reserved seat plan at 75c-$1.10 scale, which fetched $3,800.

Capitol (RKO) (2,000; 35-42)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th). Transferred from Palace for nine-day run, $10,000, big. Last week 'Red the Rose' (Par), five days, $3,500, following $6,000 in first week.

Lyric (RKO) (1,400; 35-42)—'Fang and Claw' (RKO). Frank Buckley to $7,000, strong. Last week 'Mister Hobo' (GB), $6,500, big.

Keith's (Libson) (1,500; 30-40)—'Dangerous' (WB). Opened Saturday (4), 'Capt. Blood' (WB) being yerked after third day of holdover. Bette Davis toppling title of 'Dangerous,' which may hit $6,000, all right. Ten days of 'Capt. Blood $12,000.

Grand (RKO) (1,200; 25-40)—'Whipsaw' (MG). Returned to main line after initialing at Albee, whacking out $2,900, nice. Last week 'If I Had Million' (Par), reissue, $3,700, immense.

Family (RKO) (1,000; 15-25)—'Moonlight on Parade' (WB) and 'One Way Ticket' (Col), split. Average $2,200. Last week 'Spy Frontier' (Rep) and 'Payoff' (WB), separate, $2,300.

'La Vie Paree' Revue In Montreal Sends Loew's to Wow 18G

Montreal, Jan. 7.

(est Exploitation: Loew's)

First full week of 1936 has no very brilliant prospects for the main stems, with one exception, but that won't prevent January from being one of the biggest months of the year. This city wrists grosses up to the good old times.

Loew's will easily top the town with $18,000 gross at least, but it won't be on pix. 'Broadway Hostess' and 'Rainmakers' will get a fair slice, but the gravy will be for the vaude, 'La Vie Paree,' with 97 in troupe. Palace has 'Mary Burns' and 'Coronado' which might gross $10,000. Capitol with 'Bride Comes Home' and 'Red the Rose' should finish with $8,000. Princess is showing 'Could Only Cook' and 'Devil's Island' which ought to bring in $7,000. Cinema Imperial has 'Tout pour l'Amour' and 'Forced Landing'; look like $4,000. Cinema de Paris after a month's poor biz should pick up on 'Le Chant de l'Amour' and 'Les Dieux s'Amusent' to $1,200. At the St. Denis 'Dora Nelson' and 'Jeune Fille a Marier' should on latter do a fine $6,000. Nabes are all beginning to pick up.

One hundred and twenty-five 4-sheet posters, radio, street cars, stores and heavy press advertising are putting over show at Loew's big this week, with the Curtis-Finlay team using all their best cards to make the grade.

Estimates for This Week

Palace (FP) (2,700; 50)—'Mary Burns' (Par) and 'Coronado' (Par). Fair average combo and may reach $10,000, now that purses are beginning to pick up. Last week very disappointing, 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) took a dip to $8,000, largely due to ban on minors at theatres here.

Capitol (FP) (2,700; 50)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and 'Red the Rose' (Par). Should gross $8,000. Last week $6,000 on 'Collegiate' (Par) and 'Scrooge' (Emp).

Loew's (M. T. Co.) (3,200; 50)—'Broadway Hostess' (WB) and 'Rainmakers' (RKO), with 'La Vie Paree.' Cannot do much short of $18,000, a fine start for 1936, but most of it for the vaude. Last week 'Kids and Love' and 'Ship Cafe' (Par) with vaude, $9,000.

Princess (CT) (2,200; 50)—'Could Only Cook' (Col) and 'Devil's Island' (Col). Eight days showing on this bill should gross $7,000. Last week Arliss, 'Mr. Hobo' (GB) yanked Wednesday (1) and with 'The Clairvoyant' (rit) grossed $5,000.

Cinema Imperial (Ind) (1,600; 34)—'Tout pour l'Amour' and 'Forced Landing' (Emp). About $4,000, okay. Last week 'Nuit d'Amour' and 'Spanish Cap Mystery' (Emp), $3,000.

Cinema de Paris (Cinema Film) (600; 50)—'Le Chant de l'Amour' and 'Les Dieux s'Amusent.' Oke $1,200. Last week 'Nuit de Noces' and 'Vogue Mon Coeur,' $800.

St. Denis (Hostess)

Denver Hot; 'French Follies' Zooms 'Face' to $13,500, 'Mr. Hobo' Classy 4G

Denver, Jan. 7.

(Best Exploitation: Orpheum)

Denver first runs have snapped out of the Christmas dumps in fine shape and every de luxer running above average with Orpheum doing nearly three times average. The stage show is doing most of the pulling, 'French Follies' proving a strong magnet to Denver fans who have been without stage shows in first runs for some time. 'Capt. Blood' is doing great at the Denver with several standouts and goes to the Broadway for an extended run. Denham headed for more than double average, with 'Bride Comes Home;' Colbert still plenty strong draw here. 'Hobo' is being held two extra days at the Aladdin where Arliss, as always, is doing fine business. He will double average but it's a little below usual Arliss figure, strong competition keeping gross down. 'Littlest Rebel' doing fine at Broadway following whale of a week at the Denver. 'Could Cook' headed for a nice week at Paramount, above average.

Orpheum rates the best exploitation with an optical trick, whereby chorus girl is made to appear in fishbowl five inches in diameter stunt. It blocked sidewalk repeatedly during week.

Estimates for This Week

Aladdin (Huffman) (1,500; 25-35-50-60)—'Mr. Hobo' (GB). Arliss very strong at $4,000, twice usual average. Last week, 'Stars Over Broadway' (WB) above average, as did every first run house, with $2,500.

Broadway (Huffman) (1,500; 25-40)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th). Follows a big week at the Denver, and still very okay, $2,000. Last week, 'Paddy O'Day (20th) went some above average with $1,200. This house is located a few blocks away from the principal retail shopping district, but right next to several big hotels.

Denham (Cooper) (1,500; 25-35-40)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par). Colbert potent b.o. here and McMurray catching on; a big take at $8,500. Last week, 'Collegiate' (Par) copped $5,000, neat figure for this house, located two blocks from the main retail street.

Denver (Huffman) (2,500; 25-35-50)—'Capt. Blood' (FN) and stage band. Smash biz, $9,500. Last week, 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) copped $9,000 and earned promotion to the Broadway, as all good films go if they really make good in Harry Huffman's Denver theatre. And sometimes they go from the Aladdin to the Broadway, but often they stay a second week at the Aladdin, which is not as large as the Denver.

Orpheum (RKO) (2,600; 25-35-40)—'Another Face' (RKO) and 'French Follies' on the stage. Flesh unit panicking the natives; stage shows a novelty here and a rousing $13,500 is the b.o. response. Last week, 'Two Cities' (MG) really went to town, and with lines several times during the week, rung up a neat $10,000 in the till. Now if RKO had a neat setup like Huffman, 'Cities' might have secured a second week, but with a stage show coming in the film had to go out.

Paramount (Huffman) (2,000; 25-40)—'Could Only Cook' (Col).—Above average at $3,000, same as last week on 'Frisco Kid' (WB).

LINCOLN LULU

All Wickets Humming—'In Person' Strong $3,200—'Cities' $4,000

Lincoln, Jan. 7.

(est Exploitation: Lincoln)

Biz is back in stride again after a terrific New Year's eve pace, which saw six of the nine downtown houses packed on midnight shows and carrying the same force through the following holiday. Running nicely was 'In Person' at the Lincoln, which was boosted by two days of front page yarns on an orphans' New Year party which was sponsored by the theatres and newspapers. 'Two Cities' getting a goodly share of the play, too.

Newly made alignment with radio here by the newspapers and consequent relaxation of publicity restrictions on the entertainment field is looked upon with interest by the show boys. As yet it hasn't been decided whether the plugging of radio will be a slam or a boost to the pay amusements.

Indicative of better business conditions in general here is City Manager Jerry Zigmon's statement of improvement over the Xmas slump grossing of 1934. State as a whole has a good crop prospect, and that means biz all over.

Estimates for This Week

Colonial (LTC) (550; 10-15)—'Chan's Secret' (20th) and 'Frisco Waterfront' (Rep), split. Going swell to $1,000. Last week 'Fang and Claw' (RKO), 4 days, and 'East of Java' (U), 3 days, first week after Xmas, saw a neat $950 viewing inclement weather.

incoln (LTC) (1,600; 10-20-25)—'In Person' (RKO). elped by front page yarns and general plugging on way to $3,200, very good. Last week 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) a steady but not heavy grosser. Final tally in the neighborhood of $2,300.

Orpheum (LTC) (1,200; 10-15-20-25-40)—'It's a Great Life' (Par), 3 days, followed by 'Mary Burns' (Par), 4 days, first long run single feature for some time with Chic Meyers unit. Total should be near $2,900, good enough. Last week 'International Follies' and 'Uncle Dudley' (20th), 2 days; Hilton Sisters Revue and 'Coronado' (Par), 3 days; 'Virginia' (Par), 2 days alone; and Charley Mack's 'Monkey Shines' unit with 'Perfect Gentleman' (MG), 2 days; gross over the 9-day period $5,100, happiness money.

Stuart (LTC) (1,900; 10-25-40)—'Two Cities' (MG). Running good to probable $4,000 or better. Last week 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) in the money for $3,900.

Varsity (Westland) (1,100; 10-20-25)—'Could Only Cook' (Col). Up in a new kind of money with $2,000 in sight. Last week 'Dan Matthews' (Col) echoed in an empty house and cornered but $1,000, n.s.h.

'OBSESSION' IN BUFFALO A WOW $16,000

Buffalo, Jan. .

(Best Exploitation: Shea Houses)

Picture business is emerging currently from the holiday mix-up of scrambled features and split weeks and looks to be okay and better for the present stanza. Special midnight showings helped increase the grosses and keep the figures above the water line. Majority of houses are feeling drop-off since the week-end.

'Magnificent Obsession' at the Lafayette has developed into a heavy sock. All records for the house are going by the boards, the nearest approach being 'Sin Takes a Holiday' five years ago at 35c. top. Starting with New Year's Eve show the picture had been doing consistent turnaway business.

'Wilderness' at the Hipp is holding up nicely and the Buffalo show will probably hold its own.

The exploitation for the New Year's Eve midnight shows at the Shea houses was an outstanding feature of the week. Campaign was carried on for three weeks with plenty of extra newspaper space which gave all four downtown Shea first-runs a flaring start. Radio plugging helped as did also a string of co-operative tie-ups.

Estimates For This Week

Buffalo (Shea) (3,600; 30-40-50)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par). All right. May get up to $13,000. Last week, 'Littlest Rebel' (20th), in for 12 days prior to New Years, a neat $18,500 for the period; five days from Friday to New Year's Eve midnight show, $7,100.

Hipp (Shea) (2,400; 25-40)—'Wilderness' (MG). Very well liked by public and reviewers, steady business for what looks like over $10,000. Last week, 'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) took it on the chin for the lowest gross in town, $5,800.

Great Lakes (Shea) (3,400; 25-40)—'Riffraff' (MG). The 'new Harlow' ballyhoo does not seem to be selling this one which will likely do around $9,000. Last week, 'Two Cities' (MG) deserved all it got, excellent at over $14,000.

Century (Shea) (3,400; 25)—'King of Burlesque' (20th). First single feature at this house in many a moon, nicely at a pace of about $7,500. Last week 'Annie Oakley' (RKO) and 'Beat the Band' (RKO), double feature clicked over the holiday period for fine $6,800.

Lafayette (Ind.) (3,400; 25)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U). Far and away the outstanding attraction of the town and the best the house has had in years; near riot at probably over $16,000. Last week, 'Could Only Cook' (Col) did pretty well despite the title and the switch from double feature to single; left little to complain about at over $7,000.

PORTLAND'S PULL

Big Takes, Holdovers Strong—'Bride' Tops Town at $9,000

Portland, Ore., Jan. 7.

(Best Exploitation: Par-Orph)

Pushing a line of strong bookings further back for dates, UA held 'Two Cities' for a second week and maybe longer. 'Cities' ran up a big score during Xmas week and collected raves. Another big exploitation campaign was launched by the UA to plug its second week.

Two other pix also held following strong holiday openings. These were 'Night at Opera' at the Broadway and 'Collegiate' at the Orph. 'Collegiate' was moved to the Mayfair for its second stanza and doing nicely at that house.

Paramount closed a freak biz for 'Littlest Rebel,' opening to a poor pre-holiday trade and closing the second spasm to big returns. Paramount now has a winning combo for this week, 'Pacific Fleet' and 'Chan's Secret.'

General holiday biz in the burg was best for five or six years, with the b.o. barometer upped correspondingly to higher altitudes. All exploitation is getting heavier and the number of pix holding for a second stanza indicates good prospects for strong product.

Only leading houses in the dorp opening new pix this week are Evergreen's Orpheum and Paramount, which splurged additional exploitation on their double feature bills.

Estimates for This Week

Broadway (Parker) (2,000; 25-40)—'Night at Opera' (MG) (2d week). Going strong, $4,300 is dandy; first week closed for big $8,200.

United Artists (Parker) (1,000; 25-40)—'Two Cities' (MG) (2d wk). Running up another big score in its second stanza, close to $5,000, big, and may hold over. First week hit the big money for this house at $8,100.

Paramount (Evergreen) (3,000; 25-40)—'Pacific Fleet' (WB) and 'Chan's Secret' (20th). Good combo registering well and should clear above average for okay $6,000. Last week holiday trade put second week of 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) bigger than first week for that pic, grossing $9,500 on the fortnight.

Orpheum (Hamrick - Evergreen) (2,000; 25-40)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and 'Uncle Dudley' (20th). Combo tops the town for a big $9,000 and holding. Last week 'Collegiate' (Par) and 'No Mercy' (20th) ran up a strong score for this house, closing at $6,300, and moved to the Mayfair for the second week.

Mayfair (Parker - Evergreen) (1,400; 25-40) — 'Collegiate' (Par) (2d week). Going okay after first at the Orpheum. Should get $3,200. Last week 'Couldn't Take It' (Col) and '$1,000 a Minute' (Rep) did a fairish trade for six days to average $2,300.

TACOMA GOING STRONG

'Rebel' $4,000, ig $4,500

Tacoma, Jan. 7.

(Best Exploitation: Music Box)

Showmen report biz better here than in years, with the usual pre-holiday slump slight. Lumber demand is pepping employment in this sector.

New first run policy at the Blue Mouse, starting cold last week, surprised with nice takings.

Best exploitation at the Music Box for 'Rebel,' with a Shirley Temple jingle contest, heavily publicized in the News-Tribune.

Estimates for This Week

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (750; 16-27)—'Chan's Secret' (20th) and 'Payoff' (FN) dual, heading for $2,300, okay. Last week 'East of Java' (U) and 'Calm Yourself' (MG) dual, $2,700, good.

Music Box (Hamrick) (1,400; 16-27-37)—'Rebel' (20th) and 'Uncle Dudley' (20th) dual, looks like a nice $4,000. Last week 'Frisco Kid' (WB) and 'Broadway Hostess' (WB) dual, $4,100, better.

Roxy (Hamrick) (1,300; 16-27-37)—'Night at Opera' (MG) and 'Pacific Fleet' (WB) reads like $4,500, big. Last week 'Thanks a Million' (Fox) and 'Couldn't Take It' (Col) dual, $5,200, immense.

Philly Frisky; 'Blood' $19,000, 'King Of Burlesk' $21,000, 'Riff-Raff' 10G

Philadelphia, Jan. 7.

(Best Exploitation: Stanley)

Philly's downtown film houses are slowly getting back to regular schedules and normal line-ups after the usual holiday scramble. On the whole, it may be said that business around the holidays was somewhat under expectations. Two snowstorms, one on top of the other, and generally bad weather conditions, undoubtedly had something to do with that.

'Two Cities,' an even bigger sensation than first indicated at the Boyd, is still riding along at a fast clip and ought to get four weeks in all. This week's figure, which includes the New Year's Eve midnight show, should be more than $25,000, and that's something to write home about. Last week's $30,000 was best for the Boyd in over two years, or since 'Little Women,' which is Boyd's tops.

'Cities' has a new rival, a block away, in 'Capt. Blood' at the Stanley, which Warners has been plugging heavily. It opened Tuesday at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and hence its first week's figure includes the New Year's Eve trade. Rave notices, and although lack of names was an admitted handicap at first, natural holiday crowds passed the favorable word-of-mouth around, and 'Blood' will get a sound $19,000. Evidence that the management doesn't count on its staying powers is seen, however, in a new booking on Saturday ('Collegiate'), which means only a week and a half for 'Blood.'

'King of Burlesque' varied the usual procedure by opening at the New Year's Eve midnight show at the Fox, and, like every other downtown house, did a terrific trade at that time. In fact, Philly had its biggest New Year's Eve crowds in years, and whereas usually just a single midnight show is given, most of the houses put on a second (around 2 o'clock) this year. 'King of Burlesque' tapered off considerably after that start, but came back like so many others with big Saturday trade. It should get $20,000 or $21,000 on the week, and is holding over for two extra days so that house can get back to usual Friday change rule. There is some talk of another week for 'King.' 'Professional Soldier' is next.

The Earle, one house which has stuck to its usual Friday change policy, got off to a good start Friday with its new combo, although crix weren't enthusiastic about the bill, 'Baldpate' on screen and Nina Ollivette heading stage unit. However, $14,500 figured.

Aldine, where 'Dream Too Much' has been faltering rather badly, gets 'First a Girl' tomorrow (Wednesday). 'Dream's' second week won't be over $7,500. 'Riff Raff' at the Stanton is doing much better than most shows at house. It opened Tuesday and gets $10,000, well above house average, but, of course, including New Year's Eve special shows. House has been faring much better of late than for a year or more. 'Riff Raff' holds indefinitely.

Outside of 'Two Cities' thumping $30,000 last week, Earle's $21,000 for 'Miss Pacific Fleet' and N.T.G. was a standout.

Estimates for This Week

Aldine (1,200; 40-55-65)—'First a Girl' (GB). Opens tomorrow. 'I Dream Too Much' (RKO) getting only $7,500 in second week, ending today (Tuesday), after a disappointing $12,000 in first week.

Arcadia (600; 25-40-50)—'Whipsaw' (MG). Second run, $2,600. Last week, 'Wilderness' (MG), second run, $2,800, not what holidays should have given it.

Boyd (2,400; 40-55)—'Two Cities' (MG), (2d week). Still a riot and ought to get four weeks. Over $25,000 seen this week, with $30,000 last week.

Earle (2,000; 25-40-50)—'Baldpate' (RKO) and vaude, Nina Ollivette heading show. Notices m.s.g. Good start, then slipped, $15,500 figured. Last week, 'Pacific Fleet' (WB) and vaude, very nice $21,000.

Fox (3,000; 40-55-65)—'King of Burlesque' (20th) and stage show. Opened New Year's Eve midnight show; $20,000 or $21,000 seen, but only two-day holdover. Last week, 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) and stage show, swell $17,500 in five days.

Karlton (1,000; 25-35-40)—'Kind Lady' (MG). First-run for change, $4,000 seen. Short holdover expected. Last week, 'Crime and Punishment' (Col), second run, $2,300 in six days, not much.

Keith's (2,000; 30-40-50) — 'Another Face' (RKO). First-run, unusual here, too; won't get $2,500 if it lasts. Last week, 'Could Only Cook' (Col), second run, mild $3,000 despite holidays.

Stanley (3,700; 40-55) — 'Capt. Blood' (WB). Plenty of fine exploitation and great notices. Absence of names not hurting and holidays will give it good $19,000 first week; stays only a half week over. Last week, 'Bride Comes Home' (Par), $4,500 in three days before New Year's.

Stanton (1,700; 30-40-50) — 'Riff Raff' (MG). Well above house average and ought to get two fine weeks; $10,000 in its first, which ends today (Tuesday). 'Fang and Claw' (RKO) got expected $8,000, fairly good.

WASH. SIZZLES, 'COLLEGIATE' BIG $22,000

Washington, Jan. 7.

(Best Exploitation: Keith's)

Combination of good celluloid and usual after-Christmas boom is pouring cash into box offices like water this week. Prosperity returned with Christmas Day and smashed records New Year's Eve and day following.

Interesting angle is way all houses cleaned up with midnight shows New Year's Eve. All but two vaudfilm spots opened new pix. Every place turned 'em away and Palace, offering advance showing of 'Two Cities' week before regular debut, had to send reels down street to Columbia for overflow. Keith's was only house to up price, opening 'Dream Too Much' at 7 p.m. and charging 99c from 5:30 p.m. as against usual 55c. Same stunt worked last year and no squawks.

Keith's got break when Lily Pons arrived to sing at White House during showing of 'I Dream Too Much.' Manager Hardie Meakin rounded up reporters and photogs and mobbed her at station winning bally honors for week.

Estimates for This Week

Earle (WB) (2,424; 25-35-40-70)—'Collegiate' (Par) and vaude. Stepin Fetchit on stage plus light musicale makes combo that is succeeding even beyond theatre's power to explain; looks like swell $22,000. Last week 'Captain Blood' (WB) took big $20,000.

Fox (Loew) (3,424; 25-35-60)—'King of Burlesque' (Fox) and vaude. Al Schacht and Navara's orchestra some draw on stage, but Warner Baxter responsible for good $23,000. Last week 'Wilderness' (MG) plus Coogan-Grable on stage swell $28,000.

Keith's (RKO) (1,830; 25-35-60)—'Dream Too Much' (RKO). Headed for smash $17,000. Last week 'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) despite pannings by critics won big $13,000.

Palace (Loew) (2,363; 25-35-60)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th). Will collect big $12,500; first week good $18,000.

Met (WB) (1,853; 25-40)—'No Mercy' (20th). Critics went to town as they rarely do on gangster film and week will wind up with big $6,000. Last week 'Nevada' (Par) got kids over holidays for good $4,500.

Columbia (Loew) (1,263; 25-40)—'Old Kentucky' (Fox). Second week downtown will smash house repeat record with wow $8,000. Last week 'Thanks Million' (20th) got good $5,000 for third week on mainstem.

Belasco (Radin) (1,100; 25-35-50-70)—'New Gulliver' (Amkino) (2nd week). Held up to satisfactory $2,800. Last week same pic took good $3,800.

Cleve. Above Par, 'Cook'-Wayne King Big $25,000, 'Blood' $23,000, 'Bride' 20G

Cleveland, Jan. 7.

(Best Exploitation: Hipp)

All grosses 'way above average.

Best sharpshooting done by 'Captain Blood,' headed for a swell $23,000, rating it a place between the Palace's Wayne King—'If You Could Only Cook' combo; which looks like abang up $25,000, and 'Bride Comes Home,' slated for around a big $20,000 for the State.

Loew's State did some neat ballyhooing, but honors go to Hipp's book tie-ups for Sabatini story. Posters also unique while ushers in pirates' costumes and heavy newspaper plugs built it up the right way.

Estimates for This Week

State (Loew's (3,750; 30-35-40)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par). Opening on New Year's Day, well liked enough to indicate a handsome $20,000. Last week, 'Two Cities' (MG) cleaned up the town with $23,600.

Palace (RKO) (3,200; 30-40-60)—'Could Only Cook' (Col) and Wayne King on stage. Corking holiday show, with King's ork yanking 'em in to the tune of around $25,000 if not better. Last week, 'Dangerous' (WB) and Leota Lane in vaude carnival took $18,500.

Hipp (WB) (3,000; 25-40)—'Capt. Blood' (WB). Going like hot cakes for certain $23,000. Last week, 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) exceeded that, $24,000.

Stillman (Loew's) (1,872; 25-35)—'Two Cities' (MG). Second week, shifted from State after swell biz, doing same here by around $8,500. Last week, 'Red the Rose' (Par), above-par $5,500.

Allen (RKO) (3,000; 5-40)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th). Transferred from Hipp for a second week downtown, very okay at $8,000. Last week, 'Mr. Hobo' (GB) made $3,500.

Circle (Marmorstein) (1,900; 15-20-25)—'Red Salute' (UA). Hullabaloo caused by anti-communistic groups who picketed the theatre, makes sweet publicity for pix, guaranteeing $3,500, which is all right.

Magnificent Obsession

Universal release of John M. Stahl production. Stars Irene Dunne, Robert Taylor; features Chas. Butterworth, Betty Furness. Directed by Stahl; E. M. Asher, associate producer. Screenplay, George O'Neil, Sarah Y. Mason, Victor Heerman. From novel by Lloyd C. Douglas. Photog, John Mescall. At R. C. Music Hall, N. Y., 10 days, beginning Dec. 30, '35. Running time, 110 mins.

Helen Hudson	Irene Dunne
Bobby Merrick	Robert Taylor
Tommy Masterson	Charles Butterworth
Joyce Hudson	Betty Furness

Randolph	Ralph Morgan
Tony	Henry Armetta
Dr. Ramsay	Gilbert Emery
Perry	Arthur Hoyt
May	Inez Courtney
Mrs. Eden	Beryl Mercer
Ruth	Cora Sue Collins
Horace	Arthur Treacher
Dr. Rochard	Frank Reicher
Hastings	Purnell Pratt
Breezy	Lucien Littlefield
Dr. Preston	Theodore Von Eltz
John Stone	Frank Maye

'Magnificent Obsession,' Universal-John M. Stahl's fil ization of a long-time best-seller, is another in a recent crop of artistic film successes which is a credit to the industry on the whole, and which should also do its quota of good business. It's a strong woman's picture and a cinch for the matinee trade.

If its 110 minutes' running time makes it appear a bit sluggish, the sensitive and intelligent development and motivation of this poignant romance ultimately makes the initial lethargic progression appear justified. As tender a romance as 'Smilin' Thru,' and of the same highly sensitized texture—one reminding not a little of the other—Stahl has paced this Universal special in fine gait.

'Magnificent Obsession,' with its metaphysical theme of godliness and faith likewise seems to enter the exhibition arena at a psychologically appropriate period. Whether construed in relation to present-day world turmoil, or to a very limited sphere within the average auditor's immediate contacts, the spiritual background of 'Magnificent' is magnificent.

Stahl and his three-ply scripting battery of George O'Neil, Sarah Y. Mason and Victor Heerman, have captured the spiritual background of the 'infinite power' and projected it with considerable suasion and intelligence, never sacrificing or ever eclipsing the basic romance elements.

The fine restraint throughout, the excellent histrionics of almost every character, the projection of the puppets and the general aura, as a result, do much to sustain what are sometimes too obvious moments.

The basic marquee elements in motion pictures being what they are, it's patent that Irene Dunne and Robert Taylor, co-starred, must clinch for the finale, even though it was a drunken mishap by the wastrel (Taylor) which had something to do with the death of the venerable Dr. Hudson. Miss Dunne is the widow of Dr. Hudson, and Taylor's ultimate reformation is achieved because of the romantic attachment for her. That he becomes a Nobel prize-winner and a surgical marvel in six or seven years, finally achieving the restoration of her sight (after a high-powered battery of medical savants had previously failed to accomplish anything) is rather deftly skirted, for all the theatricalism of the basic elements.

In Paris, during this powwow of surgical marvels who held forth little hope for her sight, one of the high spots of the romantic sequences occurs when Taylor 'shows' Miss Dunne the sights of the gay French capital, through his eyes. The scene atop the Montmartre hill underneath the Sacre Coeur is a punchy sequence that exercises the femmes' kerchiefs.

The time lapse of six years during which Taylor is pursuing his medical studies as a brain specialist, and the final discovery of the long-ill woman in a Virginia retreat, culminating in a miracle operation, is the final heart-tug in a punchy sequence.

It's towards the final hour of this 110 minutes' footage that recognition of the cutting-room difficulties facing the U artificers come significantly to the fore. Difficulties in pruning, for footage acceleration in the forepart, are evident. Any untoward speeding-up might have defeated the general romantic structure and the natural motivation to faithfully plant all the detail.

Cast, cameraman (John Mescall) and the librettists, along with Director Stahl, rate all the bouquets coming their way for the combined good results of their total efforts. Besides the stellar pair, Charles Butterworth and Betty Furness in secondary prominence scintillate. Sara Haden is capital in a serious but not too sombre assignment. Ditto Ralph Morgan, who makes his semi-spiritual influence ring true. The rest are bits, but Arthur Treacher, again the butler with the Oxford brogue, and Inez Courtney in a maid bit more than sustain their limited opportunities.

Besides its general creditability to the industry, U has a box-office entity of no small caliber. It should capitalize on it handily. Abel.

FIRST A GIRL

(BRITISH MADE)
(Musical)

Gaumont-British production and release. Stars Jessie Matthews; features, Sonnie Hale, Anna Lee. Directed by Victor Saville. Scenarist, Marjorie Gaffney; songs by Maurice Sigler, Al Goodbert, Al Hoffman; dances, Ralph Reader; musical director, Louis Levy; camera, Glen MacWilliams. At Roxy, N. Y., week Jan. 3, '35. Running time, 78 mins.

Elizabeth	Jessie Matthews
Victor	Sonnie Hale
Princess	Anna Lee
Robert	Griffith Jones
McLintock	Alfred Drayton
Beryl	Constance Godridge
Goose Trainer	Eddie Gray
Saraphina	Martita Hunt
Singer	Donald Stewart

This English-made picture has certain appeal, several tuneful songs and nice backgrounds, but doesn't quite ring the bell. Film is deserving of consideration, but will not attract universally. Title is no asset and Jessie Matthews and Sonnie Hale have not attained sufficient popularity in America to surmount the story.

Miss Matthews is a manikin who neglects her duty to do a female impersonator a favor by appearing for him in a music hall, when he has lost his voice. She's a hit and so the hoax grows wild and becomes an involved affair, traversing the lengths of the Continent. It becomes a bit too involved from here on so that before the finish audiences may be just as amazed to determine who is personating whom. The situations, action and dialog take curious turns.

In men's clothing, Miss Matthews' charm is handicapped. Both she and Sonnie Hale perform in typical musical comedy fashion and are okay this way. When Miss Matthews sings or dances, she is what is to be desired. If Sonnie Hale appears to force his comedy this is accountable to the snail pace of the dialog. One of the film's prime defects is the lethargic tempo.

The songs by Maurice Sigler, Al Goodhart and Al Hoffman (all three Americans imported by GB) is rhythmic and fetching but cannot overcome the retarded movement of the book.

Miss Matthews handles four of the six tunes, which is an asset to the picture. A crooner yodels the other two, 'Little Silkworm,' and 'Wiggle My Ears,' the second of which is the more attractive. 'Written All Over My Face' lingers longest, as sung by Miss Matthews, with 'Half-and-Half,' next. 'Say the Word and It's Yours' is pretty good too.

The photography doesn't help. Griffith Jones, who appeared on Broadway with Elisabeth Bergner, is in the cast and rather matter-of-fact in his role. Shan.

ONE-WAY TICKET

Columbia release of B. P. Schulberg production. Features Lloyd Nolan, Peggy Conklin, Walter Connolly. Directed by Herbert Biberman. Novel by Ethel Turner; adapted by Vincent Lawrence, Joseph Anthony, Oliver H. P. Garrett and Grover Jones; camera, Henry Freulich. At Globe, N. Y., week Dec. 28, '35. Running time, 66 mins.

Jerry	Lloyd Nolan
Ronnie	Peggy Conklin
Captain Bourne	Walter Connolly

Willa	Gloria Shea
Mrs. Bourne	Nana Bryant

'One-Way Ticket' is probably destined for two-way bookings. It possesses a good deal of action and where patronage is not critical the plot may seem different. However, it is the plot that makes the picture a weak sister. It is 'different' at the cost of credulity.

Actually the villain of the piece is not one of the characters. He is a banker who scuttled a bank. Technicalities in the law have saved him from jail. All this is conveyed as the picture opens by means of newspaper headlines. The banker is never seen. A depositor (Lloyd Nolan) reacts to the news that the banker has gone scot-free by turning robber. He steals from the bank exactly $4,643.87 which is the precise sum he lost. That gesture is a tip-off to the cops who quickly apprehend the depositor who is tried and convicted. As he gets the rap from the judge he blurts out, 'Why don't you send the real thief to jail?'

Actually, the story unfolds a preachment not that the law is fair or just but that jails are tough places to get out of. About a dozen prisoners making a getaway with two guards for shields are mowed down by machine-gun fire in the prison yard. Every man is killed including the guards. Later when the depositor does escape his life is pictured as one of prolonged hiding out that must inevitably end, and does end, in recapture.

Romance between the depositor-convict and the daughter of the head keeper (Walter Connolly) culminates in a furtive marriage and honeymoon after the convict escapes. This part may appeal to the girls or it may not since women in the bulk are presumably too practical to tie themselves up with guys who work for the government in jute mills.

Peggy Conklin, newcomer to the screen, attracts attention as a possibility. She is pretty in an off-standard type and displays a capacity to troupe. Lloyd Nolan carries the major acting load with Walter Connolly rather miscast as the chief jailer. Land.

Miniature Reviews

'Magnificent Obsession' (U). Capital romance, a cinch for the femme trade. Irene Dunne and Robert Taylor in top roles.

'First a Girl' (GB). British-made musical with Jessie Matthews-Sonnie Hale, pleasant enough.

'One-Way icket' '(Col). Melodramatic romance. Action enough but cast and story lightweight.

'Navy Wife' (Fox). laire Trevor and Ralph Bellamy in problem play of naval officers and their wives. For the duals.

'Dance Band' (FD). Buddy Rogers and June Clyde in British-made musical of light texture.

'Lady in Scarlet' (Ches). Fair supporting program murder mystery. Reginald Denny in lead.

'Gun Smoke' (Kent). For western for dual billers.

'Frontier' (Amkino). Usual draggy propaganda, with remarkable air shots which will command attention.

'Frontier Justice' (FD). Hoot Gibson western, swift moving with plenty of physical combat. Good film of its type.

'Death From a Distance' (Ches). A lot of plot and sustained suspense saves this one as dual biller material.

NAVY WIFE

Fox release of Sol M. Wurtzel production. Features Claire Trevor and Ralph Bellamy. Directed by Allan Dwan. Based on Kathleen Norris' novel, 'Beauty's Daughter'; screen play, Sonya Levien; additional dialog, Edward T. Lowe; musical direction by David Buttolph; camera, John Seitz and Rudolph Mate. At Globe, N. Y., week Jan. 4, '36. Running time, 72 mins.

Vicky Blake	Claire Trevor
Dr. Quentin Harden	Ralph Bellamy
Mrs. Keats	Jane Darwell
Butch	Warren Hymer
Dr. Pete Milford	Ben Lyon
Serena Morrison	Kathleen Burke
Dr. Keats	George Irving
Susan Harden	Anna Howard
Norton	Jonathan Hele
Mamie	Ruth Gillette
Spike	John Kelly
Jenny	Susan Fleming
Dr. Barratt	Murray Alper

Coming at the tag end of a long flotilla of navy pictures, this pleasing little feature is likely to suffer. While it answers to some extent that old question of whether the U. S. naval officers or their wives suffer the most, the film builds up the love and marriage problem material that was contained in Kathleen Norris' story, 'Beauty's Daughter.' If sold on these lines, picture probably will have better chances, especially for the dualers.

So much extraneous matter has been permitted to creep into early sequences that the director obviously had to skim the surface of more moving scenes when plot actually hits its pace. 'Navy Wife' goes navy in a big way at outset, treatment of some sequences smacking of slapstick.

Claire Trevor gives a smooth, effective performance, particularly good in the intoxication scene when the lone romance of her life seems about to tumble. Ralph Bellamy as the surgeon who falls in love with Vicky contributes a satisfying portrayal without overdoing. Warren Hymer, in one of his typical humorous roles, is a happy choice for the part of the gob who's always getting hurt to see the hospital nurses. Kathleen Burke is tops as the siren while Ben Lyon is much better than usual as the rival doctor. Wear.

DANCE BAND

(ITISH MADE)

irst Division release of Alliance production, (British International Picts). Features Charles (Buddy) Rogers and June Clyde. Directed by Marcel Varnel. Scenario and dialog, Roger Burford, Jack Davies, Jr., Denis Waldock; musical director, Harry Acres; songs, Mabel Wayne, Desmond Carter, Arthur Young, Sonny Miller and Jack Shirley; camera, Bryan Langley. At Fox, Brooklyn, week Jan 2, '36, as half of double bill. Running time, 64 mins.

Buddy Milton	Buddy Rogers
Pat Shelley	June Clyde
Steve Sarel	Steve Geray
Anny (Ginger)	Magda Kun
Lawes	Fred Duprez
Jim	Leon Sherkot
The Drunk	ichard Hearne
Spike	Hal Gordon
Bourne	Albert Whelan
The Dancers	Jack Holland
	June Hart

'Dance Band' is one of those light, harmless little musicals occasionally transported from the British Isles for American consumption. It has to depend entirely on Buddy Rogers, away from the Hollywood scene directing his dance band. Film appears to be best suited for the double-bill corral. Too lightweight all around.

Boy and girl both are dance orchestra leaders, entered in a big band contest. That's the story. Entirely too thin to manipulate successfully. More plot has been packed into some better American-made short features, and with more effect. Nobody doubts for a second that both Buddy Rogers' band and June Clyde's girl combination won't tie for top honors in the competish.

Picture affords Rogers an opportunity to strut his stuff as an all-round musician while conducting his orchestra. It also introduces capable girl band and several other musical outfits. But this British-made film will not add anything to Buddy Rogers' screen acting laurels.

June Clyde, co-featured with Rogers, turns in a smart performance with her ballading and stepping pages. She shows vast improvement compared to previous appearances in U. S. films. Without much aid from the lines or story, Steve Geray and Magda Kun, in two most important secondary roles, evidence real possibilities. Latter, an Hungarian film recruit, boasts a pleasing voice, has looks and a certain amount of foreign piquancy. Geray is also of Magyar extraction, both working as a team.

Dialog is head and shoulders above plot itself, being particularly sprightly for an English production. Of the four tunes introduced, only 'Turtle-Dovey' and 'Valparaiso' appear to have a chance. 'Valparaiso' is plugged heavily. It provides music for the dance team of Holland and Hart that's satisfactory but no panic. Feature handsomely mounted. Wear.

LADY IN SCARLET

Chesterfield release of George Batcheller Production. Features Reginald Denny, Patricia Farr. Directed by Charles Lamont. Story by Arthur Hoerl; scenarists, Robert Ellis, Helen Logan; camera, M. A. Anderson. At Colonial, N. Y., half of double feature program, three days, Jan. 4-6, '35. Running time, 65 mins.

Oliver Keith	Reginald Denny
Ella Carey	Patricia Farr
Alice Sayre	Claudia Dell
Tom Pennyward	James Bush
Julia Sayre	Dorothy Revier
James Shelby	John St. Polis
Dr. Boyer	Jameson Thomas

Fair murder mystery in which the gentleman-lawyer is the sleuth-hero who succumbs to the charmer who likes to tail him around from office to cafe and anywhere. Customary boiler plate ingredients of formula meller in which a second murder occurs to clue the first crime, Shapes up as okay supporting program material.

The film's love interest is between the lawyer and his wise-cracking secretary who does her work mostly outside, over bars and cocktails. There's a laugh or two in such moments but the romantic angle of the film is too light to be deeply amusing or interesting.

The crimes are committed conversationally, with the action exhibited post mortem style.

Reginald Denny bears most of the work, and probably never has had to perform a tougher acting job. Shan.

GUN SMOKE

Willis Kent release of Montie Montana production. Features Buck Coburn and Marion Shilling. Directed by Bartlett Carre. Film editor, Roy Claire; camera, Harvey Gould. At Chaloner, N. Y., half double bill two days, Jan. 4-5, '36. Running time, 57 mins.

Steve Branning	Buck Coburn
Jean Culverson	Marion Shilling
Haws McGee	Bud Osborne
Shorty	Benny Corbett
George Culverson	Henry Hall
Sam Parsons	Roger Williams
Felipe	Dick Botiller
Long Distance Jones	Nelson McDowell
Abner Sneed	Philo McCullough
Eli Parker	Lloyd Ingraham
Pecos	Tracy Layne
Sheriff	Lafe McKee

In 'Gun Smoke,' as usual, the horses and the guns work the hardest. The former are always running hard, the latter always hogging the camera. Not room for much else except the old tried-and-true plot ingredients, mixed up in the same old way and never very exciting. Designed for the double-feature stands where they are just looking for a western to fill.

No author or adaptor of story, if any, is credited. It may be that the producer, Montie Montana, and others associated with him in the picture just made it up as they went along, remembering a formula that's new to no one. There's the father whose ranch is being menaced; his pretty daughter and the gallant stranger who comes along out of nowhere, not only to become foreman but the principal romantic weakness of the girl as well. Plenty of shooting, fast drawing of six-shooters, flying lead, local lawyer-heavy and a kidnapping. Any audience is always ahead of the story.

Buck Coburn heads the cast, a lad who's fast on the draw, has the best-looking horse, dresses the nicest, fights the best and can do acrobatics in the saddle. The fist fight he has with a tough hombre would be like matching Jackie Cooper with Joe Louis and have Jackie win. Coburn isn't a good western type but he has a nice nag and gets all the breaks. The girl is Marion Shilling, satisfactory in a type role. Philo McCullough and Haws McGee provide menaces which are also formula, while Benny Corbett and Nelson McDowell lend some comedy relief. Char.

FRONTIER

(RUSSIAN MADE)

Amkino release of Mosfilm and Ukrainfilm. Stars S. Shkurat. Directed by Alexander Dovjenko. Camera, Edouard Tisse. At the Cameo, N. Y., commencing Dec. 24, '35. Running time, 86 mins.

Stepan Glushak	S. Shagaida
His Son, Vladimir	S. Stoliarov
Vasil Khudiakov	S. Shkurat
Two Samurai	L. Kan
	I. Kim
Chinese Partisan	G. Tzoi
Young Chukcha	N. Tabunasov
Aniky Shabanov	V. Dobronravov

(In Russian)

By and large just another example of the Russian idea of an evening's entertainment. Probably over there, where it was titled 'Aerograd,' it is regarded as an important political message, chiefly directed to Japan, but with other nations listening in if they desire. Over here it is somewhat crude drama but ending in 10 or 12 minutes of the most remarkable series of airplane shots probably ever offered in film. Some hint in recent newsreel shots of mass parachuting, but that was just a taste.

Hollywood in its most lunatic moments never dared dream of an air picture of this magnitude, and it has been photographed with rare effectiveness by Edouard Tisse, the cameraman who created the lens effects in 'Potemkin' and '10 Days That Shook the World.' If the idea of the drama were less fantastic and about 20 minutes of repetitious action could be cut out, this might stand a chance in general release, but American audiences in general will not sit quietly for about an hour waiting for the show to start, and there is nothing to interest the outsider up to then. English subtitles are no great help.

Made in Eastern Siberia, the plot concerns the efforts of Soviets to establish the city of Aerograd on the shore of the Japan sea, for what reason it is easy to conjecture. Japanese (never directly mentioned as such) cooperate with the Kulaks and the Old Believers, or steadfast Greek Orthodox, to defeat this end. They are led by Vasil, who lies to his old comrade who is seeking an escaping Jap. The comrade, Stepan, is a forest ranger whose son is in the air service. Van Lin, a Chinese, tips off Stepan as to what is up. He gathers his forces and makes attack, shooting down Vasil for the traitor he is, torn between old friendship and loyalty to the Workers. The son and some of his air forces come to their relief and the battle is virtually over.

Then comes the air stuff. Full screen titles seek to whip up the interest by telling from which provinces each batch of planes come, and the air is filled with ships, single motors, multi-motors, side view and full on. The air is so filled with parachutes that it is impossible to estimate the number, but more than 200 must be within the camera field at the same moment, and by skillful cutting it seems there must be thousands. The various fleets are all the same planes, but even at that there must be seen every plane in the air that Russia owns, could beg or borrow. It is breath-taking.

There is an anti-climax (to the disinterested) in the march to the selected site, with choral singing, long lines of men and finally Stepan exulting in the triumph in which his son has a part. It is all definite notice to Nippon that Russia can camp on her front doorstep overnight, but it is a splendid spectacle.

The drama suffers from the usual Russian faults and shines with the usual Russian merits. Their directors seem unable to evaluate scenes, with interminable stretches between vital moments, filled with going and coming. When Stepan comes upon the little Jap party he shoots down the Russian traitors and then apparently chases one of the 'not Russians,' as the sub-title suavely puts it, halfway across Siberia before he runs him down.

The Jap then asks permission to address his audience of one and epitomizes, none too briefly, the hatred of his nation for the Soviets. Stepan shoots him. Five minutes excess action. Almost 10 minutes are occupied at the opening with scenes of a few cruising planes, against beautiful cloud effects, but nothing happens until long after it has become monotonous. Scenes which an American director would dispose of in brief footage are long drawn out, and costly moments are spent permitting the actors to get from one point to another.

But the acting is often vital with Stepan, rugged and forceful, dominating most of the scenes, though the Vasil of Shkurat has his inspired moments. Stoliarov, the aviator son, has a couple of scenes, and Tzoi, the nearest approach to a comedy relief, does much. The two Jap players, Kan and Kim get chances. The women are negligible and not mentioned in the cast.

If Russia ever catches the idea of dropping propaganda and cutting the pictures to suit the general taste, great things might happen. But just now there seems to be no hope. With actors, directors and cameramen, they need only directing heads possessed of a little common sense. Chic.

Man From Gun Town

Nat Ross production for Puritan release. Stars Tim McCoy. Directed by Ford Beebe, assisted by Norman Demming. No story credits. James Diamond, camera; Theron Triplett, sound; Robert Johns, film editor. Running time, 60 mins. At Arena, N. Y., three days on dual bill, Jan. 5-6-7, '36.

Customary theme herein presented is surmounted by treatment and development accorded. Everyone concerned pitched in to the Tullest extent. Result is an above par mustang meller that should delight the cow-loving customers. They still cheer the arrival of the hero at the psychological moment here, so it's a cinch the country cousins will react similarly. Only incongruous item is appellation 'gun men' appended to desperado characters in what is supposed to be a tale of the unsullied west. Presence of a stage coach in these times adds to perplexities.

Tale revolves around the usual villainous twain seeking to mulct a lone frail (lille Seward) of her inherited real estate. Preponderance of situations and characters makes it difficult reading but easier visualization. urry call for her long lost brother costs him his hide. Tim McCoy in usual rambling assignment arrives in time to brother and mother the now totally alone heroine even though suspected of putting her brother away.

More than sufficient action and thrills are entailed in a solid hour's unreeling of this prairie epic. A little conjecture is provided by the freak finale when Tim rides away to purge himself (mentally) of the killings forced on him to win vindication and the exclamation of the old homestead, leaving heart interest minus osculation, but hinting a return.

To comment individually on technical and thespic end would be superfluous. Production is westerly okay.

FRONTIER JUSTICE

First Division release of Walter Futter production. Stars Hoot Gibson. Directed by Robert McGowan. From novel by Col. George E. Rodney; screenplay, W. Scott Darling; camera, Art Reed. At the Arena, N. Y., half of double bill, two days, Jan. 1-2, '36. Running time, 56 mins.

Hoot Gibson is a likeable although smart aleck hero in this western drama of a localized fight between sheepmen and cattlemen over range water rights. The picture moves swiftly; has plenty of horse trotting and strongman action, besides some snappy vistas. Meets the mark as a supporting program number.

In this story the general western formula is reversed. Cattlemen are the victims of the sheepmen. It's a matter of control of certain water rights and the sheepmen frame the owner, sending him off to an insane asylum. Gibson is the long absent, scapegrace son of the victim. He is a practical joker, handing out trick cigars and exploding matches to folks in his loose moments, but he gets his man, saves his pappy, and grabs the gal, the simulant of a romance.

Now and then one of the homespunners chatters indistinctly but in the main the dialog is coherent, even if not particularly niccoy lainsmen palaver. Shan.

(In German)

'Growing Youth' resembles 'Maedchen in Uniform,' only in the locale of both, a boarding school. Both deal with a study of adolescent youth as found in a supposedly exclusive boy or girl schools. But in this one that study is not sufficiently intensified.

The three pretty blondes are dragged in by their golden tresses to build up the puppy-love angle, but in doing so, much incongruous matter is injected. Same effect might have been better obtained by permitting one or two love affairs just outside the walled-in confines of the school.

Too much stress has been placed on the routine and incidental goings-on in the school. No matter how educational such matter might have appeared while the film was being produced, on the screen it's only tiresome and sticky detail.

Film is at fault here in making the major femme heroine almost unattractive as compared with other girl. Another apparent flaw is the premise why the two would fall for the gangling youth.

Hertha Thiele, who was in 'Maedchen-in Uniform,' contributes excellent work whenever given the opportunity. Peter Voss, as the attractive professor, does a finished job in a difficult assignment. Albert Florath is effective as the adolescent boy while a well-rounded performance is turned in by Heinrich George as head of the school. Marieluise-Claudius, though smothered in a secondary character, screens as well as anybody.

Carl Froehlich did a splendid megging job while photography is a highlight of the picture. Far overboard on running time, with a scissoring essential for effectiveness. Ran here single feature, which is a tip-off on its length. Wear.

Another French film of top class. This picture, like another recent release 'L'Equipage' ('The Crew') has everything a film needs. Strange thing is that both these successes are about French armed forces: 'L'Equipage' about aviation, and 'Veille d'Armes' about the navy. French navy collaborated in its making, but it's propaganda film, nor does it suggest the educational. It runs two full hours, and there isn't a dull minute. Story grips right from the start, and never lets up.

Annabella, who has looked weak in recent pictures, comes back in this one to her old class as the first French femme star. Victor Francen is from Henri Bernstein's Gymnase Theatre troupe. Rest of the cast is all sterling, too.

As a production, the film is oke, too. Naval shots are fine and authentic. There is a thrilling, if not terrifically elaborate, naval battle, in which the action follows closely the individual characters, thus preserving the mark as a supporting program number.

Importers for the American specialized theatres shouldn't miss this one, and English or Hollywood producers who are interested in remakes should see it, too.

Story hinges on the accidental and secret presence on board a cruiser of the captain's young wife while the ship is steaming on an international mission which finally results in her sinking. Girl (Annabella) is locked in a young officer's cabin (Robert Vidalin) and he, although he once loved her, respects her completely. This difficult situation, which could be ridiculous, is put over with complete plausibility, so well is the film directed and acted.

Picture works up to a climax in the battle in which the ship is sunk, and after it's all over the audience is surprised to find that the story goes on and gets better, in a courtmartial of the captain (Victor Francen) for having lost his vessel. Here is a courtroom sequence (in which Marcel l'Herbier, the director, is a specialist) that reaches tops in tenseness.

If the French film industry can keep on making them like this, it can be favorably compared with any in the world. tern.

KIROV

(RUSSIAN MADE)

Moscow, Dec. 16.

Anniversary film of the late Sergei Mironovich Kirov, Leningrad leader who was assassinated last year. Was directed by Y. M. Biloloi.

Excellent work by the director, who has assembled shots of the dead hero taken by news cameramen over a period of 15 years and turned it into good film story.

Picture follows closely Kirov's revolutionary career, beginning in 1919 as military organizer of the 11th Army, and taking him up to the point when he was head of the Leningrad Soviet in 1934.

Spectacular finish when Stalin, Molotov, Kaganovich and others carry his ashes to Red Square for burial in the Kremlin wall.

Only likely appeal is to 'patriots.' Bennett.

Death From a Distance

Cheste eld release of Maury M. Cohen production. Features Russell Hopton, Lola Lane and George Merion, Sr. Directed by Frank Strayer. Story and adaptation, John Krafft; film editor, Roland Reed; camera, M. A. Anderson. At Chalmer, N. Y., half double bill, two days, Jan. 5-6, '36. Running time, 73 mins.

Detective Lt. Ted Mallory..Russell Hopton

Detective Regan.....Lew Kelly
Langsdale.....Wheeler Oakman
Morgan.....Robert Frazer
German.....(Cornelius Keefe
District Attorney.....Capt. E. Calvert

A whodunit which manages to stand up on the strength of a well-plotted if not expensively produced story and a careful maintaining of suspense. The cast is no wow and production only fair, but the dual feature fans will accept this murder mystery okay.

Russell Hopton as a detective lieutenant, and Lola Lane, playing a reporter, are paired for romantic interest, but it's of the friendly enemy sort. Action gives itself over seriously and tenciously to solving a murder so that it has little time for any spooning. George Marion, Sr., featured with the other two, is trapped in the final reel as a murderer who used an ingenious method to kill. Most of the action is laid in a planetarium, with many of the characters astronomers.

As usual everyone but the cops look guilty, plot carefully planting suspicions all around. One even suspects the girl reporter who dishes most of the light comedy in ribbing the cops. Lew Kelly is a good foil for her. Hopton is butt of many of her cracks also.

Picture is rather long, 73 minutes. It could have been edited down a little closer for probably better results and, for dual billers, more convenient length. At points there is too much police routine. Char.

BATTLE FOR KIEV

(RUSSIAN MADE)

Moscow, Dec. 15.

Soyuzknokhronika release. Music by R. Stelnberg.

(In Russian)

Film of Red Army maneuvers held recently in Kiev, capital of the Ukraine, made by 36 cameramen and four directors in a big way. Given every facility, the operators have turned out a literal thriller.

The great city of Kiev is being attacked by the enemy 'Blues.' Citizens are warned of the air attack by radio and factory sirens.

The 'Reds' launch a defensive. The 'Blues' make a mass parachute landing in the rear of the 'Reds.'

More than 2,500 parachutists whirl about in the air at one time. This is the most impressive scene. Bennett.

Show Biz Bills

and is anxiously awaited by the broadcasting industry and by film exhibitors and hotels, confronts indefinite delay, the result of outspoken antagonism on the part of Chairman William I. Sirovich of the House Patents Committee. Wrapped up in several other proposals far more interesting to his mind, Sirovich has indicated he has no intention of even holding hearings on the Senate-ratified plan to strike minimum damage awards out of the existing law.

A new allen-actor bill saw daylight on the opening day of the session when Chairman Samuel Dickstein of the House Immigration Committee dropped into the hopper a proposal to consolidate previous amendments to the contract labor laws. With his own bill to tighten admission regulations on the House slate, ickstein proposed a double-barrelled resolution curbing entry of musicians and actors not of distinguished ability and putting all foreign entertainers on a reciprocal quota basis. No hearings have been planned yet, but the New Yorker said he would press this measure during the session.

The film industry is waiting impatiently for reports of three groups which have investigated financial affairs of major producer-exhibitors, but does not expect the findings will result in legislation of immediate consequence. Expected to urge new laws covering bankruptcies and reorganizations, the Sabath (ouse) and McLaughlin (Senate) committees, as well as the Securities and Exchange Commission will tell what they discovered in the course of summer and fall probes into Paramount, RKO, Fox, and Fox-West Coast theatre properties.

All three reports are expected to be outspokenly critical of methods and practices revealed in reorganizing and refinancing film corporations. Individuals who participated in the different inquiries have displayed sharp disapproval of the way affairs of certain film corporations were handled by bankers, officers, protective committees, receivers, and trustees.

Carry-overs from the 1935 session include the Celler and Pettengil bills to prohibit block booking; the Monaghan bill establishing Government ownership of all broadcasting facilities; the Rudd bill allotting radio time and channels for educational and other non-commercial uses; the Walsh bill requiring State Department approval for foreign radio broadcasts; several bills, introduced by Representative Scott and indorsed by the American Civil Liberties union relating to political use of radio, air censorship, and a broadcasting research commission; the Culkin bill creating a Federal commission to regulate leasing of films; the Cannon bill prohibiting shipment of films of questionable character; and the Quinn and Celler bills lifting present restrictions on prize fight pictures.

bring him publicity. The judges took a stern view of the publicity motive behind the lavish outlays, which included purchase of liquor and losses at poker games, declaring 'the petitioner's efforts to obtain publicity seem to have been directed toward the matter of building up good will rather than the development or increase of a business enterprise.'

Money spent for purchase and maintenance of an airplane cannot be deducted for tax purposes when the ship was used for personal purposes, but operation and depreciation expenses are deductible during the period when the craft was being used commercially in pictures, the decision said. Denny was permitted to figure depreciation at the 20% rate fixed by law instead of at 40% which he claimed was more equitable.

Biggest item in the dispute was the sum of $11,000 received from Universal which Denny said was a 'gift.' Decision noted that the money was in return for 'a consideration' since the money was to be Denny's only if he stayed in Universal's employment upon the exercise of an option in his contract. Board said the money should be included as income in 1926, although paid in 1925, because it did not become Denny's until the contract clauses were carried out the following year.

Md. State Censor Insp. Sues for Theatre Fall

Baltimore, Jan. 7.

Howard Harding, inspector on the Maryland State Censor Board, has sued the Park Theatre Corp. for $5,000 damages for injuries sustained when he toppled down stairs recently at the Majestic, south side nabe.

Harding had been inspecting censor seals on the films in the booth at the Maj, and, when leaving, tumbled down the stairs leading out of Booth. The Majestic is currently dark, having shuttered a week ago because of poor biz.

Par's Pard Deals

the company's financial reorganization, however, permitted dividend declaration to be controlled by the partners. There are Paramount interests who feel that this condition permits partners to take advantage of this angle of their deals to influence the company into submission on option repurchase retirements by withholding proper dividends. Also by writing up depreciation charges. It is figured, therefore, that efforts will be made by all sides to clear up this angle to mutual satisfaction, and amicably.

Downtown estimates are that maybe around $8,000,000 in cash is being held by various of Par's theatres groups around the country, much of which amount could be declared in dividends to the parent company, were the firm's repurchase clause in such partnership agreements to be taken up. There are others who figure that to do this precipitately would hazard the loss of good manpower which is held to work on a partnership basis, rather than under centralized or decentralized management arrangements, on a percentage basis.

Additionally, it is felt that under management arrangements Par might have to stand all the risk of loss, which it is held is otherwise under partnership deals. Another angle is that should the company throw up its partnerships and assume its rights under the repurchase clauses, it would take much money besides opening up the possibility of the same manpower being freed to compete against Par in such territories.

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

MOSQUE, NEWARK

(THEATRE-BALLROOM)

Newark, Jan. 2.

Radio has always offered its audience the alternative of turning the dial if not entertained. And over here in Newark vaudeville is doing the next best thing. If they don't like the stage or picture show in the theatre, they can walk up one flight to the ballroom at no extra admish and creep till unconscious to the music of a good name orchestra.

The combination show and dancing idea on an all-day grind and at bargain prices is the attempted new policy being tried at the Mosque by John L. McCurdy, vet theatre operator and film man, and Henry (NVA) Chesterfield, plus the Prudential Life Insurance Co.

Mosque is the former Shrine temple of Newark. As a commercial theatre proposition it has been operated by the Fabians and later Warner Bros., and not successfully by either. Warners let it go when its lease expired and the Nobles tossed it back to Prudential, which had the mortgage. It had been dark a couple of years until McCurdy and Chesterfield came along and interested the Prudential people into going into the show business. In any event it's bound to show the Prudential people whether or not they should stick to the life insurance business.

If plenty of ballyhoo for a novel idea, with a good stage show and fine dance music, can overcome a picture weakness in what has been known as a strictly picture-minded town, then the Mosque with its new policy is going to get over. There's nobody around, here or anywhere else apparently, who doesn't think a bad picture is better than no picture at all. So the Mosque is playing pictures along with everything else, on the theory that it must, and despite all the other selling points. And the pictures it's playing are only the pictures it can get. Which isn't much in the way of pictures.

As in similar highly competitive spots, try and get pictures for an indie—out of pity or otherwise. Newark is highly competitive. Warners, Loew, Paramount and RKO all are represented downtown, and WB has five houses in the business and theatre section. Everybody and his uncle seems to be double-featuring, so there's not enough product to go around even for the circuits themselves. Only one house (Paramount) had been playing stage shows until the Mosque stepped in. If this indie threat, and it really is a threat, forces some self-defense stage shows into another theatre or two, that would mean just so much less film consumption and perhaps an extra film now and then to go around. That's about the only hope for the Mosque in a screen way, and in the meanwhile it will have to bank on what it's got, which may be enough at that, with or without good pictures.

On the show caught, second of the new policy, are seven acts headed by El Brendel. 'Mimi' (FD), with Fairbanks, Jr., and Gertrude Lawrence, on the screen. Backing the stage stage are a 17-piece stage band and an m.c.. In the ballroom are Nick Lucas with his new orchestra and a local dance band as the alternate.

Building contains two ballrooms and a rathskeller besides the theatre. The name and local bands play the main ballroom together from Monday to Friday. On Saturday and Sunday the name band stays in the main dancery. while the local aggregation takes over the No. 2 ballroom. Each b.r. has a sandwich and soft drink bar and the customers' lingering is encouraged by the management. There's so much space the place can stand crowds without crowding. On New Year's Eve the theatre and two ballrooms took care of 8,000 people at 40c per (top has since been raised to 55c at night, still reasonable) and there was still plenty of room.

Dancing commences at 7 p.m. and lasts till 1 a.m. during the week. On Saturdays-Sundays they can start hoofing early in the afternoon and up to the same closing hour. Because the whole layout operates under a theatre license the Mosque's ballrooms are the only ones in the state of New Jersey in which dancing is permitted on Sundays.

Name bands for the ballroom booked to follow Lucas are Tom Dorsey, Harry Reser and Roger Wolfe Kahn, in that order. Irving Aaronson and his Commanders inducted the name band policy.

High pressure exploitation by Harry Reiners got the venture off to a fast start. Within the drawing radius for any Newark theater there are about 1,000,000, with Jersey City and other towns near at hand, and Reiners is playing the field. He's especially concentrating on radio, with the Mosque now obtaining what is perhaps a record amount of air space weekly for any theater to date. House goes on a CBS network from WABC, New York, twice weekly, with its name band broadcasting (required in the booking agreement) from 11 to 11:30 Friday nights and the pit band going over the same network Saturday evenings from 5 to 5:30 p.m. Local broadcasts include 24 spots, from announcements to musical programs, a week on WNEW, Newark; announcements daily on WAAT and WHOM, Jersey City, and WHBI, Newark, and a once weekly broadcast of the stage show by WOR.

Theatre, seating 3,850, has been modernized electrically backstage, but otherwise needed no fixing. Most of the chairs are on the rising main floor, with one medium-sized shelf. Fanchon & Marco is booking the vaude.

On the second bill, along with Brendel, are Simpson's Marionettes, clever novelty in which the man and woman operators pull their strings in sight of the audience; Marve Jensen, a dancer with ideas but whose Fred Astaire idea, announced by the m.c., doesn't get very close to Astaire, especially in the dancing; Virginia Verrill, mike-hugging contralto from the CBS artist bureau list, and that first rate pony and dog turn, Gautier's Toy Shop.

No. 2 on the show is one Al White, baritone, providing the amateur touch and introduced as a recent winner on a Nick Kenny (N. Y. Mirror columnist) tyro broadcast. Also announced that a regular tie-up for a weekly winner has been made by the house. That should entitle Gus Edwards to write a column. Or maybe one more Major won't make much difference at this stage of the amateur game.

Al Mitchell m.c.'s the show nicely and conducts a very capable stage band. He seemed to be well known by the audience. The local boy angle also applies to Nick Lucas, who rates as a name with the Walthours and others over here in Joisey.

That El Brendel and Flo Burt haven't lost the good old two-a-day touch, even on the present four-and-five basis, was evident in their click Thursday night. And the audience ate up the rest of the stage fare as well, another good sign.

The Mosque as set up can get by for less than $15,000 a week, which makes it a money-making possibility even without pictures. With pictures it probably would have a cinch. But the others have the pictures, and that's where the vaudeville and the ballroom come in.

LOEW'S MONTREAL

(MARCUS SHOW)

Montreal, Jan. 3.

Big show week currently in Montreal with 'La Vie Paree,' Marcus Show, at Loew's and worst weather this winter can't keep 'em away.

Not much to do with Paree, but the unit contains knockout scenes from China, Bali, Java and what-have-you all over. Leon Miller heads the 65-minute bill, with line of 20 girls wea ing in and out, dressed all we and almost no ways at times, with ostrich feather and peacock plumes and sleazy silks and satins that give the fans plenty of eyefuls.

Scenery is fine, with rain-drop curtains, built-up Chinese temples and pirate ships. Against these comics, tap and toe dancers, singers, acrobats, tumblers, clowns and always girls, all sizes and colors, but all of them easy on the eye.

Miller does plenty in the show, but stand-out act comes a little late when he tap dances with fast and novel steps to a line of girls who imitate his dancing. Does a fast step at finish that gets first real burst of applause in a house dazed maybe by the weather, but anyway a bit Scotch on handing out recognition. Four Nutty Knock-abouts in clown act pass in and out of show all through and get their share. At the finish of the show a standout acrobat act, Five Daredevils, panic the house and get curtain calls. Other acts that do well are Les Sechrist, concertina; Sharon De Vries, songster; Ha Cha San and Arthur Stanley, tap dancer.

Biz a sell-out opening night Friday (3). Features, 'The Rainmakers' (RKO) and 'Broadway Hostess' (WB).

CENTURY, BALTO

Baltimore, Jan. 3.

Reason for four acts again this week is the pic, 'Wilderness' (MG). Yet opening performance, opening day, house had to shunt a two-reeler in because the closing act, 12 Aristocrats, jumped in from Pittsburgh via bus and arrived several hours late because of the weather.

Larimer and Hudson slip on at start, mixed cycle act. Girl works straight, man in tramp getup. Standard, stock stuff bullish with audience that hasn't seen a bike act in over a year.

Sylvia Froos deuces and works up warmest reward on bill. Typifies sort of singer town takes to; she's vivacious, winsome and appears thoroughly the ol' fashioned Southern gal.

Three Fonzal Bros. engage in knockabout antics in next-to-close. Boys disport in too brief turn, and might widen work. And, though their mayhemistic tactics are quite mad enough, they might be executed a little faster.

Aristocrats shut to usual fond tribute from mob. Incidentally, all the music accomp. used throughout act is at least a year old; might well be more recently dated.

Aside from pair of shorts, bill also contains Metro clips and Harvey Hammond organlog.

MINNESOTA, MPLS.

(BURNS & ALLEN UNIT)

Minneapolis, Jan. 2.

Burns and Allen account for the record throngs which have stormed this 4,200-seat theatre this week, bringing it its biggest business since the 1929 boom days. When this comedy couple last played Minneapolis six years ago they had not reached the heights and were just one of the acts on an Orpheum vaudeville bill. Now they return as two of the biggest frogs in the entire amusement puddle.

For this five-week personal appearance tour, starting here, Gracie and her Georgie have surrounded themselves with a group of familiar but first rate entertainers, each outstanding in a particular stage field and, in their entirety, affording diversified and satisfying entertainment. Ben Blue and Cardini, along with others, are calculated to appeal to and pull in individual clienteles. In fact, the stars' selection of acts bespeaks their knowledge of vaudeville and of audience tastes.

The show, which might be labeled a revue instead of a five-act vaudeville bill if it had a line of girls, is run off in front of a stage band of 12 local musicians directed by the B. & A. radio program's orchestra leader, Jacques Renard. The simple house setting of black drapes is touched off by a touch of color decorating the raised band platform. As the comedy, dancing, singing and sleight-of-hand tricks unfold, Gracie and George bounce on and off the stage as mistress and master of ceremonies, butting into some of the acts and hitting the high fun spots generally. There's an informal air to the entertainment which scores even in this huge house. The fact that Burns and Allen themselves work so hard to please and seem to derive so much enjoyment from their cavorting sets them all the better with the audience.

Renard brings on the luminaries immediately, installing Gracie as mistress of ceremonies. She tells the customers they'll have to excuse her if she happens to say the right thing in announcing the acts and, after an exchange of nifties between her and Renard, the Stone-Vernon Foursome go into the first part of their adagio dancing turn, with the three men tossing Miss Stone about with their accustomed sensational abandon.

Gene Marvey, tenor, is on next effectively, doing pop number and a Victor Herbert medley through the mike and clowning with Miss Allen and Burns for a wind-up. Ben Blue follows, working with both Gracie and George and a young woman stooge in some comedy dance numbers and also soloing a bit on the underpinnings.

The Blue act, which stopped the show cold, precedes the suave Cardini whose deft and mystifying sleight-of-hand tricks go over with their usual bang. He continues to produce packs of cards and lighted cigarettes from nowhere, finishing with a large cigar and then a lighted pipe pulled out of the air. For good measure there's a brief comedy bit with George and Gracie and then the Stone-Vernon Foursome return for their thrilling leopard leap, with the girl catapulting herself from atop the cage into her partner's arms for a climax.

Closing the show, Burns and Allen cop more laughs with their nuttiness. Also, Gracie sings through the mike, getting her number across skillfully. It leaves the audience thoroughly pleased.

Show also includes 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and a Leon Errol comedy and Paramount News. All for 60c.

STATE, N. Y.

The week after New Year's finds the lone eagle among Times Square vaudeville houses with a show that's far from being the strongest house has ever played but in Harry Richman, headliner, it has a sturdy hub. Of the four spokes around the hub, the 3 Slate Bros. stand the greatest weight, the others being just acts of a passable nature which neither contribute nor detract much.

Five-act bill will depend on Richman for draught in support of 'So Red the Rose' (Par). Richman has unquestioned pull at the box office and unquestioned entertaining ability. He sings his songs in the same old way and tells his stories no differently than he has for years but it's always palatable.

On the early Friday night show he stayed on the stage for 23 minutes, doing his stint with agreeable alacrity. Richman could have scrammed much quicker, in fact after 12 minutes but he gave 'em their money's worth with some encore work, including 'Music Goes Round and Round.'

Richman is quite a showman. He even gets away with some oldies. Richman stating that he told that one years ago. 'Independent' is the headliner's first number, excellently done. 'I Found A Dream,' not as good for Richman, also well sold, while the medley arrangement of songs he has written, introduced or 'found' over the past decade gets over good. Final encore is a number which Richman sings with Rochelle Hudson in a forthcoming Columbia picture, 'Rolling Along'; fair.

Slate Bros., long standard with their slapstick, singing and dancing, No. 3 for 15 minutes. Their stuff is standard but it still gets the laughs satisfactorily. Closer, 'I'm Tired Over All Songs About the South,' dished out in the Clayton-Jackson-Durante manner, is the best thing the Slates do.

No. 2 act Margot and Libby Robbin, impersonating picture personalities; some okay, some not so hot. Garbo and West the best.

Mickey King, aerialist who features 50 arm turnovers on the web a la the late Lillian Leitzel, opens the show and the Grace DuFaye dance flash closes. Miss DuFaye is an acrobatic dancer who tries to tire people of acrobatic dancing. She has a routine that is about three times as long as it should be. Her work is fairly good but in no way approaches the sensational. Miss DuFaye carries a girl trio of rather agile dancers (Dot, Dona and Teddy) and Eddie Stuart, who does a novelty tap on a piano, keyboard and stool. Business fairly good Friday night.

A.B.C., PARIS

Paris, Dec. 20.

Joan Warner gets top billing among the Americans here this fortnight. Girl who won fame here by being prosecuted for nude dancing last year presents two short dances, one of them, new, titled 'Bird of Paradise.' Music is tough and the orchestra was very bad at the opening show, which may be the reason why the number failed to click. Also the fact that nudes are not customary at this house. This is Miss Warner's first vaude appearance in France, after long terms in niteries and revues.

Other Yank number is Glenn Poppe and Ann, sleight-of-hand act. Boy's smile and nonchalant manner please as much as his prestidigitation. Girl is decorative.

Revelation of the bill is a young Spanish dancer named Adrina Otero, full of pep, charm and personality. Although very inexperienced and a little heavy, she has a lot and will bear watching.

On the French side, surprise is Samson Fainsilber, stage and film tragedian, who blossoms out with a series of imitations and gets away with them. Also he doubles his mimicry with lightning caricatures of the victims. This is his vaude debut.

This is an example of how far the local vaude houses are going in their search for talent. Fainsilber got the booking because of his film name (as did Albert Prejean, Armand Bernard and Fernand Gravey recently), but unlike them he rises to the occasion.

Headliner is Noel-Noel, also of films, but formerly a singer in Montmartre. He returns to his original way of working. Also worthy of note is Jean Lumiere, pop young tenor.

MUSIC HALL, N. Y.

Fast and finely gaited proceedings at Radio City Music Hall for the 10 days coincident with the exhibition of 'Magnificent Obsession' (U). Main screen feature's 110 minutes' running time has curtailed the stage portion, limited the newsreel and totally elided the usual production overture, with result that the rostrum hors d'ouvres are highly palatable.

Per usual, it's a Leon Leonidoff production, up to usually high standard on decor, terpischore and encore. Captioned 'Lucky Vein,' it's in three parts—'Strikes Silver,' 'Strikes Copper' and 'Strikes Gold' in sequence.

Entr'acte 'silver' interlude is on a magnificent disk platform, inclined, against a silver-dollar background, beautifully lighted, costumed and presented. Hilda Eckler is the terp soloist with a 'dirty' blues arrangement of 'Temptation,' which alternates in its scoring against a wailing wah-wah battery of trumpets, and at other moments augmented with a bolero orchestration. The formations are a bit hotcha for the Hall, but a brisk and spicy starter-offer.

'Sriking Copper,' the No. 2 interlude, is only an olio specialty by the Three Wiere Bros., with their concerted legmania. Sometimes the unison of their hoofing formations is captivating; in some spots it misses. But like all sight acts, the size of the Hall acts in its general favor.

'Striking Gold,' finale scene, is themed by 'At the Golden Calf,' an engaging (special) song by Kay Swift-Al Silverman. The Golden Calf is a class bar setting, rising from the pit and revolving in a number of interesting formations. Eddie Miller here vocal-leads the song in nice voice and nifty tails. Gloria Gilbert, a Leitzel on her toes, again whams 'em with her sensational ballerina pirouettes. Miss Gilbert panicked 'em at the French Casino (Broadway nitery) show and repeats her signal click here. The Rockettes and glee club combine into a telling finale. The Rockettes particularly register with a concerted routine to 'Music Goes Round and Round,' arranged against a 'truckin' dance formation by Russell Markert.

GAYETY, BUFFALO

Buffalo, January 3.

Dewey Michaels and Nate Boasberg, having fattened their bankrolls for several prosperous seasons as burlesque and picture impresarios at the Palace, have looked around for new fields to conquer. They have taken over the Gayety, former Columbia burlesque, and reopened it Christmas Day with a policy of six acts and a picture. Business since opening has been encouraging and the boys hope to build the house, despite the fact that it bears the stamp of burlesque, into a vaudeville spot.

George Godfrey, who is booking the show, was on hand for the opening and the air was thick with speeches to the 'folks' pleading for patronage and basing the appeal on a plea for re-employment of actors, rather than on the merit of the offerings.

Opening show probably presented as fair a picture of the present day vaudeville as is obtainable. It can't stand too much criticism. With the house seating only a little over 1,000 at a 25c and 35c top, it does not appear that any considerable money is going to be available for attractions, even though the schedule calls for four shows daily and five on Saturday. This is the first vaudeville as such, which the town has seen since Shea cut the acts off the Hipp program at least five years ago.

What time has done to the type and style of vaudeville acts even in those few years is sad to contemplate. What the absence of shows has done for the public is also sad. One of the main things that has happened as far as audiences is concerned is that there does not appear any longer to be any family trade, upon which in the old days vaudeville was so largely dependent. Inspection of the type of fan present at the Gayety shows would indicate that the draw is composed mostly of rooming house trade, with little of the family style or response in evidence. No doubt much of this is due to the entertainment itself, because a great deal of it gets down to the level of night club and saloon back-room comedy which may be alright over the drinks but certainly does not go where the show has to stand up on its own merits.

It is especially significant that the management was called upon to sit down hard on the acts to keep the antics as well as the conversation within the family range. After running several days it was still liberally sprinkled with profanity and it was still necessary for the house to check each show.

Opening show had the Jack Randall Dancers in the number one spot, the act working well but lacking dressing and production. Turn looks as though it might be okay for floor show purposes but not su ciently ornate for here.

Deuce spot went to Amoros and Janet, slapstick with the woman taking all bows, although the skill and the comedy come exclusively from the male member. Ward, Pinkey and Terry in a comedy knockabout worked snappily. The two boys could get by almost anywhere, particularly with their slow motion stuff, but this act also suffered from lack of proper costuming.

Godin Siamese twins with their brides headline the bill. The act is the old familiar routine and was well liked. The boys added their patriotic bit for the reemployment of vaudeville actors. Distinctly a novelty turn, but with Ripley's Believe It or Nots following as headliners currently it looks as though this is the type of show the house is going for.

Charles Stuart and Al Samuels were in for the two-man act on the bill with both m.c.'ing throughout the show. Some day some one will conceive the idea of running off a vaudeville performance without an m.c., which will be sufficient of a novelty in itself to take vaudeville out of the class of the night clubs. Also, some day some performer will conceive the idea of trying to make good on the strength of hard work and good material minus the wisecracks and insults to the customers which are now generally accepted as stock vaudeville material. Not that Stuart and Samuels are any worse offenders in this respect than most similar acts.

Dagmar the Great closes the bill with a magic performance which stands out over the rest of the bill and drew especial acclaim from the crowd. Dagmar works fast and can hold his own in any spot, although some brushing up, both for literacy and pronounciation, of the patter would be in order, not to mention that almost any substitution for the women members of the troupe would be an improvement.

Picture is 'Unknown Woman' (Col).

The management intends to continue making a play for family trade and has expressed its intention of 'operating' on the acts to keep the palaver suitable. If they can do so, and in addition eradicate the burlesque stigma which attaches to the house, they will undoubtedly be able to continue, and at the same time remove a possible competing spot for burlesque as against their Palace show.

Burton.

ROXY, N. Y.

Certainly, this week, it may be stated that the Roxy's biggest selling point is its price of admission. The show is a potpourri of specialty novelties, and the picture is 'First a Girl' (GB). Biz under snuff when caught Friday night.

The assemblage of acts is curious. Of the five numbers that precede or follow the Gae Foster girls, in the current presentation, one is an equilibristic exhibition and another is a tumbler.

Bob Howard, introduced with a WHN background, is a Harlemanical colored night club product. He swings tunes through a piano mike while rattling the keyboard. Howard pulls the old gang harmony trick for a finish by inviting the audience to join in his presentation of 'Music Goes Round and Round.'

Edgar Bergen is standard, breaking the chain of specialties preceding him by his clever ventriloquistic performance. Bergen builds his laughs to a point where audience anticipation runs ahead of his performance. His femme associate looks new. Her stage gait is the tipoff but the act is clicker in toto.

The acts perform in 'full' against set backgrounds or in front of the travelers. There is no attempt to blend the performance by sequence of action or kind of offering except by background setting. Therefore, it is an episodic and vaude style of a show with the Foster girls' routines breaking it up.

Among the acts is an amateur accordionist, John Skolnikl, winner of a Fred Allen air program contest. Skolnikl wears a tuxedo and for his first of two numbers takes a colored spot that makes his skin look sallow. Has no stage presence.

A distinct novelty, and good, is Lela Moore's 'Dance of Lovers.' Looks like an act at the French Casino. This single offers a clever bit of artistry in her manipulation of arms and legs to simulate a man and woman, with the aid of a costume, half of which is dress the other a trouser leg.

Three Walkmirs, billed, didn't show, replaced by 3 Jackson Bros., who open with their balancing to good results. Later the Stanley Bros. (2) tumble all over the stage in tuxedos. Strange that evening clothes should be utilized for this kind of floor act but the boys are fast, if not original. One number is a rubber drunk.

Freddy Mack leads the band and intros, now and then. One of the line numbers offers the girls in pantaloon pajamas of white under poor lighting effects in specialty bits. A short subject and Universal newsreel round out the program.

EMBASSY, N. Y.

(NEWSREELS)

News items pertaining to the new year of 1936 and the vast N. Y. crowd New Year's eve, political developments and sports hold sway on the new 60-minute program at the Embassy. Little of it is particularly striking but most of material is seasonal enough to be of especial appeal right now. Variety of subjects fairly well split up among the five newsreels, with Metrotone, Universal and Paramount getting a little the better of it because of resourcefulness or ingenious treatment.

Hearst Metrotone copped first laurels on the New Year's eve celebration, with its view of the mob in Times Square and in front of the Paramount building, and good coverage of Mummer's Parade in Philadelphia on Jan. 1. Universal was nearly as well represented with its view of new crop of 1936 babies in a New York hospital and Belle Bart, noted seer, making a 7-year prosperity prediction based on the stars. Paramount chimed in with Al Smith celebrating his 62nd birthday on New Year's day.

Trend in politics covered by nearly all reels, with Dr. Townsend explaining his old-age pension plan, Commander Clark of the Crusaders denouncing it and Senator Vandenberg (Michigan), tossing his hat into the G.O.P. ring.

In the field politic is a fairly detailed explanation of the Unemployment Insurance plan which went into effect first of this year. Paramount dug up some excellent spokesmen on this and then explained it more fully by using an employe and employer in a confab. Loomed as tops for a political topic.

Preparations of Olympic fancy skaters, bob-sledders and swim stars covered by Paramount, Pathe and Metro in such sweeping fashion as to lead sports field. Pathe showed some fancy hunting on Long Island. Race of huskies in Pennsylvania was depicted by Fox while Universal staged a terrapin race at Miami (with interest focused on bathing beauties) and caught big-time bridge match in Madison Square Garden. Newburgh's eastern skating classic by Metrotone.

Humor of program provided by five-man free-for-all rassling match, by Paramount, in Florida; and Lew Lehr's (Fox) comical description of a police dog's tricks.

Norfolk waterfront blaze (Fox) rovided biggest thrill among world news events. Sleet storm at Atlanta that caused $2,000,000 damage was given graphic coverage by Metro.

In the foreign field, Fox did a swell job photographing world's largest dirigible which Germany is constructing. Mexican workers demonstrating for their new president from Par, and Japanese children in mass drill at Yokohama a Metrotone contribution.

War front dimmed into background, with Fox Movietone catching what purports to be a skirmish between Italian troops and natives. Used machine guns but natives refused to drop. Same newsreel did nice job showing change in command and other phases of the situation. Universal again filmed Haile Sellassie as he prepared to leave for the front. Same reel photographed Senator Nye asking for stricter neutrality and a sweeping plea by Gen. Mitchell for a bigger air force in the U. S.

Latest in beach wear, as shown in Florida, provided display of pulchritude as captured by Universal. Government tests on wearing qualities of silk stockings, shoes and auto tires, and models displaying fans of fur came from Fox.

'Wings Over Mt. Everest' (Educational-Fox) the short feature of Emb's program.

SHEA'S, TORONTO

Toronto.

With vaude back at Shea's after its all-pix policy brodied after a brief try, it's a Happy New Year for Jerry Shea, with standees at the rear for the opening night show. Little Jack Little and his band, plus three pick-up acts, comprise the 55-minute stage bill, with the tunesters taking 35 and Little forced out for more bows after house had gone dark for the feature. Everything over with speed and flash and looks like a good week.

Ingratiating personality of Little and his generosity to his men lent a charm to the proceedings which draws strong audience response. Self-effacing but working hard, Little sings, plays and conducts, converses intimately with the audience but never lets down the tempo. Band plays old and new faves, a medley of the Little songs, and does style-imitations of the Hal Kemp, Eddie Duchin, Lombardo and Bernie aggregations, with Little paying warm tribute to fellow-leaders. P.a. announcement has the band here through CBS courtesy. Little's finish in dark stage at an illuminated keyboard centers the attention on his swift finger-manipulations and goes over on novelty.

Three acts preceding the band session all get over without any trouble. Jack Hedley Trio, two men and a girl in ski costumes, open with clever head-to-head stands and some blindfold work on the teeter-board; Joe and Jane McKenna are out for knockabout clowning, a concerto eccentric and a burlesqued adagio, and have no trouble in getting across; Johnny Hyman is back with his blackboard act and showing a surprising knowledge of local politics and inside stuff on the prominent peasants. Whole bill pleases the customers.

Feature, 'Stars Over Broadway' (WB).

National, Louisville

Louisville, Jan. 3.

Layout this week has several weak spots, and pace is generally pretty slow. Has every indication of having been slapped together at the last moment.

House band directed from piano by Elsie Weber, femme leader, is spotted on stage, and bill opens with acrobatic dancing by Five Wonder Girls, each of whom steps out for a bit of contortion work, which did not arouse any noticeable enthusiasm from the audience. Girls appear to be rather muscle-bound and their movements are characterized by a stiffness which is unbecoming.

Unicycle turn next on, with two men doing familiar routines on the wheels. Some good falls garner an occasional laugh and they bow off to mild returns.

Convey and Rowena next for the comedy spot. Femme partner relies on grotesque appearance and gangling figure to snare the chuckles, while man has his moment in an eccentric dance which clicks. Reception mild for their closer, which is a reprise of their eccentric work.

Harry Kahne is the feature act on the bill, and he sells 'em with his mental trickery.

Closer is Irving Edwards, comic, who m.c.'s the show. He found house rather slow to respond to his gags, and they were still tepid when Edwards directed his remarks to incoming patrons, in search of seats. This particular bit has been much overdone by two or three recent masters-of-ceremonies, and there's just the bare possibility that the seat-holders are weary of the repetition. Edwards finally dropped the 'extemporaneous' stuff and wound up his time on the stage with a song and recitation, which sent him off to a good hand. Wonder Girls were then on for a fast routine of acro-dancing, which clicked.

Rounding out bill, 'Forbidden Heaven' (Rep), and Universal news. Biz fair at first show Friday.

Wicde.

G. O. H., N. Y.

House booker rummages through the dustier sections of the files this week and emerges with a four-part bill, three-quarters of which has been on the boards in present form for lo, these many years. One newcomer, Don Trent, puppeteer, completes the lineup. Show is a notch above the ordinary G. O. H. fare in seasoning and performance. Films are 'Peter Ibbetson' (RKO) and 'Grand Exit' (Col), the works commanding a 35c top.

Harry Small and Sisters open with a round of tapping billed as 'Top Hat' stuff. Trio hammer out an ensemble number, then don tin toppers which are subsequently used as miniature platforms for a second ensemble. Windup has some solo exhibitions with Small the standout. Routines are snappily delivered, and the sister pair is becomingly decked out in white overalls with black shirts underneath.

Trent is in the deuce. Emerges from the wings with a gadget resembling a screen which, when unfolded, is the facade of a house for a Punch and Judy show. Later he produces a large colored puppet which is manipulated through a soft shoe tap number. Punch and Judy version strictly stereotype, but okay for the Saturday p.m. drove of kids who called Trent out for the soft shoe puppeteering as an encore.

Abbott and Robey in the trey, assisted by a tall titian who goes through two changes of svelte draperies. Open with a blackout skit good for only sprinkled applause because of the gags, but warm up as they go along. Chatter and comic singing in front of a mike draw better reception, with one of the boys scraping out request numbers in hillbilly style on a fiddle. Pair are equipped with fair voices which could be used to better advantage.

Windup has the Five De Guchis, acrobats, who became a quintet since the addition of a femme. Act has played the bigger houses off an on for years, and has all the glistening equipment and sartorial trappings. Juggling, tumbling and acrobatic strong man stuff delivered with polish. Finish is a socko balance stunt directly over the pit in which one of the lads, lying on his back on an elevated platform, balances another atop a series of chairs. Chairs are kicked away and the top man lands neatly on the feet of his partner.

FOX, PHILLY

Philadelphia, Jan. 3.

Run off in vaude style except that house band is on stage, show at Fox this week has five acts above average in talent. Three Sailors, ballyed as 'direct from European engagement,' headline. Film is 'King of Burlesque' (20th). Caught three days after New Year's Eve opening.

Three Sailors are really tops, too, laying out sundry giggles with dizzy chatter and cut-ups. Most of stuff is fairly old now but it's all presented with slight variation. Team saves best gags for last and leaves 'em wanting more.

New act for this sector, Lorraine Santschi and Josephine Buckley, although not puffed in billing, gives the Gobs a chase for first honors. Girls comely brunette and blonde, show exceptional taste for rags, sporting long black gowns with white lace collars. Offer three unison terp turns and contrive to look like they enjoy it. Doubling at Arcadia International Restaurant.

Balance of show has Jackie Green, m.c., offering the usual Jessel, Cantor, Arliss and Givot mimes; Selma Marlowe, topnotch tapper whose choice of get-up is glaringly bad, and Randall Sisters, harmony trio doing unvaried hillbilly tunes. Latter have fetching faces but they bounce with rhythm and concentrate on the mike instead of looking at the audience.

KEITH'S, BOSTON

Boston, Jan. 2.

Jane Froman heads a bill that can't miss. It carries with it about all the ingredients needed for a general vaude appeal: comedy, top singing, novelty, good hoofing and girl flash.

Miss Froman has not appeared here before in a vaude date, although last year the $3.30 crowd saw her in 'Follies.' Customers obviously don't believe in letting her off with just a few numbers, and she's getting demands for plenty bows and extras this week. Haloed with that Hollywood aura and big radio build-up, she registers from start to curtain speech. One of the most sightly femme vocalers in the big time, Miss Froman sells her songs and personality with a flourish.

Next-to-shut, and separated only by a production number from Miss Froman, is Eddie White, another song-seller, who, in contrast, does not register at the take-off. But, with unrelenting vigor and trouping, he wins over ultimately with the help of some handy gags, until his 'Music Goes Round' demands an encore of the same number.

In the dance end Bankoff and Cannon are outstanding specialists, in a hoke adagio that is meticulously developed and pruned for plenty laughs. Petch and Deauville show twice in some neat acro work that adds much to the consummate flavor of the whole show. Ray Saxe, deucing, is very oke with his flash musical novelty that works into a finale of rope-twirling, sax playing and dancing, simultaneously.

Line flash is supplied by 24 girls who show to good advantage in three production numbers. Line will be held over another week, and that makes sense, judging from their routines in this show.

Billy House takes the m.c. assignment and does himself and the rest of the company a lot of good in tying together the several acts. Blond femme partner assists in a brief bit of grind work as a scene shifter, and she, another woman and a young man help on the skit.

Stage policy here looks set. Jackie Coogan and Betty Grable and Joe Morrison for next week; Ken Murray and 'Sketch Book'; Fats Waller in a sepia show; Joe Cook; Wayne King; Ruth Etting, Toby Wing and the 'Folies Bergeres' are all booked.

On the screen, 'Face' (RKO).

Fox.

HIPP, BALTIMORE

Baltimore, Jan. 3.

With 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) majored on the marquee, the Hipp has good stage show to augment. Lottie Mayer's '16' Diving Girls headline vaude, and prove to be an even dozen in number. Girls are versatile. They slip on for three drills inserted during show. Open on roller skates, giving place momentarily to the Three Whirlwinds, two boys and girl, standard skate turn which whirs through usual assortment of antics, then closing with the act for nice flash.

Professor Lamberti follows with his xylophone, and in his high-water dress suit made of mohair, walter's dickie and red flannel undies. Same ol' stuff, bouncing out to always appreciable audience here. Mayer line follows for a sinuous writhe to score of Berlin's 'Heat Wave.'

Radio Ramblers (3) next with their imitashes, which totaled 18. Much of earlier proxies have been done often here before. The closing counterfeits, which deal with pix nanies, had much better mob value through their freshness.

The Mayer maids closed with that disappearing water ballet. Complete cascaded set used. Incidentally, for those who remember when Lottie Mayer herself did that final high dive at close, her dotter does same chore currently. Miss Mayer originally started this act 27 years ago.

Puttying up rest of bill are usual trailers and Pathe clips. Capacity, lower floor, Friday afternoon.

JEFFERSON, N. Y.

Second week of the return of vaude to this 14th Streeter found the customers reacting lively enough to the individual acts, but not enough customers to indicate a happy future for the combination policy. Main floor at the early Friday night show 30% of capacity. Entertainment as a whole had an air of skimpiness about it, and even at 35c top the five acts as presented and the feature, 'Frisco Waterfront' (Repub) wouldn't be rated by this nabe clientele, or any other, as a bargain.

Plenty of action and acrobatic skill derives from the opening and closing acts, the Four Robeys and Jack Randell & Co., respectively, while Mells, Kirk and Howard make of next to shut a fairly spry session of assorted clowning and harmony. Lillian Carman fills the midway spot with the looks that it takes plus a knack for getting 'em excited over her pop tune deliveries. In No. 2 it's Ross & Bennett, the girl sporting a perpetual giggle and the boy proving that he's passing up a fine talent for eccentric soft-shoe dancing in an effort to become a comic.

Four Robeys mix headstands with hoop juggling and develop a routine that's bright, fast and in a large measure spectacular. They registered solidly.

Ross and Bennett start slowly. Pair's major handicap is material, while the qualities that pull them over the hurdles are the girl's infectious good humor and nifty underpinnings and the lad's adroitness at acrobatic shuffling.

Miss Carman shows she knows her audience by the numbers used for the warming process. She completes the chore in a big way with 'Music Goes Round and Round.' It didn't take any wheedling to get the bunch out front to join her in the yo-hooing portion of the chorus. Brought back for an encore, she gave them a sizzling interpretation of 'Truckin'.'

What the Jack Randall entourage of three men and two girls lack in finish they make up in punchiness of performance. The acrobatic adagio stunts are of the regulation sort, with the smaller of the girls taking one stiff toss after another. What gives the turn a touch of the difference is the skillful stances that the contortionist of the femme twosome took as she swings successively from the arms of each understander.

SMASH TICKET CAGE GLASS, $300 STICK-UP

Minneapolis, Jan. 7.

Bandits who smashed the glass of the ticket window at the Minnesota theatre, ace Publix house, compelled the two cashiers on duty to push across more than $300. The hold-up occurred at 9:30 p. m., when patrons still were buying tickets. It was the second-theatre robbery within a fortnight, the Orpheum box-office also having been held up si ilarly.

Four hours after the Minnesota theatre robbery, a pair of bandits attempted to hold up Bob La Piner, Publix circuit official, but were foiled by the latter.

J. P.-Exhib Hijacked

St. Louis, Jan. 7.

George R. art, owner of a picture theatre in Ferguson, Mo., suburb, was victim of armed highwaymen last week. Driving his automobile on contemplated trip to Washington and New York, Hart was intercepted in Wellston, Mo., robbed of $370 in cash and ejected from car which highwaymen drove away. In car were two steamer trunks and two gladstone bags filled with clothing, two hats in box and an overcoat.

Hart is also Justice of the Peace in his town.

30 BEST OF 1935

West Coast Preview Committee Assn. with Hays Org. Lists 'Em

West Coast preview committee, comprising eight organizations judging pictures in Hollywood, in cooperation with the Hays organizations, has listed its best 30 features for 1935. Committee, which is made up of representatives from Daughters of American Revolution, National Society of New England Women, General Federation of Women's Clubs, California Congress of Parents and Teachers, National Council of Jewish Women, the Women's University Club of L. A., Southern California Council of Federated Church Women and California Federation of Business and Professional Women's Club (L. A. district), considered the year 1935 notable for large number of excellent pictures.

Its 30 best for year are 'David Copperfield,' 'Bengal Lancer,' 'Littlest Rebel,' 'Cardinal Richelieu,' 'Mutiny on Bounty,' 'Top Hat,' 'Ah, Wilderness!' 'Crusades,' 'Louis Pasteur,' 'Anna Karenina,' 'Tale of Two Cities,' 'Crime and Punishment,' 'Dark Angel,' 'Diamond Jim,' 'Informer,' 'Escape Me Never,' 'Midsummer Night's Dream,' 'Peter Ibbetson,' 'Private Worlds,' 'Naughty Marietta,' 'Ruggles of Red Gap,' 'Alice Adams,' 'Sanders of River,' 'Oil for Lamps of China,' 'Scarlet Pimpernel,' 'Broadway Melody,' 'Scoundrel,' 'So Red the Rose,' 'Les Miserables,' and 'Thanks a Million.'

WB Folds Davis, Ptsbg.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 7.

Reopened couple of months ago principally to unload lot of accumulated product, WB's Davis will fold again, Thursday night (9). House had been closed for couple of years, and, with nabes running short of flickers, Warners decided to try the Davis to help out situation and at same time give house another chance.

However, with only class B pictures available and competition plenty stiff, Davis never got started, and has been a consistent loser. Likely WB will make a deal for its sluff product, which has been piling up on shelf through recent WB-Loew pool, or else.

Ed (Hip) Segal, upped to managership of Davis from Ritz when house reopened, goes back to latter house.

HARDING GETS 'CHAIR'

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Next for Ann Harding at Radio is 'Witness Chair.'

Cliff Reid puts the picture in production Jan. 14.

Connelly Starts 'Pastures'

Hollywood, Jan.

Marc Connelly has started rehearsals on 'Green Pastures' at Warners, Henry Blanke supervising.

A trainload of the orig cast arrived last week from the east.

ALL AMERICA OPENS ITS HEART TO A GREAT NEW SCREEN STAR!

THE SENSATIONAL SCREEN DEBUT OF LOVELY LILY PONS IS THE THRILL OF A NATION!..... Selected for holiday-time opening by leading independent and circuit theatres from Coast to Coast, including practically the entire nationwide circuit of RKO Theatres.....backed by a tremendous advertising campaign in local key-city newspapers.....“I Dream Too Much” is playing to excellent business everywhere... permanently establishing Lily Pons as one of the biggest draw names the screen has ever known!

Britons in Hollywood

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Hollywood is just about another Picadilly, declares Herbert Marshall. No longer a surprise to see such players as Cicely Courtneige, Edmund Gwenn, or writers like H. G. Wells and Hugh Walpole, sauntering down the boulevard.

Leslie Howard, over whom the Warner studio is more than mildly concerned because he insists on dueling without guards, lays down the dirk to admit he is pleased with the Romeo role, opposite Norma Shearer, but takes the stand that the stage is his first love and pri rily the actor's medium.

Reg Denny and Basil Rathbone in dressing gowns and towels around their necks, eating German dishes in Metro cafe.

Constance Collier, trailing long lack lace over purple satin underskirt gown of the '80s, remarking on the 'different' feeling it gives one to wear such . . . gentler, y'know.

Henry Stephenson, on the last days of 'Little Lord Fauntleroy,' questioning why studios wait till the last moment to make costumes. Says he works all day and tries on costumes all night to prepare for his next pic.

Jane Darwell in her own seventh heaven on receiving a message from H. G. about her new pic to be made under his supervision in England.

Sybil Jason washing clothes for her family of dolls.

Henry Wilcoxon has renamed his new valet, whom he brought back from London, Jeeves.

Vic MacLaglen probably will not get over to England to make that G-B pic until summer. He's been cast in 'another' at 20th-Fox.

The C. Aubr. Smiths have redecorated their home in Coldwater Canyon. Very English and very country.

Merle Oberon excited over David Niven's playing lead in Wanger's new pic, 'Palm rings.'

Marian Marsh entertaining for Lieut. Jack Baird, son of Lord Stonehaven. Molly Lamont one of the guests.

Margot Grahame back from New York where she spent the holidays.

Barton MacLane giving a dinner for his sister.

Donald Crisp on location at sea for months, taking busman's holiday by making voyage to Copenhagen for holiday.

Herbert Mundin meeting Noel Madison on set for first time since they played together in London.

Alan Mowbray, freelancing, playing in four films simultaneously.

Stan Lupino states the difference between Hollywood and London is that they eat, drink, talk and dream pix here, while in London when the day is done—the day is done.

Wendy Barrie, in the semi-finals of Carole Lombard's tennis tournament.

John Wood back hunting trip.

DOYLE GRABS MASTERCRAFT

Sydney, Dec. 17.

Stuart F. Doyle, m.d. of Cinesound, is working on a deal whereby his company will take over Mastercraft from Raymond Longford. With clinching of the deal, Mastercraft will become known as Cinesound No. 4. Doyle will go in as chairman of the board.

Last year Mastercraft went on the market with a stock issue of 20,000 preference shares and 80,000 ordinary shares at $2.50 each; 74,000 ordinary shares were offered for public subscription, and production work was set for March, 1935.

Prospectus stated that unit would not proceed to allotment until 50,000 shares had been subscribed and paid for, and in the event of allotment failure application money would be refunded in full. Company held an option on 16 acres of land situated at Lane Cove, a few miles up-river from Sydney.

Public failed to subscribe as expected and, beyond making some slight headway on studio erection in the hope that enough money would eventually flow in, nothing further has so far been done.

Doyle will now control Cinesound, Bondi; Cinesound, Rushcutter's Bay, Cinesound (Victoria), Ltd., and Mastercraft (Cinesound No. 4).

BANK GIFT NIGHTS AN ANTIPODES WORRY

14.

Bank nights are causin bother among the indie exhibs following a police action against 'Gift Nights.' In the nabes the 'Bank' gag has grown higher and higher, with exhibs attempting to outbid each other to secure biz.

Public now playing the b. d. not because of pix screened, but to make a try for the coin offered. Game has been going on for some time and bitterness continues to grow alarmingly. Believed that police will again step in and stop the methods now used.

Method generally used by the exhibs is to ask patrons to estimate the number of peas in a bottle. Under no consideration must the word 'guess' be used, because police officials say that action can then be taken against gambling. By using the word 'estimate' exhibs are safe.

FORDE, ELVEY, SAVILLE STAY WITH G-B

Walter Forde, Maurice Elvey and Victor Saville, three of Gaumont-British's ace directors, plan continued affiliation with that company, although Elvey eventually is to assume a financial interest in Twickenham Films (Julius Hagen).

The three directors are not leaving G-B. Forde and Elvey are at the moment without assignment, but Saville has the new Jessie Matthews picture, 'It's Love Again,' in work.

Forde is currently vacationing in America, and after a Hollywood once-over plans traveling through Canada. However, he is in constant communication with Michael Balcon, G-B's London production head, and Arthur A. Lee, v.p. of G-B of America, on his next assignment. Balcon's recent Hollywood deals for an international exchange of talent will shortly recall both Forde and Elvey, it is presumed.

Elvey, recently on a picture-to-picture basis, has contracted to make another for G-B before aligning with Twickenham. He and the others were reported joining the new Charles M. Woolf organization in England.

London, Jan. 7.

Previous report that C. M. Woolf had weaned away three of G-B's four ace meggers, leaving only Alfred Hitchcock, is not so. Both Woolf and the G-B directorate deny it, although Forde, presently in the U. S., and Elvey, re currenly between pictures.

Victor Saville's next Jessie Matthews filmusical is currently in work.

VON PLESSEN RETURNS WITH 80,000 FEET

The Hague, Dec. 31.

With 80,000 feet of film in his trunk, Victor von Plessen, producer, has returned from his expedition into the interior of Borneo. Entire footage treating of life of Dajsik head-hunters in their native habitat, required eight months actual working ti e, during which 200 miles of jungle was traversed.

Assisted by Dr. Dalsheim and van Praag and Angst, Traut and Staudinger on cameras, von Plessen reports a very arduous trip. Most of conveying was done via rowboats through rivers and marshes almost impassable.

SEGAL'S AMBISH THEATRE BLDG. PROGRAM

London, Jan.

Arthur Segal, connected with the Paramount Astoria chain of theatres in England, has signed a contract with Union Cinemas to build several big de luxers for the chain throughout the country. Deal calls for the erection of houses with capacities of 2,000-3,000.

Policy will be to present stage shows in the same manner as Segal introduced in the London Astorias, which he built.

Fred Bernhard, managing director of Union during the past few months, has been building and purchasing houses on all sides, and has 47 cinemas now in construction, which will give his circuit a total of over 200 theatres.

Current deal embraces the Mancunian and Reed circuits. Arthur Reed, of the latter, will become associated with Union Cinemas, assuming an official post, unnamed as yet.

Mexican Producers Urge Gov't Aid for American Distribs

Mexico City, Jan.

Group of Mexican pic producers, including Alberto Ricardo Pani, president of the Cinematografica Latino Americano, S. A., has asked the ministry of finance to use its offices toward bringing about an early settlement of the strike against the eight major American distributors here.

Native producers told the ministry that biz of cinemas in this country has fallen off 50% since imports of top grade American pics were shut off by the strike, which has lasted since Sept. 27, and that while the Mexican industry is making progress, it is also being hurt in the long run.

Producers assert that Mexican pic makers must still continue under the wing of stellar American pics, cinemas must have these foreign attractions in order to lure the crowds to witness the home-mades.

HAIK SETTLEMENT APPROVED BY COURT

Paris, Dec. 29.

Reversing the lower court, Court of Appeals has confirmed a settlement in the bankruptcy of Etablissements Jacques Haik, by which 30% of the liabilities are to be paid over a 15-year period, or 2% a year.

On protest by creditors, including Kodak for raw film furnished, and several laboratories for negatives and prints, the Commerce Tribunal had refused to approve this settlement, but Court of Appeals says it's oke.

Fewer British Films in Canada In 1935, but B. O. Grosses Up; Donat Leads All Stars at Gate were 1935, total annual higher than in 1934, when a considerably greater percentage of English films were O.K.'d by Canadian distributors.

Explanation of this is that the Canadi n distributors, while releasing fewer British pictures, have been skimming the cinematic cream and offering exhibitors only those films which have international appeal. While these films showed a numerical decrease, the 1935 grosses of the Canada-distributed pictures showed a high box-o ce gain because (1) Canadian distributors avoided mediocre product and refused to handle films which, they believed, would not benefit the exhibitors, and (2) more Canadian exhibitors were signing contracts for British pictures on box-office potentialities alone.

Present set-up has Regal Films, a subsidiary of Famous Players Canadian, distributing Gaumont-British; Gainsborough, London Films and British Lion; Empire Films handling ritish International Pictures, Twickenham Productions, Associated Talking Pictures and Toeplitz; United Artists distributing British & Dominions.

Action Films

Judging from the 1935 top-grossers in Canada, film-goers in this country want action-pictures. Films which made best money records in Canada were '39 Steps' (GB), 'Scarlet Pimpernel' (LF), 'Trans-Atlantic Tunnel'), 'Drake of England' (BIP), 'Sanders of the River' (LF) and 'Abdul the Damned' (BIP).

Report of the Department of Overseas Trade, just released, reveals that, during the past year, 65 British pictures were released in Canada as against 80 the preceding year. With several hit pictures still playing, the estimate of the Overseas Trade Commissioner places the Canadian film market increase at 25% over the preceding year.

Noticeable in 1935 was the exploitation done in Canada for British films. This included intensive campaigns by means of national advertising and publicity, radio dramatizations, bill-boards, window-displays, commercial tie-ups and an apparent in with film columnists.

Stars

Top grosser in Canada of any British film to date is '39 Steps' (GB). This was preceded by a tremendous advance build-up which followed appointment of the author, John Buchan, later Lord Tweedsmuir, as Governor-General of Canada. Exploitation commenced as soon as Tweedsmuir was named to the office and an audience-expectancy was created weeks before his arrival on Canadian soil.

Robert Donat is definitely the top box-office star, either Hollywood or British, in Canada. Gracie Fields is in the peculiar situation of being a flop in the East and a hold-over name in the West. Richard Tauber is a favorite with the hi-hats, as is Fritz Kortner, and Matheson Lang has a following because he used to star in Canadian legit some years ago. Arliss, of course, is tops, and other Canadian favorites include Madeleine Carroll, Jessie Matthews and Grete Natzler.

GERMAN-DUTCH FILM WINS FRENCH PRIZE

Paris, Dec.

'Kermesse Heroique' ('Heroic Carnival'), Tobis production megged by Jacques Feyder, was awarded the Grand Prix of French cinema, despite the fact that the producing firm is German-Dutch, director Belgian, cameraman American, and writer Belgian.

Runner-up was 'Veille d'Armes' ('Armed Watch'), film glorifying the French navy, with less than half the votes garnered by the Tobis spectacle. 'Crime and Punishment' and 'Deuxieme Bureau' ('Secret Service') got a few votes each.

Grand Prix is awarded by a jury under official auspices of the Ministry of National Education and Fine Arts.

U. S. ATTACKS CONTINUE IN PARIS

Paris, Dec. 26.

Attacks on American pictures continue to be made in hearings before the National Economic Commission, which is getting ready to submit a film reform law for presentation to the Chambre of Deputies.

Arguments are that Yank competition is unfair because films arrive with the negative cost already written off and therefore can be sold cheaply. Even if this were so, cost of dubbing and preparing for the market, including all taxes, brings the local investment in U. S. pix nearly up to the cost level of average French production.

Also contended that Paris houses specializing in English language versions take a big hunk of the coin on which the French trade should depend. This argument is particularly strange in view of the fact that real money trade here has to be done in French versions, and English specialized houses only gross $1,660,000 a year, at the most.

Mario Roustan, minister of national education, is reported still trying to get the Cabinet to back the essence of the defeated decree laws as a bill before parliament. But cabinet, at the moment, is too busy with more important affairs.

U. S. Pix Back in Canton After Three Months of Censor Fee Battle

Shanghai, Dec. 17.

Canton theatre owners and American distributors are at peace again, according to word from Norman Westwood (Universal) and Leon Britton (RKO).

In September the Canton local censor board slapped a special fee on Paramount and subsequently on al. pics. U. S. distributors claimed the Nanking (capital) censorship fee covers all China and refused to pay. Canton theatres refused to pay, also, resulting in a deadlock. For three months there were no first-run U. S. pics in Canton.

Theatres have now capitulated and will pay the local fee themselves, feeling that they must have U. S. product.

Brit Pix Up in China

Shanghai, Dec.

The British are beginning to make a bid for the Shanghai market, with screening this week of '39 Steps,' (G-B).

Agencies are now in a position to handle London output direct. M.P. and Gaumont, British have local representatives.

British population of 10,000 heads is twice that of American.

G-B UPS 1936-37 SKED TO 24 PIX

London, 7.

In line with an increased production schedule of 24 pictures for 1936-7, Gaumont-British will expand its policy of importing American directors. The 24 pix is eight above the present season's sked.

Charles F. (Chuck) Riesner already here with picture assignments for Cecily Courtneidge and Jack Hulbert. Deals are reported on for Raoul Walsh and William K. Howard, as well, to come over [illegible].

DAILY NEWS, THURSDAY, JANUARY 2, 1936

The New York film critics, from their seats of the mighty, have pinned the blue ribbon to the best picture of 1935. It's "The Informer."

The award was made on the first ballot by unanimous vote. All the critics were of one mind about the RKO-Radio movie that starred Victor McLaglen. John Ford, who directed the picture, got the laurels for best direction of the year. A-1 performance, in

Likes His Press

Recent item... this department anent the use of a small hand press in theatre work reminds Martin W. Larmour of the National theatre, Graham, Texas, that he owed us a letter. He writes in part:

"It occurs to me that two or three years ago you wrote asking if I ever bought a press. I did, and I thank you for the advice. Bought a 6 x 10 press and about 14 cases of type and a lot of other stuff and made it pay for itself in printing bills saved within six months after it was received. Since then it has made me hundreds of dollars. We have a girl to run it, and we not only print a program, print c- date heralds, but get out all sorts of novelties, office forms, etc.

"I am enclosing a few samples of our work. The Christmas cut is a linoleum cut that we made ourselves. The rest of the enclosed stuff is just fun to show you the variety of work we turn out. We have even been offered outside jobs, but the printers and newspaper men here are friends of mine and so I have positively refused to do anything except my own printing, and they are still my friends, even going so far as to loan me anything they have, order supplies for me and allow me to use their machines for cutting my stock, etc.'

He sends a full package of samples, including some Rotary club publications. He writes copy for one side of the four-pager, which is reproduced by mimeograph, and then prints the other side with promotional matters. He also includes postcard programs, a very slightly weekly four-page program for the theatre, duplicate cards for his Bonus Nights, office forms and herald imprints.

Mr. Larmour is fortunate in having the friendship of the local printer, but the printer knows that the press is not costing him any orders, since before the press Mr. Larmour was one of the leading exponents of the use of the hektograph. He even ventures on two-color jobs, which is not as easy as it sounds. Incidentally, his press assistant is a good proof reader, which is important.

Two-Piece Pram

Manager of a subsequent run has an idea for a two-week exploit on "The Perfect Gentleman." He saw the picture in town and realized that Frank Morgan was almost a double for a local character. It will take very little make-up to turn the latter into Morgan's likeness, he asserts.

Idea is to turn the localite into a duplicate of Morgan and keep him around town for a week with merely a back sign reading 'Don't ask me who I am. I don't know myself.'

After this runs a week he'll keep right on, but now with front and back signs for "Gentleman." He's paying the man $3 a day and figures the initial $18 investment will have every one primed to look for the sign when it does appear.

Idea is good for other pictures, particularly where it is desired to gain interest for a particular character. There is always a build-up value, and it's merely the question of whether the additional expense will yield a commensurate return. This exhib thinks it will. Probably he's right. Might not be so good for a low-budget house.

Right now the prams are working for the Marx brothers. Just to be different one exhib plans to flood the town with Harpos, ignoring Groucho and Chico. He has used the trio on early pics and thinks that a bunch of one character will be better than to repeat.

Front sign on the bunch reads 'You can have three guesses as to who I am. But you won't win any prizes. You ought to know by this time. If you don't, go to the Isis next week and see me and my brothers.' It's at least a change of pace.

Just Happened (?)

New Haven.

Ben Cohen of the College worked an attention-getter for some general publicity aimed at parents and their younger offspring. Cohen snared Mrs. Herbert Cooper, model teacher of lower grades visiting from New York, for an air interview and mixed questions about school work with a line of chatter as to which pix were good for kids and which were not.

By a strange coincidence, all those coming to the College were on the favorable list.

Used the Tieup

Iowa theatre, Cedar Rapids, made good use of the G. E. electric kitchen tie-in on 'If You Could Only Cook' and built on that with five double tickets to persons whose names were in the want ads in the Gazette. He got both a department store and the power company for large spaces on the kitchen angle.

With New Year's eve included, A. H. Talbott garnered a flock of coin.

In St. Louis

t. Louis.

The boys at Loew's in this burg staged a big exploitation, radio and newspaper campaign on their Christmas show 'Ah Wilderness.' Several weeks in advance of showing of feature they used special transcriptions made up at studio, continuity from local desk and specially prepared material from home office advertising department. This enabled them to give picture a great build up over the air. Exploitation included 12x20 flag hung over street in front of theatre, special layouts in all movie columns of local papers; placed special cards in all street cars and buses.

A special invitation screening was held for selected audience and at conclusion postcards which were given them on entrance to theatre were collected and mailed to friends of those in attendance. Lobby display of picture was printed on card and place for comments. Jimmy Harris, p.a., and 'Chick' Evens, mgr. of house, made a deal with McCrory stores and 10c. stores for distribution of 10,000 'Wilderness' circulars; obtained newspaper co-op ads with local department stores; Max Factor tie-up with windows in two prominent stores; 5,000 Postal Telegraph stickers; 5,000 magazines from local news agency on which stickers were placed on covers of all books sold Xmas week; blowups of Wedgwood reviews in lobby two weeks in advance and a special trailer was used for advance build up.

Theatre tied up with Pet Milk company for 2,000 window streamers used on grocery store fronts. Regular routine exploitation with readers to all suburban papers, regular downtown frames with advertising material changes, etc.

Store Hook-Ins

Frequently some theatre will permit an exhibit in its mezzanine or in the lobby, if the latter is large enough. These displays are generally canned goods or household articles. The idea gets over nicely. A few theatres go further. One with some niches built into the rear of the auditorium uses the spaces to show merchandise. Two of the prominent stores each get space once a month to display the latest models in frocks and lingerie. Now and then the niches are built up for scenes from incoming pictures, but the house figures that there is just as much ticket sales value to the dress displays, since most women are interested in pretty things whether they are able to afford them or not.

Meantime the theatre has the call on window space in the stores and the stores also take newspaper display space to tell what the fair models spoken of in the ads can be seen at the theatre in advance of the store display.

Another house has a small display case in the lobby with a weekly change of display. This may be a new style can opener, an electric mixer set, a new idea in ashtrays or anything that will interest the women. Only stipulation is that it must be displayed in the theatre before it can be seen in the store.

In another spot the coup is a dressmaking expert from the store in the mezzanine every Wednesday afternoon. She advises on new clothes, the making up of new goods or the remaking of an old dress. Particularly clever at the latter. Store gets its profit from the sale of material and finds the stunt well worth while.

Times Change

Looking over an old scrap book the other day brought to light a stunt worked by Eli M. Orowitz, then a Paramounteer, on a Paramount picture. Getting hold of Jacqueline Logan, leading woman in the picture, he got her to wear a bathing suit with the trousers above the knee and a gap of bare leg showing to the calf-high stockings. Took her down on the beach at Atlantic City and left it up to the police to tell her hether to pull down her bloomers or pull up her socks. They ordered an old dress-ers down. Today a suit with knee length panties would be in line with the Godiva and the white horse gag, but it made talk then. It put the picture over for a week.

Nowadays in bathing contests the trunks are purely technical, but there might be something in an early spring bathing suit contest with a set of prizes for the most attractive suits with full bloomers. It could be worked up with the newspapers into a contest that would bring half the town out to see.

Today the old fashioned suits are used purely for burlesque contrast, but there is no reason why they should not be treated with respectful attention, if that will pay better.

Like a Picture

Paul Sander, who was out ahead of Andre Lasky's 'French Revue,' is back in town with a pack of stuff to show for his tour. Sander handled the advance like a feature picture, sending ahead a press book with complete information about the show, backing up the formal billing with the prop list, line list, light plot and not only an analysis of the cast but a complete description of the running of the show by scenes.

He came in 10 days ahead with more material, plates for news pics, a hook-up page and advertising ideas, and the show followed in with a complete lobby and front display. It was a more complete campaign than was common in the heyday of the road, and where intelligently used helped the local management to put it over in a big way.

But he still is wondering why a theatre will book a four-figure unit and then gag at spending $10 or $15 for accessories. The show being in on percentage he sometimes added lithographs at the show's cost, but that still doesn't explain why management that will get $8 worth of stuff for a $20 picture rental will not kick in a larger sum when the rental is many times greater.

New Record

Handling it like a circus, Joe (Doc) Lee, of the Brooklyn Paramount hung up a new house record with 'Captain Blood,' beating 'G Men' by some $5,000. He pulled 101,426 admissions in seven days.

He got 25 windows on book tie-ups, and staged an essay contest for high school pupils. Essay and cross word puzzles were worked in the neighborhood publications with coloring contests for children in the same mediums. He also staged a contest with WLTH, a local station, and had plugs on four other spots. Special heralds were sent to all boys' adventure clubs and 50,000 general heralds were put out three days in advance, to back up a heavy newspaper campaign and 150 24-sheet stands.

Nothing sensationally original, but a well balanced campaign that hit most prospective patrons from one or more angles.

Local Metro office invited 600 orphans to the Marmorhaus to see 'David Copperfield' and additionally treated them to cake and chocolate.

BEHIND the KEYS

Detroit.

Fire starting from furnace caused $25,000 damage last week to the Colonial. Holland, Mich., owned by John Raven and John Kramer and leased to Butterfield chain. Town's blue laws, unpopular among younger element, probably saved many lives. Prohibited from operating on Sundays, theatre was empty at time of blaze.

Salt Lake City.

Publix-Salt Lake Theatres, Inc., began expansion program with Harry David, v.p. and general manager, announcing that the chain had acquired two houses in Logan, Utah, 90 miles for Salt Lake. Houses leased are the Roxy and Grand, formerly owned and managed by Michael Nielson of Logan.

David's company will obtain two additional theatres within the week, the Grand, Brigham City, and the Grand, Preston, Idaho. Nielson is also interested in these house.

Jack Braunagel, formerly assistant manager of the Capitol, Salt Lake; later managing the Granada, Boise, Idaho, has been named by David as manager of the Logan theaters.

Roxy, 546-seater, built in October, 1935, is regarded as one of the most modern small houses in the intermountain country. The Grand has a seatin- capacity of 400, built in 1926.

St. Louis.

Suit to enjoin Royal Neighbors of America, fraternal organization, from cancelling lease on Granada theatre, nabe house, was filed in Circuit Court Friday (3) by St. Louis Amus. Co., operator of house which asks court to determine validity of lease and agreement modifying it. Amusement co. states it leased property for 20 years in November, 1933, at rental of $1,875 per month for first 14 years. In April, 1934, petition states, rent was reduced to $1,642 for period of six months and payment of reduced rental was extended until April 1, 1936. It is alleged fraternal organization refused to accept reduced rental for month of December and threatens cancellation of lease for defaulting in full payments from April, 1934. Court has ordered fraternal organization to answer by Thursday (9).

Lincoln.

Musicians local here has re-elected Dr. H. C. Zellers, president of the outfit for 1936. Other officers posted in this month's final business session were Charles Phillips, vice-president; Mark Pierce, secretary; Lee Jensen, sgt-at-arms, and Charles Kunkler, Luther Andrews, August Dietz, John Schildneck, and Will B. Green, as members of the board.

William Youngclaus' Central City, Neb. State was badly damaged by an Xmas day fire. Fire started under the stage, and is the object of an investigation by the state fire marshal. Joe Lucas is manager.

Cal Bard, one-time exhib here, is peddling five indie films over Iowa and Nebraska.

Cleveland and Akron Theatre Company, new owners of the Allen theatre, Akron, has announced the appointment of Charles Schweitzer as manager.

William H. Ryan has been appointed treasurer of the RKO Palace in Columbus after 14 months on the Palace service staff.

Ray Wallace, general manager of the Tri Theatres, Inc., Alliance, O., is displaying his commission as a colonel on the staff of Gov. Ruby Laffoon of Kentucky.

Pine Bluff, Ark.

Fire of unknown cause totally destroyed the Princess at Hot Springs National Park, Xmas eve, and the lives of four persons were lost in a government rooming house for transients. Two other up and down business houses also sustained losses.

According to estimate made by the fire chief the loss will aggregate approximately $250,000, the greater part of the loss being to Sidney M. Nutt, proprietor of the cinema.

Glendale, Ariz.

E. B. Sturdivant, manager of Silver Crest chain, signed long term lease for Glendale theatre.

O. B. Wise set as manager.

Winchester, Mass.

Citizens of this township, without a motion picture house for many years, are stirred up and want to know why no license has been issued by the Board of Selectmen, for a flicker house, in view of advisory vote of the town last spring in favor of granting such a ticket.

Comeback is that no application pends before the Board in such a form as to warrant grant of license with the result that type of house will be built and maintained for best interests of town. Public hearing brought rosy pictures of plans by would-be operators, but one by one proposals died.

Rochester.

Banor Corporation and Moore-Wiggins Ltd., have dropped Supreme Court suits against the city following approval of reductions in assessments on the RKO Palace and RKO Temple theatres. Palace is cut $150,000 for 1935 and $180,000 for 1936 from $1,123,800; the Temple $14,680 each year from $560,00

Smoking Cutouts

Almost like a voice from the past is a letter from an oldtimer who complains that when he was new in the business it was a common trick to chew the other end of a lighted cigaret, push it against the lips of a figure, cut out and it would smoke down to the last bit of tobacco. He can't do it any more and wants to know why.

That would take him back to 1910 or there abouts when the so-called Egyptian and Turkish cigarettes were prevalent. The tobacco in these was moistened with a solution of saltpeter to improve the burning quality, and turned the cigarette into a slow burning fuse. The same thing can be done today by wetting the modern cigarettes with a dilute solution of saltpeter, but it must be carefully done or the paper will soak off when the paste becomes moistened. A cigar can be given the same treatment and with greater safety.

Smoking figures can be constructed with comparatively little trouble. The requirement is a small bellows, preferably box shaped. Two tubes lead into the box to the cutout mouth. One terminates in a cigarette holder and the other ends just below. To the first is attached an intake valve, with a reverse on the other. The chest is actuated by a small motor low geared. As the box is pulled open the air is drawn through the cigarette. When the box is in process of closing, the valve to the holder is closed and the smoke discharged through the other tube with the egress valve. The chest should be fairly small and the motor geared down to about 10 revolutions per minute.

Always mystifying and good for a repeat two or three times a year. Can be laid off to a tobacconist with a well located window, if desired.

Just a Repeat

Recently Mayor LaGuardia, of New York, started a campaign for a less noisy city. Still summonsing auto horn blowers and other noise makers, but doing very little about his garbage truck drivers. Everywhere it has been hailed as a real novelty in municipal affairs.

Seems to have been forgotten that in 1921 Clara Kimball Young was starred in a feature called 'Hush,' and that the energetic Milt Crandall (who later developed the first marathon dance), got the then Mayor Hylan to issue a proclamation calling for a hush week. It was not until the proclamation had been signed published that he learned that 'Hush' was playing the Capitol the week designated in the proclamation.

Crandall had gone through the usual motions of forming a pseudo society, with offices apart from the theatre district and sponsored by a number of more or less important societies, just to show that there's nothing really new.

Dan Roehe, then a Paramount exploiteer, did almost as well when he got an advertisement of 'Manslaughter' back at the Chicago Bar, beneh, with the judge sentencing careless drivers to see the Meighan pictures. This discounts several more or less humorous organizations since the Brothers Under the Skin' club, and goes to show that anything with a strong dash of reform is pretty easy to get over in a big way if it is handled adroitly.

Rubes for 'Collegiate'

Indianapolis.

Bud Summers of the Indiana turned the lobby of the little house into a bucolic setting to call attention to the coming of 'Collegiate,' with a small house and fence just inside the doors and two ducks on constant display.

Contest idea was used with the patrons awarded passes for the best names submitted for 'Goo Goo's' mate. Time tied in with one day spread carrying picture of the stunt and more than 2,000 replies were received, which is high batting average for a lobby display. In addition, Frank Moneyhun and Don Wright wangled a tie-in ad with Ayres on a hair dress, L. Strauss and Company on collegiate clothes, Joe Benner cigar store windows, and a store-wide display at the Collegiate Shop, which had its grand opening just in time for the arrival of the pic on the Indiana screen.

Type Not Title

Charlotte, N. C.

Gene Street played the William Powell picture, 'Rendezvous,' here without ever disclosing its title. He said he was afraid the title would scare the patrons away and he advertised it merely as being Powell in another 'Thin Man' role.

In the theatre he flashed an explanation just ahead of the feature, saying that he preferred to tell patrons the type of film it was rather than give the title that Hollywood gave the film.

Bumps From Butterfli

This week, wearing their very nearly very best dresses, the ballet girls are the Music Hall's little pets. For one thing, the Rockettes happen to be wearing their very nearly worst.

The ballet corps doesn't mind too much that their number is interrupted by outbreaks of applause. Better they should be on the stage hearing it than in the wings a-listenin' to the Rockettes get it. Though, of course, they don't let all this go to their heads and confuse their patterns.

So the ballet corps, undulating around in torchy tempo in fitted satin, long-sleeved, high-necked sheaths that are slashed up one thigh and have a straight scarf of contrasting color fastened on at the shoulders in front, that reaches—when they hold it that way—to the very ends of their out-stretched arms, get quite swingy at times and bump with great refinement into some real la-de-dah formations. It's good to see the ballet corps living a full life.

That they won't be too covetous, the Rockettes are tossed 'Round and Round' as the tune for their precise frolickings, but so dizzily fancy are their costumes, with strips of gold tinsel hanging from their hips, gold bobbing on their wriggling derrieres, long green gloves smothering their arms and the tops of their trunks shaping into a V line at their abdomens that even their never-failing straight line kicking is received with comparative calm. It's no easy task for costumes to dim the radiance of a troupe like the Rockettes, but this week's vagaries succeed splendidly.

Gloria Gilbert is adding new kinds of spins to her incredible and electrifying specialty, and her cavortings until she gets into them are quite as gangling.

Eyelashes

Irene Dunne is supposed to be blind through most of 'The Magnificent Obsession,' and since she is noted for being sincere about her work, ruthlessly she veils her lovely eyes with flickering eyelids, which permits study of an excellent job of augmenting a lady's own eyelashes with bunches of artificial ones from the studio make-up supply.

Miss Dunne does not hold with the eyelash school that appends thin, long feelers curling up and back to the brows, realizing, no doubt, that this effect has often wound up more terrifying than alluring. Miss Dunne's is a thickening process rather than an elongating one. The additions are a plausible length, luxuriant but not distracting, massed in greatest profusion at the outer edges of her lids to suggest a wider-apart set to her eyes than what they've got.

The rest of Miss Dunne's grooming is quite as artful. The discreetly spectacular but thoroughly lady-like mood of her wardrobe when she can see what she's doing, is evenly maintained when she can't. Her costumes fit as suavely, her lipstick's as smooth and neat, her hair's as shinily waved, her jackets flare out in the back as consistently. In fact her taste seems to be even a little bit better when she's blind, for then she does not drive her own car through country roads in a white ermine hip-length coat.

Betty Furness, who plays Miss Dunne's devoted step-daughter, is a very real person in the film. She gets off the boat from Paris dressed just like a nice American girl who's been to Paris and must prove it instantly—in a swagger white caracul coat tied at her chin with a black bow, and a white fedora hat tilted over her eye and tied round the brim with a dotted black veil. Miss Furness, too, is most sincere in 'The Magnificent Obsession,' and so is Sarah Haden. Sincerity and basic goodness of character bites everybody in it.

Drawing Room Stuff

The thing that Libby and Margot Robbin, the two classy mimics at the State have figured out, is that a mimic's either got to get the look and movement of her models or she's got to get their voice and their inflection. The Robbins sisters get the voice and inflection. They do it so well the State audience overlooks their drawing-room entertainer way of announcing just what it is they're going to do, especially since when they get going, the State audience discovers that drawing room entertainment is quite broad indeed. The Misses Robbin wear long, white, stiffy 'deb' evening coats as themselves, and their hair drawn back straight, then bunched in little curls. They have good ears.

Mickey King opens the bill, a thoughtfully groomed tenorist who thinks well enough of her shapely legs to encase them in sheer skin-colored stockings. Her black silk trunks fit as sleekly as tights, and her white silk bolero blouse is buckled snug to her diaphragm, for Miss King does most of her work hanging from one ankle. Miss King wears gold circlets in her ears, her bob in curls, and takes her bows skipping about gracefully on her tip-toes.

Grace Du Faye and company's flash dance act opens with three little maids in white polo coats and berets singing, rather metallically, that they're going to dance right into our hearts. Later they reappear and dance, sure enough, in black fire trousers and bolero bodices buttoned and edged at every boundary with a single row of rhinestones. Miss Du Faye's remarkably-steady acrobatic dancing is done first in a little thing of flesh colored chiffon bound with lice marlbou and sparkling with diaments, but nevertheless she does not quite attain a sexy look, perhaps because she is prone to tap while engaged in a split.

Ash Gold and Dai

'My, now ain't she dainty!' said a hefty matron at the Roxy, watching Jessie Mathews carrying-on pirouettingly in 'First a Girl.'

The lady spoke true. Miss Mathews certainly is dainty, especially as a boy. Maybe because this picture, produced to the hilt, has run amuck most fiercely in costumes, and so Miss Mathews as a girl is buried beneath white foxes, birds of paradise, hats with wiggly wired brims of pearly transparency, ruffles, curly wigs, laces, pearls, polka-dots, paillettes, till nobody can see her and how really dainty she is. As a boy, however, in beautiful British men's clothes, that are Britishly reserved and yearn for no more than that they be allowed to fit decently, Miss Mathews' daintiness is unchecked.

Miss Mathews' make-up, since first she gave her dainty self to pictures, has improved no end. Now, mouth and teeth subdued, eyes glowing, spirit soaring, she looks as attractive a little cutie as she behaves, and indeed, has one close-up—in which she wears a huge white beach hat that extends beyond the boundaries of the screen and whose soft gleaming whiteness provides a ravishing background for her brunet lovelineas—that will make the pampered beauties on the Metro and Radio lots in Hollywood good and jealous. Furthermore, whatever mugging Miss Mathews does, which for an English ingenue is not too unbearably much, is counteracted by the fact that she's pretty and elfin enough to try.

The menace in this British film, it is interesting to note, is a platinum blonde who looks like great hordes of Hollywood heroines. She is a platinum blonde and not an ash gold blonde like nice English girls.

Now that the holidays are over, no racetracks are open, and no football to worry about, and election so far away that it can't be used as an alibi, Frisco houses have only to provide good pictures to do business.

No exploitation except regular newspaper ad space, although most theatres whooped that a bit.

Estimates for This Week

Clay (Roesner) (400; 25-35)—'Dancing Duchess' (Vienkinema) (2nd wk). Will do the usual $1,000. Last week neat $1,300.

Embassy (Cohen) (1,512; 25-35)—'Mr. Hobo' (GB) and 'Man of Aran' (GB) (3rd week). Around $2,500, which is nice going. House finds it better to hold pix than try with the indies now available. Last week almost $3,000. Aries is doing it.

Fox (Leo) (5,000; 25-40)—'Perfect Gentleman' (MG) and 'Escape from Devil's Island' (Col) won't do quite $5,000. Last week 'Coronado' (Par) and 'Confidential' (Masco) some better at about $6,600.

Golden Gate (RKO) (2,850; 30-35-40)—'Dream Too Much' (RKO) and stage show. Ought to pass $17,000 with extra midnight show to help. Last week, 'Scarlett' (RKO) didn't do either house or Hepburn any good, about $13,500.

Orpheum (F&M) (2,440; 30-35-40)—'If You Could Cook' (Col) and 'Impersonation' (U) (2nd week) about $5,000 for this holdover. Last week around $6,500.

Paramount (FWC) (2,740; 30-35-40)—'Whipsaw' (MG) and 'Freshman Love' (WB) good for about $12,500, with Loy as the draw. Last week, holidays hurt a little for second week of dual bill 'Stella P arish' (WB) and 'Miss Pacific Fleet' (WB) hitting a little over $9,000.

St. Francis (FWC) (1,470; 30-35-40)—'Bounty' (3rd week). Going strong at better than $5,400. Last week good $6,500.

United Artists (UA) (1,200; 25-40)—'Wilderness' (MG) (2nd week). Doing extra nice business at $7,200. Last week, $9,600.

Warfield (FWC) (2,680; 35-40-55)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and Bill Robinson on stage ought to mean nice $25,000. Show opened New Year's Eve and has advantage of capacity midnight show to brace take. Last week, 'Rebel' (Fox) around $24,000, fine.

MONTREAL

come in. Last week 'I Dream Too Much' (RKO) and 'Charlie Chan' (20th) disappointed a bit with $11,000.

Terminal (Skouras) (1,600; 15-25-40)—'Thanks Million' (20th) and 'Navy Wife' (20th) with 'Bulldog Drummond' (GB) and 'Fighting Blood' (Time) split. 'Thanks' can still take them and should do a passable $3,500 this week. Last week 'New Gulliver' (Amkino) and 'Old Kentucky' (20th) hardly paid for extra advertising although by itself the $3,000 would be all right.

'OAKLEY'-PERSON' DUO TERRIF $24,000, NEW'K

Newark, Jan. 7.

(Best Exploitation: Loew's State)

The surprise of the New Year is the business done at Proctor's this week by 'Annie Oakley' and 'In Person.' Dual will take a tremendous $24,000. New Year's Eve brings more money always, but this bill broke the record and has continued at a similar rate. Credit has not been assigned to either film, but so far it is given to both.

'Two Cities' will do great at Loew's with $18,000, and the second week of 'Captain Blood' will make the Branford happy with $10,000. Everything is pleasant at the Paramount where 'Show Them No Mercy' should take $16,000.

For 'Two Cities' Loew's State is using a scrambled photo contest in Star-Eagle and the National Essay Contest with the prize of a trip to Europe on the Normandie in the Ledger. A double teaser campaign is used on screen and several stories and displays in the newspapers and a radio transcription on WHOM. Five hundred letters were sent to Boy Scout leaders, 300 to teachers, 100 to ministers and 100 to presidents of civic clubs, etc. The Catholics were reached through the Paulist choristers, and 1,000 exchange heralds were distributed.

Estimates for This Week

Branford (WB) (2,966; 15-65)—'Capt. Blood' (FN) (2d week). No tears at $10,000 on second week; first over $18,000, big.

Capitol (WB) (1,200; 15-30-40)—'Mutiny' (MG). Should take over $3,800 with this one although it took plenty downtown at Loew's Penn. Last week 'Frisco Kid' (WB) and 'Red the Rose' (Par) on six days no wow at over $3,000.

Little (Franklin) (299; 30-40)—'Moscow Laughs' (Amkino). Only $750. Last week 'Singer of Warsaw' (Pol) ditto.

Loew's State (2,780; 20-30-35-55-75)—'Two Cities' (MG). Strong at about $18,000 and may hold over. Last week 'Night at the Opera' (MG) not all that expected but nice at $19,000. Women falled to come to this.

New Mosque (Chesterfield) (3,281; 15-25-40-55)—'Mimi' (FD) and vaude. Prices tilted as shown in scale but New Year's Eve remained as advertised. Probably the first Newark house not to tilt N. Y. E. Dancing now cut out at mats but runs nites until one. Fifty-two broadcasts a week, including two coast-to-coasts, building house into something real. This week not counted very good will take about $14,000. Last week at 25-40 'Dance Band' (FD) took nearly $18,000.

Paramount-Newark (Adams-Par) (2,248; 15-20-30-35-40-55-75)—'No Mercy' (20th) and vaude. Going very nicely and expects $16,000.

'BRIDE'-'NIGHT OUT' DUO WOW $13,500, SEATTLE

Seattle, Jan. 7.

'Couldn't Cook' is being held for second week at Liberty, and going strong. New Hamrick's evergreen policy provides for move-overs every week from Orpheum to Blue Mouse, and from 5th Ave. to Music Box. Only occasionally is it figured the plan would change if B.M. and M.B. would warrant long run on the move-over.

Seattle is getting its first road-showed pix since 'Dinner at Eight,' which held for a week at Metropolitan two years ago. 'Midsummer Night's Dream' opens for six days at Music Hall (Hamrick) Jan. 20 at $1.50 top, exclusive of 10c tax. Outcome being watched with interest and special campaign to be uncorked.

Estimates for This Week

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (900; 27-37-42)—'Collegiate' (Par) and 'No Mercy' (20th). Hot release from Orphgum; expects good $5,000 on nine days. Last week, 'Musketeers' (RKO) and 'Stormy' (U) dual, 11-day run landed good $5,300.

Coliseum (Evergreen) (1,800; 21-32)—'Rendezvous' (MG) and 'Last Outpost' (Par) dual; okay for $3,500. Last week, 'Barbary Coast' (UA) and 'Transatlantic Tunnel' (GB) dual, six days, $4,500, good.

5th Ave. (Evergreen) (2,700; 27-37-42)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and 'Night Out' (U) dual. Anticipates a corking final count-up of $13,500, which includes $1,100 from

ST. L. CHEERFUL, 'OBSESH' $14,000, 'CITIES' 19G

St. Louis, Jan.

(est Exploitati Ambassador)

Happy days again. The boys are reaping a little harvest of their own this week. Real perky at most of the first run box-offices and in fact at the second run Missouri where vaudeville was added to the show on New Year's Day.

Good pictures and a combination of good weather and ideal conditions are responsible. Loew's with 'Two Cities' is doing a wholesale job, while the Fox with 'Magnificent Obsession' is right up there. At the Orpheum Lily Pons is a healthy proposition and the Shubert with Colbert is acting like it has taken a shot in the arm. Ambassador with 'Paddy O'Day' and Henry Armetta in person continue big with its combo stage and screen policy introduced a few weeks ago.

The Ambassador with all sorts of tie-ups including several radio interviews and newspaper spreads on Henry Armetta takes the bow for best exploitation this week.

Estimates for This Week

Fox (F&M) (5,038; 25-35-55)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U). Can't miss $14,000 for a very good week. Last week 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) one of best drawing cards to hit town, swell $16,500.

Ambassador (F&M) (3,018; 25-40-55)—'Paddy O'Day' (20th) and 1936 Sunkist Revue on stage. Nice play and should have no trouble doing $15,800. Last week (2nd) 'Dan Mathews' (Col) and Olsen & Johnson stage unit opened big but sagged and finished with $15,500, below usual take here.

Shubert-Rialto (WB) (1,725; 25-35-55)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par). Colbert is helping this small house to a big $9,800 week. Last week 'Captain Blood' (FN) enjoyed a good $8,500 week. More seats would have meant more cash.

Orpheum (WB) (1,950; 25-35-55)—'Dream Too Much' (RKO). Pons, exploited in newspapers and musical circles will cash in at $8,200 for okay week. Last week 'Collegiate' (Par) lived up to expectation and $11,500 was enjoyed by all.

Loew's (3,162; 25-35-55)—'Two Cities' (MG). Now that the holiday slump is over this program is pointing to $19,000. Probably holds for second week. Last week 'Wilderness' (MG) finished with $11,400, all that was expected.

Missouri (F&M) (3,614; 25-40)—'Thanks a Million' (20th) and vaude. Looks like natives are going to patronize vaudeville to tune of $10,500 for best week in about six months. Last week 'Metropolitan' (20th) and 'Navy Wife' (Fox) surprise of week with $7,600, good.

was desired. He left for the Coast instead Sunday afternoon (5). He would probably fly to St. Louis from Los Angeles if summoned. Agnew also was excused from going over the week end but is on call from New York. Keough went to St. Louis Friday (3), accompanied by Louis Phillips, Par attorney.

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Arrival of John E. Otterson is skedded for late this week. Paramount pres is expected to go over future production plans and make assignments to producers. He also will take up matter of refurbishing studio's stock player list.

Otterson is expected to remain west for a month.

the N.Y.E. midnite show. Last week, 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) and 'Millions in Air' (Par) dual, $9,700, good.

Liberty (J-V-P)—'Could Cook' (Col) (2d week). Started big at first of year, midnite show boosting to a bang-up $7,000. Last week, same film, $7,300, great.

Music Box (Hamrick) (900; 27-37-42)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th) and 'Millions in Air' (Par) dual, on moveover from 5th Ave., okay $4,500. Last week, 'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) and 'Great Impersonation' (U) dual, $4,700, big.

Orpheum (Hamrick) (2,700; 27-37-42)—'Hit Parade' (MG) and 'Stars Over Broadway' (WB) dual. On nine days, $10,000, plenty oke. Last week, 'Collegiate' (Par) and 'No Mercy' (20th) dual, $10,300, big.

Paramount (Evergreen) (3,106; 21-27-32)—'Remember Last Night' (U) and 'Nevada' (Par) dual. Former title changed to 'Hangover Murders' locally, same as book, expects $6,500 on week, big. Last week, 'Ids and Queen' (U) and 'Chan's Secret' (20th) dual, $5,800, big.

IT'S GOOD SENSE TO PLAY THE FAVORITE!

Again this year's check-up at the Box-Office finds Leo at the front—by a wide margin. This magazine lists all the industry's Box-Office Champions from 1930 up to June of 1935. Out of a total of 79 Box-Office Champs listed, M-G-M has 21 and the nearest competitor has 13. That doesn't even cover the second half of 1935 which included such hits as "China Seas", "Broadway Melody of 1936", "Mutiny on the Bounty", "A Tale of Two Cities", "A Night at the Opera", 'Ah Wilderness", "Whipsaw", "Riffraff", and others.

Kennedy's Recapitalization Plan For RCA Expected Within 45 Days

Joseph P. Kennedy, former head of the Securities Exchange Commission, who was named by Radio Corp. of America to devise a recapitalization plan for that company, is expected to have his report ready within the next 45 days, according to Wall Street belief. Some are optimistic enough to think that his report will be ready for submission to the company at the directors' meeting the latter part of this month.

Former SEC chief plunges into task of picking a satisfactory plan with some five or six tentative suggestions or propositions already before him. Understanding is that these were the work of some five or six groups or factions within the RCA family, not one of which was satisfactory to the other four or five groups. It was this difference of opinion as to what seemingly should have been an easily solved problem that prompted the directors to call in a disinterested authority, and one fully cognizant of all details.

It is not held a secret that every proposal by different individual groups within the official family was always obstructed in the past. Part of Kennedy's task, it is believed, will be that of selling the plan he devises to these various groups of stockholders. Although nothing will be known about Kennedy's plan until it is submitted to RCA directors, Wall streeters believe that the proposal will call for payment of part or all of back dividends on Radio B stock. There is now more than $21 due to holders of this preferred issue, and Wall Street considers it almost a certainty that Radio B stockholders will be favored primarily in the projected set-up.

The S.E.C. Angle

Another thing that seems certain is that Kennedy will suggest a conservative, workable plan, one that will meet the most rigid SEC requirements. This would be only a logical development because he is so familiar with the rules and workings of that body.

While some RCA interests have indicated that they would like to reduce the number of outstanding common shares, the manner in which this is to be accomplished without bringing squawks from present stockholders is a major problem confronting Kennedy. To some extent, the same holds true of any plan for Radio Preferred A.

There appears to be small chance for retiring the whole issue, especially with the back dividends on Radio to be considered. Proposition of exchanging present Preference A issue for one bearing smaller interest thus far looks to be tough since it undoubtedly would bring protests from present holders who currently are receiving $3.50 annually and don't want this divvy reduced.

Leaders in the financial district view the recapitalization of Radio Corp. of America as a comparatively easy problem. They point to fact that the company has between $26-30,000,000 in cash on hand, that the dividends on the Preferred A are paid up to date and that the arrearages on Radio B are not rated as highly formidable.

Dramatists

sider the question and has appointed a committee to meet the Dramatists and talk things over with them. It depends on the Guild, now, whether it wants to okay such a committee, though it admittedly doesn't have to. On the other hand, it is pointed out, it would be practically impossible for the Guild to treat with each manager individually.

Broadway managers insist that a renewal of the pact will be worked out with no radical changes. It is admitted that, despite frequent disputes on other matters, the picture rights coin is the major problem. Belief on Broadway is that this will probably be compromised to a straight percentage arrangement, rather than outright buys, with the initial payments as they are at present, but acting as advance royalty instead of full outlay.

Safeguard for Pix

What the authors seek is a safeguard against holding down of prices paid for picture rights to plays by Hollywood. They feel that, with picture money backing so many Broadway productions now, prices are being automatically cut down. Also they suspect a 'gentleman's agreement' among film firms not to bid against each other in plays in which one of them has a financial production interest.

Pointed out, too, that the film producers don't necessarily have to have an agreement and that the mere fact of a film firm owning a percentage of the stage rights makes it unwise or illogical for another film firm to bid against the rights, since the original picture company has that percentage leeway.

Proponents of the percentage plan point out that this idea would be a protection for the scribblers and, at the same time, would be an aid to producers. A weak play, in other words, wouldn't be likely to bring much film coin under present conditions. But on a sliding scale arrangement, if the play turns out to be stronger in film than it was on the boards, it might conceivably do very well indeed, with both the original producer and author getting the breaks all around.

Gt. States Dividend

Chicago, Jan. 7.

Great States circuit last week resumed payment on its regular and current dividends with disbursement of $1.50 dividend for the final quarter of 1935.

In November Great States paid off its back dividends for the past three and a half years.

Stock Market

changed compared to previous closing quotation.

General Theatre Equipment bonds made a new high at 23½ and certificates of the same registered a new top at 21¾. Advance by the bonds brought a net gain of $3 on the week.

Decision of the U. S. Supreme Court Monday (6) in declaring the AAA act unconstitutional left the amusement issues cold. Like numerous industrials that have been leading the pack in recent advances, many sold lower. It was the food, packing and dairy stocks that sported the big gains in Monday's (6) transactions. All these benefit by not having to pay the government millions in processing taxes. Majority of the companies had impounded these taxes and thus in many cases now will represent the difference between a profit and a loss, which would have been shown had the act been upheld in many instances.

Short Week

Short week between Christmas and New Year's day was more or less a colorless affair, with dribbling selling and lack of interest outstanding. Most amusements were irregular, only bad loss being sustained by Universal pfd., which dropped 8 points to 50. Pathe was one of better actors, pushing forward to a new high at 8¾.

Considerable short covering by professionals late Friday in advance of President Roosevelt's radio speech aided bulk of amusement stocks. Wall Street was not particularly disturbed by the speech, in fact seeing the bright side in the president's promise of no additional tax measures and an attempt to balance the nation's budget.

Biggest advance of any amusement issue was that scored by Paramount 1st pfd., which shot up 4 points to 80½. Earlier in the week, it was up more than 5 points at 82. Paramount common also was actively higher, reaching 10¾. Par second preferred rose to 12¾. Both issues were up fractionally on the week.

Loew's common also was a strong feature much of the week, climbing to 54⅜, only fractionally away from 1935-36 top. It closed just off from its lowest price but 75c. ahead on the week. Eastman Kodak common followed the lead of many industrials, hitting 161 and winding up the week with an advance of 3 points.

Stocks of RCA also were higher much of the time. The common got up to 13¼ and closed at 12¾, for a fractional gain. Radio A pushed up 50c. to 55. Radio B, always a sensational performer on both the upside and down path, spurted forward to 90 only to drop back to 82½. In Monday's sell-off, it was down 1 point at the close, 85½.

Both issues of 20th Century-were comparatively inactive, with the common holding near its year's peak much of the time. It hit 24 and then reacted to finish at 23, up 50c. The preferred fluctuated between 32⅝ and 31½, latter being the close. At this level it was off fractionally.

Loew's, Inc., directors declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.62½ on the preferred, payable Feb. 15 to stock on record Jan. 31.

B. F. Keith Corp. notified the N. Y. stock exchange that there has been released from the lien of the first and general refunding mortgage, the premises described as the Keith Theatre and Albee Building, 619 Fifteenth Street, N. Y., in Washington, D. C., and that $270,000 was deposited with the trustee in lieu of this property.

Excellent earnings statement by Westinghouse was issued too late Monday (6) to have much effect in trading. Company's preferred recently registered a new high at 126 at which level it has remained for about a week. Common stock went to 98¼ during the past week but felt plenty of pressure in late trading, dropping to 95⅝ at the blow-off.

Besides the strength in General Theatre Ilens, Paramount bonds also were much higher. Paramount-Broadway 5½s climbed 3¾ to 59⅝. Paramount Pictures 6s advanced to 93⅞ and wound up at 93¼, up 2⅛ on the week. Warner Bros. 6s got to 87½, and even in late profit-taking managed to show a gain of 1½. Keith 6s pushed ahead to 95, displaying an advance of 1⅛ at the finish, 93½.

BRANDT'S INDIE EXCHANGE PLAN

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Nationwide chain of independent exchanges, to handle 50 features and four serials annually, is being formed by Joe Brandt, former Columbia president; Henry Ellman, state rights operator, and Nat Saland, Mercury Laboratory head. Details were worked out here, with organization meeting set for Chicago Jan. 12. Chicago capital being interested for backing.

Top indie distributors have been invited to attend the Chicago meeting. Brandt hauled east Saturday (4) after three weeks here explaining setup to indie producers.

Broad, Philly, Cutting Out Cutrates; Erlanger May Turn to Pictures

Philadelphia, Jan. 7.

road Street theatre again becomes a legit house playing regular attractions and tryouts, 'without cut-rate aid,' states Samuel F. G. Nixon-Nirdlinger, managing director of the indie house. Nirdlinger declares he is no longer affiliated with Wee & Leventhal. This year he had had two W. & L. offerings ('Portuguese Gal' and 'Petrified Forest'). He also had special road productions of two others at low scales.

Although Nirdlinger gave up the 40% pass-tax idea after last season, he has had special cut-rate arrangements at his other house, the Erlanger, and with the W and L offerings at the Broad. He declares the Erlanger may go pix after the first of the year but the Broad will be kept dark rather than play anything but bona-fide tryouts or Broadway hits.

WB WAIVES WAX TAX

167 Stations Sign With Warners

Warner ros. had at press time yesterday (Tuesday) received signatured contracts from 167 stations, while 84 others had signified their intention of obtaining licenses from this source. Among the WB licensees are such clear channel stations as WLW, Cincinnati; WTIC, Hartford; WHO, DesMoies; WFAA, Dallas; WGN, Chicago; WSM, Nashville; WLS, Chicago; KNX, Los Angeles; KSL, Salt Lake City, and KFAB, Lincoln.

Other major stations that have taken contracts from Warner are WEEI, Boston; WCKY, Cincinnati; WAIU, Columbus; KMBC, Kansas City; WHK, Cleveland; WOW, Omaha; WKY, Oklahoma City; WTMJ, Milwaukee; WMC, Memphis; WWJ, Detroit; WXYZ-WOOD, Detroit-Grand Rapids, Omaha; KWK, St. Louis. Other regional that has come in the Warner fold is the Yankee Network, while the Scripps-Howard group has covered itself through agreements for WNOX, Knoxville, and WCPO, Cincinnati.

Under the licenses which WB is issuing stations are required to pay a month in advance and make weekly reports of the music used. Outlets operating at half time and also those charging less than $25 a quarter hour are charged half the standard monthly rate, which is four times the highest quarter-hour listed by the nation in Standard Rate and Data. Licenses taken out by local stations apply only to Warner music which is broadcast on local, regional or national spot programs and that for national network purposes an entirely different license is required. It is Warner's intention to make contracts for the latter directly with NBC and Columbia and predicate the rate of payment on the rate actually charged for the stations in a hookup.

What action the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers will take against the stations which have failed to obtain a license from that source is to be determined at a special meeting of the ASCAP board of directors tomorrow (Thursday). Few stations have secured new ASCAP five-year agreements since the Society at the behest of NBC and CBS agreed to let all present licensees to go on using its music with the understanding that this permission could be revoked on two days' notice. View taken by a major segment of the indie broadcasters is that they will not tie up with the Society unless both the old sustaining fees and the 5% tax on commercials is substantially reduced to account for the difference they must pay to Warner Bros. Non-network stations aver that they are prepared to confine themselves to Warner music, while the indie stations with web affiliations and which have Warner contracts take the position that it is up to the networks to fight their battle with ASCAP, since the national links have everything to lose if their associated outlets are shut off from the use of ASCAP music.

Explains to 4 A's

Herman Starr, Warner v.p. in charge of the performing rights matter, went over the heads of the networks last week in explaining the position of his company to advertisers and ad agencies. Among the meetings he held in that direction was one with John Benson and Frederic Gamble, prez and executive secretary, respectively, of the American Association of Advertising Agencies.

NBC and Columbia made demands on Starr Monday (6) that he assist them in trying to avoid infringement on Warner copyrights by supplying them with a complete list of the WB copyrights.

James W. Baldwin, executive secretary of the National Association of Broadcasters, who was empowered to act for indie members in making performing rights contracts, turned over to Starr Dec. 30 a list of 225 stations which had agreed to take a Warner license. Up to yesterday (Tuesday) Starr had not received approved contracts and the necessary advance payment from some 30 outlets on Baldwin's original list.

Washington, Jan. 7.

No time was lost in acquainting Lenox R. Lohr, new prexy of National Broadcasting Co., with bigshots in the Washington arena.

Ink on announcements of Lohr's appointment was hardly dry before new N. B. C. boss blew into town under chaperonage of David Sarnoff, R.C.A. head. Lohr was introduced to government radio czars at informal luncheon attended by Commissioners Prall, Sykes, and Case of the Communications Commission broadcast division.

Freeman Case Delayed

Shave F.C.C. Budget

Washington, Jan. 7.

President Roosevelt asked Congress to give the F. C. C. only $1,475,000 for operating expenses next year, shaving $50,000 off the amount appropriated for this year.

Budget Bureau opined that this slice will not result in curtailment of any Commish activities.

WCAO's Extra Dividend

Baltimore, Jan. 7.

WCAO, which is outlet here for CBS, last week declared an extra dividend of $1 per share for the year '35. Station paid regular dividends of 30c per share per quarter of the year, ringing total to $2.20 per share for the past annum.

Stock in WCAO was last month bringing about $28 per share in some recent transactions.

Bob Roberts at KYA

San Francisco, Jan. 7.

M. E. 'Bob' Roberts has been named to the post of sales and advertising manager of Hearst Radio KYA and assumes his new duties today (2d).

Another Roberts, Lee S., preceded him by only a few days as new program chief of station.

Music Publishers' Protective Association Huddles to Ponder Warner Tactical Move—Mechanical Fees Unpopular with Advertising Agencies and Smaller Stations

NO MASTER FEE

Rated as the most important move that has developed to date from the performing rights tangle is the waiving of the electrical transcription fees in every form by Warner Bros. It is now unnecessary for a transcription manufacturer to pay a master fee or an advertiser to pay a commercial tax on Warner copyrights, as long as the records are played on stations holding WB performing licenses. Waiver also applies to library service discs which are used for commercial purposes.

Serious import of this WB gesture to the rest of the music industry was reflected in a hurried meeting which was held at the Music Publishers Protective Association last Friday (3). John G. Paine, MPPA chairman, who serves as trustee for the industry in general in general in licensing copyrighted music for radio discs, had called together a representative group of major publishers to discuss the implication of Warner's waiver and to decide what they wanted to do about it. Unanimous decision of the group was that Paine was to go on licensing their copyrights under the terms they agreed to last November, namely, that all licenses for transcriptions be for a period ending June 30, 1936, that the master fee for unrestricted tunes be $5 and restricted tunes, $10, and the individual publisher reserves the right to charge more than the customary 25c per unrestricted composition and 50c per restricted composition when the music is part of a commercial program.

MPPA Perturbed

What particularly perturbed the MPPA was the announcement by several of the indie disc library services that they proposed to take advantage of Warner's waiver of the manufacturing tax by picking the vast majority of their tunes from the WB catalogs. One of these Associated Music Publishers, Inc., advised Paine that it figured to cull 75% of its recorded repertoire from among Warner copyrights.

Position that has been taken by Warner Bros. is that the performing right should be sold along with the mechancial right, or visa versa, and that until this arrangement can be made a general practice Warner is prepared to waive its right to a manufacturing fee so long as the user has obtained a performing license. ASCAP allies regard the Warner waiver as an astute tactical maneuver to gain the good will of the small station operator, whose interests are affected most by the mechanicl fees. Elimination of the latter will not only make it easier on the national advertiser who uses transcriptions but relieve the small broadcasters of the necessity of paying 25c or 50c per tune every time he ties up his library service with a commercial program.

Payment of the 25c and 50c fee has long been a sore point with ad agencies that handle considerable transcription business. American Association of Advertising Agencies put in a strenuous protest against the fee with the MPPA about two years ago and asked that the latter organization agree to join in a test suit on the issue. Four A's held that the copyright law had not intended that the copyright owner collect both a performing rights fee and a manufacturing tax from what amounts to practically the same source. The test suit proposition was turned down by the MPPA.

'Investigate Discrimination' Crosley Wires Atty-Genl; Move May Revive Govt. Suit

Has Not Been Dropped

Washington, Jan. 7.

Strong denial that government's anti-trust suit against American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers has been put on the skids came last week from the Justice Department.

Federal officials declared 'the case definitely has not been dropped.'

INSULL NAMED IN GYGI WEB

Chicago, Jan. 7.

Samuel Insull's name is mentioned in connection with a promotional proposition being developed by Ota Gygi, former vaudeville violinist and promoter of the Amalgamated (Ed Wynn) network in the east in 1932. Gygi is seeking to line up from 16 to 20 small wattage stations in the three states adjacent to Chicago.

Last year Gygi tried to promote a similar network with WCFL, Labor station, as the pivot.

Herman Starr Answers Networks

Denies Obligation to Furnish List—Paley Tabled Buy-In on WB Last June

Herman Starr, Warner Bros., v.p., yesterday (Tuesday) charged that NBC and Columbia were each trying to work out separate agreements for WB music when the webs signatured new five-year deals with the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers on June 4, 1935. Starr's charges were contained in letters answering the networks' demand for complete lists of Warner copyrights and also threat that they would hold Warner liable for any damages that accrued from infringement suits.

Networks, said Starr's letters to each, knew long before June 4 that Warner was withdrawing from the Society, and rather than carry through with the discussions they were having with Warner in this connection they elected to sign with 'extraordinary unexpectedness' and alacrity on the eve of the opening of the government's suit against the Society a renewal agreement with the latter.

Starr in his letter also held that since he wasn't doing business with the networks he was under no obligation to furnish them with any information about Warner copyrights.

Should CBS in particular bring court action against Warner the latter proposes to include in the defense testimony showing that prior to June 4 Columbia's prez. William S. Paley, discussed with Harry Warner the proposition of buying a half interest in the WB publishing group.

Wire which Powel Crosley, Jr., prez of WLW, Cincinnati, sent U. S. Attorney General Homer S. Cummings New Year's Eve has both the networks and the music industry's lawyers worried. Counsel connected with the government's anti-trust suit against the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and the Music Publishers Protective openly expressed themselves last week as inclined to the belief that Crosley's appeal would result in a revival of the litigation.

Until the advent of the Crosley telegram the legalities in music's camp were prepared to regard the case as a dead issue and transfer the papers to the inactive file. The indie broadcasters, these lawyers now say, have injected a new twist to the controversy by asking the government to find out whether ASCAP made discriminate deals with the networks and certain types of stations, the latter obviously referring to those operated by newspapers. Music's lawyers had expected, after the government had notified them that the case would be postponed without date, that the matter would slip into a state of quiescence and stay there until a year or two hence, when the defendants would move for a dismissal of the complaint.

Crosley, these defense lawyers believe, has through his telegram projected for government consideration an angle that might, if strong enough pressure emanates from members of Congress, bring the Federal Trade Commission into the situation. This angle is government regulation of the sale of performing rights. In his wire Crosley averred that some form of federal regulation is necessary that the rights of the general public and independent broadcasters may be properly protected.

rosley's Telegram

Crosley's telegram to Attorney General Cummings follows:

'VARIETY in its Dec. 25 issue indicates likelihood that the government will abandon current anti-trust suit against the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers as indicated by dropping of the case from the calendar in the New York Federal Court due to the inability of the government's attorneys to obtain mutually acceptable stipulations from the Society.

'Late developments including Warner Bros' withdrawal from the Society seem to indicate the necessity of even greater diligence upon the part of the government in this action in order that independent broadcasting stations shall not have already exorbitant fees doubled up on them. The whole setup of levying fees is inequitable, grossly unfair, and definitely requires some form of government regulation in order that the rights of the general public and independent broadcasters may be properly safeguarded and protected. The principle of charging royalty fees whether copyright material is used or not is particularly inequitable.

'May I respectfully suggest that complete investigation be made regarding existing special agreements, if any, between copyright holders and broadcasting networks and other types of broadcasters. Before entering into or agreeing upon any stipulations with any copyright group it would seem only fair that the National Association of Broadcasters, representing most of the independent broadcasting stations and all other broadcasting stations concerned, should be aware of and perhaps have a voice in the establishment of such stipulations.'

Telephone Co. Witnesses Tough With F.C.C. Ready for Battle

Washington, Jan. 7.

esumption of hearings on American Telephone and Telegraph Company's application to install an experimental coaxial cable between New York and Philadelphia led off, Monday (6) with an attempt to straight-arm the Federal Communications Commission into abandoning its efforts to establish just how deeply television may be involved in the phone company's plans.

Attorneys for A. T. & T., Western Union and Postal Telegraph moved immediately to exclude all testimony regarding the ultimate commercial use of the cable, although Monday's hearing had been called for the express purpose of discussing 'commercial aspects' of the proposed cable.

Evidence that the Commish was in fighting mood was seen when, after a long recess, the full membership of seven Commissioners returned to the hearing room with the announcement that the motion was overruled.

Starting with a memorandum from the files of the A. T. & T., which proved quite embarrassing for Tel & Tel witnesses during the hearing, Commish counsel dinged away at the motives underlying the phone company's expressed desire to use the cable primarily for experimental work in the field of telephony. Commish claims that television is main purpose of the phone group's interest in the cable.

Harry S. Foland, employee of the long lines engineering department of A. T. & T., authored the memo, following a conference held on April 2, 1935, at the company's headquarters. Slugged 'Subject: Television. Coaxial cable trial,' message contained a couple of paragraphs over which Commish attorneys growled like dogs with a bone.

Denials

Albert E. Stephan, Commish attorney, persisted in translating the paragraph as a direct bid for television privileges, rousing A. T. & T. witnesses to eloquent denials, patient and involved explanations, satire and general beating about the bush.

Financial acrobatics of the big phone company and its subsidiaries left the Commish so dizzy that it was unable to unearth anything of value to its campaign. Afternoon hearing was taken up with testimony of A. B. Clark, Tel & Tel accountant, who had prepared a statement giving estimated cost of the cable experiment, but after hearing that the nature of such developments was such that it was impossible to compute within 100 percent of the actual costs, Commish decided that attempt to pry further into money angle of the company's affairs should be abandoned.

Public Criticism Ends Proposed Appointment Of I. W. Schlesinger

Capetown, Dec. 15.

South African Minister of Posts and Telegraphs has issued the following official statement:

"Due to criticism in the press, Mr. Schlesinger has felt obliged to notify his inability to accept the chairmanship of the new Broadcasting Corporation, and is not prepared to be personally associated with the Board."

The proposed intention to appoint I. W. Schlesinger as chairman of the Public Utility Trust to run the South African Broadcasting as from April 1, 1937, when the African Broadcasting Company (Schlesinger) will be taken over by the Government, met with opposition from the newspapers and public, and there was no other remedy for I. W. S. but to decline the honor. Clearly proved he was not wanted, the public tiring of a one-man monopoly.

It is stated that I. W. Schlesinger will claim $15,000,000 for his assets, in the transfer of his broadcasting concern to the Government. He will receive debentures for the amount to be agreed upon, and no cash.

Elaborate Audition Is Postponed by Columbia

Elaborate audition of a new program for Colgate-Palmolive-Peet was planned by CBS for Sunday, Dec. 29, but failed to materialize. Web handed out hundreds of ducats to its New York playhouses among employees, sponsor and agency (Benton & Bowles), but at the last minute had to send out notices saying that the audition was no go. At that, a big enough crowd showed up to require impromptu entertainment.

Prospective program was a New York vs. Hollywood type of banter featuring Georgie Jessel and Ken Murray. One to clown in New York and the other in the film colony. Hitch developed when the Hollywood end of the duo wasn't ready with its stint.

1st Ultra-Shortwaver On Regular Schedule Is W8XH of Buffalo News

Buffalo, Jan. 7.

vening News has begun intensive campaign to publicize its five-meter transmitter, W8XH. Claims for station signals of the highest fidelity of any station anywhere, due to recently installed ultra-modern equipment.

Station is expected to complement WBEN, paper's standard band transmitter, by furnishing to five-meter listeners those NBC network programs which WBEN is too crowded to take. Included will be Cheerio, Magic of Speech, Education in News and Forum on Character Building.

Another W8XH exclusive will be dinner hours, devoted to music. Standard stations can't provide this on account of quantity of 15-minute shows for kids at time.

Hamilton Woodie is manager of the station. Ultra-shortwaver will carry signals only to horizon but newspaper figures Buffalo area can be covered effectively with W8XH as soon as five-meter reception becomes more general in standard radio receivers.

W8XH is the country's first station to broadcast ultra-shortwave programs on a regular daily schedule.

The Radio Touch

Philadelphia, Jan. 7.

Lit Brothers department store arranged with WFIL to originate a series of amateur programs for kids in the store restaurant. Merchants figured it would stimulate luncheon biz.

Instead the fond mammas brought lunch boxes with home-made sandwiches. Store supplied tables and silverware.

HARD LIQUOR SHUNS RADIO

Washington, Jan. 7.

Radio advertising by members of the Distilled Spirits Institute ceased Jan. 1, following a decision of members to quit airing merits of booze in response to rising tide of public criticism.

Declaring that majority of industry members never have used radio facilitities to publicize their products, Dr. James M. Doran, former prohibition czar and Institute head, said the action was 'another step in the direction of self-imposed regulation which is regarded in the public interest.'

New policy is binding on makers of approximatley 90 to 95% of the domestic output of hard liquor, but has no effect on rectifiers, distributors, wholesalers or dealers. Likewise brewers, who have their own trade associations, are not affected by the distillers' decision.

Less than a half dozen distillers ever made use of radio as an advertising medium, according to the trade group, while only two of national prominence—Seagram's and Schenley's—have sponsored programs on a major scale. Seagram outfit turned to broadcasting last fall, sponsoring a sports review during the football season, and Schenley has been sponsoring an amateur hour over WHN, New York, which is fed to two others. A smattering of small firms, especially in Pennsylvania, Ohio, and California, have employed radio in a li ited way.

Philadelphia, Jan. 7.

Liquor accounts are no-dice at WFIL under a new ruling. Station carries only on such sponsor currently and that one will skiddoo when contract winds up next month. It's not teetotaler proposish with broadcasters. Just going in for temperance with light wine and beer accounts.

FCC's Washington Docket

Washington, Jan. 7, 1936.

Terminating fortnight's holiday, members of the Federal Communications Commission this week will return to their custom of regular meetings. Christmas and New Year's interfered badly with activities of the broadcast division, the commissioners taking no action on matters pending before the group during the past two weeks.

Three examiners' reports were turned in during last week, with only three applications received.

State Capital Broadcasting Association, Austin, Tex., applied for a construction permit to erect new transmitter to operate on 1120 kc with 500 watts nights, 1 kw days, specifying all hours not used by WTAW, College Station, Tex. Only other new station application received was from Berks Broadcasting Company, Pottsville, Pa., which seeks to operate on 640 kc with 250 watts, days. Station WTJS, Jackson, Tenn., asks change in frequency from 1310 to 920 kc.

Examiners' Reports

Hopes of three residents of Los Angeles to become radio station owners in 1936 were put on the skids by Examiner R. H. Hyde, who recommended to the commission that their application for per lsslon to build a transmitter at Pomona, Calif., be denied.

Leon S. Packard, Lewis Stebbins and Alden C. Packard, the latter a radio engineer with KNX, Los Angeles, were turned down principally because of interference which would arise between the proposed station and transmitters located in Los Angeles. Station XEFL, Tia Juana, Mexico, also would be involved. Dry, rocky conditions in the San Jose hills, site picked for the station, were blamed for the probable interference trouble. The three-man partnership, which had planned to operate as the Valley Broadcasting Company, asked daytime operation on an 1160 kc frequency, with 250 watts.

New station for Redding, Calif., received the nod from Examiner Melvin H. Dalberg, testimony bringing out that there was a need for additional service in the area and that the applicants are well-heeled. Outfit would operate as the Golden Empire Broadcasting Company, on the 1200 kc frequency with 100 watts.

Power boost for KFPY, Spokane, Wash., is in the cards, despite an increase of .35 units in the already overquota daytime conditions existing in the state zone, if the application goes through. Examiner George H. Hill recommended granting of the KFPY plea, on grounds that the peculiar quota situation of the State of Washington justifies consideration of the application and because there is a definite need in an area not now being served by CBS members. Affiliated with Columbia, KFPY now serves approximately 300,000 people, report pointed out, and juice-jump would bring CBS programs to 196,000. Station, which operates on 890 kc, has been using 1 kw, but asks daytime jump to 5 kw, with night assignment remaining the same.

Canada Peeved at Mexico

Interference of High-Powered Mexican Transmitter Cramps CRCT, Toronto

Toronto, Jan. 7.

Resentment against Mexican radio is rapidly growing in Canada owing to interference (particularly noticeable in that area served by CRCT, Torofto). Representations are now being made to the Dominion officials to seek some solution to the problem. Situation is intensified by the fact that there is no Canadian minister to Mexico who could present Canada's case directly and that protests are now being handled by the circuitous route of British diplomatic channels. Refusal thus far of the Mexican government to co-operate with the other nations of the North American continent in the distribution of wave-lengths is another point in the controversy.

At present, Mexican interference is practically destroying the usefulness of CRCT, Toronto, after dark. The solution submitted to Ottawa is the establishment of a high-power station which will drown the Mexican interference in Canada. While the Mexican stations desire to obtain the largest effective coverage in the United States, the field toward which their ether advertising is directed, their appropriation of Canadiar wave-lengths is taken as not to be the deliberate invasion of Canadian broadcasting but rather the attempt of the Mexican stations to avoid the situation whereby they might mess up American broadcasts. The plan now is to step up the power of CRCT, Toronto, which would not only damage the reception of Mexican broadcasting all ver the northern area of the United States but which might induce Mexico to come into the North America radio agreement.

One Less Truex

Plans to have three members of Ernest Truex' family in 'The Jones Family' radio sketches have been definitely abandoned. Marital troubles in family took Mrs. Truex away from cast a few days ago. Originally only Ernest Truex and his son were spotted in sketch. Then role was written in for femme character, with Ruth Roland scheduled to take it. This was changed so that Mrs. Truex could play the part. Program seemed to be all set when Truex informed producers that l s wife would not continue because she expected to sue for divorce.

Agnes Moorehead goes into role set for Mrs. Truex. Columbia Broadcasting has one-month option on series of sketches. Roger White Productions are staging the programs.

Girls in Random Hunt Through Phone Book Seek WBAL Contracts

Baltimore, Jan. 7.

In order to build up its 'A. M. Revue,' daily half-hour of music interpolated with spot announcements, WBAL has taken on couple of girls and put 'em in sales department in special category.

Femmes sit at phones all day, leafing through phone books, choosing firms at random and calling 'em up and spearing for quick sales of small number (one or more) of spots. Work on small salary and commish, and if click will get regular jobs and other young gals will be taken on in their places for same sales stuff.

Idea is old one in newspapers, but first time radio advertising has ever been peddled that way around here, where air-selling has always been rather staple and pretty good paying propopish for all engaged.

WFBL's Staff Bonus

Syracuse, Jan. 7.

WFBL, Syracuse, gave two weeks salary to all employes as a New Year bonus. Business at WFBL during 1935 topped the stations history. Charley Phillips manages WFBL.

After moving entire commercial staff downstaire WFBL has remodeled entire eleventh floor of Onondaga Hotel which houses Program, News, Sports and Publicity departments.

Thelma Jean MacNeil, formerly staff pianist and hostess at WFBL, is now Assistant Program Director and w man announcer.

WSGN-Union in Pact

Birmingham, Jan. 7.

A contract with the operators union has been signed by WSGN, ending a long dispute between operators and union men.

An agreement was reached several weeks after R. B. Boyles, owner of the station, resumed operation as Ormond Black who had the station went out.

BRITISH RADIO SALARIES

KNX Wins Libel Suit

Los Angeles, Jan. 7.

KNX won its libel suit against the Los Angeles Times, getting $2,500 damages in lieu of the $500,000 sought. Trial grew out of KNX's charges over a Times editorial in which station claimed it was accused of broadcasting false news reports.

Radio stations KHJ and KMTR will stand trial on same charge for permitting disputed editorial to be read over their frequencies.

Editorial appeared in Los Angeles Times of April 13, 1934.

NBC Readies Southern Network, Tying in Cream of 50 Kw. Outlets

Chicago, Jan.

NBC has plans for a split network which would service the south as a separate unit. Network is working on this scheme to meet the demands of advertisers who have only southern distribution and who are using spot stuff in radio due to the NBC refusal to split its southeastern or southwestern web to encompass the south only. Columbia has had its Dixie web, originating in Charlotte, N. C., for some time, but it has always been pretty much of a headache to the CBS sales force, with the Dixie web getting little business of any kind.

However, NBC figures to be in a better spot than Columbia for a southern special network because NBC has several 50,000-watter outlets available for such a hookup where Columbia's southern is comparatively weak. NBC has such stations as WSB, Atlanta; WSM, Nashville; WFAA, Dallas-Ft. Worth.

WSM, Nashville, Tells So. Why WSB, Atlanta, Is Silent in Storm

Atlanta, Jan. 7.

Snow and sleet storm played havoc with the city's three radio stations. WGST, WSB and WATL went off the air that night. The next day WGST and WATL went on the air shortly before noon (29), but WSB failed to get back until late Monday (30) afternoon. WGST was unable to put network programs on the air without a hitch until late in the afternoon Monday (30), when power lines bringing these programs from New York were repaired.

For two days WGST gave its CBS network program by rebroadcasting from other CBS stations (WBT, Charlotte; WHAS, Louisville, and WDOD, Chattanooga). A receiving set was installed in a church in suburban Atlanta and piped by telephone into the downtown studio. Power was supplied the station's transmitter from the Georgia School of Technology electric plant.

Power lines leading to WSB's transmitter at Tucker, Ga., and to an emergency transmitter at East Lake were broken in many places.

WATL's power lines were broken for two hours Monday, but otherwise, service was uninterrupted from Sunday noon.

Lambdin Kay, manager of WSB, wired WSM, Nashville, asking the station to explain to southern listeners what had happened, and when WSB would resume broadcasting. Harr. Stone, manager of WSM, is a close friend of Kay's, and the Nashville station went to bat for its crippled Atlanta colleague.

First time in 14 years that WSB has been silent for a whole day, and also the first time WSM has addressed the audience of another station in this manner.

With 400 solid hours on sports programs in eight months, Al Nagler, of WJBK, Detroit, claims the title of busiest sports announcer in the country.

Gillespie Heads O. B. A.

Tulsa, Jan. 7.

Oklahoma Broadcasters Association was formed Jan. 3 in Oklahoma City. Ill Gillespie, general manager of KTUL, Tulsa, was elected president. Others elected are: Neal Barrett, KOMO, Oklahoma City, v.p.; H. J. Porter, KCRO, Enid, secretary-treasurer.

Another meeting scheduled for Jan. 17 in Tulsa.

HOLLYWOOD'S GROWING AIR IMPORTANCE

That the J. Walter Thompson agency sees Hollywood as the capital of radio as well as of pictures—and that it visualizes an even closer affinity in future between the two—is evidenced by the establishment of a Hollywood office exclusively for radio. This is in addition to the Thompson agency's downtown Los Angeles agency which will continue to service the local commercial accounts.

Danny Danker, Lever Bros. (Lux soap) Coast contact, another Thompson agency account, and now east on business, returns to Hollywood to head the new radio branch office. Herb Polesie goes to Hollywood at the end of this week to become Danker's aide and production man. Cal Kuhl, presently on the Coast, remains head of the production department. Last year the Thompson agency did $3,000,000 worth of radio business out of Hollywood alone, exclusive of the Lux program.

A census of the many air shows (Thompson's and others) which have originated or are presently originating from the Coast evidences the growing importance of Hollywood as a radio capital. The Jolson, Crosby, Hollywood Hotel (Dick Powell), Jack Benny, Cantor, Grace Moore, California Melodies, Vallee, Leslie Howard, Tibbett, Victor McLaglen (four weeks only), Wallace Beery (when subbing for Jolson on Shell Chateau), Lucky Strike (Astaire), Swarthout (Palmolive), RCA Magic Key (picking up Coast names), are among these.

NBC's new studio in Hollywood is deemed certain to be followed by a big CBS outlet. It's figured that with CBS' buy of KMPC, Beverly Hills, that E. H. will become the Columbia Hollywood key.

It's also figured that with the new George Olsen-Ethel Shutta commercial out of Chicago for Dr. West's toothbrush, and with the other Thompson agency's variety shows in New York, that pix names can be picked up in three different spots, L. A., Chi and N. Y., and routed to break the jumps accordingly.

BERNIE'S SOLO COAST-TO-COAST

Chicago, Jan. 7.

Ben Bernie (American Can) show goes coast-to-coast for one shot Jan. 25. It will hit the east at 9:30 p.m. and the Coast at 6:30, doing away with the usual repeat broadcast for that night.

Lou Holtz guesting on the program.

CHAMBER MUSIC TOPS DANCE

Former Number One Boy of B.B.C. Personalities in Blast Against Official Ideas on Compensation Focuses Attention on Sub-

POTATO PEELERS

London, Dec.

Jack Payne, dance band leader, having announced his determination to do no more broadcasting over the British Broadcasting Company's system, blew off a severe rap at the government-supervised network. B. B. C., said Payne, was a severe headache. Its ideas of what constituted money were only slightly less funny than its ideas of what constituted entertainment, etc.

Payne's grouch inspired by the fact that the B. B. C. have been introducing vaudeville into dance band turns, and putting the show over as a 'party.' Payne claims to have thought of the idea, and wants it restricted to his own unit.

His real growl is with the money. He alleged the B. B. C. never paid more than $220 for a 90 minute broadcast by a big band, which meant that some of the sax boys just about made their tram fare home out of it.

Understanding is the highest ever paid for a dance band broadcast in England was $1,000.

Chief point about Payne's squawk is that he was the band leader first 'made' by the B. B. C., who had him contracted as their Number One tune slinger for years. He later left after a growl about dough, and was replaced by Henry Hall.

$5,000 in Vaude

In a vaude tour which has been going on ever since he left them, Payne has been hitting up as much as $5,000 weekly for the combination.

Top-line radio vaudevillians get 15 guineas—about $78—for a broadcast. If they are a pair, it may be doubled if they're especially popular. Talkers delivering lectures on potato peeling and the other subjects beloved of the red-tape boys, get the same figure. Men like James Agate, theatre critic, do a fortnightly chat on shows for it.

In the straight music line B. B. C. pays higher money. Much of its chamber music talent, with which they lull this country to sleep most nights of the week, carries more dough.

Announcers, who don't get any publicity here, start at $25 a week, and can rise to about $100 if their accents are just right.

Meanwhile the Radio Corporation has an income of about $17,000,000 through the Post Office on the sale of set licenses, without which the honest cannot listen to the programs of Sir John Reith's young gentlemen.

Remington Alternating With Time on Commercials

Originally skedded to drop its half of the 'March of Time' when the stanza goes one-a-week, Remington-Rand has now changed its mind and will stay on, assuming a sponsorship on alternate weeks with Time mag. Additionally the typewriter firm is also planning to sponsor Edwin C. Hill, newscaster, on a three-a-week series at 7:30 p. m. Web will probably by CBS, with the starting date and stations not yet set.

'March of Time' is at present still on its five-a-week schedule under co-sponsorship. Plans to drop the mass production job have been made, but the date has repeatedly been changed. Current version will hang on at least until end of this week.

Justice Dept. Reports

Washington, Jan.

Department of Justice has turned up 'absolutely nothing' from its investigation into rumors of irregularities in a recent case involving two petitioners for a central New York wavelength. Presumably the matter is now closed and ended so far as interest by the Justice Department is concerned.

Inquiry followed a rumor, credited as started by [illegible] cial, hinting that a colleague's fingernails might, under microscope, reveal a little evidence.

Chairman Anning S. Prall of the Federal Communications Commission in reference to the Justice Department report, said: 'It was apparently just one of those things where [illegible]ebody had been drinking too much and was talking wildly.'

NBC Owned-Operated Stations Okay P.&G. Bulk Time Discount For Five Scattered Shows

Chicago, Jan. 7.

Procter & Gamble has won its campaign for NBC to secure a continuous one-hour rate for its four shows despite fact that the four shows are split into four 15-minute periods for four different products. NBC has okayed the continuous rate for the NBC owned and operated stations. This is regarded by Procter & Gamble as the first step forward in its general drive to secure this continuous rate and now starts working to secure the same rate bulk time discount for the affiliated stations on the web.

Original difficulty in the conferences was due to the fact that different agencies handle the various products for Procter & Gamble. 'Ma Perkins' show for Oxydol is handled through the local Blackett-Sample-Hummert agency, the 'Vic and Sade' program for Crisco through Blackman, the 'O'Neills' show for Ivory through Blackman and the Ivory Station Club through Blackman. New show now readying for a wriggle on the NBC wires for Camay goes through the Pedlar & Ryan agency.

NBC originally nixed the idea for the special rate, stating that unless all shows are run together in one lump it would not come under the continuous rate setup. P. & G. boys finally won out after a long series of confabs with the NBC rate committee which finally okayed the right to the discount rate despite scattering of the shows all over the clock.

¾ OF U. S. A. UNDER QUOTA ON KW.

Washington, Jan. 7.

Although Federal Communications Commission has strewn power hoosts around the country with lavish hand during recent months and numerous new stations have been authorized, nearly three-quarters of the country is under-quota on day broadcasting facilities and a night shortage exists in nearly half the states.

Check-up by the F. C. C. as of Jan. 2 reveals night shortages in the whole first zone and in 22 states, with under-quota conditions during daylight hours in four zones and 32 states. The only zone with a full share of day facilities is the fourth, where assignments exceed schedule by 0.11 units.

Third zone continues to hog night facilities, with all but three states having more than their equitable shares. This area, embracing the Gulf states and the lower portions of the Atlantic Coast and Mississippi Valley, has 10.485 units more than its due, being 29% over-quota on night assignments although 4% short on day assignments.

The only region short of its night quota is the first zone, where assignments fall 0.275 units, 1% below par. On the day side of the picture, however, the only area where actual assignments and the quota balance is the fourth zone, which has 0.11 units more than its due.

Biggest discrepancies on the night side are in Utah, Louisiana, and Tennessee, which have facilities far in excess of their quotas, and Mississippi, South Carolina, and Wyoming, which are a long way below the mark. The greatest excess is Utah's 3.30 night units, or 114% percent above quota, and the largest deficiency is in Mississippi, which has only 1.32 units and lags 43% behind quota.

Deficiencies

The states deficiencies in night assignments are: Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Michigan, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina, Indiana, Kansas, South Dakota, Wisconsin, New Mexico and Wyoming.

Day deficiencies are noted in these states: Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island, Vermont, Kentucky, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Minnesota, North Dakota, Wisconsin, Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Nevada, and Wyoming.

MITTENDORF RETURNS TO TOP DESK AT WIND

Chicago, Jan. 7.

Gene Mittendorf, who has been out on the coast, returns to the midwest this week to resume charge of the Ralph Atlass WIND station in Gary, Ind.

Former chieftains of the station, Dwight and Agnes Northup, have switched to managerial posts for WTCN in St. Paul-Minneapolis.

Edgar Joins WGH

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 7.

WGH, Newport News, opened new studios in Norfolk on Jan. 1. Main headquarters remain across the bay in Newport News.

Concurrently, Edward E. Edgar, formerly with WNBH, New Bedford, Mass., is installed as commercial manager in charge of advertising for the Norfolk extension.

PAUL WHITEMAN'S MUSICAL VARIETIES

WOODBURY PRODUCTS
Sun., 9:45 p. m., EST.
WJZ, New York
(Lennen & Mitchell)

Paul Whiteman and his troupe, aided and abetted for the single inaugural occasion by Harry Richman, took over for Woodbury on NBC's blue link last Sunday night (5) and unlimbered a performance that was thickly studded with the usual Whiteman insignias of sparkling radio entertainment and good showmanship. Whiteman was back selling music in the modern manner, with no comics, divers celebs or freak acts to mutilate the mood, and the results proved that the account had something that spells a surefire Sunday evening habit for a major segment of the listeners.

Initial repertoire was deftly blended and dovetailed, even though it was found necessary at later rehearsals to make substitutions for a number of Warner controlled compositions, such as 'The Birth of the Blues,' 'Chinatown,' 'Sweet Music' and 'With a Song In My Heart.'

With Whiteman functioning as his own m.c., the program moved along at a smooth pace and nimbly linked together the various schools of modern music, which included a fetching arrangement of Ravel's 'Bolero,' the 'On the Trail' excerpt from Ferdie Grofe's 'Grand Canyon Suite' and a niftily fused medley of 'Red Sails in the Sunset,' 'Treasure Island' and 'Check to Cheek.' Of the Whiteman vocal menage the standout performance came from a male octet, which included the King's Men, and Bob Lawrence; in a finely colored interpretation of 'Boots and Saddles.' Durelle and Johnny Hauser did nicely enough in a romantic duet, while Ramona was allowed ample opportunity to air her knack for trick lyrics in the fore part of the show. Richman fitted in effectively for two innings.

Commercial plugs could have been more suavely devised and interpolated. Most telling piece of copy was the dialog between two girls in which they expatiated on the laboratory research which the account's new 'Germ Free Cold Cream' entailed. As a device for fetching the mass mind the recital of scientific abadaba is usually surefire, and it should have worked thusly in this case. Also rung in as part of the commercial palaver was a femme beauty expert and for the final lick the announcer told how samples of two brands of cream, Woodbury soap and the company's face powder could be obtained for 10c. 'Janet Parker' is Mrs. Dorothy Kent, asst. program director at WINS, New York.

As guestees Whiteman has booked for this Sunday (12) Morton Downey, and the following week Jane Froman. Odec.

Same orchestra, same sponsor, same station, but on Fridays at eight (and different station hookup) instead of Sundays at six; so this isn't precisely a new program. It's titled 'Yours Sincerely,' and is lightly dipped into a musical letter continuity formula. Some special lyrics carry out the idea.

Jones, old timer in the dance biz, dishes out catchy melody. Vocals nice, too. Whelan commercials modest. A girl shopper is to call attention to bargains being pushed each week by the chain pill grinders. Otherwise Whelan plugs its prescription department and the rigorous standards enforced therein.

This goes to WFIL, Philadelphia, nd WOL, Washington, also. Lan

FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST
Thursday, 8 P. M., E. S. T.
(J. Walter Thompson)

For several years a bit player on various radio programs, Adelaide Klein made her debut on Rudy Vallee's hour as both an authoress and multi-role actress. She's good at both, her portrayal of five different and distinct characters in a weepy sketch laid in a Chicago settlement house being especially noteworthy.

Plot of the sketch, chiefly because it was so timeworn, was hardly as important as her execution of the five women—Irish, Jewish Negro, uncultured American mother and well-educated social worker. The different dialects were honest, though the fact that there were so many impaired the action of Miss Klein's script. She would probably be even more effective with two and three-people bits, her flair for radio dramatics being quite obvious. Scho.

(J. Walter Thompson)

About the only thing missing from the conglomeration of entertainment that served to debut Bing Crosby as the master of this Thursday evening spot was a pair of Australian woodchoppers. Program was not only badly routined and paced but it talked itself into a state of painful boredom. Even allowing for the fact that the producers of the program equipped him with a lollapaloosa of a script, Crosby must have been largely to blame for the fog he walked himself into. There were many moments in the session when hosts of listeners must have wished that the guy would quit blabbering and go into one of his songs.

Introductory stanza as fashioned and run off certainly did little to bring Jimmy Dorsey's unit into favorable relief. Sparse were the passages permitted this aggregation, while the selections, with one exception, that which gave Dorsey free swing of his hot clarinet made this up and coming outfit sound pretty thin.

Bill mixed the boy violin prodigy, Ruggiero Ricci, with the innocuous patter of the gridiron berserkers, Bobby Wilson (SMU) and Bobby Grayson (Stanford), the swift and finely clipped tap dancing of Eleanor Whitney with the a la Mills Bros. harmonizing of the Four Blackbirds, and the tenuous vocalizing of Kay Weber with Cecil B. DeMille's reminiscences of his struggles and early success as a producer. Crosby had to talk it over at length with each act before they could go into their routine, but the top piece of awkwardly contrived self characterization came when the baritone assumed the pose of a little schoolboy bashfully asking question of the dean of Hollywood producers. It was a self-effacing attempt that had phoniness written all over it. Nevertheless Crosby did a version of 'Boots and Saddles' that was cooked to the queen's taste.

Of all the sour and flimsy notes struck through the proceedings the most excruciating one developed during one of the plug interludes when a male voice with a Piccadilly accent was put on to testify how he swooned with joy when he found that 'you jolly Americans' had a cheese (Kraft's Creamed Old English) which any English gentleman would enjoy. Other theme on which the commercial copy played was that the way to make the head of a family happy was to feed him this brand of cheese. Odec.

'AT HOME ABROAD'

Sunday, 8:30 p.m. EST
WABC, New York

Shubert revue still running at the Winter Garden was aired in capsule form last Sunday night under the direction of Howard Dietz one of the show's writers. Half-hour endeavored to capture the cross-country trot of the stage production, with stop-overs at some of the hot spots on the globe. Opening ditty 'Get Away From It All' sounded the key-note for the jaunt.

Beatrice Lillie on twice for expurgated versions of 'Dinner Napkins' and 'Paree,' the former having first been done last year on the comedienne's commercial series. Ethel Waters sang 'Loadin' Time,' which highlights a heavy production number behind the footlights, and here used a choral background for best effects. Later she teamed with Eleanor Powell for 'Bran' New Suit' number, which permitted the tapstress leeway for her expert hoofing. It relayed clean. Reginald Gardiner was spotted for his take-off of 'Trains.'

This was first etherized on the Vallee hour some few weeks ago, and it clicked then, and repeated here. He reveals neatly clipped diction. Dietz discharged his own job smartly. Bral.

(Blackett-Sample-Hummert, Inc.)

Clever production and copy marked this ether interview insertion in Holland House Coffee's weekly MGM Movie Club hour over the Loew outlet. Radio Harris, regular spieler, had Henry Fonda on for the occasion, using the telephone gag as a frame for the bit. It relayed well.

She called the Hotel Gotham, started in asking the visiting film player for the radio date, and then continued with casual conversation which revealed all there was to know about him. Outside of too many Omaha 'ye-ahs,' Fonda sounded okay. Bral.

SYLVIA SIDNEY

'The Third Degree'
60 Mins.
LUX SOAP
Monday, 9 P. M., EST
WABC, New York
(J. Walter Thompson)

Fine production values wasted on an antiquated piece of 10-20-30 melodrama. A hit in its day but its day was before the war, 'The Third Degree' of Ch les Klein sounds hollow and phoney in 1936. It is no longer news to followers of popular fiction that the back rooms of police stations are sometimes torture chambers and as here handled the ordeal is unconvincing as is the use of a shiny revolver held to catch a bright light and hypnotize the suspect into confessing a murder of which he is innocent.

Because the Lux radio theatre is pretentious and because much that it has presented in the past is first rate, this sample mus be judged by fairly high standards. Only the easiest-to-please and the element lacking all capacity to criticize would go for this story.

As a tipoff on the story the climax hinges upon the fact that there are two Mrs. Jeffries. One is senior (Selena Royle) and her daughter-in-law (Sylvia Sidney) is junior. In view of the musty odor of the plot the acting is inevitably dragged down to the level of the script. An incredibly wish-washy and stupid 'hero' arouses contempt in the listener. In 1936 it's a crime to be as dopey as he is. And played in a high falsetto by Morgan Farley the dislike for the guy concerning whose fate all the sobbing is done becomes intense.

Miss Sidney is about the same on the air as she sounds on the screen, but her delivery is choppy at times. Piece must have been hard to direct in something like modern tempo. Land.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN FIGHTS
With Bob Carter and Garnett Marks
Sports
1 Hour, 15 Mins.
Sustaining
Friday, 9:45 p. m.
WMCA, New York

Local station WMCA has based much of its showmanship on airings of fisticuffs from the Garden (and other spots). Friday eve stanzas are fed to the eastern Inter-City hookup, and are generally sustainers unless some big brawl attracts sponsor. In the latter event, either Sam Taub or Clem McCarthy usually does the spieling.

Bill caught for this review (27) was one of those so-so affairs, being a series of a dozen scraps between colored lads, most of them only skedded for four rounds. Garden sparsely populated, and the background hullabaloo missing. Carter waded into his descriptive assignment in workmanlike fashion, and while this may ordinarily have helped accuracy it only served to emphasize the mediocre calibre of the battling in this case. One of those situations that's hard to solve for an announcer.

Marks, until recently a news announcer over WOR, New York, gave the between-rounds dope, also relying on a pedestrian approach because of the pedestrian situation.

Pair have clear, distinct voices, and Carter appears to be reasonably initiated into the mechanics of slugging. Could improve his stuff, however, especially when confronted with poor fights, by making more of the fighter's peculiarities of style and thus establishing him more clearly as a type with the audience. Passable on the whole, though—and better matches, better programs.

EUGENE LIST
Pianist
FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST
Thursday, 8 P. M., E. S. T.
WEAF, New York
(J. Walter Thompson)

This 17-year-old concert pianist's bit was just a nice, highbrow interlude in the Fleischmann Yeast variety program, the former child prodigy executing two difficult classical piano pieces. Chief appeal of a concert pianist to the ordinary layman is individual style, and this was hard to define through a loudspeaker in this instance.

List, who at 12 was soloist with the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra, made it even tougher on the listeners by choosing pieces more for their intricacies than musical appeal. As a result, the buildup given him by Rudy Vallee counted most, instead of the other way around. Scho.

WILDROOT HAIR TONI

WABC, New York
(B. B. D. & O.)

On the strength and impetus of his autobiography, '10 Years Before the Microphone,' Columbia's No. 1 chatterer has attracted a program in which he is the main works and sports is not the chief emphasis. Husing is delving into the same reservoir of reminiscences he drew upon to write his book. Plenty of drama in the early days of radio and he shovels it out with a nice appreciation of its inherent dramatic wallop. Major White, the pioneer broadcaster who did so much for radio and got so little out of it, was the hero of Husing's first talk.

As running mate the Charioteers, an uncommonly warm foursome of scat singers, blister a collection of pops. They're standout.

Commercial, in part of which Husing participates, dwells upon the evil results of sopping the masculine thatch with water. This rots the hair. Avoid and substitute Wildroot, says the sponsor. The spiels are plausible and not too verbose. Husing is a good bet for the men listeners and the advertising is written on the right pitch. Lan.

Follow-Up Comment

Alex Hyde and Don Albert on WHN, New York, sustainers manifest unusual care for house bands. Ditto Leo Freudberg on WOR. All are painstaking with their arrangements. Hyde's is more pop; Albert goes in for the symphonized syncopation.

Horace Heidt's version of 'Broken Record' seems the best interpretation that tune has enjoyed over the air. Heidt used the melody's repeat phrase to change key to simulate the phonograph running down. Not new, of course, as to idea, but a further twist was also transposing up, as if the machine were gaining speed. On final chorus band transposed both up and down. Strictly okay and good enough for a repeat.

Marriage of Amos and Ruby in the 'Amos and Andy' quarter-hour on Christmas night culminated long wooing that was made vivid from time-to-time in the series. Impending wedding-date had been so emphasized through three or four weeks preceding Christmas, that there was expectation of postponement, or at least of comic interference, with Andy dubious and the Kingfish rather cynical as to whether the marriage would really take place.

Ceremony was made an episode all by itself in the continuity.

Claude Hopkins from Cotton Club, N. Y., isn't one of those colored bands that tries to be too ofay yet it knows how to mix up the hot 'n' sweet stuff for best audience results. When Orlando Robinson's sympathetic top tenor is to get in its innings. Hopkins gives out 'Please James' or a melodic indigo like 'Blue Illusion.' But in contrast the Hopkinsites also know how to go swingo with 'Honeysuckle Rose' or that nifty pianologistic arrangement by Hopkins of 'Doing the Co-Ed.'

While the musicians unions in both Chicago and New York have prohibited remote band pickups from using the titles of pictures and musicals from which restricted songs are taken because of the commercial tinge of the plug, Joe Sanders orchestra at the Blackhawk and over WGN, the Chicago Tribune station, is starting to announce special numbers as having just been recorded by the band, and hoping that the audience will like it.'

Xavier Cugat's rumba version of 'Music Goes Round and Round' with a lyric in Spanish is a novelty and an oddity which Cugat ought to can for the Victor records.

Heard over WOR from the Waldorf-Astoria, N. Y., it's hot-off-the-griddle novelty in orchestration.

Healthy trimming of gab and more discretion in spotting of it has lifted listening appeal of 'Tea at the Ritz' broadcast which Pompeian uses three times weekly over CBS. Program arrangers have taken full advantage of swell dansapation by Harold Stern's band and singing of Jerry Cooper, without getting away from the idea that celebs who have tea at the Ritz-Carlton are being interviewed.

Margaret Santry has toned down extravagant and over-effusive chatter. Apparently, the mikes have been better arranged which makes for clearer picking up. This was another initial broadcast flaw.

Herman Bernie has booked Lou Holtz for his brother Ben's American Can program week of Jan. 28.

Vinton Wight new addition to engineering staff of KOIL, Omaha, Neb.

QUAKER OATS
Saturday, 5.30 P. M.
WEAF, New York
(Lord & Thomas)

This program was sustaining over NBC from Chicago since September, 1932. In that respect it reminds of the Sinclair Minstrels which held on for three years before finally getting a bankroller. Kintergarten is the idea of Bruce Kamman, an NBC production staff member. Pretty much what the title suggests, it's 'School Days' hoke comedy applied to radio.

Even down to the Bostonian bl vocabulary kid whose excessively genteel manners and ultra-ultra mater (who sounds like Beatrice Lillie), the program follows the pattern found surefire for years on small time vaudeville. It's as corny as succotash. Humor is broad, slapsticky, sometimes infantile. But the kids will probably giggle and there'll be adults who will forget to be discriminating, too.

Sponsor firm bears down heavily on the privelege it has acquired (presumably by purchase) of saying: 'this morning the Dionne Quintuplets ate Quaker Oats.' It's endorsement advertising with a twist that should be effective in impressing listeners with an association of ideas strongly favorable to the product.

'School Days' stuff has been tried on the air before. But nobody has yet thought to try it with the man who originated it, who knows it better than anyone else, and who probably could do it better, too—Gus Edwards. Land.

MELODY MATINEE

SMITH BROS.
Sundays, 2 p.m.
WEAF, New York
(Brown & Tarcher)

Equipped with an able cast, an extremely safe—though not unpleasant—formula, and a minimum of commercial palaver, this stanza opened (5) in the middle of a palisade of tough competish. On the other NBC web, the RCA 'Magic Key' makes a bid for attention. On CBS it's Leslie Howard. And, locally in New York, Jl my Jemail, the 'Inquiring Reporter,' holds forth over WOR. These circumstances may or may not take the edge off a rather plain dish, palatable though it may be. At any rate, they'll assuredly be the biggest factor when it comes to reckoning whether 'Melody Matinee' does or doesn't sell cough drops.

Stanza ambles along at an even gait from start to finish, and is scarcely ever interrupted or bridged from section to section. Numbers are all pop tunes, delivered with zip by the Arden ork and the Cavaliers. Muriel Dickson, until recently a Gilbert and Sullivan diva, offers the sole digression from the pop standard with a G&S selection, but later also works in modern melodies. Lacking material for a climactic sock, the cast essays finished workmanship.

Commercials are models of Sunday sobriety.

Husky-voiced blues chanter brings slick satchelful of sharps and flats from Noo Awlins for local dialers. Been chirping from this outlet for last season and sounds about ready for p.a.'s. Has lots of that ol' charm and can put it across the air.

On show caught, La Reed mixed up ballads and rhythm numbers pretty much above average. Used only piano accomp. Nice touch, though nothing novel, is injecting an oldie on each show from musical cedar chest. In this case 'Who' came in for beaucoup vocalizing. Hobe.

Here's another example of difficulty of one-a-week news shots. Infrequency is big drawback. Otherwise it's reasonably neat job. Sponsor likes matters of local interest, but often gives precedence to day's lead yarn. Program caught emphasized discussion on chance of war in Europe and whether U. S. could stay out.

Howard Jones, of WIP staff, does spieling on show, with crisp, direct manner and trace of Southern accent. Script is by John Lee, former Philly scribe, and sounds authoritative enough. Style is concise and language should get across with anyone. Plug at end for company's gasoline. Hobe.

WIDER F. H. A. AIR USE

Inside Stuff—Radio

Propriety of appointing prominent individuals in the broadcasting industry to places on an advisory committee to recommend better educational uses of radio is being questioned by Congressional critics of the Federal Communication Commission following creation of 40-man group of pedagogs and broadcasters.

What particularly seems to irk the solons is the arrangement under which National Association of Broadcasters and the National Council on Radio in Education will foot the bill for the committee's brain-racking.

resence of such commercial broadcasters as Merlin H. Aylesworth, William S. Paley, . J. McCosker, Leo Fitzpatrick, Lambdin Kay, Lester Cox, John Elmer, John Shepard III, is 'not encouraging' to Congressional critics who are openly skeptical that the group will produce any practical recommendations. General expectation is that the committee's report, which is not expected to materialize for months, will boil down to the old platitude about the need for better cooperation.

Columbia University's home study department, which starts over WOR, New York, on Jan. 11, selling its short story writing course, makes it imperative that all those submitting manuscripts for advice, accompany letter with one dollar. It's a reading assessment, similar to that requested by literary agents in handling such deals. Sponsor also feels this charge will stem any tide of heavy mail.

However, no papers will be criticized over the air, but such matter will be sent back to the writer via written note. Series is to air at 5 p. m. EST, with Dr. Edward L. Hodnett, of the faculty in charge. Besides the department's part, guesters will also be presented.

Stephen Vincent Benet and Helen Hull, both Pulitzer Prize winners, are among the first to etherize on the hour.

Eddie Cantor, back from the Coast after completing 'Strike Me Pink' for Sam Goldwyn, deluxed the radio press crowd last Thursday (2) at the Waldorf-Astoria, and talked radio solidly from 8 to 10 p.m., EST. Bob Taplinger arranged the get-together.

Sunday (5) Cantor announced on Pebeco program a $5,000 scholarship fund to go to the writer of the best short letter on 'How Can We Stay Out of War?' Judges are to be Ray Lyman Wilbur, Stanford U.; Henry Noble MacCracken, Vassar; Robert Maynard Hutchins, U. of Chicago, and Frederick Robinson, C. C. N. Y. Newton D. Baker suggested the subject, Cantor said. If the winner happens to be too old for more schooling, someone cosely connected is to be recommended for the honor.

E. W. Hellwig & Co. was credited in VARIETY'S 'Agencies' Showmanship in '35' survey with not having such a hot bet in its 'The Gumps' program for Corn Products. Roger White Productions, which staged and produced this program, points out that this broadcast ran full year, enlarging during that period from 22 stations to 50.

Drawing power of 'The Gumps' claimed shown by giveaway stunt that resulted in distribution of 1,000,000 bottles of perfume in connection with the program presentation. Hellwig will have new Linit program on air within next 30 days and a fresh Corn Products line-up, known as 'Musical Reveries' to hit the air on Jan. 20.

Some fast side-stepping by WFIL, Philly, last week, succeeded in saving station almost certain lambasting from some quarter or other. Running current 'Catholic Hour' series conducted by Dr. John Keenan, professor of St. Vincent's Seminary and under jurisdiction of Monsignor Lamb of Archdiocese of Philly, dealing with attitude of church toward marriage, studio found itself on spot when topic proposed was birth control.

Seemed certain to offend some listeners or put station in wrong with Catholic clergy by refusing to okay it. After several days of confabs, WFIL heads and priests mutually agreed program should be withdrawn.

Lenox R. Lohr's home 'phone in Evanston, Ill., took on exciting importance to the local exchange with publication of his election as president of N.B.C. Hundreds of the thousands of men and women who worked under Lohr at A Century of Progress, '33-'34, automatically burst into flames with the hot idea that their proper sphere in life would be radio. Members of the huge Fair staff not yet placed in employment since the closing, October of '34, have since sought to keep in touch with Lohr's activities and prospects, in the hope that their individual records at the Fair would recommend them to him in any new field.

Hardened to ribbing about his sax tooting, Samuel . Rosenbaum, WFIL, Philadelphia prexy, last Sunday (5) contributed to it himself in Philadelphia Record. Beside two-column pic showing him doing some soulful blowing, following yarn by broadcaster appeared:

'I first took up saxophony a number of years ago when I was living alone at a downtown club and felt the need of feminine companionship. The saxophone has many feminine qualities. It is quite ticklish. It has a row of pearl buttons down the back and emits a variety of sounds when pressed. It must be held firmly but not harshly.'

Trade opinion is that station situation in Brooklyn, N. Y., affecting WARD, WLTH and WVFW will continue to be footballed until after next election. Stations have been ordered from the air, their collective time to be divvied between WBBC, and newly named WBDE, latter affiliated with Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

Since Federal Radio Commission first heard the case and pronounced sentence for Nov. 15, those in disfavor have been graced with four execution stays up till January 22, the one now in effect.

Some members of Major Bowes' Amateur Unit No. 1, playing at Proctor's, Schenectady, appeared on a New Year's Day commercial sponsored over WGY by A. Wayne Merriam, Inc., local GE dealer. Air-announced that Celeste Soldar, 20-year-old coloratura soprano, who did two numbers, had made arrangements to join the Chicago Opera Company next season.'

Only Los Angeles indie station to carry President Roosevelt's message to Congress was KMTR. Tex Richard, station manager, asserted agreement exists whereby any station can take presidential miking from network a liate by paying line charge. Two years ago both KNX and KFWB were nixed by major webs on a similar request, but the issue was not forced.

WICC, Bridgeport, Conn., has three parsons doubling as sustaining entertainers. One, Rev. Hugh Shields of Ridgefield, does a weekly humor 15-minuter. Anoth r, Rev. Leonard Clayton of Danbury, has just added his own baritone spot to his long-standing 'Comfort Hour' series.

Third, a Norwalker who prefers to remain untagged, works as 'oice of Youth,' doing juve inspirationals.

STIMULATION OF BUILDING BIZ

Government Finances Transcriptions, but Law Does Not Allow Purchase of Air Time

TIE-UPS

Washington, Jan. 7.

Federal Housing Administration, which received hundreds of hours of free broadcasting time during the past year, contemplated more extensive use of radio during the coming year in connection with a widespread campaign to encourage new construction.

Unable to purchase radio time under existing statutes, F. H. A. is preparing novel programs, both disc and script, for free distribution among stations throughout the country and is seeking tie-ups with national advertisers for joint presentation of both entertainment and educational programs. Advertisers will foot the bill with the government agency furnishing ideas and transcriptions.

Details of the new air campaign have not been finally worked out, but one of the new moves is to switch time on two sustainers on National Broadcasting Co. (red and blue) in the hope of reaching new audiences. Government's 'Home town' program, now aired on the Blue chain Thursdays, will be carried Saturday while the 'Master Builder' feature, on the red network, will be aired Thursday instead of Saturday.

New series of transcriptions, as well as new script serials, will be worked up during the current year as part of the campaign. Government contemplates continued cooperation with broadcasters and with commercial sponsors. During the past year, discs have been made by the Army, Navy, and Marine bands, with five-minute talks or dramatizations and brief commercial announcements included.

Not on CBS

Dropped two weeks ago after 18 months, F. H. A. programs probably will not be carried on Columbia Broadcasting System network this year, although numerous member stations have signified intention of airing the government programs on their own. No negotiations have been attempted between the New Deal agency and C. B. S. since the former sustainer went off the air Dec. 13.

Reluctant to give exact figures about number of programs aired or amount of gratis time furnished, F. H. A. o cials this week praised the broadcasting industry highly, declaring 'over 90% of the stations of the country have participated and we have received the finest sort of co-operation in getting our program over to the public.' All classes of stations have donated time, officials said, while numerous national advertisers have made purchased time available for government use.

Government-industry tie-up has benefited independent stations, officials claim, by putting broadcasters in position to solicit commercial accounts from members of the building industry. Numerous national firms, such as General Electric, American Radiator and Johns Manville, have given part of their time to the F. H. A., with the electrical company turning over 26 successive Sunday periods over the .'. B. C. chain for sole use of the government.

Radio has been highly instrumental in publicizing the Federal Housing program and developing business for the constructive industry, according to government people. Although no specific figures are available, officials said, 'we have pulled very heavy mail from persons who heard about the housing campaign over the air.'

Government is prohibited from purchasing air time under existing regulations and statutes which require competitive bidding and throw other restrictions around advertising expenditures. Another obstacle is the fact that the F. H. A. has no appropriation with which to buy time, all money being used in the most economical manner which is the primary reason for making widespread use of transcriptions.

Weekly spot announcement service, 15-minute transcriptions, and scripts of playlets and dialogs running from five to 15 minutes will be used again this year, in addition to dramatized serials which will be aired over the chains.

NBC, CBS Artists' Bureaus Split Commish on Jack Little Chi Date

Chicago, Jan.

Mutual interest makes strange bedfellows, and two artists bureaus found themselves under the same covers last week when the NBC Artists Bureau phoned the CBS Artists Bureau to buy th CBS Little Jack Little orchestra for the Terrace Room of the Morrison Hotel which is booked by the local NBC bureau. Little Jack Little orchestra opens on Jan. 14, replacing the Enri Madriguera combination.

NBC Artists Bureau tried to sell hotel director Leonard Hicks son of its own orchestras but Hicks insisted on Little so that NBC was forced to go to CBS for the orchestra.

It is understood, also, that Hicks had in mind several other orchestras which are handled through the Music Corporation of America but NBC feels that it was better to encourage money towards Columbia as a radio bureau than to MCA. NBC and CBS both are basing their campaigns on the contention that it's radio that makes names of orchestras and that radio network agencies should get the agency commission cream.

In this particular instance, NBC and CBS find themselves in a position of splitting commission on the booking of the Little orchestra, NBC having the room and CBS the band.

Just Pals

NBC played the good samaritan last week when it aided its rival, Columbia, when snowstorms along the southeastern seaboard blew down all wires but those of N C around Atlanta.

NBC gave CBS permission to make use of its lines for the southern and southeastern groups on those periods which were not needed NBC shows.

Paisy-walsy stuff was also seen when Columbia's special events department built an 'outstanding news stories of 1935' resume program and freely credited NBC's exclusive coverage of the stratosphere ascent.

WNAC, WGAR, WCSG SIGN F.T.C. STIPULATION

Washington, Jan. 7.

Three more broadcasters have been forced to sign on the line by the Federal Trade Commission and agree to quit airing offensive and misleading advertising matter. Previously five other stations were committed in black and white to respect the government's dont's.

Stations which signed stipulations last week are WNAC, Boston; WCSG, Portland, Me., and WGAR, Cleveland, which admitted having broadcast programs sponsored by K. A. Hughes Co. of Boston, dealer in Salicon. Company previously had signed a promise to abandon certain tactics.

Phil Baker Renews

Gulf Refining last week renewed Phil Baker and the others on the Sunday night stanza for another 13 weeks. Indications are that there will be a third 13-weeks for the comic which will take him into June and account for 39 weeks altogether.

After that it will be a 13-week vacation for Baker, with Hal Kemp's band and the Seven G's chorus staying on through the summer. Young & Rubicam is the agency.

Cantor Signs Breen

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Eddie Cantor has signed Bobbie Breen for 10 broadcasts. Youngster will go cast after finishing initial film appearance in 'Show Goes On' for Sol Lesser.

He appeared on two of Cantor's programs here.

Lund Joins WIS

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 7.

Victor Herbert Lund, for erly with various Buffalo radio stations, named program director of WIS here. Concurrently Frank Blair, formerly with WCSC, Charleston (S. C.) and Francis Fitzgerald added to the announcing staff.

WIS has changed its frequency to 560 k.c. and is upping wattage to 5,000 daytime and 1,000 after sundown. Is the only NBC station in the state.

PROGRAMS FROM KGO FOR NBC BLUE WEB

San Francisco, Jan. 7.

Newly formed NBC Blue link on the Coast opening up with half a dozen programs through KGO here.

New programs, first of which was launched last Sunday (5), include: 'Gypsy,' presenting closeups of NBC performers; Henry M. Hyde, astronomer; Palace Hotel string ensemble; Joseph Henry Jackson, book reviewer; Walter Kelsey, violinist, and Rudy Seiger's Fairmont Hotel ork.

R. L. Evans' New Job

Salt Lake City, Jan. 7.

Richard L. Evans, production chief at KSL, left his post the first of the year to become editor of Improvement Era, western monthly publication, which is closely identified with the Latter Day Saints church. He's to continue handling public events, however, on the station.

Lennox Murdoch, of the continuity department, has been upped to take over Evans' production chores.

Ex-Clergyman Upped to Prog. Director at WMC

Memphis, Jan. 7.

Fred W. (Doc Sunshine) Roth, WMC announcer, has been promoted to the position of Program Director. Will also handle The Commercial Appeal radio publicity in a daily column. Roth was active in the ministry for 12 years before becoming a radio announcer.

He succeeds John Cleghorn, who resigned to join WKY, Oklahoma City.

Neff's Added Chore

Walter J. Neff, general sales mgr. for WOR, New York, has been placed in charge of the Mutual Network's selling staff.

Move brings David Cristman Wiley Kinney, who have been contacting business on the New York end, under Neff's direction.

Mae Murray Off

Mae Murray's debut on a series of projected radio programs has been postponed because of contract trouble.

Original asking price is said to have been for $1,500 per week.

Radio Chatter

Georgia

High school students from 35 middle Georgia towns took part in the Georgia School of the Air auditions just concluded over WMAZ, Macon. Each school sent from 10 to 100 speakers to try for college scholarships offered as prizes. Scholarship winners also get free trip to Radio City.

Police calls coming over WMAZ, Macon radio station, had Macon listeners guessing and sent the station's technician on a hunt to locate the source of the hook-up. A condenser like developed a circuit in tune with the police antenna and caught the calls and sent them out over WMAZ's wires.

Atlanta-Georgian's Globe Trotter has been moved to the 7 p.m. daily spot over WGST, Atlanta, to make way for Bosko Carter's 15-minute spiel, via Columbia, which started January 1.

Young Judean's meeting in convention on Dec. 29 were given a 15-minute spot over WGST, Atlanta.

Amateur show, hour-long, opened Thursday night (2) over WSB, Atlanta, under auspices of local ice company. Program peps their beer account. Roy McMillan, of WSB staff, emsees the program as Colonel Smith.

Texas

'OAI, San Antonio, set to pick up dansapation music from renovated St. Anthony Hotel when completed.

Ken McClure's Transradio's San Antonio correspondent, giving ether news service beaucoup plugging via WOAI.

Roy George, formerly of KNOW and KTRH, Houston, becomes publicity director of SBS. Succeeds Dave Clark who goes to Texas Centennial publicity setup.

Radio roundup originated by TQN from Abilene as another in series of special Centennial broadcasts. Proceedings aired from stage of Par theatre.

Ewen Hale and band opens long dark El Arador, San Antonio Plaza hotel nitery, and airs via KTSA, SBS outlet which is housed in same hostelry.

PRESIDENT'S NIGHT SPEECH TO CONGRESS PUTS NETWORKS ON SPOT WITH G. O. P.

Roosevelt's Showmanship Catches Opposition Unprepared—Paley for CBS Denies 'Mathematical Balanced' Time Allotment Is a Responsibilty of Network

After the first flare-up died down the principal reaction, even in G. O. P. ranks, to President Roosevelt's night speech before Congress was that the president had put over a smart piece of showmanship. Republicans freely admitted they were caught sound asleep. Even Democratic chieftains knew nothing of the president's plan since the two networks had been quietly approached and all details set before politicl lieutenants in congress knew about it. In fact the first word to reacl. some congressional leaders was when representatives of the networks, anxious to map out details, came to perfect broadcast arrangements.

Political tempest about sensational use of radio to carry the annual message to Congress into the homes of the nation Friday night petered out quickly last week when Republican critics abandoned their attempts to gain equal gratis opportunities for airing anti-New Deal propaganda. Except for a partisan blast from Chairman Henry P. Fletcher and a futile effort to embarrass the networks, only private grumbling was done.

Angle which attracted most attention from a radio point of view was the replies given the Republicans by both national networks when Fletcher demanded a comparable opportunity to air the G. O. P. side of the argument. Lecture handed Fletcher by William S. Paley was a major surprise, especially since NBC sought to duck the issue by promising Republican spokesmen broadcasting privileges from time to time. Federal Communications Commission followed a strict hands-off policy, with members declining to meddle in the political ramifications until a formal protest is submitted. Paley's explanation was that CBS 'will continue to distinguish between the office of President and the Government, on the one hand, and the political parties and their candidates on the other.' Paley pointed out that 'Columbia has always acceded to requests for time to be used by the President in addressing the people of the United States.'

Regarding the legal aspects of Paley's refusal, opinion in Washington felt the Columbia head was on safe ground, since the President's speech was not avowedly a campaign talk, although indirectly it carried much political significance, and also because there are no individual opposition candidates who might properly insist on the same treatment.

Chicago, Jan. 7.

Reversing its long-standing rule against commercial political speeches, WGN, the Chicago Tribune transmitter, will sell ether time to the politicians. In the past the Tribune station has refused to sell any time to political speech-makers, giving time free of charge to those political speakers whom the station and the Tribune thought of sufficient importance to come under the head of 'public convenience, necessity and information' as news value.

Station, however, states that ether time will be sold only to the recognized committees of the national political parties. And for them, it's going to be cash on the line in advance. Understood that on state and local political campaigns the old rule prohibiting sponsored political ethering will be enforced as of yore, with those speakers of sufficient public importance given the time on the station free of charge.

NEW BRUNSWICK AIR ENGINEER KILLED

St. John, N. B., Jan. 7.

Trying to make an adjustment in the transmission equipment at CFNB, Fredericton, N. B., without shutting off the power cost the life of Fred Gilman, 25, control room operator. Death was almost instantaneous. Technicians had completed repairs to a 1,000-watt unit, and were preparing this unit in operation when Gilman touched a high frequency condenser in a 100-watt unit. Broadcasting suspended for the day, although accident said to have caused no damage to the transmitting apparatus.

Gilman had been on the CFNB staff since September 1, 1934. Working with him on the repairs were Glenwood Love and Thomas Young. The latter hit Gilman on the shoulder to break the contact, knocking Gilman to the floor, where he spoke a few unintelligible words and then expired.

This is believed to be the first fatality in connection with broadcasting in Canada. Gilman is survived by a widow, two young daughters.

380 STATIONS TO GET CHEV WAX RENEWALS

Chevrolet motor company is renewing its 'Musical Moments' platter series for 13 more weeks over 380 stations. Programs are on a three-a-week basis.

Series, placed by Campbell-Ewald and cut by World, has been running a full year, and is the biggest single piece of biz ever to hit the disc phase of broadcasting.

Heitmeyer Draws 2nd O.K. From Federal Commish

Salt Lake City,

Paul R. Heitmeyer, operator of KLO, 100-watter in Ogden, Utah, has obtained permission from the F. C. C. for erection of radio stations in the intermountain region.

Ogden operator was informed by Examiner P. W. Seward Tuesday (31) that his application for construction of a new radio station at Cheyenne, Wyo., was granted. Testimony at a public hearing, Seward said, showed need for additional radio service to Cheyenne and vicinity.

Heitmeyer was recently given an okay to build a 100-watter in Salt Lake City. Gives him a chain of three stations.

Sam G. Weiss, of Price, Utah, has F. C. C. okay to construct a 100-watter there. He represents a group of investors incorporated as the Eastern Utah Broadcasting Co. Hearing was held last Oct. 28, and H. H. Shinnick and Carl H. Butman, of Washington, D. C., appeared in behalf of Weiss.

Weiss intends to begin building within 30 days.

Parsons' Guest Stars

Los Angeles, Jan. 7.

Louella Parsons has lined up guest stars for four weeks of Hollywood Hotel broadcast. Ruth Chatterton leads off Jan. 10 with sequence from 'No More Yesterdays.'

Margaret Sullavan does bit from 'Next Time We Love' Jan. 24; Irving S. Cobb and Rochelle Hudson, 'Everybody's Old Man,' Jan. 31; Edward Arnold, Lee Tracy and Binnie Barnes, 'Sutter's Gold,' Feb. 7.

No talent set for Jan. 17.

Show That Wanted 9,500 Seat Hall Can't Fill 2,500-Seat Theatre

St. Paul, Jan. 7.

WDGY's Broadway Broadcast, playing to capacity houses at the 2,500-seat Lyceum theatre in Minneapolis every Sunday afternoon for five out of seven weeks, moves into the 800-seat Moorish room of the West Hotel Sunday (12).

Turnout last two weeks was poor and current move is to cut expenses all around. Ork will be trimmed from 11 to seven pieces, and switching from theatre to hotel eliminates stagehands. Method of procuring tickets will also be tightened, with bona fide sales slips from any one of the five sponsors necessary before pasteboards are available.

Doc Young, station owner, figures that if new restrictions result in biz perking to warrant, he can always move back into the larger Lyceum. Doc recently caused considerable hubbub when he tried to rent the Minneapolis auditorium, which seats 9,503, only to have city council auditorium committee turn him down cold. Station then released series of vitriolic blasts over its wires, shouting 'politics' and condemning local theatre interests for 'gangng up' against it. Now it looks like a lucky break for the medico that he got the turndown.

Program for Blind

RADIO SHOWMANSHIP

Stunts, Novelties, Tie-Ups

Outstanding Stunts:

ICICLE CLUB
WGST, ATLANTA

Icicles In Geor ia
Atlanta.

Quick to grasp the situation when a snow and sleet storm paralyzed the city, WGST went on the air with a newly-organized 'Icicle Club' program. At 2 p.m. Norman Crane announced the club had been formed and that shut-ins (most of the people were) phone in their requests. During the two hours and a half on the air more than 500 phone calls were received.

Conditions were so bad the following day the 'Icicle Club' staged another program. More than 30 local performers were heard during the hour and a half session.

Rap Billing Si ilarity
Chicago.

WBBM, Chicago is appropriating part of the name of another act for the singing turn of Ann Winters and her Boy Friends.

For several years now this tag has been associated with Pat Manners and her Boy Friends. Local trade regards incident as poor showmanship by WBBM.

Thesis on Showmanship
Charlotte, N. C.

Like electricity or the common cold, 'showmanship' is more easily recognized by specific instances of its functions than by a general description of its nature. Appears certain, however, that the seeker of an overall definition for 'showmanship' can best content himself with the concept that showmanship is the utilization of common human interests to the special advantage of the showman who caters to them.

In a review of the most successful showmanship stunts of 1935 over WBT here, Bill Schudt, manager of the station, has picked the following:

Pickup of a Huey Long interview from a hotel room; installation of 14,000 American Legion Post o cers via radio; description of a circus performance; broadcast of a tobacco auction; airing of Moravian Easter services; announcements by the governor; symphony orch programs; broadcasts for the blind and shut-ins; baseball; special programs for children banned from theatres, etc., because of infantile paralysis epidemic; securing a revocation of Southern Conference rules against broadcasting football games.

Apparent from this list is that sheer novelty is not rated very high—in fact, scarcely at all—as successful showmanship. Emphasis on common and local values, on the other hand, is very strong. Representative values and interests are: politics, religion; government; music; health; sports; theatrical fare; and civic and fraternal organization.

ion Helps 'Realism'
Norfolk, Va.

Recent blaze at the Norfolk-Portsmouth ferry slips got a showmanship twist from WTAR when Campbell Arnoux, g. m. of the station, spied the fire from the studio windows. Immediately converted the advertising offices into a temporary studio and began a running comment. Staff got a laugh when a woman phoned in to say she could even hear water being poured on the flames (what she heard was a radiator sizzling close to the mike).

In addition to giving listeners a picture of the fire, WTAR's stunt also served the useful purpose of informing Norfolk and Portsmouth citizens about the state of ferry service. Firemen saved on slip, permitting service, and this news was broadcast.

io Bow-Wow Party
Rochester, N. Y.

Bozo, dog stooge for Bob Pierce in his Saturday morning program sponsored by the Rochester Gas & Electric Corp., gave a party for kids on his fifth birthday anniversary in connection with the broadcast from the utility's auditorium. Besides telegrams, letters and cards, Bozo received boxes of homemade candy, dog food and rubber toys, along with applause for his air stunts.

He is an English bull and has worked with his master in 14 stations during his four and a half years on the air. He has a deputy sheriff's badge presented by Sheriff Gardner of Schenectady County.

'Simple Dignity' at KNX
Hollywood.

A New Year's card, designed to impress with class and simplicity, being sent out by KNX, otherwise noted for tinging its promotional items deeply with the Barnumesque.

Face of the card bears a photo of the pillared portico of KNX's new studios. Legend inside reads: 'These pillars, solidly built upon the rock of public confidence, stand guard o'er a broadcast house, the door of which is ever held open by free speech and broad tolerance. On this day—January 1, 1936—KNX, The Voice of Hollywood, pledges itself to another year of service to the public.'

WFBL Buys White Space
Syracuse.

Robert G. Soule, merchandising director at WFBL, has been in the habit of sending letter to all dealers when a new sponsored program joined the station's schedules.

When the Palmolive-Peet shows were booked, however, instead of the usual letter, Soule bought 30 inches of newspaper space and directed the ad to the druggists, grocers and radio listeners, all in one shot.

Retrospective Program
Kansas City, Mo.

As a New Year's review of 1935, WHB presented an hour's mixture of big news events together with a review of the station year. Latter got the emphasis and the stanza consequently served as a lick of house advertising.

Proudest spouting (all in dramatized form) was anent WHB's programs, talent, affiliation with the Journal-Post, upping the power, number of successful 'alumni,' and winning VARIETY'S Kansas City showmanship rating.

'Spread No Evil'
Richmond, Va.

Conservatively reversing the usual order of things, WRVA did not broadcast news of the recent tragedy in which a bus plunged through an open bridge into the Appomatox River near here, although news reports of the disaster were in the station's possession.

Feeling was that further accidents might occur in a rush to the scene of the accident. Also did not wish to cause general worry by reporting the accident before having a complete list of the victims in hand. State officials grateful for the hang-back procedure.

WFAS' Own Newspaper
White Plains, N. Y.

WFAS, White Plains, N. Y., has new publication, a small tabloid weekly paper, issued gratis to a mailing list. Contains program listings for week, a column, local notes, station news and advertisements.

Does not devote itself exclusively to selfish mention, but brings in topics of interest to community it serves.

Sheet is a one man job, conducted by Frank Seitz, son of station's owner.

KTUL on Cabs, Busses
Tulsa.

KTUL, Tulsa, is using rear tire covers on taxicab fleet of more than 50 cars for display purposes. Banners read 'Fine Entertainment—KTUL.'

More than 80 city busses are also being used to carry outside banners, 'Listen! KTUL.'

Gas Co. Compliments WMAZ
Macon, Ga.

Tribute to Macon's radio station WMAZ was furnished last week by a quarter page advertisement in the local papers paid for by the Macon Gas Company in which is expressed very earnest gratitude' for the service the station gave on Christmas Day when gas had to be turned off for several hours.

A break in the main line of gas supply left Macon citizens with no chance to fix Christmas dinners until after 2:20 p.m. Robert B. Ingle, manager of the gas company, made frequent broadcasts about the situation in spite of previously arranged radio schedules. In appreciation, he issued a four paragraph statement in the advertisement.

'This station,' he said, 'through its wholehearted cooperation, was in this instance the means of very materially lessening the inconvenience of our customers in this, to Macon, unprecedented situation.'

Taplinger's Comment Letters
New York City.

Bob Taplinger, former CBS press agent but now a free lancer, offers radio editors on daily papers a disinterested survey of trade conditions from time to time. Assuming that the radio editors outside the big centers will appreciate brief summaries of such involved and technical matters as the ASCAP-Warner performing rights issue, for example, Taplinger sends out this type of stuff.

Explanations are written in the simplest terms possible to avoid tradey tinge.

ircus Tie-in Idea
Buffalo.

Flock of five, 10 and 15-minute program ideas being readied by Herbert C. Rice, WGR-WKBW production head, to aid sales force in drive for daytime broadcasters. Rice also is preparing a kids' show calling for circus script, tentatively set for WGR early in January. Stunt is to build up the program with tickets to the circus as prizes in the spring.

with HIS BIG BROTHER

● KEX has now been chosen by the National Broadcasting Co. to carry its entire selection of BLUE network programs. Together with its affiliate, KGW, which will continue RED network releases, KGW and KEX will, under the new set-up, broadcast NBC commercials and NBC sustaining programs from 7 a. m. to midnight—every day in the week!

Advertisers will profit in 3 ways:

1. CHOICE OF TIME
Does your advertising message click better at 10 a.m. or 9 p.m.? Here are two stations; one will certainly be open for your message at your favorite time.

2. VARIETY OF PROGRAMS
Do you wish to follow a symphony or a jam orchestra? Here are two stations; one will certainly have your desired type of program at the hour you wish it.

3. Complete Rate Structures
Are you a large or small advertiser? Here are two stations; both exceptional radio "buys"—yet the rates give you a wide choice of either time or service, each has its own rate structure to meet your needs.

For market data, costs and sales possibilities of using either or both of Portland's two most influential stations, write telephone or wire...

The Way The Sponsor Wants It

Sponsors are whimsical folk. Their moods surprise those in the know. To outsiders they seem plumb crazy. Among others the Russ Morgan orchestra, now heard via National Broadcasting, was auditioned for Lucky Strike. Fellow craftsmen doff their hats to Russ as a musician. He is noted for swell arrangements. Along with the notification that his broadcast was to serve as an audition came a request listing the songs he was to play and emphasizing that stock arrangements were to be used with every note to be played and just as written. Russ knew he'd sound bad so he cancelled the singer scheduled to air with him rather than possibly jeopardize the singer's future. Here was a master forced to audition play tunes not of his selection and from stock arrangements that are used by every jerkwater band in the country and provided no opportunity to show his ability.

Order Waits To Be Filled

Latest Lucky Strike developments. New set-up goes into the present Saturday evening spot on the 11th. This is the Carl Hoff band, Bob Simmons, Loretta Lee and stuff program. The Goodman program comes off and will be revised returning when new time is set. Time orders are in at both networks for a one hour spot any evening except Saturday. First to fill order gets the contract. Meantime Goodman is under option to Lucky for 13 weeks. When new time is set Goodman and Loretta Lee go into the second show, Loretta Lee being the only talent that will be heard on both programs.

Y.W.C.A. Vs. WMCA

Night receptionist at WMCA was very much flustered one night last week when an elderly lady exited from the elevator, approached his desk, set down her valise and asked the price of the rooms. She was a stranger in town and had asked cabby for YWCA. This happens often with cabsters who don't think. Two crates of apples, a Xmas gift for Larry Nixon, were delivered at and almost demolished by the YWCA.

NBC's School for Announcers

National Broadcasting has a training school for members of its uniformed staffs with ambitions toward becoming announcers. Each three months the head of the Service departments submits a list of those interested. These lads are put through an announcers test. Those deemed good material are sent to the school. Dan Russell, one of the staff announcers serves as prof and tutor to the lads. After plenty of learning they are permitted to handle early morning sustainers for practice. When out-of-town stations ask for announcers these lads are submitted.

Founded by Pat Kelly, chief announcer, some six months back three of the graduates are on out-of-town station staffs as announcers.

A Nest of Corporations

Cleveland B. Chase Co., originally radio producers, have expanded and formed three separate corporations to handle radio, recording, and commercial film departments. New set-up has Cleveland B. Chase Co., Inc., as radio unit. (Frank Owens, recent addition from BBDO is president with Chase holding down chairmanship of the board; Harry Hoff as secretary and Innis Osborn as v. p.) Vocafilm Corp., Inc., is the commercial film unit. Fideltone Records, Inc., is the recording unit. Chase holds positions in each corporation. Contracts with Coca-Cola, Philco, Atlas Supply Co., Sheffield Farms, American Washing Machine, National Association of Manufacturers, Lever Bros., U. S. Department of Agriculture and American Bankers Association are spread over three companies.

Additions to the staff include Carl Byoir, ex Cecil, Warwick & Cecil and original author of 'Dangerous Paradise'; Philip Kerby, ex NWAyer and The Geyer Co., and Mary Donegan a merchandising counsel in the fashion field.

Short Shots

Farley-Riley band dropped by National Broadcasting as a sustainer cause the boys signed with Rockwell-O'Keefe. They had been on National without anyone thinking of signing them to a contract...One thing the boys are thankful for is that radio gave their 'Round & Round' a swell plugging and now not only the tune but the Onyx Club has caught on. Customers wait on sidewalk for chance to get into club and spend their $$$...Sheet music and recording sales are booming...Boys have been tested by MGM...Use a p. a. system in joint (they call it that) with Mike Riley doing the m. c. and singing. Spot so crowded Mike parks the mike, a hand instrument, in his jacket pocket between tunes...Musical Footnotes program from Chicago airing over WABC goes on coast-to-coast network on the 12th:..National is readying a series of Mark Twain yarns as a new sustainer. Will do both Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn. Actors for script put on competitive auditions. One part had 29 contestants...Ed Sammis, head of magazine copy in Columbia press dept and Ernie Heyn, mag editor, sold a script titled 'Day in the Sun' to Sam H. Grisman producer of 'Tobacco Road'... Matt Crowley is new Dick Rogers and Curtiss Arnall the new lead in 'Forever Young.' Crowley was the original Rogers and Arnall was the original Red Davis, this script being renamed Forever Young for another sponsor...Harold Stern replaced Mac Pollack on Vim show at WOR... Maxine Marlow, vocalist with Phil Spitalny female orchestra program in the new Zoe Akin script.

Scrambled Notes

Music Corp of America will put a band in back of the Demarcos, ballroom dance team, spot them in a hotel and set them for radio. Deal calls for Renee Demarco to do chatter on clothes and crowd in spot while orchestra is on air...Paul Benson is new radio columnist of the Sunday Enquirer...Burns & Allen folded their NY o ce and are Coast bound leaving behind their secretary and publicist, Bettie Glenn. They are picking up their original secretary now wed and living in California...Pete Dixon writing scripts for the new Spud show at WOR...David Jeidell, formerly J. P. Muller & Co., has moved his accounts over to Charles W. Hoyt Co....Larry Harding now doing production on 'March of Time' beside announcing the Lois Long, Mark Warnow Blue Velvet, Dear Columbia and Manhattan Matinee programs at Columbia...Barnacle Bill (Roy Shelly) lost his ma last week and was off air for the week...F. C. 'Cork' O'Keefe back from California...Joey Nash back from Florida and into the Bowes Capitol Family and Russ Morgan spots...New Smith Bros. program takes Morgan's Sunday afternoon spot at National so Russ shifts to Monday evenings at 10:30 and has an additional spot coming up...Wendell Hall in town for three weeks of vaude...Graham McNamee came a cropper in the snow last week. Sprained his knee and ankle and using crutches...DuPont's 'Cavalcade of America' program on Columbia has extended its network to include the Don Lee chain on the West Coast.

Stand By

Bermuda Board of Trade and the Furness Bermuda Lines will split the wire (cable) charges for piping the Al Donahue music to National Broadcasting for their network...WMCA to air the Professional Tennis Matches from Garden Saturday on exclusive basis. Dick Fishell doing the comment...Hilda Cole added to Ronny Ames' press staff at the Fred Waring office...Frank Parker goes into vaude for next three weeks. Playing Boston, Philly and Washington with programs originating in these towns.

Warner-NBC Clash on Coast; KFWB Denied Ted Lewis Airing

Los Angeles, Jan. 7.

First open slap by a major network against Warner music affiliate came last Friday (3) when Station KFWB, owned by Warner Bros., was ordered out of the Ambassador Hotel on remote pick-up of Ted Lewis from Cocoanut Grove. Station had been using National broadcasting equipment which also takes a 30 minute nightly swing to KFI and the coast network.

Manager Gerald King of KFWB submitted to the withdrawal when Ben Frank, hotel manager, sided with NBC on the use of equipment. Chain declared it did not oppose the Warner remote but that a company rule prohibits use of its paraphernalia by others than affiliated stations. Hotel also was opposed to double setup.

John Swallow, NBC studio manager, said that the music situation had no bearing on the decision to make the Warner station use its own setup.

'Last week I told King that he would have to install his own remote layout, that the network was buying its own,' Swallow said. 'We have been renting the setup during the past 10 months KFWB has been using it. I advised King that our own equipment would be in last Friday and that he would be denied its use. Apparently, he did nothing about it.'

It was Swallow's opinion that Lewis favored the KFWB cancellation on account of Warner restrictions which made it difficult to lay out an hour of dance music. Both the network and the hotel kept such close watch over the Lewis nightly repertoire that he has been prevented from playing interpolations, as has been his style, lest he foul a Warner copyright.

Bolling Blair V. P.

Chicago, Jan. 7.

George Bolling, now vice-president of the John Blair station rep firm, becoming a stockholder in the outfit.

Bolling was formerly assistant manager of WXYZ in Detroit, quitting a year ago to take charge of the Blair office there.

Edward Shurick, Jr., for past year with Addison Lewis & Associates as radio director, has left for an advertising job with Minneapolis Honeywell Regulator Co.

Flippen's Special

Baltimore, Jan. 7.

J. C. Flippen has been signatured by Gunther's Brewery to m.c. finals of series of air amateur shows which have been held for past three months over WBAL at rate of one a week. Finals will unfurl Jan. 16 at the Auditorium, legit house of 1,500 seats.

Loew's vaudfilm Century will give ultimate winner week's date at $200, half of which salary theatre will shoulder, other half the brewery.

970 Channel Divvy Off, But Hearst May Receive Albany Small-Watter

Washington, Jan. 7.

Scheme to split up the 970 kc clear channel into four regional frequencies has been partially shelved through fear of possible Congressional repercussions and following protests about trafficking in licenses.

Original deal to add two more transmitters to this frequency, originally allotted to KJR, Seattle, and now also used by WCFL, Chicago, was put on ice when the Federal Communications Commission allowed Amon Carter, Texas publisher, to withdraw his application for a new station, on 970, at Fort Worth.

One application which figured in the four-way deal is still pending, however, and has been listed for hearing in the immediate future. Plea is that of Hearst Radio for a new station at Albany. Chain may get sanction for a low-power station in the New York capital, putting three transmitters on the frequency which, theoretically at least, is still a clear channel assigned to the Seattle station.

The original plan was for Hearst and Carter to get new stations on this frequency, with the initial occupant, KJR, receiving a compensating power boost. Plan was formally recommended to the Commish, with KJR agreeing to go along, but drew opposition from mysterious quarters which caused proponents to put the four-way split plan on ice.

Since opposition developed, Carter has acquired a new station at Wichita Falls, Tex., which he currently is trying to move to Fort Worth to expand his hold on radio facilities there.

Spot Biz Hot Start

Station representatives in New York reported last week that the new year opened with a huge spurt in national spot business. Rep contingent also predicted that the spring months would find this phase of broadcasting enjoying an increase of at least 25% over the billings which prevailed for the same period in 1935.

Among the accounts that either are being placed or already have been placed for January starting are Mennen's Shaving Cream; two nightly half hours a week; Continental Oil, half hour Sunday matinees; Fels Naphtha, 24 stations, with varying time buys; Kentucky Winners Cigarets; Gude's Pepto-Mangan; Calumet Baking Powder, Spuds, Florida Citrus Growers and Abodon Toothpowder (William R. Warner Co.).

Radio's Big Year

pected during the next few months to overcome the slack in revenue resulting from the switch of the Colgate-Palmolive business to CBS by the boost of the rate structure that goes into effect for a large number of major accounts Feb. 4. Actual loss of income from the rate increase proved negligible. Rate tilt comes to 20%.

NBC and Columbia set new December highs. Former's gross for its red (WEAF) and blue (WJZ) links last month was $2,893,793, which was 4.2% better than the tally for December, 1934. Past month brought CBS $1,885,977, or 12.7% over the gross for the parallel lunar period of 1934. NBC in December, '34, had a turnover in time sales of $2,776,436, while for the like month in 1933 it was $2,324,567 and for December, '33, $2,000,454. CBS in December, '34, came through with $1,674,087. In December, 1933, it was $1,372,716, and December, 1932, $1,005,229.

Washington, Jan. 7.

roadcasting industry probably will wind up 1935 with time sales $13,000,000 better than 1934 and a new all-time record, National Association of Broadcasters predicted last week.

Estimating full year figures will reach $86,000,000, compared with 1934's $73,000,000, trade association reported November income of $8,211,349 and an eleven-month total of nearly $79,000,000.

While seasonal decline brought a 2.2 percent slump from October to November, 1935, on the basis of 11 months was running 10.8 percent ahead of the previous year. The November total, although less than the prior month, was 13.6 percent better than the corresponding period of 1934.

National network business in November slumped about $500,000 below October total, to a figure of $4,533,77 , and regional webs fell off less than $5,000 to a gross of $128,715, but both national non-network and local business picked up, former reaching $1,652,680 and latter $1,896,180. Cumulative figure for the year was $78,837,579.

All categories were better than November, 1933 and 1934, with local business climbing 30 percent over November, 1934, for the greatest advance in the year and regional web volume exceeding November, 1933, by 74.3 percent, one of the greatest gains ever recorded.

Live Talent

Marked gain in the use of live talent in non-network business was registered in November, while both flesh and disc programs advanced over October. Compared to November, 1934, talent volume was up 45.4 percent with transcription business gaining only 5.3 percent, while in comparison with October figures transcription volume rose 13.7 percent and talent business jumped 18 percent.

Total expenditures for talent in the non-network field during the first 11 months of the year amounted to nearly half the aggregate gross in this branch of the business. Sponsors coughed up $15,806,630 for flesh programs in the national non-network and local categories. November talent expenditure was $1,869,100.

Elle Baker has signatured a management contract with the CBS Artists Bureau.

Salt Lake Pride Hurt by Bowes; Phone Co. Refutes Explanation

Salt Lake City, Jan. 7.

Civic pride was injured and protests were shrill and numerous when Chester Hill, Salt Lake City boy studying music on a scholarship in New York city, did not appear as previously expected on the Major Bowes Chase & anborn hour of Dec. 29. Program was dedicated to Salt Lake City, but the home town boy after auditioning Dec. 26 and being okayed by Major Bowes' secretary on Dec. 28 was cancelled at the last minute.

Exchange of telegrams between New York and Salt Lake City over the incident did not allay the resentment felt and expressed by Utahans. Grocers who had played up Chase & Sanborn coffee were among those who felt that the gong had been over-worked. New York explanation that the Utah boy was dropped because Salt Lake City telephone fagilities were inadequate to handle the voting a local candidate would elicit was denied by the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Company here which disavowed any act or statement along such lines. Phone company states it was prepared to handle 40,000 calls and received only 20,000 rings.

Incident was an anti-climax here. Local citizens, state and city officials, the Chamber of Commerce, had united in whooping up for Major Bowes in anticipation of the salute to Salt Lake City. A mining company sent him a copper gong as a souvenir. Then when the unexplained (satisfactorily) story of young Hill's experience was told around town a wave of resentment was evident.

Major Bowes New York office's view of the Salt Lake City incident is that it was due to the phone company, despite the company's denials. Office reiterates that J. Walter Thompson (Chase & Sanborn's agency) was informed by the telephone people that facilities would not be adequate if Hill was shoved in, and that an arrangement was made on this basis.

Hill was subsequently withheld from the Dec. 29th stanza, getting an appearance last Sunday (5) instead.

Vanderbilt Sponsored

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., begins airing over WEAF on Jan. 12 under sponsorship of Martinson's Coffee. He's to give first-hand slants on the personalities of the week he's met, also inside dope on social and diplomatic affairs he's attended.

Series, which will be a local broadcast only, is scheduled for 1:30 p. m. EST. Jesse Butcher is handling Vanderbilt.

Albert, Frank, Guenther, agency is handling.

A Bowes Amateur

Detroit, Jan. 7.

Jack Baker, who broadcast on Major Bowes' amateur program last Sunday night (5), is a WXYZ tenor, and formerly did a regular program for the Kroger Baking Co. over WJBK under the tag of Jimmy O'Day. George Trendle, Michigan Network prez, sent Baker to New York, and has asked Bowes to include Baker in unit No. 4, which is coming to the Trendle-operated Michigan this Friday (10).

WXYZ is now trying to keep Baker in Detroit at the Michigan and over the station as opposition to Frankie Connor, who is at the Fox and over CKLW.

$25,000 A MONTH TO ADVERTISE ON TELE-FLASH

Tele-Flash, the loudspeaker system for announcement of sports events, stock prices and news bulletins during the day, is asking $25,000 a month from advertisers who are being solicited. Accounts whose wares would find the biggest potential public in barrooms, where most of the Tele-Flash instruments are located, are being contacted largely.

For the $25,000 monthly, Tele-Flash will mention an advertiser's product several times each day, depending on length of the spiel. It's a new kind of opposition for radio.

In the past six months or so, Tele-Flash has over-ridden in popularity the news ticker service which most cafes and taverns formerly had. While the price is $25,000 now to a commercial account for advertising purposes, in the summer months when there is baseball and more racing to attract listeners, the figure may be higher. Much will depend at that time, also, on the number of Tele-Flash receivers installed, there being some tendency at present to throw the instrument out because in some instances it has attracted hangers-on, largely horse players listening to race results, who don't buy drinks or food. In other places, however, owners are maintaining their Tele-Fash for regular customers but sternly discouraging those who don't come to patronize the bar or kitchen.

Tele-Flash is controlled by the Annenberg brothers who publish racing magazines and scratch sheets.

reesman's Narrow Miss

Cincinnati, Jan. 7.

Escaping with slight injuries in an auto mishap at Athens, Tenn., while returning from the International Radio Party in Havana, Cuba, and a brief holiday in Florida, Elmer H. Dressman has resumed his chores as publicity director of WCKY. Accident occurred when a machine skidded on an icy highway and somersaulted the Dressman car into a ditch.

Dressman's auto was damaged severely, but he and his male companion suffered only minor cuts and hurts. They finished the trip by train.

WDAE, Tampa's New Tower

Tampa, Jan. 7.

WDAE, owned by the Tampa Daily Times, starting construction on a 230 ft. Truscon Vertical Radiator Antenna. Will be finished middle of this month at a cost of $4,000.

Paper describes the construction job as the first item on an 'extensive improvement program' for 1936.

Girl Singer Dies as Radio Debut Is Set

Detroit, Jan. 7.

After four years of study and work to get a chance on the radio, Alma Tracy, 16, singer, died last week a few minutes before she was scheduled to make her debut on the 'Happy Hour' program over WMBC. She was dressed and ready to start for the studio Tuesday morning (31) when her mother left the house for her job.

Six hours later the girl's father, Robert Tracy, entered the apartment to find his daughter on the floor, dead. Cyanide fumes from apartment below, which was being fumigated by janitor, had seeped through and apparently killed girl singer a few minutes after her mother had left.

Louise Raymond at WLW

Cincinnati, Jan. 7.

Louise Raymond, indigo warbler, lately with Art Kassel's ork, has joined staff of WLW. Her first assignment with the Crosley 500,000 watter is on new series of Sunday afternoon programs sponsored by Olsen Rug Co., of Chicago. Series began this week. Musical background by 11-piece string combo directed by Bert Neely. Commercial chats by Bert Neely. All talent on Crosley payroll.

WLW carries the program from 4:45 to 5 p.m. It is repeated 45 minutes later for piping to WOR, Eastern Mutual web affiliate of WLW.

Account handled by Presba, Fellers & Presba agency, Chicago.

Roosters Bring News

Atlanta, Jan. 7.

Listeners within the radius of Atlanta's three stations are getting their news early these days. WSB, Atlanta, has resumed its 15-minute broadcast, starting at 7:15 a. m., while WGST, Atlanta, goes on the air with its first news broadcast at 7:55 a. m. WATL goes on hourly on the hour, the first news being introduced on Charlie Smithgal's program, starting at 7 a. m.

WSB broadcasts are from the reports of the Associated Press, while WGST uses International News Service, taking the service exclusively. WATL uses Trans-Radio.

Wilson Tunes 'Er Up

Cincinnati, Jan. 7.

L. B. Wilson, prez of WCKY, is just back from prolonged holiday in Florida. New 350-foot vertical radiator of his station's transmitter plant, will be started in operation the latter part of the week.

According to engineers, the improvement will mean a 34 per cent gain in signal strength, equivalent to an 80 per cent boost in power. Antenna is on a hill on Kentucky side of Ohio River, opposite western end of Cincy.

Wine as Prize

Atlanta, Jan. 7.

Poets who like wine are having their days. Started recently over WGST, Atlanta, a series sponsored by the makers of Virginia Dare wine, offers a quart of Vino daily to the writer of the best limerick. Limerick must mention product.

Program heard daily, features short talk on wine, when to eat, etc.

Buddy and Ginger, socko juve stint, renews on WCCO for another 13 weeks beginning Monday (6).

New directional wave system, which will eliminate necessity for direct telephone wires, installed at KROC, Rochester 100-watter, by Lester Carr, KSTP chief engineer. KROC, which is an NBC KSTP subsid, now able to pick up, sans A. T. & T. costs, programs from its papa for rebroadcast.

Thomas Dunning (Uncle Tom) Rishworth, KSTP's educational director, has delivered 13 addresses so far this month before everything from P-T-A units to luncheon clubs and civic groups.

Ted Hediger, WCCO ace announcer, all set for wedding bells late in January, with Ramona Gerhard, station organist, playing the mooch as he says, 'I do.'

WCCO installing a 50-watt ultra high frequency transmitter in its Nicollet hotel studios. Will be operated under call W9XHW. New transmitter will supply power to a vertical mast 62 feet high erected on the hotel roof. Actual radiator consists of a duraluminum tube 22 feet, 2 inches long, mounted on top of a 40-foot 4x4 section guyed on the roof.

New power room, with two new racks, has been installed at KSTP during course of remodeling station's St. Paul studios.

North Carolina

Charlotte office of RCA-Victor launched three 15-minute live-talent hillbilly programs a week on WBT to exploit new radio. Dick Hartman and Tennessee Ramblers used.

Two recent contracts add eight hours weekly to WBT, Charlotte, broadcasting time. They are Standard Oil, with two hours a week split into four news periods a day, and Drug Trade Products, with a full hour a day six days a week.

WWNC, Asheville, using a Santa Claus spot for children as picked up from station 'XMAS.' Reading letters from kids. Daily at 6:20 o'clock.

Rio Grande Rangers on WBT, Charlotte, daily for Maxwell Brothers-furniture stores of the Carolinas and Georgia.

Staff men at WSOC, Charlotte, can't keep out of Studio B these days. Large assortment of sound and mechanical toys stored there for daily Santa broadcasts and the announcers are found any time down on hands and knees with the trains and what not. Manager Earl Gluck is thinking of a general order against playing with toys while on or off duty at the studios.

John Ward, remote control operator for WSOC, Charlotte, had the innards of his remote set fall out on the floor after he had set up at the municipal armory-auditorium the other day for a Ford show. He gather up the parts, held them together throughout the broadcast by almost standing on his head and kept his perfect record on remote work intact.

Dick Richardson, latest addition to announcing staff of WSOC, Charlotte, is native of Boston with radio experience in Texas.

Ron Jenkins, announcer for WBT and later program director for WSOC, both Charlotte stations, has been conducting CBS programs from Miami.

Both Hod Williams and Dave Burnsides and their orchestras have established permanent headquarters at Charlotte and are playing exclusively over WBT. They appear alternately on the new Columbia net that originates from WBT for 16 southern stations.

Paul Norris, program director for WSOC, Charlotte, is an excellent photographer, and has been having fun of late snapping staff members at unwelcome and unexpected moments and then embarrassing them by putting the prints on display—in enlarged form—behind a locked display case.

Hal Kemp, Charlotte's gift to jazz, received quite a plug the other day when the Phil Baker show, on which he appears, touched Charlotte on an imaginary tour of the United States.

Connecticut

WELI, New Haven's new 500-watt daytimer, has applied to the Federal communications commish for full-time operation.

Irving Friedberg, formerly announcer at WICC, Bridgeport, and now in dance marathon biz, visiting the landtsleute.

Clyde McCoy one-nited Sunday at Ritz ballroom, Bridgeport. Leo Reisman in next week.

Connecticut has own CBS—Connecticut Broadcasting System, WNBC of New Britain and WELI of New Haven.

Voice of Youth, inspirational chatter, back at WICC, Bridgeport, after Western jaunt.

Bridgeport Times-Star getting plenty of WICC time to build Christmas toy campaign. Fred Thoms, radio ed, doing Santy.

National Aeronautic Association campaigning to educate Connecticut dialists to flying via series at WICC, Bridgeport; New Haven, and WDRC, Hartford. Leonard S. Horner talks on aviation progress at WICC and Joseph E. Loewe, Jr., at WDRC.

'Radio Recipes,' compilation of favorite holiday foods of studio broadcasters, presented by Florence Ballou, WICC women's specialist, as service portion of Shoppers Exchange announcements frame.

Connecticut amateur radio convention skedded in April in Bridgeport in connection with city's centennial celebration. About 1,000 New England hams are expected.

Suburban Connecticut public schools working with WICC, Bridgeport and New Haven, on series of dramatic offerings presented by English and drama classes two afternoons a week starting Jan. 16. Joseph B. Egan, Massachusetts educator, directing programs, prepared by pupils of New Haven, East Haven, Milford, Derby, Shelton, Seymour and Madison schools. WICC looks on series as combination of educational material and entertainment.

Otto Thurn Bavarians, who have played for the NBC net from WHAM, Rochester, and at Pittsford Inn for the last two years, have gone to Cleveland.

George Bailey, 'Uncle Josh' on KSTP's Uncle Josh Cornhuskers, died Dec. 21. Was 55 years old and had been with station since its beginning.

Illinois

Niles Trammel visiting the ol homestead in Gawgia.

Mark Vance adding three more radio names to his list of publicity clients.

Hank Christal, frau and child guesting with the Ed Voynows on their trip to the Kansas City homestead.

Quin Ryan has a new wire-haired terrier named Mister Ryan.

Johnson Sisters, Bennett and Victor setting a WGN commercial.

Jo Mahoney ready to take the plunge.

H. L. Schillingiaw continues as general manager of KFI-KECA, Los Angeles, with passing of Arthur Kales, who held post for 13 years.

Foreign Writers' 10% of U.S. Air Plugs In '34; Ray Noble Leader with 21,393

Foreign writers received 10.7% of the plugs on the air which the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers checked for 1934. Of this foreign music played on U. S. radio in that year, 4.8% represented British writers, 3.2% French writers and 1.2% Austrian composer.

Other countries included in the survey made of 7,993,969 performances by the Society were Argentine, Brazil, Denmar Italy, Germany, Holland, Hungary, Poland, Jugoslavia, Sweden and Norway. Of all the foreign writers Ray Noble, as a member of the British Performing Rights Society, topped the list with 21,393 plugs. Noel Coward, also a BPRS member, followed with 15,828.

In the Austrian group Franz Lehar led the tabulation with 9,977 plugs, while Johann Strauss came second with 3,303 performances, Claude Achille Debussy was No. 1 man among the French composers, accounting for 10,649 performances.

Robbins Scores Again

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

George Marion, Jr., is readying the libretto for a musical written around Jack Robbins' title suggestion, 'Smooth Sailing.'

Fourth Robbins title to be accepted for film or stager.

Denardo Gets Job

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 7.

Joseph Denardo, of Asheville, has been named permanent rector of th North Carolin Sy or-chestra by hilip Schwartz, assistant state director of the PWA. Denardo has been serving as temporary director since Lamar Stringfield, organizer of the group, resigned.

Officials decided to continue the orchestra as one unit and not to split it up into several local ones as had been suggested. It was also said that the headquarters of the orchestra will be at Winston-Salem, for the time being, G. O. Shepherd, of Asheville, will continue as business manager. The group is made of unemployed musicians. They are paid $18 a week as a federal relief project.

PUBLISHERS O.O. LOWE PROPOSAL

Group of major publishers met with John G. Paine, chairman of the Music Publishers Protective Association, yesterday (Tuesday) to discuss the request made by C. St. John Lowe, head of Canadian Music Sales, that he be permitted to publish their tunes in the Dominion. Lowe, who has an exclusive servicing tieup with the Woolworth stores in Canada, wants the publishing privilege so that he may be able to sell the sheet music to Woolworth counters at 16½c. and the syndicate can retail it for 25c.

Publishers that Lowe has approached may counter his proposition by doing their own printing in Canada and setting up a co-operative shipping office in Toronto. Under the plan which these publishers are considering they will be able to save themselves 4c. on each copy, with this differential accounting for the duty, expressage and tax applied to music now shipped across the border from this country.

Associated with Lowe in the hookup with Woolworth's Canadian stores is Paul Schwartz, brother of Arthur Schwartz, the writer. Pair originally induced Woolworth to let them experiment with the sale of reprints and song folios over the chain's counters. The project quickly spread from 50 to over 100 stores with substantial success. Lowe and Schwartz figure that they can be equally successful in the sale of copyrighted music through these same outlets if it can be retailed at a quarter.

Swing It

Postscript on the 'Swing It' story by Abel Green in last week's VARIETY is the commentary that after reading the definitions of swing as expressed by sundry swing exponents, no one has yet been able to define it.

INNS PULL RADIO PROTESTING ASCAP TAX

Montgomery, Ala., June 7.

Montgomery hotel men have entered into a pact to discontinue the operation of radio in their rooms as part of concerted resistance to fee requirements of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. Through placards placed in the rooms, the hotel men are asking the guests to use their 'influence' with their congressmen to secure passage of the Duffy Copyright bill.

Placard states that the exorbitant fees asked by ASCAP has made it necessary to discontinue the operation of room radios and that this situation will continue unless the Duffy measure now pending is passed.

Then There Were 4

Charlotte, N. C., Jan.

John Scott Trotter, Jr., pianist and arranger for Hal Kemp—both of whom are Charlotte natives—quit the Kemp band Jan. 1 after being a member of the group since its organization on the University of North Carolina campus as an undergraduate dance band nearly 10 years ago.

His resignation leaves only four of the original student group that Kemp banded together—Kemp hi self; Skinny Ennis, Ben Williams and Saxie Dowell.

Varralo Cleared

Philadelphia, Jan. 7.

John Varralo, 35, trombonist in Earl Denny's band playing at Rafters, local nitery, was freed last week by a coroner's jury of responsibility in death Dec. 7 of Alice Bertolet, waitress in Philly restaurant.

He had been arrested in connection with girl's death and held without bail, but was cleared when witnesses could not identify him as being at scene at time of death. It was believed the girl was killed by hit-run motorist.

Jack Mills has the publication rights to the Earl Carroll floorshow, which opens New Year's at the Palm Island, Miami Beach. Joe Mirow wrote the music and Dave Bernie did the arrangements. Jerry Freedman has the bandstand assignment.

Aldo Franchetti, former conductor for Chicago grand opera, checked in at Warners to turn out operatic sequence for 'Anthony Adverse.'

Inside Stuff—Music

Aftermath of the 'Music Goes Round and Round' festival in Chicago struck in several places last week. Ashton Stevens, columnist and dramatic critic of the Chicago American, went to the front by wiring every local band leader not to play 'Music Goes Round' until they had his Saturday (4) column. Column turned out to be a plea to municipal authorities to stop the playing of the song.

Stevens went back to recall earlier tunes which were national clicks, finally calling the current hit the successor to 'Yes, We Have No Bananas,' and finished by calling the song the 'national ailment.'

In the song's short span of life (less than three weeks) it's sold 42,134 copies and 3,976 orchestrations. It's also bringing a flock of offers to Eddy Farley and Mike Reilly and their Onyx Club (N.Y.) orchestra, which has gone under Rockwell-O'Keefe management. Farley-Reilly's own Decca recording of 'Round and Round' is a big seller. They'll probably first do some vaudfilm personals. Paramount, among other film companies, has made an offer for the filmusical rights. Band debuts at the N. Y. Paramount starting Jan. 7.

Santly-Joy (Select Music) can't fill orders fast enough on 'Music Goes Round and Round.' It's one of Tin Pan Alley's naturals which has all the pubs rooting for the song because a click of this calibre hypos all of the music biz beneficially.

Warner Bros.' song pluggers throughout the nation have been drafted as gendarmes to watch pilfering of company's music. Boys also are expected to be pressed into service to collect delinquent dues from small users, in addition to patroling beats. Broadcasters now re obliged to mail checks direct to Warners h.o. in New York.

Disc Reviews

By Abel Green

The disks are sweet 'n' hot these days, bullish on the swingo.

ound City Blue Blowers give out unique rhythmology on Champion 40059-60. First couplet is 'Thanks A Million' and 'Hilltop,' also from the same film. Second pair are the very popular 'Treasure Island' and 'Red Sails.' Same unique style of kazooing and comb-tissue sound effects are prominent in both, in strict foxtrot tempo, with Nappy Lamare vocally featured. The Mound City B.B.'s is the pioneering quartet which Red McKenzie first brought east and featured in the old Ray Miller band. By the way, what ever became of Miller?

Current N. Y. vogue is 'The Music Goes Round and Round' by the Eddy-Reilly Onyx Club orchestra. It's now called the Eddie Farley-Mike Reilly band. As Eddy-Reilly, their own composition, 'Round and Round' is interestingly canned on Decca 578, with 'Lookin' for Love,' another original number, on the reverse. Benny Moten-Thamon Hayes' 'South' and 'I Never Knew' (Fiorito-Kahn) is the other couplet. ike Reilly's vocal exposition of the 'Music Goes Round' is the feature of the first disk. Plenty of slap-bang string bass rhythms against the torrid brass work.

Tommy Dorsey also offers 'Music Goes Round' in clambake manner. Dorsey and his Clambake Seven jam it out on Victor 25201 in coarse, rhythmic manner, relieved only by Edyth Wright's smoother vocal interludes. 'Rhythm in My Nursery Rhymes' is the companion swingo. More barrel-house in style but plenty swingy.

Fats Waller's 'Little Bit Independent' and 'Sweet Thing' on Victor 25196 is also beaucoup rhythmic with the standard Waller pianologistic vocalizing against a rhyth ic swing tempo.

Benny Goodman's orchestra socks it out on Victor 25195, 'Santa Claus Came in the Spring' (Johnny Mercer) from 'To Beat the Band' coupled with another excerpt from the same RKO filmusical, 'Eeny Meeny Miny Mo.' Lotsa Goodman's fancy reed work against a battery of brass and string bass that's interesting.

Babs and her Brothers, vocal trio with band accomp, even sing in swing tempo on Decca 634-5. 'When A Great Love Comes Along'—'Little Bit Independent' is the first couplet; 'No Other One' and 'Yankee Doodle Never Went to Town' is the other.

Joe Venuti and his Blue Four swing it out on Decca 624, with 'Nothing But Notes' (Adrian Rollini of Adrian's Taproom Gang) and 'Mellow as a Cello' (also by Rollini), which is a titular misnomer under the Venuti jazz attack. This crack jazz violinist, perhaps the foremost of his school of syncopation, accounts for much of the swing in this and on Decca 625, 'Tap Room Blues' (Rollini) and 'Mystery.'

A swing classic is Mezz ezzrow's '35th and Calumet' (O'Brien-Mezzrow) and 'Old-Fashioned Love' from the old 'Running Wild' colored Musical show by Cecil Mack-Jimmy Johnson, which is a corking sample of the Chicago tempo. Mezzrow's own first sax and clarinet work scintillates along with Bud Freeman-Benny Carter on the reeds. Chick Webb on the traps; Renald Jones-Max Kaminsky-Chelsea Quealey, trumpets; Floyd O'Brien, trombone; Willie Smith, piano, and Kirby, bass. Giving individual billing to swing combos is good new showmanship on the wax. Victor 25202.

Smoother, and classics in symphonic syncopation and orchestration, is Paul Whiteman's treatment of the Jerome Kern tunes from 'I Dream Too Much.' His 'Jockey on the Carrousel,' with its wealth of woodwinds, reeds and dulcet musical ensemble is a peach of an arrangement, backed with the title song on Victor 25197. Bob Lawrence vocalizes 'Dream.' On No. 25198, 'I Got Love' and 'I'm the Echo' are sprightlier but none the less intricately orchestrated. The Kings Men (trio) assists vocally.

Victor also has red-sealed Lily Pons with 'Ech' and 'Dream.' from her first RKO starring filmusical, and of course the diminutive French soprano is in as fine voice on wax as on screen or in person. Andre Kostalanetz's orchestra assisted.

Another filmusical star to - create her stuff on the wax is Ginger Rogers, assisted by Johnny ercer and Victor Young's orchestra, doing 'Eeeny Meeny Miny Mo' from 'To Beat the Band,' which Mercer co-authored with Mat Malneck. Miss Rogers' excerpt from her own first solo-starring RKO filmusical, 'In Person,' is soloed on Decca 638. Selection is 'Don't Mention Love to Me.' and Vic Young's orc again assists.

Ray Noble recourses to two new Broadway musicals for Victor 25190-25200. First pair is from the new 'Scandals,' songs titled 'I'm the Fellow Who Loves You' and 'Life Begins at Sweet 16' (Jack Yellen-Ray Henderson). Other pair is from the Oscar Hammerstein II-Sigmund Romberg new musical 'May Wine,' a waltz, 'I Built a Dream One Day' and a fox, 'Somebody Ought to be Told.' In all Al Bowlly officiates vocally, and in all the corking Noble orchestra technique on arrangement and delivery asserts itself.

Another English band, Ambrose (imported) on Decca 637 gives out a new version of a kid song, 'The General's Fast Asleep' and 'Dinner for One Please James,' Evelyn Dall vocalizing.

lub Debut

With over 200 of the swing intelligentsia crowding the Decca studios, the New York chapter of the U.H.C.A. swung out with a jam concert (29). All-star personnel featured Jack Teagarden, Bud Freeman, Frankie Newton, Teddy Wilson, Joe Marsala and Carmen Mastren. Other crack swingsters who sat in: Dave Tough, Peewee Irwin, Cliff Jackson and Maurice Purtill.

Exposition of the swing fan's point of view was given by John Hammond, assisted by Marshall tear while Jack Kapp, Decca prez, delivered the commercial angle. High spot consisted in waxing a couple of numbers under Harry Kruse's supervision, which were played back at once and included informal bursts of applause from the swing fans.

On the Air

Latest swing-surprise, Edna Brevard, piano-playing songstress, hitting the ether at noon over WHN. Has a fresh, intimate delivery. Sampled by performance of 'Christmas Night in Harlem,' she's there.

Russ Morgan's opus, 'Burlap,' is really fine with ace trombone work and crack arrangement. This band is inclined to swing when necessary.

Penthouse Serenade, airing with Jack Fulton's orchestra, is keeping a good swing clarinet under wraps. He got away on 'Jingle Bells' in spite of it.

Bobby Meeker's outfit is showing steady improvement airing from Albany. Tenor sax stands out with a jungle-style trumpet a close second. Corny clarinet is the only bring-down. Arrangements okay, with 'Rhythm in My Nursery Rimes' tops.

Waxings

Jack Kapp innovating with genuine swing music. It says so on the Decca label. Two sides entitled 'Farewell Blues,' and 'Swingin' at the Famous Door,' are due for quick release. Band called The Delta Four includes Roy Eldredge on trumpet, Joe Marsala on clarinet, Carmen Mastren on guitar, and Sid Weiss on bass. It's th Mannone outfit with ldredge pinch-hitting for Wingy.

Prompted by Warren Scholl, Bob Wetherald of Victor is releasing an old Whiteman disc of 'Dardenella' on which Bix Beiderbecke takes a full chorus. Recorded in the days before Whiteman switched to Columbia, this disc should still sell. In line with the new swing consciousness of record companies, Bix's name will be printed on the label.

Frank Froeba, Onyx pianist, cut some sides for Columbia with new swing combo. Jack Purvis on cornet. erb Haymer, Red Norvo's discovery on tenor, Slatts Long on clarinet, Eddie Dougherty on drums, and Clayton Dueer, guitar. Best title, 'Church Mouse on a Spree,' with 'Great .' in the Morning,' and 'Round and Round,' also recorded.

WB-NETWORKS PREPARE FOR LEGAL ACTION IN ASCAP COUNTER SUITS

Warners to Sue N. Y. Stations, Cafes, Hotels for Infringements—Networks to Seek Injunctions—Station Contracts Flowing In

Indications are that the performing rights muddle will find itself in the New York courts by the end of this week. Warner Bros. is preparing to file in Federal Court infringement proceedings against all major New York broadcasting stations and several leading hotels and nite clubs. Networks are expected to counter a move against them with litigation of their own which will have for its ultimate purpose the securing of a court order that will restrain Warners from interfering with the use of music by licensees of the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers.

Warners disclosed Monday (6) that despite precautions taken by the networks, their key outlets, WABC, WJZ and WEAF, had since Jan. 1 been piling up infringements of WB copyrights. In the batch of complaints it proposes to file with the Federal Court either Friday (10) or the next day, WB will also name WOR, New York affiliate of the Mutual Network, and WMCA, key outlet of the Inter-City Group.

NBC and CBS intend to do their litigating in New York Supreme Court. The suit will combine two methods of resort allowed under the state law, one a declaratory judgment and the other a plea for alternative relief. Through the first the court will be asked to declare the rights of the various parties to the licensing contract which was granted by ASCAP to broadcasters last June, while the petition for relief will seek to have the court hold that, if there is an indemnity involved, the licensees should be held harmless and that ASCAP assume the entire burden of protecting its licensees' interests.

Matter of Contract

The webs propose to argue that through its membership on the ASCAP board when the June agreement was ratified Warners had agreed that the Society's catalog would be maintained as heretofore. Also that by withdrawing from the Society and bringing lawsuits Warners had made the ASCAP licensees' interests uncertain, and that it is up to the court to determine whether the June contracts assure the licensees of Warner music or not.

ASCAP board at a meeting called for tomorrow (Thursday) will decide what action to take against the broadcasters and other licensees who have not taken out new contracts. Also the part the Society will assume in the litigation that is slated to entangle Warners with the networks and other ASCAP license holders. Few broadcasters have signified their intention of accepting the terms of ASCAP's new five year agreement. Position which has been taken by the majority of indie station operators is that for ASCAP to insist upon maintenance of the old sustaining and commercial fees is unfair, since they are under obligation to pay a major part of their license money to Warner Bros.

Contracts from broadcasters kept pouring into the Warner o ces over the weekend. Stations which by Monday night (6) had accepted the terms of the WB three months' agreement totaled 161. Warner Bros. figures that under the terms it had given the local stations it will take in over the year around $1,000,000, with another million forthcoming from the deal that it proposes to make with the networks when the court issues have been settled. Starr arrived at his estimate of probable income from local stations by counting up the highest quarter-hour rate shown for the individual outlets in Standard Rate & Data, multiplying this total by four and then 12 (the number of months) and then making the necessary deductions for the stations which will be allowed to pay half the regular rate.

Rainbow Room Signs

Only major New York nite spot to sign a Warner contract is the Rainbow Roo . Rate that W is asking of the niteries is 40% of the rate they have been accustomed to pay ASCAP.

Warner figures that it is now in a position to create its own hits through plugging over local outlets and thus embarrass the major commercial into incorporating such Warner tunes in their networks programs and thereby also forcing the webs into line. With little overhead necessary, Warner anticipates easily netting from broadcasting alone far more than it could derive altogether from ASCAP, even after WB has deducted 50% of the take for allocation among its writers. Feeling in the trade is that if Warner succeeds in its performing rights venture ASCAP itself may be helped, as a result of the increasing valuation of music that will develop from ASCAP's ability to collect for a portion of its catalog as much as it did when the Warner group was included. Under such circumstances the remaining ASCAP membership would greatly benefit, since each will be getting part of what formerly went to the WB firms.

The eve of the Warner Bros.-American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers schism brought the issues out into the public as the dailies sought to clarify this discord in Tin Pan Alley and its relation to the public. The WB statement that its music publishing properties—Harms, Inc., T. B. Harms, Witmarks, Remicks, New World, and its subsidiaries, all under the common entity of the Music Publishers Holding Corp.—controlled and published 80% of all the Broadway musicals in the last 20 years, was challenged by some of the name composers.

Thus the issues for the moment are in the nature of claim and counterclaim. Warners avers that it controls the copyrights and all their sundry licensings of the works of Gershwin, Coward, Cole Porter, Romberg, Herbert, Friml, Youmans, Schwartz, Dubin-Warren, Kern, et al., while some of these writers dispute it.

Chappell & Co., successor to Chappell-Harms, and not under WB control, avers that through its present ownership of the works of Cole Porter, Noel Coward, George Gershwin and others, the American Society has the same jurisdiction as heretofore. Much was made in the dailies of the likelihood that Paul Whiteman's theme composition, 'Rhapsody in Blue' (Gershwin) would be deprived him, but Gershwin through control of his own company denied it.

Rights Reserved?

ASCAP statements aver that certain name composers have for some time past reserved all the performing rights to themselves, and thus, as members of the Society, they are still in position to barter for music performance rights via ASCAP, regardless of any WB copyright ownership imprint.

Specific instances are the T. B. Harms Co.'s release of Billy Rose's 'Jumbo' music (Rodgers and Hart) and the new White's 'Scandals' songs (Yellen-Henderson) even though Harms is a WB subsid. A form letter has gone out advising against the non-restriction of both these scores. Likewise Max Dreyfus, who controls the small performing rights of the separate musical compositions to 'I Dream Too Much' (RKO filmusical by Jerome Kern-Dorothy Fields) likewise has round-robined the trade that all four songs from this picture are non-restricted.

These and sundry other contradictions await clarification through the publication of catalogs of musical compositions controlled by both groups. Warners states it will have its roster ready by Feb. 1 and ASCAP ditto, or sooner.

Herman Starr, v.p. of WB, meantime has released a list of 143 independent radio stations that have been licensed (or acquiesced to licensing) by WB for a period of three months. Others may follow. Most of these stations use phonograph recordings extensively for broadcasting and owing to any possible copyright entanglements until the catalogs of both factions are published, they have taken short term licenses.

Warners' Fee

Warners' fee as set down by a temporary licensing rate, via Starr, is four times the quarter hour rate, per month. A station whose 15-minute commercial rate is $100 must pay four times that amount, or $400, per month, for the privilege of using WB music. The smaller stations' rate is half of that. There is no supplementary music charge for electrical transcriptions. Warners is also working out a rate for hotels and theatres for Feb. 1.

E. C. Mills for ASCAP laconically observes that maybe the Warners is right; maybe 'we've not been getting enough for our music. Of course there are sundry other interests such as radio, the hotel men's associations, the exhibitors and even the U. S. Govt. which have had other ideas about the rate of compensation we are entitled to, but if the Warners are successful in achieving a greater yield for their music rights, maybe it ill be a good thing all around.'

Frank A. K. Boland, general counsel for the American Hotels Assn. has other ideas. He observes that there 'should be a single wholesale group where to buy music; not at retail from different factions.' Which seems to be common opinion among music users who object to having to deal with two bodies of music licensors.

The Dec. 31 midnight deadline brought the WB-ASCAP breach to a head when some radio stations wanted to know if midnight New Year's eve in N. Y. didn't mean only 9 p.m. in California, but the networks ruled that midnight in New York was midnight for all of radio in America. Meantime, during the New Year's Eve hecticism when marathons of phonograph recordings were on the air from divers parts of the country, there were repeated interruptions with announcements that 'this being a copyright restricted number' it was summarily halted when discovered as coming under the WB embargo. Both networks in New York maintained standby organists and pianists all through New Year's Eve, just in case, but the hotel and nitery dance bands had edited their books well and there were few if any technical breaches.

WB has set a Jan. 5 deadline for station east of Chicago and Jan. 10 for stations west of Chi to enter into new and separate licenses with the Music Publishers Holding Corp., which sets these dates as the crucial periods before anything further comes to a head.

ASCAP, in relation to claims of WB anent certain composers, avers that it has the right to the Victor Herbert and George M. Cohan songs, for example, and that while it has no objections to other licensors of music, it 'warns' that the Society will not recognize any other music licenses. Gene Buck incorporated this in his broadside disputing WB claims of certain composers' works.

Indies Cash In

In face of the WB-ASCAP breach, the indie music publishers, along with all the other Society-affiliated firms, are capitalizing upon the situation. Smaller firms are adding manpower and digging up old numbers, besides issuing more tunes, which are being welcomed by the network bands and artists to fill out the books through the Harms-Remick-Witmark-T. B. Harms withdrawal.

Firms like Feist, Berlin and Mills have been getting old production numbers back on the air in large proportions. Many of the old Berlin 'Music Box Revue' tunes are getting a renewed plug and the trade anticipates seeing some revived song hits from the old releases.

Non-Warner filmusical scores are getting unusual co-operative breaks and radio plugs on the networks. WB music represented 25-40% of ASCAP's copyrights and with that much eliminated, the incoming filmusicals from the other studios are enjoying some fancy advance plugging on the networks.

HARRIETT HILLIARD BACK

Returning to New York Saturday (4) from the Coast after completing 'Follow the Fleet' for RKO, Harriet Hilliard resumed radio broadcasting with her maestro husband, Ozzie Nelson, and his orchestra on Sunday (5) over NBC.

She goes back to Hollywood on call from RKO for two additional pictures to be turned out this season.

Most Played on Air

To familiarize the trade with the tunes most on the air around New York, the following is the listing of the songs most played on the cross-country networks last week, in relative standing, according to the approximate number of combined plugs on WEAF, WJZ and WABC.

ASCAP RECEIVER TO ISSUE LICENSES

, Jan. 7.

Tracy Griffin, receiver appointed by the Washington State Superior court for the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers, was directed last week to issue licenses to Washington music users. Terms for broadcasters call for payment of 5% on net income from all commercial programs using ASCAP music. There is no fee for sustaining programs. Theatres are required to pay 10c. per seat.

Warner Bros.' break with the Society is not recognized by the court's edict, because 'the receiver cannot ascertain whether the purported withdrawal is a bona fide attempt to withdraw or is a contemptuous continuation of cri inal practices heretofore found to exist in Washington State.' State Attorney General Donnelley declared last week that Warner Bros. or any other plaintiff named in the state's complaint will face criminal prosecution for aiding alleged conspiracy if they should attempt to bring any infringement proceedings in this state.

Spokesmen for the Society and Warner Bros. disclosed yesterday (Tuesday) that neither organization proposed to make any effort to upset the Washington receivership until more pressing matters in connection with performing rights have been disposed of.

Hitz Deal for Congress On Management Basis

Chicago, .

If Ralph Hitz takes over the business-direction of the Congress hotel it will be on a management contract, and will involve no change in the fundamental ownership of the big property.

Hotel for years held its own in the matter of 'polite' cabaret-shows and musical programs, but expectation is that Hitz, if he takes charge, will go in for up-to-date floor shows in at least one of the rooms.

Delbridge Vice Gill

Detroit, Jan. 7.

Del Delbridge, band leader who also operates his own booking agency, has taken Emerson Gill's spot in Webster Hall. Gill, here since September, opens later this month at the new French Casino, Miami, Fla. Delbridge, who has been featured at Webster Hall in previous years, is using Dot Mason, WWJ singer, as headliner.

After a month's absence, Russ Lyons returned last week to Northwood Inn for an extended run.

NBC Issues WB List but States It's Inaccurate

ith the material obtained from the American Society of Com Authors & Publishers, week turned out for the convenience of its stations and clients a catalog of the musical compositions controlled by the Warner Bros. ublishing group. Book contains 18,000 compositions, whereas WB claims to control 36,000 copyrights.

Omitted from NBC's reference manual is the catalog of the Victoria Publishing Co., a WB subsid. A list of the Victoria copyrights had never been filed with the Society. NBC's book also notes th the network cannot make any representations as to the accuracy of the lists since it had not attempted to examine the catalogs as furnished it by the Society nor proofread the lists as put together by the printers.

Lists which the Society turned over to NBC were from three to three and a half years old. Dates of compilation as noted on the front cover of the NBC manual were: Harms, Inc., Jan. 31, 1933; New World Music Corp., Jan. 31, 1933; M. Witmark & Sons, Aug. 1, 1932; T. B. Harms, Jan. 31, 1933; Remick Music Corp., Sept. 14, 1932; and Shubert Music Publishing Co., Jan. 31, 1933.

Note on the cover also explains that at the back of the book is a supplementary list of titles of 'recent compositions of certain publishers' in the Warner group which has been obtained by NBC through the Society from music jobbers. In preparing the lists for NBC the Society had put an asterisk beside the names of the composers and writers who are ASCAP members. NBC's foreword to the compilation states that 'for immediate purposes of checking musical programs, these asterisks may be disregarded.' Asterisk twist derives from the ASCAP management's contention that through the membership of the writers involved it has the right, if it wants, to license the WB compositions bearing the names of such members.

LEE, BEILIN, MELLIN STAY AS IS IN CHI

Chicago, Jan. 7.

Three local managers will stick as heads of the Warner Bros. music groups here; Harold Lee, Witmark; Al Beilin, T. B. Harms, and Bob Mellin, Harms, Inc.

All three are slated to keep their eyes peeled and ears cocked for any infringements on the new Warner Bros. copyright setup, besides hitting the road in this territory to signature stations to the Warner contract. Mellin is ticketed to cover the Detroit territory, Harold Lee the Cleveland district, while Al Beilin will put the eye on the Chicago and St. Louis territories.

Some 40 stations have been signatured in the midwest territory already and others are coming in. In Chicago WGN, WIND and WJJ have gotten together with Warners. In most cases the stations are coming in for protection first rather than to play the Warner tunes. Several have signatured but will refrain as much as possible from playing the Warner music until final details on the copyright di culties are ironed out.

Immigration Laws Stop U.S. Acts at B.C. Nitery

Seattle, Jan. 7.

Running counter to immigration laws, Oriental Gardens, at Vancouver, C., a night spot, has been forced cancel its booking of American acts.

Joe Daniels has been sending one act weekly to this spot, but Evans and Dean wound up the temporary arrangement that management had made with authorities, and ended booking from the Seattle man, for the present at least.

Acts can be booked to theatres without a hitch, but a different regulation applies to the niteries.

Night Club Reviews

TROCADERO

(NEW YORK)

Trocadero on 52d street and Seventh avenue is the former Place Piqualle, nee the Jungle Club of the prohibition era, and will prove anew whether or not the Broadway sector is washed up for class nitery trade. With Beatrice Lillie only faring mildly at the New Montmartre above the Winter Garden and the Central Park Casino having its vicissitudes, the west side of New York as a class nitery belt seems to have two strikes against it.

On the other hand, the Troc's pace since opening has been excellent. Furthermore, Peppy de Albrew, back at the Piqualle where he was such a click three or four years ago, plus the subsequent success of the Piqualle under Frank Cantasco's direction, augurs well for the Trocadero.

De Albrew and Morton Downey are the prime draws and co-entrepreneurs. Downey's sweet tenoring and strong socialite following, plus that of DeAlbrew's, already seem to be combining into healthy grosses.

It opened Wednesday (18) at a $5 couvert to 307 paid admissions, outside of the wine and liquors. Normal capacity is 260. Couvert is $1.50 weekdays; $2 Saturday. Nature of the establishment makes this chiefly a champagne party spot at average price of $10 per, with vintages authentic.

Maraschino is the Bonlface at the door, for 15 years associated with this and other smart spots. Pancho's crack dansapators give out the terp music as ever affecting Latin. He is a socialite fave, and his versatile musicians mix it up with rumbas and orthodox foxtrotology. He just closed at the Pierre. The Divons, who were with Peppy at Chapeau Rouge two seasons ago, are back, doing their unusual ballroom routines. They have a rhythmic foxtrot and thun a beguiine (maxixe) that's likewise different and well executed.

Downey works into a piano mike to self-accompaniment save when Hal Hoffer, long Downey's regular accompanist, plonks at the portable organ. Hoffer also gives out at the Hammond miniature in between the dance sets.

Downey whams 'em with his judiciously selected ballads, such as 'Just One of Those Things' out of 'Jubilee' medleyed intelligently with 'Only Girl in the World'; 'Boy Is You, Girl Is Me,' 'I'll See You Again,' and the rollicking 'I'm in Love Again' for a sign-off, long a surefire for the balladeer. He makes a mistake to oblige with bawdy requests such as that 'Violet Is to Violet Time in the Vilest Way.' Okay for the saucier songsters but doesn't match the wholesome Downey song style. Withal he keeps 'em quiet and attentive.

New Trocadero is interestingly done over with an intime decor that cuts the spaciousness of the room and yet affords roominess and capacity. Wall benches are leopard-skinned, on the order of El Morocco's zebra-striped material.

HAYMARKET ROOM

(PARK CENTRAL, N. Y.)

Former Fiorentine Grill located below the street level at the Hotel Park Central, has been remodeled for a refined version of the biergarten idea with a presentation of an old time thriller, 'Sweeney Todd,' said to have been as popular in England for revival purposes as 'The Drunkard' has been over here. No chairs as in a regular house, instead there's tables in uniform lines, with waiters moving in and around serving guests, mostly with liquor. Also the informal air is played up, with customers free to hiss or cheer as they wish. Hotel has the Cocoanut Grove on the roof for swankier gatherings, so is concentrating on this new twist as an added mecca for public patronage.

John Carter production of 'Todd,' or 'The Demon Barber,' makes much of clever make-up, scenic properties and posturing all of which reflects a ballet at times when the leads strike some odd position. Show itself endeavors to be gory, but is not so much of a rousing thriller as might be anticipated. It's done in five acts, with the barber 'polishing off' his neighbors in his barber chair, and then baking them up into pies next door. Sounds bloodier than it really is. Production is inexpensive, but has been concocted with taste. Between the numerous acts are piano solos down front, some incidental ditties from the principals before the curtain, and last a finale with the company tossing flowers at the audience.

Carter plays the title role, and others include Edith Nickell, Edilou Baihle (latter's daughter), Jerry Rodgers, Lincoln Newfield, Jane Vaughan, Chester Cashing, Richard Phillips, Robert Christie, Marguerite Steinhart, James Donnelly and Henry Denart.

One performance nightly with two on Saturday evenings. Admissions come under the $1 assessment charge. Hotel in on the drinks and food, with the players sharing on the rest of the intake. It's novel for a major hotel to start the only thing of its kind in New York at present, and it jelled into authentic aura of bowery glamour may do something for this cellar room. Bral.

URCA CASINO

(O DE JANEIRO)

Io de Janeiro, Dec. 17.

The Urca Casino seems to have found the answer to the problem of what to do when redecorating. When it started tearing down the main grill for enlargements, it hung the small dining-room with burlap sacking to keep the dust out.

African spears and shields on the walls, roughly thatched awnings over the orchestra and serving pantry and two large murals depicting the white man's fate, makes up an informal scheme which is altogether novel and popular.

Decoration is entirely unpretentious and obviously a fill-in pending the opening of the new wing—designed to hold twice as many tables as before.

In the present setting, space is at a premium, but there has been no attempt to overcrowd the tables. Urca is the only nitery in Rio with air cooling, but this makes room now that the hot weather has set in.

Isidro Benitez, Cuban group, is almost a permanent fixture for dansapation and popular, especially with foreigners. Outfit has good tone for the small room and features probably the best melodizing in town. Rhythm isn't quite up to the rival Urca band at the Atlantico, however.

No attempt at a floor-show. Talent is presented piecemeal, with the four Reeves Sisters, a harmony quartet, now in the line rotation which is unexciting. King Kong and assistants gives them some first-rate showmanship in comedy strong-man stuff which bears repeat viewing. New addition is a magician called Gili Gili.

Spot is tiding itself over well currently, and it is the only cool place in town.

WILSHIRE BOWL

(LOS ANGELES)

One of the class neighborhood spots and heavily played by swalns who can make a big evening out of it for a fin. That takes care of everything including a few shots of hooch, the bills of eats and hoofing up to midnight.

Every Saturday and holiday night is a sellout. Midweek is not so hot but a cocktail bar off the street takes care of the nut. There's plenty of profit in mixed drinks at a 35c. minimum.

Location just off Wilshire and La Brea, being one of the loosiest thoroughfares in town, is all in its favor with the Wilshire front attracting the passing motorists. But it's the repeaters who keep the den open.

Dance floor is about regulation nitery size with tunes poured out by Sterling Young and his troupe. Plenty swingy with the boys in the band handling on the vocals.

Buck-and-a-quarter dinner to take care of the cover is what lures. Much more tasty than the ordinary run of nitery victuals and served with the time flourish of the downtown linens. Gets heavy run of banquets from oldsters during the week.

There's a dozen similar spots in the vicinity, but the Bowl is the only one that has a regular clientele. Place is run like a class spot with no rough stuff.

EL MIRADOR

(SAN ANTONIO)

San Antonio, Jan. 2.

Plaza hotel's nitery perched atop hostelry roof made a comeback with Ewen Hall's band backed by a brief floor entertainment. This was once ace spot among downtown dancing places here, although it never offered much by way of floor entertainment.

Feature is Walter LaMae and Alice Louise, whose terpology is smart, but show only once during the evening. Hall, well known locally, due to Publix emceeing duties and previous stand at a roadhouse nitery, delivers socko vocalizations of 'Irish Eyes' and similar ditties. Lad from hand steps to the floor with trombone tooting that simulates trumpet music. That's the extent of the floor show.

Main draw is the dansapation. In this area the Hall combo is oke.

Place has received some redecoration but retains its Spanish motif. About niftiest place in town. Once was big in comparison to other local niteries, but now it's intimate in size, what with mushroom growth of big dance spots in this area. Dinner trade good at opening, with enough later arrivals to keep spot at capacity, figured around $00. Keys.

40 CLUB

(NEW YORK)

The 40 Club, so called because this is its street number in the East Fifties, is aimed for discriminating patronage. Charlie Weeghman, the operator-owner, is known in both Chicago and New York. He was a chain restaurant operator in Chi, and at one time president of the Chicago Cubs ball team. Among nitery spots he had in Chicago was the famous Pre-Vue.

Weeghman' 40 Club is not his first try as a New York host. He had a restaurant on 59th street, which lasted but a short time. New establishment is a roomy duplex type of layout downstairs from the street. There is a balcony and bar on the first landing, an inside stairs leading to the floor itself. Capacity is 200.

Maurice Shaw's five-piece orchestra was at the Manhasset Yacht Club, Long Island, during the summer and has also played at the Colony Club, N. Y., an ideal combination for this type of place.

Rommy Reilly and Billy Comfort, piano-singing twain, feature intimate numbers intimately rendered. One of their best is 'They Don't Wear Undies in the Indies.' Team was two years in England in vaude and night clubs. Char.

Lynch Looks South

Philadelphia, Jan. 7.

Jack Lynch, who operates the Cafe Marguery, in the Hotel Adelphia, here, is looking for a spot in Miami Beech.

Harry Kilby, booker, is now at the Florida resort trying to locate a place.

In the Niteries

Leon & Eddie's madcap nitery remains one of the phenomena of N. Y.'s nite life. Its weekly grosses run into the $15,000 brackets; it starts getting hot from those $1 luncheon sessions on and grinds until the 4 a.m. legal curfew. The reason for its click is obviously the public insurance that there's alw ys something doing at Leon Enken and Eddie Davis' fun factory.

Show is always well paced and kept hot. When Della Carroll comes back from a South American trip on the w of some Clark Gable romantic publicity she's set by L&E's for her strip-tease. Her style is with a black satin robe and okay for both kinds of audiences; doesn't bother the polite trade and is a general kicker. The McDonalds are cute kidlets with taps and songs; nice looking mixed team. Haywood and Allen, dusky mixed piano team, give out in heated manner. The pianist is a whirlwind; the femine singer hugs the mi but okay.

Terry Lawlor is a constant surprise with her generally improving pace. Not long ago when she was a Hollywood restaurant chorine, then a number-leader, now a song saleswoman of potent proportions. She hugs the mike just a bit too much, too, eclipsing a personality which doesn't need to be thrown into the penumbra. She paces her stuff well. Her 'Dinner for One, Please, James,' is solidly sold, and then into 'Topic of the Tropics,' a rumba theme out of the Hollywood cabaret floor show. She's trimmed her avoirdupois a bit and looks prenerally better. Titian songstress is going places.

Davis, of course, is Davis with his hotcha song style. He also invests in song material, the most difficult of its type to buy and that's why the Arthur Lippmans and that brand of sophisticated songsmith gets $300 to $1,000 a song. A 'Bong the Gong' takeoff on the amateur hour is new. 'Should I Be Sweet?' is a good thematic for him, as Davis cannily gauges the 'feel' of the room. Besides being a cafe star and entrepreneur, he must at a glance cannily gauge the tempo of the customers. If they're not sufficiently warmed up, he stays 'sweet'; if it's a hotch crowd he gives out a brisker pace of lyrics; William Farmer's dansapators complete the show, long a standard with their brand of engaging dansapatic.

Leon & Eddie's has been re-enlarged once again with an extra store giving it greater width. Started in a small room; then the April in Paris rear-court was added and converted into a sliding-roof type of garden enclosure, okay for summer or winter trade. Now this third addition, with Zito's caricatures and decor enhancing its atmosphere.

Ruby Newman's advent into the Rainbow Grill, the informal of the two Rockefeller niteries atop the 65th floor of the RCA Bldg., N. Y., augurs well for the rehabilitation of this spot. Newman's dance combo of eight is different and sprightly, debuting in New York on the heels of an extensive Boston and New England reputation.

Newman is quite a dansapation fighter with the Back Bay socialite party-throwers, also at the key hostelries, etc., and has had some missionary work for general eastern reputation via the Victor records and the radio. While east he'll be pushed anew by RCA Victor, an indirect affiliation of the Radio City enterprises.

NBC is behind the band for a buildup, although Benjamin David, actually effected the booking, a straight six months deal, in itself unusual, but John Roy, the Rainbow Restaurants' managing director, felt that he had a strong attraction in the Newman combo. Under the NBC aegis, the Ray Noble and Enric Madriguera orchestras, respectively from the Rainbow Room and Chicago, sent out 'salutations' to Newman, with Ford Bond handling the in-person broadcasts. Band possesses a distinctive style and does full justice to its corps of two arrangers, in itself unusual for an eight piece combo.

Imogen Carpenter is a holdover at the Steinway, also doubling into the formal Rainbow Room.

Louise Lawrence, songstress, is nee Lee Brody, erstwhile p.a. for Harry Richman. Miss Lawrence is relatively new as a floor entertainer, having determined to write and sing her own stuff on the strength of her past experience with cafes. Somehow she's a better songwriter than performer, her stuff being just a bit too smart for her own type of personality. She has ideas and some clever but just miss

For ne thing, a parody on ', Billy titled 'He's Just My Jim' (Jimmy Walker) is much kind-applausey. Cowar Custom' is replete with Lou Holtzian references; also a few 'stinks' which may have become polite parlor conversation these days, but still don't register into a quasi-conservative atmosphere such as this.

With re-editing and refurbishing of her repertoire she should fare better, although Miss Lawrence will probably find her best metier in selling her ditties to the Frances Madduxes, Marion Chases and that style of songstress.

Rainbow Grill's prix fixe $2 dinner remains; couvert is 50c after 10 and $1 on Saturdays and holiday eves. New stunt is a Sunday breakfast from noon until 3 p.m. at $1.

Tarrant and Dacita, new dance team at the Hotel Pennsylvania, N. Y., are a personable pair, well tutored and making a nice floor flash save for a bad lighting idea. The dim azure spot is too neutral and doesn't do them justice. Their opening waltz, then a rumba ('Sibonev') and the finale tango is likewise an irregular sequence, although they register handily in all three. Waltz opener is okay but the rumba in midsection sets too fast a pace for the ensuing tango which lets down. Would be best to close with the rumba. The girl (Dacita) is very Dolores Del Rio in personality and Tarrant is a personable vis-a-vis. They are Fowler and Tamara protegees and evidence their tuteiage well.

Hal Kemp's orchestra continues in the Madhattan room of the Pennsy, doing big biz with the collegiates. They literally stop terp traffic with their 'Round and Round' version but the Statler hostelry management should do something about the Madhattan room's architecture. Those pillars blot out the bandstand from various angles and while it's a question of capacity or visits, when an entertaining orchestra like Kemp's gives out bandstand specialties it's highly unsatisfactory from the customers' viewpoint. Kemp's band, incidentally, also has one of those portable Hammond organs to plug the waits. Getting quite a play, these small windjammers, for interiude music. It's a good idea as doesn't leave the room totally still.

Kazanova and her tzigane orchestra had a limited engagement at the French Casino on Broadway before going out on a vaudfilm tour. Kazanova reminds of the Edith Lorand Viennese aristocrat in only that the maestro is a femme and the orchestra all masculine. Kazanova is a better showwoman than Miss Lorand, who has an international rep via her disks and who made her American concert debut at Carnegie Hall last November. Kazanova combo is similarly adaptable for disks, class cafes, almost sort of rostrum or platform entertainment.

She brings to her environment a definite personality and flair for the spectacular which should interpret itself into b.o. Kazanova knows how to 'put it over' with her baton, strikes a sympathetic G-string with her Strauss, Lehar and Magyar folk stuff, and bicked by a corking combination of 16 men, including two pianos, organ, two percussions, and a battery of violins and bass viols, it's a colorful string combination.

The Cliff Fischer 'Folie Parisienne' remains, as ever, a tiptop revue, indubitably the tops in cafe entertainment on production spec, flash, decor and montage. This show goes to the new Miami Beach French Casino and Jack Denny is already heralding the new revue due the later part of this month headed by Andre Randall, French-English m.c.-comedian, long a standard at the Folles Bergeres, Paris.

Four Craddocks are remarkable, in retrospect for their good humored acro-comedy. Anita Kremer, whose 'woodland tryst' is the show's highlight, continues tieing it up in her half-man, half-femme costume. Enrico Bertiloso's top tenor; George Canoso and Roy's comedy panto; Georgia Hayes, m.c.ing in masculine getup; Lalage; the daring Arabelle-Rich 'midnight bath' terp conceit; the Komarova Ballet, Marietta and Rudi, and the rest combine into a tiptop entertainment.

Denny's orchestra is the new dance combo and clicks big. Carl Hoff continues batoning the revue.

Biggest New Year's Eve Since 1929 All Over U. S. for Theatres, Niteries

Apart from the general newspaper indications of bigger and better New Year's celebrations in New York on the eve of 1936, there were sundry sidelights to the situation which may cause the nitery entrepreneurs to revise their ideas of holiday catering for 1937. While the crowds were bigger, spirits jollier and bankrolls freer, there were distinct manifestations of what the public prefers, and also how many different types of publics there are.

The mass floor show cabaret-restaurants like the French Casino, Paradise and Hollywood did landce business and probably each averaged a gross take of $25,000 for New Year's Eve. On the other hand business at the once haughty Central Park Casino was brutal and some of the ultra-fashionable hosteleries like the Ambassador didn't fare so well. Spots that were deemed a cinch to sell out didn't quite, although doing well.

There was a distinct wandering habit noticeable this year. The fashionable bars did a big business from wanderers in and out. This explained the paucity of advance reservations in some of the spots which were at first a bit worried but eventually emerged with a satisfactory financial batting average for the evening. Too many people started first at house parties and then decided to take their chances at this or that place. Result was that smart nitery like El Morocco, with its $12.50 supper couvert, had to put up a $5 bar-room couvert to maintain a semblance of order. This spot was jam-packed at 4 a. m. Wednesday morning and didn't call it a 'night' until 10 a. m. that day.

ostly Late

Contrariwise, there were equally smart spots which were finished with New Year's celebrations as early as 2 a. m., but in the main it was an all-night bunch which taxed the kitchens for 5 and 6 a. m. hamand-eggs, this being part of the catering arrangements.

The Mayfair and 60 Club (Hotel Pierre) type of patronage which started first there, and then migrated into the smart niteries where they are regulars, were well taken care of by the hosts who manifested extraordinary wisdom to preserve good-will from their regular customers, regardless of the New Year's Eve feverish Big Take. In these spots business was commensurately thriving and generally satisfactory. Others which operated on the principle of taking the peasants big and quick somehow didn't average up so well.

Headwaiters and captains were extremely respectful of their known patrons and privileged them accordingly. These catering lieutenants at almost every spot likewise observed that while the b. r. was generous and the mood gayer and freer, there was consistently better order and conservatism. It all resolved itself down to the findings that people were holding their liquor better; or, rather, that they drank more intelligently, matching vintage and highball and cordial with the proper food courses, so that there was less physical distress at the end of the whoopee evening.

The late smart spots like the Trocadero salvaged themselves from the wandering bunch after a slow start. On the other hand the Montmartre (Beatrice Lillie) was very light. Stork was so-so but bar biz was bullish. House of Morgan (Sophie Tucker), Versailles (Richman), Leon & Eddie's, Waldorf, 21, et al, were among the big grossers; also the Hotels New Yorker, Astor, Pennsy, etc.

East Side Off

Somehow the east side of the town didn't enjoy the swanky support it formerly evidenced, which at one time (and still does) threated the almost total extermination of Broadway as a Gay Niteway. Broadway came back into its own New Year's Eve with record crowds, well handled by extra police detail and in good spirits. Harlem likewise had its innings.

The newspaper lens-hounds making the nitery rounds for whoopee pictures were the best barometers where the 'right' and the most people were, although the shifting crowds prompted some to revise their opinions. Theyre were spots which started slow but finished with a big gate from an unexpected influx of patrons. Others never got started.

Broadway cinemas ground to 7 a. m. and the legits were SRO long in advance, particularly the smash hits. Others likewise prospered.

Even Chinatown and Greenwich Village boomed, and one of the funnier sights were the peasants with whoopee paper hats and noise-makers parked in the windows of the Broadway Automat and Childs restaurants.

Chi Best in 6 Years

Chicago, Jan. 7.

It was the biggest New Year's Eve in six years for Chicago and the midwest. There was more money spent in 12 amusement hours at the hotels, cafes and theatres than any 12 hours in the midwest since the hey-hey days of 1929. There were more people seeking entertainment and ready to pay for it. It was, perhaps, 'the dawn of a new era' with better drinking, more genuine fun and less rowdyism than usual for Chicago. There was less confetti and less gun-shooting but more singing and more 'auld lang syne.'

Hotels and cafes both in the loop and in the far stretches of the town's neighborhoods welcomed New Year's Eve with complete capacity, and with the floors jammed with the tiniest tables procurable and with parties of six stuffed around a 2x2 table. And for these squeeze-ins the charges ranged from $1 to $12.50 per plate or cover charge. Those tiny spots with no plate dinner available and which charged $1 or $2 for the privilege of entering and trying to dance on the postage stamp floors demanded that this buck or two-buck minimum charge be consumed only in drinks. Food cost extra and could not be counted in on the flat table space charge.

More than 30,000 reservations for table space were made in the city and it is generally estimated that the New Year's Eve celebration from the standpoint of money and reservations was approximately 40-50% greater in take than the year previous.

Sky-Riders

Every downtown theatre, vaudfilm, legit and picture sold out for the New Year's evening shows and those with reserved seats were completely sold out days before the night of Dec. 31. All houses hiked their prices and got it. RKO Palace, regularly 65c for its night show, got $2.20 for reserved seats for its two midnight shows; the Chicago jumped from 75c to 99c; Oriental from 40c to 75c, the Woods from 25c to 40c, the Garrick from 55c to 75c. But these prices didn't scare anybody. They stood in line for hours. The Palace grossed nearly $10,000 in its two shows; it ordinarily grossed around $17,000 for a full week's run.

At the hotels joy and coin was unconfined. Bigger hostelries had three and four rooms going and capacity in each one. And with all the rooms with different bands and entertainment, the hotels with the exception of the top cafes, did the real gross business of the town since their rooms can hold from 500 to 1,000 people apiece and that adds up to sensational mazuma when multiplied by $10 or $12.

Shoe-Horn Busy

Spot which did the top business was the Hotel Sherman with three rooms going full blast: College Inn with the George Olsen orchestra, Bal Tabarin with Duke Ellington, and the Grand Ballroom with Louis Panico. Palmer House sold out both its Empire Room and the Chicago Room; Stevens had some 2,000 celebrants in its Continental and Grand ballrooms; Drake hotel used its Gold Coast Room and overflowed into a second room; LaSalle hotel had to use both its Hangar and the Blue Fountain Room. Congress took care of its mobs in the Urban and the Pompeian rooms.

Blackstone hotel was in the running actively this year for the first time with its Mayfair Room, which secured the high plate figure of the town with its $12.50 nip. But Morrison, Bismarck and Edgewater Beach hotels restricted their public parties to their regular Terrace Room, Walnut Room and Marine Dining Room, but all noted a terrific play in private rooms.

Sherman House was out in front on grosses with the Palmer House a close second. Sherman ran around $80,000 on the night, playing to around 3,000 people. Palmer House grossed around $70,000. Rest of the hotels and cafes ranged downward in play and gross from those high marks. Numerous hotels which ordinarily do not have dine-and-dance spots, such as the Eastgate, St. Clair, etc., installed bands and favors and went to town for the New Year's festival and did turnaway biz.

Among the cafes the leading take was established by the Chez Paree at its $7.50 coverage. This was followed by the Royale-Frolics, Paddock Club, Paramount, Hi-Hat, Colsimo's, Alabam and the After-the-Show Club. Paddock Club got a big play on the second tide of celebrants after the early night crowd cleared out around 5 a.m. Always a late nite spot the Paddock was going strong at 10 o'clock in the morning of New Year's Day.

Hollywood

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Many a Hollywood and Los Angeles night spot declared their first dividends from New Year's Eve business.

Year's end celebration, as far as this neck of the woods is concerned, was the most profitable the town has seen in the past five years. By 11 o'clock New Year's eve there wasn't an empty table at any of the town dozen recognized niteries in this community and business was near capacity in the many smaller spots that went table d'hote for the evening.

Beverly Wilshire; Ambassador, Century Club, Cotton Club, Biltmore and other champagne spots were sold out several days in advance. Those catering to the more subdued tastes and the lighter couvert complained none over the final tabulation.

Palm Springs, Ensenada (Mex) Coronado, Santa Barbara and Del Monte, places all catering to the carriage trade, saw plenty spending.

Theatres in the Los Angeles district did around $50,000 on the night, which is no mean figure. First runs alone accounted for around $35,000 on their special shows.

Fowler's Merry Wassail

Studio celebrations this year were all under wraps with the exception of Gene Fowler's celebration for members of the press and those not members of the press at 20th Century-Fox. Fowler's affair was tops for hospitality.

Rose Bowl game drew 87,000 clear headed patrons and the Santa Anita race track got 50,000. Tough thing about these sporting events are that they both are held in or near Pasadena and the handling of traffic, while okay on the way out, is murder on the return trip. It took about 40 minutes to go from Hollywood to the Bowl, a few minutes longer to the track. Return trip in some cases took three hours.

It is estimated that New Year's business was 50% over that of last year, a larger percentage above 1934 and 1933.

ine Comes Back

Cincinnati, Jan. 7.

Coming-in frolic for '36 set a New Year's Eve trade tops at Cincy's merrymaking spots, which are far more numerous than in the prohibish era, when the burg's concert halls and famous Over-the-Rhine district rated it as a gayety center of the nation.

For the Eve rush, swankies turned 'em away and the sawdust joints did capacity biz. Private parties used all available space in the better class hotels. Reservations at clubs were filled in advance. Only several outlying niteries had more than enough tables.

High tap of the town was the Netherland Plaza's $7.50 per head for its 550-seat Pavilion Caprice, where Bob Crosby's band was on deck. Same hotel opened its Hall of Mirrors, at $2.50 per copy, with Phil Davis' band from WLW. It was a straight couvert.

Gibson had Art Kassel's combo in its Florentine Room. Old Vienna, Lookout House and Castle Farm had floor shows.

All union musicians were engaged and other tooters had no trouble landing jobs. Local acts were not enough to go around and various troupes bicycled.

$20 Couvert in N. O.

New Orleans, Jan.

New Year's in the night spots here was the brightest in many years, with patrons wetter, funnier and noiser than at any time since the depression. Rubber bands were off the bank rolls in the swank as in the smaller places.

Blue Room, swank spot in the Roosevelt hotel, was sold out completely. Over 550 persons were accommodated. The tariff per couple was $20. Ben Pollock band and floor show provided entertainment.

Jung roof was a happy second. Ray Teal's band attraction here, with tariff $15 per couple. Over 400 attended.

The less pretentious clubs in the French Quarter, off to a slow start in the evening, got underway about 2 a.m. and the pop of champagne bottles rivalled the pop of fireworks on Canal street. Tip Top Inn of the Roosevelt housed more than 350 celebrants who paid $5 per person. New Orleans Athletic club handled almost 1,000 at $7 per couple.

Vanity Club, Prima's Shim Sham, Cadillac, Nut Club and Chez Parre packed 'em in. Toll in these small clubs ranged from $1 to $2.50 per person. Plenty of stews in evidence.

Anti-noise and fireworks bans were lifted, and in hundreds of bars and other 'hot spots' the open-all-night sign hung high. Radios or loudspeaker machines provide the music in the majority of these places. The New Year came in in a style reminiscent of the old days.

For $5.25 i

Minneapolis, Jan. 7.

Aided by improved general conditions and the mildest New Year's eve weather within memory, local niteries, hotels and other drinking emporiums smashed through on this second anniversary of repeal to their biggest biz since 1928-29. There was a record number of firewater establishments to cater to the most celebrants in the city's history, but considerably less coin was spent in toto than in the boom days.

Cover, or admission, charges of $2.75 per person were in effect only in two leading hotels. Otherwise the tariffs, ranging from $1.50 to $5.25, included dinner, entertainment, dancing and maybe a drink. Some establishments had minimums ranging from $1.50 to $2 and not a few, including one of the best patronized and biggest spots, maintained no admission charge or minimum. Several advertised reduced beverage prices while none boosted the ante on drinks, whiskies and highballs, etc., going for 25 to 75c and champagne for $7 a fifth, with little of the fizz water sold.

Here in these sticks for $5.25 per person, including tax, one could enjoy at the largest and most elaborate night club, the Cocoanut Grove, a seven-course dinner, a pint of domestic champagne, floor show entertainment, favors and dancing. Other drinks ordered were paid for, of course. Beer listing at a dime a glass and hard liquors and highballs at 25c and upward. Even in this place, swanky for Minneapolis, a surprising amount of beer was consumed. With an 800 seating capacity the establishment grossed around $10,000. In addition to the table guests transient throngs continuously milled around a large circular bar.

Hotel Radisson Flame Room grossed second best. The take here from 800 patrons was estimated at $6,000.

A dozen or more establishments had floor shows comprising anywhere from one to seven acts. Four splurged with lines of girls. Many of the 200 saloons and 3.2 beer joints had music for dancing and one or more entertainers and all did a rushing business, with 5c and 10c beer and 10c and 15c whiskies.

Most theatres gave special midnight shows and the 4,200-seat Minnesota, with Burns and Allen and an 85c flat admission; Orpheum, also with a stage show, and the Gayety (stock burlesque) held near-capacity houses. 'Tobacco Road,' at the Metropolitan, gave a special midnight performance, but trade was light here.

ing Helped Dot.

Detroit, Jan. 7.

The most orderly, profitable and safe New Year's Eve in Detroit since boom days. Lifting of closing hour lid meant an additional take of $50,000 in the better class hotels and nite spots, although several of the high price spots did not fill as expected, due chiefly to cover upping as much as 35% over last year.

Tariffs ranged downward from town's top of $10 per person at the Book-Cadillac, which included dinner, floor shows, favors, etc. Top price among the niteries was $5.50 per person at Oriole Terrace; among theatres $3 at the Casa (Earl Carroll's 'Vanities') and $1.50 at combo houses (Fox and Michigan); among private parties $7.50 per person at the exclusive Detroit Athletic Club, and among the beer gardens and ballrooms as low as 60c per person. Grosses were around $25,000 at the Book-Cadillac, including take from party suites and private dining rooms; $10,000 at Oriole Terrace; $8,000 at D. A. C., and about $7,000 each for the Fox and Michigan.

Sale of 500,000 gallons of liquor was reported by State Liquor Commission, more than usual amount going into homes for private celebrations. Canadians faced with midnight closing hour flocked across Detroit river to swell U. S. crowd. In nearby Flint, where mixing of dancing-liquor is outlawed, City Commission waived ban for one night and spots flourished as in other nearby localities.

With few exceptions, New Year's Eve talent here was nothing to write home about. All told, 1,500 entertainers and musicians were engaged through nine local agencies, consisting of 55 orchestras which used 500 musicians. Practically all of rest were dancers and comedians. Floor shows ran from midnight to as late as 7 a. m. in some spots. Most of talent moved from one spot to another during night.

Chief among the talent were Will Osborne's band at the Book-Cadillac; Art Jarret and Eleanor Holm at Oriole Terrace; Emerson Gill at Webster Hall; Carroll and Gorman at Powatan; Johnny Howard and Ruth Brent at Penthouse. The black-and-tans, probably the hottest spots in town New Year's Eve, were led by the Plantation, featuring Earl Walton's band and a show.

Far from the Bacchus territory, more than 1,500 members of Allied Youth, dedicated to abstinence, frolicked in Masonic Temple before the eyes of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford and other big-wiggies. At General Motors Ballroom about 1,000 members of Youth, Inc., also pledged to no-alcohol, danced before several other local celebrities, including Mrs. Frederick M. Alger, who resigned last fall from State Liquor Board and since has been the angel behind several of organization's 'teerless beer gardens.'

Fri

San Francisco, Jan. 7.

It was the biggest and best celebration in the town's recent history.

Palace, St. Francis, Fairmont and Mark Hopkins tilted the ante to $7.50, while the great majority stuck to conventional New Year rates, and in most every instance this included meals or the equivalent in wet goods.

Theatres, after a slow advance sale of reserved seats, played to capacity, with the Warfield topping the list in prices with $1.65 for loges and $1.25 for the balance, up and down. This one and the Golden Gate could have sold out double the capacity. All neighborhood houses ran late shows until the wee hours, many for the first time, and all did big biz.

For the tops in hilarity in Oakland the Lake Merrit Hotel, where the collegiate crowd gathers and Jess Stafford's band plays, was the hot spot. All other Oakland niteries reported big biz and record breaking cash returns, but the most orderly of any New Years within memory.

illy Stays Awake

Philadelphia, Jan. 7.

If Billy Penn didn't climb down off his perch on City Hall tower in Philly New Year's Eve, he was the only one in the burg who wasn't out whooping it up that night. It was biggest bender the Quaker City ever saw, according to those with long memories in such matters.

One noticeable feature of this year's biz was that nitery men profited by lesson of last year. Then, first time since repeal, they were ignorant of cagey policy. Result was they took all sorts of reservations without deposits, then saw plenty of empty tables when nasty snow and rainstorm landed here Dec. 31. This year not one of 15 of 20 leading spots in town accepted advance reservations without cash on line. Weather helped.

Drawback this year was public reaction against State and Federal tax on checks. In places that had previously advertised tax on their price, patrons didn't appear to mind it so much. But several, smacking it on when guests arrived, heard plenty of squawks. Victi felt they were being 'taken.'

Arcadia International restaurant, packing in close to 1,500, had biggest gross in town. Place took in $18,000 in food and cover charges and bar brought in additional $4,000. It was record take for spot, even topping Army-Navy game. Prices were $7.50 for supper in main room, $5.50 for supper in side rooms and cocktail room and $3 cover in grill. President Arthur H. Padula had stocked extra $12,000 of liquor.

Adelphia hotel, with three rooms open, had 1,300, or capacity, with gross of about $10,000. Charged $5 for supper in Cafe Marguery and on roof and $4 for supper in ballroom. Place had three bands, one show doing repeats at dinner and supper in each spot.

Niteries' Biggest New Year's

At Mickey Alpert's Penthouse on Walton Hotel roof, all-time record was set, gross being about $9,000 with attendance of somewhere around 1,400. Charge there was also $5 for supper. Pennsylvania hotel packed in about 1,000 people, grabbed off $7,200. Town Casino had almost exactly 300 patrons, took about $4,500, best average in town.

Talent in shows here was same as through year, except that every local lad who could toot a horn or scratch a fiddle was sure of one night's work. Employment was greater that night, but few places added to size of shows or brought in higher priced acts. Practically no 'names' were offered.

itt, N. S. H.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 7.

'Just another good Saturday ight.'

That's the way the night club boys, who still can't understand it, are describing New Year's Eve. Plenty of disappointments all over town. Advance reservations were terrific, awakening flock of false hopes. Snowstorm preceding the celebration made city driving hazardous and highway travel next to impossible, which may have crimped things.

On other hand, theatres same night were jammed, most of 'em going above last year's peak. Chief reason for semi-floppo seems to have been preponderance of private parties with enormous number of big organizations hiring their own hall, their own orchestra and carting their own booze.

Another factor in attendance drop at established spots was preponderance of fly-by-night joints that sprung up around holidays only to get in on gravy and fold right after New Year's Eve. Trouble was that there was no gravy for them but did manage to divert lot of business.

Prices all over were fairly reasonable, ranging from a $4 a couple to $13 in the swank hotels and larger oases. Check-up also reveals that there were also at least half a dozen more major spots this year than last, with most of them expressing satisfaction but hardly sending up any cheering skyrockets.

Another item that entered into situation was fact that biggest Jewish fraternity in country, Phi Epsilon Pi, was holding its national convention here. For New Year's Eve, conclave took over entire 17th floor of William Penn hotel, attracting around 500 couples, who would have been certain to go elsewhere. Likewise cut in considerably on William Penn's own tak. While hotel filled its Chatterbox and Main Lounge, two big dining rooms were virtually empty.

Biggest play of all went to Hill District's Little Harlem, where most of black-and-tans advertised fact that they'd be open all night with last floor show at 6 a. m. Business didn't start until well in morning but stay-up-lates jammed in, with one spot turning 'em away at five a. m. when a few hours earlier plenty of tables were available.

Established places aren't worrying any because they'll catch in on rebound but spots that figured on New Year's Eve getting them off the nut see plenty of headaches in store for them.

C. Opens Up

St. Louis, 7.

More than 40 nightcries opened up wide for New Year's eve this year. Jefferson, Coronado, Chase and Park Plaza were sold out 10 days in advance. Statler, with its exclusive downtown location, and the Mark Twain, Mayfair and Lennox had parties of their own. Prices didn't count at the big spots but did at the smaller ones. And the tariff ranged from $2 plus tax to $6.50 plus tax at most of the better spots, while some of the taverns hung out a come-on sign for a buck and collected double the bigger prices with an overflow of booze.

Tony Scarpelli's 'Plantation' on Vandeventer street did such a heavy trade it was necessary to convert an entire building adjacent to his spot for the occasion. This club with the only all-colored floor show and a rule not to sell liquor had a second band to aid Peter-Pilar's group. Big Tony said it was the spendiest night he had had since the boom days. Other spots that did big were the Mounds over in East St. Louis, where around 1,000 were accommodated. Even the Chinese spots such as the Canton Tea Garden did a land-office biz. And the Irish village, with 25 acts advertised, also turned them away. Max Garden's Chez Paree handled the biggest crowd that spot has had in many months.

Boston Good Minus Names

Boston, Jan. 7.

Holiday hilarity and spending boomed New Year's Eve here as it never did before. Crowds in town were tremendous, with hinterlanders swamping the streets, clubs, hotels and theatres. All top spots in nitery belt were sold out two days in advance. Theatres selling reserved seats were well-stocked with cash before the doors opened.

'Ziegfeld Follies' at $5.50 was a clean sweep at the Opera House and ditto for 'Three Men on a Horse' at the Plymouth, charging $4.40. 'Mid-West,' out of tune with holiday spirit, opened at the Shubert and did near capacity at $3.30. Film houses were all jammed. Top was $1.65, at the Kiethi-Boston. Other stands ranged from $1.10 down to 55c, although there were plenty turned away who would have taken a heavier tap.

In clubs, $15 a couple was tops at the Mayfair and Cocoanut Grove. Significantly, these top fares were identical with last year's, and it looked as if a higher cover would have slid through easily.

Mayfair and Grove were about neck-and-neck on takes, $5,000 each. Copley Plaza snared most of the smart hotel trade, Statler also had big share, as did the Ritz. Estimated take by legitimate clubs and major hotel rooms was around $75,000. Couverts ranged from top to $6, $5, $4 down to $3 per person. Chinese restaurants, in some cases, got $5.50.

Name booking for floor shows were out, clubs and rooms relying upon current shows on that end. George Dewey Washington was at the Bradford, where the Cascades club, at $6.10, and the main ballroom, at $4.40, shared the identical sepia floor show.

Capital Capital

Washington, Jan. 7.

Capital ushered in 1936 with biggest New Year's Eve whoopee in years. Every type of amusement spot from theatres, hotels, clubs to cocktail lounges and cafes turned 'em away.

Partying wound up early due to strictly enforced two a.m. deadline on serving liquor after which tables must be clear of glasses. All spots frowned on patrons bringing own stuff and few people tried.

Top price was $13 per couple as against $15 last year. Average at class spots was $11. Liquor was sold at year-round prices with no upping anywhere. At flat-rate spots average person spent $1.50 above initial charge, most of which went for liquor. Non-cover places report average check around $2 mostly for liquor.

Shoreham hotel, largest place in town, played to 1,100 persons and gross of about $9,000. Wardman Park hotel collected around $6,000. Heigh-Ho, swankiest of straight night clubs, got $1,800. Hi-Hat, top cocktail lounge, pocketed around $2,000 on evening of drop-in trade.

Every place went in for entertainment, but it wasn't factor in either draw or celebration. No big names in any show, and no imported bands, although practically every local musician was working.

Ieve Goes Champagne

Cleveland, Jan. 7.

Old Man 1935 was kicked out of Cleveland's niteries by the biggest New Year's Eve crowds seen here for nearly 18 years. Restoration of Christmas bonuses by many corporations, releasing of more dough by formerly frozen banks and a natural anti-depression yen to toss money around recklessly were three factors that proved a bonanza for the better nite spots.

Boosting of cover charges indicated the new trend. Prices ranged from $10 a couple to $20, the highest figure being set by the Mayfair Casino, Barry Propper's theatre-cabaret. With a 700 capacity it was nearly sold out. Some willing to pay $10 per head merely for standing room in Mayfair, attracted by promise of free champagne with dinner, plus three dance bands and Earl Leslie's show with cast of 60.

Every hotel supper club was sold out two days before the eve, including Statler, Cleveland, Hollenden, Carter and Lake Shore, which averaged $10 for each couple. No big names imported by other spots, but such places as Alpine Village, Monaco's and Rainbow Room did it up brown with leg shows.

Champagne and high-taxed wines made a strong come-back. Mayfair sold nearly 185 bottles of champagne at $12 a crack.

In East Dubuque

East Dubuque, Ill., Jan. 7.

This hick town of less than 1,000 and with plenty of night spots and saloons spotted along the main drag took the boys from Iowa into town on New Year's eve, the reason being that the Dubuque, Ia., joints were forced to close at 1 o'clock under the state laws.

In some spots it cost $2 for a seat with every chance of losing it in the event there was a call away from the table occupied. Entertainment nil and no merriment except on the part of the visitors.

Seattle Good

Seattle, Jan. 7.

State liquor board extended from 1 a.m. to 3 a.m. legalized drinking of beer and wine at the public places, and also suspended the rule that person imbibing had to do so sitting down. Seattle could stand up and take—until 3 a.m. on New Year's day.

Thousands more were out on the streets and thousands more paid heavy tariffs to attend night shows at theatres and at clubs, cafes and dance spots. Sellouts at the top spots were the rule and places like the Club Victor and Olympic Bowl didn't have to spend any money in newspaper advertising; early reservations took care of that.

Biggest single crowd was at Paramount theatre, where 3,000 paid 75c. to $1 to see pix show and vaude. Next biggest single crowd was at Trianon dance hall, within 200 of that figure. Here the gents paid $1 to get in and the ladies 42c.

Paramount led midnight grosses with close to $2,500; Fifth Ave. was second with nice $1,500; Orpheum not far behind for a third place; these two houses upped price to six bits and a dollar, too, and held to straight pix program. Downtown shows garnered around $15,000.

Club Victor, Lieut. Gov. Vic Meyers' spot, and the Olympic Bowl, in the Olympic hotel, topped with class of shows and take. Bowl got top kale of $5.10 per, serving five course dinner, from 10 to midnight, and handlin 550 celebrants. The regular Bowl was closed, being too small, and the affair was pulled in the Spanish ballroom, with Armie Marion in charge. Folks bought some champagne and other wines, on top of the $5.10 and raised the average check to $7, making the take around $3,800. Dick Jurgens band herc.

Slim Martin's band dished it out at the Club Victor, Romo Vincent was headliner. This spot got $4.40 per, and handled 600, which is 250 more than last year, when tariff was $5.50; drinks made average check this year close to $6.50, with the estimated gross $3,900. Steak supper and breakfast included in couvert.

Jackie Souders band was at the Rainbow club, new Chinese place, where 500 paid $3.50 each to dine, drink and dance. This was on the minimum plan, and average check was not much above this. Floor show, too.

Of the beer cafes, Germania, John Savage's Pike street eatery, handled capacity in its dance place, where Francis Blair, Chiquita De Soto and Alice Huelett were headlining the floor show. Take here around $1,200.

Trianon dance hall got the youthful population that stepped downtown. Scott Held band in its third month. Gross here estimated at $2,500, including beer bar and soda fountain.

Roadhouses got big play, too. The Ranch, north of town on the Everett highway, had biggest floor show and draw capacity, 250 folks, at $3.50 each. Abe Brashem band; the De Ceclietos, dance team; Betty Vickers, Blanche Hammond and Dur Moy Sisters, two last acts bicycling to Club Victor, made up the floor show.

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 7.

Tiny Bradshaw orchestra played here at the Town Casino during the Christmas and New Year holidays. The minimum charge was tripled.

Hotel Charlottee upped to $5 per person for its New Year party, and the Club Arbor doubled the usual charge.

Nitery Doings

Leaguers, who are putting on an elaborate program for benefit of charity.

Place looks sure to grab plenty of sugar and good-will on venture and it has already nabbed juicy publicity on society angle. Last Sunday Record's society section carried entire front page of pix of debbies waiting on tables, handling switchboard, concocting eats and even working in wine cellar. Thats a break unheard of in Philly, where nitery publicity is of the skimpiest.

Program announced by society gals for their affair includes lecture by Boake Carter in morning at $1 admission; luncheon and show (with debbies as entertainers) for $1.25; bridge party with lecture by an authority for $1 in afternoon; dinner and show and dancing to music of three orchestras for $5 and $10 (ringside tables), and supper, dancing and show at $2.50 cover. Come-ons will include chancing off free car, cruises to West Indies, trips to Euorpe, etc. Each prize has been contributed.

This is second year for party. Last year's drew $8,000 profit for Leaguers, with unrevealed share for nitery.

Lou Diamond of Paramount is negotiating with Eddie (Leon & Eddie) Davis for supplementary rights to put out the niterary comedian in a Par short. This will comprise stuff Davis already made for Par's feature, 'Ship Cafe,' including two songs ('Rolling Down the Mountain' and a Chinese comedy number), which were clipped from the feature. Diamond wants to salvage these recordings as a short and is working out a deal with Davis.

Another Leon & Eddie song standing, 'Should I Be Sweet?' couldn't go into the Par feature, 'Ship Cafe,' because Buddy DeSylva held out for $10,000 for the film rights. It's from a Broadway musical, 'Take a Chance,' produced by DeSylva.

Saturday (4) at 6 p. , George Yorke, bass fiddle player with the Mike Farley-Eddy Riley combo at the Onyx Club, N. Y. ("The Music Goes Round and Round') married Janet Fenton, model. That same midnight an intimate party of friends, celebrated the marriage in the Onyx nitery to the tempo of swing music,' much champagne quaffing and a bow from Yorke who substituted another bass slapper while he sat in with his party.

Ernie Holst replaces himself with a unit at El Morocco, N. Y., to take up his usual winter sojourn at the Colony club (Arthur Hand's), Palm Beach. New tango combo at Morocco, just opened, is a peach.

Kathleen Price and Timothy Palmer, British dance team, arrived this week for an engagement at the Rainbow Room, N. Y., starting Jan. 15. It's their debut on this side. On the same date Pils and Tabet also join the floor show. Ray Noble's orchestra and Ramon Ramos' band complete the music end. Mrs. Evelyn Hubbell handling U.S. engagement of the dance duo.

, above the Winter Garden, N. , on the site of the old Montmartre, adds to the new Russian motif on the main drag. Baleff's Chauve Souris opened last week at the St. Moritz. This makes the second nitery in the Winter Garden building; the New Montmartre, with Beatrice Lillie starred, is housed in the former Plantation room.

Lots of face-lifting along Broadway. Hotel Astor has installed a new huge circular bar where its sidewalk cafe used to be; besides had its entire front done over. Brass Rail took over another store in an expansion move. Harry Cooper's defunct restaurant becomes the Chow Mein Inn, underneath the Restaurant Tokay.

Slight & Salkin agency, Chicago has a new method of keeping the various nite clubs throughout the country posted on available talent. Phil Tyrrell, in charge of the nitery bookings, is sending out a daily 'photogram' attraction list which contains miniature photographs and full description of the acts plus past performances. Each list contains picture and discussion of three acts.

Terrace Room in the Morrison hotel, Chicago, tied in with the RCA Victor company as a special exploitation plug for the Enric Madriguera orchestra. Stunt involves the simultaneous playing of same tune by record and orchestra with the band members quietly quitting the stage, leaving the dancers to finish the number to the sole accompaniment of the disc.

Although New Orleans is already overburdened with night spots, the New Cadillac opened Saturday (21) off Canal street, the city's main stem. Owner and operator is Tony Crucia, who for many years operated the Cadillac cabaret prior to prohibition. Vic Saladino is manager. Local floor talent.

Pils and Tabet, current in Lucienne Boyer's new Continental Varieties, are slated for an engagement at the Rainbow Room next week.

Bob Lightner's ork at the Club Envoy, Hollywood. Floor show headed by Kay Toland, Julius Klein, Rhythm Four and Anna Marie Nord.

La Fayette and La Verne opened at the Hotel Utah, Salt Lake, Dec. 24, Paul Kain orchestra supplies the music.

Eadie Adams back at hotel Cinegrill after Palm Beach rest period.

The Randalls opened at the Hollywood, Fla., New Year's Eve.

MEXICAN NITE LIFE PERKS; YANK TALENT

Mexico City, Jan. 7.

Night life here has perked up with the opening of several cocktail clubs, run American style by Mexicans, and a supper establishment, conducted in the Mexican manner by an American.

Suppery is El Patio Mexicano, cupying what was once the palace of the Emperor Iturbide. It is in the heart of the downtown district. W. F. Booking of St. Louis is owner and J. C. Williams is manager.

Opening of Heinz 58, a deluxe American style niterie on a main stem and owned and managed by O. W. Heinz, former American hotelman, is set for the near future. Both spots are using imported talent from the U. S. for their floor shows.

Pitt. Fold-Ups

Pittsburgh, Jan. 7.

Post-New Year's Eve casualties among night spots was greater than ever this year. Chief among them is Hotel Roosevelt's Gold Room, representing investment of close to $20,000 and opened only about 10 weeks ago. Spot got away nicely, but quickly developed into a week-end rendezvous and just possible that management may later decide to open for Friday and Saturday nights.

Quickest of departures was upstairs room of Lou Gittleson's called Torch Room. Opened Christmas night, but got off on wrong foot due to trouble with musicians' union over previous deal and decided to call it quits night after New Year's. Another to fold, but only for winter months, is Eddie Payton's, with operator-band leader taking his crew to Florida and returning in May.

Several other spots also in the discard. At least two relit New Year's Eve and went dark following day.

KAZANOVA TOURING

Kazanova and her Tzigane orchestra wound up at the French Casino, N. Y., last night (Tuesday).

Meyer Davis orchestra is sending the femme combo on tour in vaudfilmers.

ACE COLLEGIATE TUNER

Brooks Bowman, Princeton '36, Has Four More Tunes

Brooks Bowman, Princeton '36, is the ace college boy song writer today, having delivered 'East of the Sun' and 'Love and a Dime' last year. He graduates this June with a Warner Brothers contract waiting.

Bowman's leap to Tin Pan Alley coin is via Princeton's new Appreciation of Music course under Prof. Welch. It's not a pipe study, but delves into the old masters and ties in with recordings, orchestrations, etc., as a classroom course. According to Bowman, most undergrads have a secret desire some time or other to become a Berlin or Gershwin.

Sensible lyrics (the Cole Porter influence) are imperative, Bowman declares. Campus social life brings out a lot of the new twists, and ether broadcasts have their faithful dialers at school, with Sunday listeners especially taking the radio page and checking off their pet shows and sticking around until they're signed off. After which the discussions start on the various trick noises just heard.

Bowman hails from Salem, O., and Cleveland, and used to play banjo in his high school days. He also sang a bit, but his musical career never reached the spotlight stage until 'East of the Sun' (100,000 copies, Santley) in last year's Triangle Club show, 'Stags at Bay.' 'Love and a Dime' (30,000 copies, Santley) dawned on him before breakfast one morning.

Bowman is majoring in politics and philosophy at Princeton. He plays only a fair piano, but is brushing up. He leans toward the operetta field as his ultimate goal. He has four new numbers in 'What a Relief,' the new Triangle production.

William Borden and Charles Marvin, also on this year's Triangle music staff, have their numbers in 'Relief' under the Santley banner. Frank Tapiin, Jr., and Kirk Alexander, other Triangle members, run a music school at Princeton on the side.

Chi's River Casino Still Far in Future

Chicago, Jan. 7.

No date yet set for starting work on River Casino, proposed cafe-theatre at Michigan avenue and the river, just south of Tribune Tower, although nearly two years have passed since venture was first put forward for investment. Plan was all-day restaurant, afternoon concerts, and two-a-night elaborate stage shows, modelled on the Folies Bergere entertainment so successful here in '34. Site was used until few years ago by one of the Bouf Mich' eyesores after Wrigley and Tribune started vogue for tower-type of building in neighborhood.

Henry Doney, a new man in the field, is promoting idea. He said in July last he had subscriptions of $500,000, and that finished plan would require another $100,000, with work then scheduled to start in December. He now says complications on property-deal call for adjustment.

A prospectus issued last year carried a modernistic plan by Ambrose Cramer, architect and socialite, and included a category of specifications that took in even the garb of the waiters. Mrs. Howard Linn, another socialite and a factor in art-intl e plays and operas, is among the advocates of the venture.

Girls Appeal

Chicago, Jan. 7.

After trying to get along without them, Leonard Hicks of Hotel Morrison has put a line of 10 girls into the show of Terrace Room. Hicks said that dropping girls from the proceedings was because he and his associates thought public tired of song-and-dance ensembles in supper shows.

Fred Evans, who runs the ballet for Balaben & Katz at the Chicago, is providing the new lin

Palange Operating N. Y. Palladium on Bi-Weekly Change; Sullivan Booking

Former Casino de Paree on W. 54th street, New York, reopens Jan. 15 as the Palladium, and patterned after the English music halls to provide a straight vaude show in revue style, along with dining and dancing. Angelo Palange, radi fight announcer, heads the enterprise, with Joe Sullivan acting as booker, and Harry Carroll and Mitchell Parish writing music.

Palange plans to run each show two weeks, with a possible holdover on occasions, and with a name topping each change. First name was to have been Belle Baker, but Locw's booking office nixed this because of her previous commitment to play the State, on Broadway, week of Jan. 24.

There'll be no cover charge at the Palladium, but a minimum to cover a $1.50 dinner tap. Audience will dance on the stage between shows, which will run 55 minutes. Two bands will be batonned respectively by Teddy King and Jimmy Carr. Wallace Millan, working with a line of 36 girls, ill stage the dance ensembles.

This is Palange's first theatrical or nitery venture. Associated with him is Murray Brandt.

Palladium, as the Casino de Paree, was the first theatre-cabaret to open in New York. For a time it mopped up, with Yermi Stern, its operating head, then branching out and converting the Manhattan theatre, at Broadway and 53rd street, into a similar spot but at more popular prices. Billy Rose moved over from producer at the Casino to impresario at the Manhattan, but the latter folded soon after Lew Brown replaced him. The Casino closed a few months later.

Ed Hutchinson, nitery operator, is reported planning to reopen the Manhattan with a policy similar to that contemplated for the Palladium.

Joan Warner's Nitery

Paris, Dec. 29.

Nitery on the Rue Fontaine once run by Joe Zelli will soon be known as Joan Warner's place.

In recent seasons known as 'Chez les Nudistes,' the spot is being done over and the American fan dancer is lending her name and presence.

Al Dubin back from N. Y. to start on numbers for 'Hearts Divided.'

UNIT REVIEWS

Hilton Sisters Revue

(ORPHEUM, LINCOLN)

Lincoln, Dec. 28.

Buyers of this unit get only what they're buying—the Hilton Sisters, Siamese twins. The 40-minute show built around them is sad. Hiltons are now on the Cushman Circuit, this being their second date for the time and going south from here. Benny Zucker is company manager.

Dale Stevens orchestra is the musical portion. Stevens acts at the m.c. Jimmy and Anita, ballroomers, begin the show proper after a band fanfare. Theirs is a rumba, and not good.

Hal Milton, introed as a member of the 'Operator 13' singing foursome, sings two numbers, mostly flat. 'Annie's Cousin Fanny,' leaning to the blue side and awkwardly done at that, is next by the band and Doris Zeman has an acrobatic dance just ahead of the first appearance of the Hiltons.

Twins have their hair black this year and look much better, their act remaining the same, some harmony singing, talk and the fish horns. Girls, since they're the sole attraction of the show and are to be taken over a territory which they haven't played, should work more on the interview. As is, Stevens asks 'em how old they are and whether Violet really wanted to get married. Explanation of why they may never be separated, how they sleep, whether one can feel the other's toothache, etc., is what the audience is dying to know.

A glee club number, Hal Milton out front, on 'Darkies Were Born' is bad, and Jim Moore's buck and wing so-so. Merlin Trio, two femmes and a man, is the best moment outside the Hiltons in the show. It's a five rhythm concoction, the girls in half and half black and white costumes. Hank Harding then drops out of the band for 'Minnie the Moocher,' not good but loud.

Norton and Lang, comedy acrobats as in the days of 30 years ago, are okay. It's better they admit the 30 year year period has elapsed since their stunts than try to fool people, and they get a nice hand. Hiltons dance with a couple of the band boys for the finale and step out for bows.

A novelty show this, worth and as much as can be expected for the Cushman $150 per day plan. It's advanced by James Cochrane. Business good. Barney.

MONKEY SHINES

(ORPHEUM, LINCOLN)

Lincoln, Jan. 1.

Because he heeded the late Horace Greeley's advice and came west, Charlie Mack, who owns and has produced a unit he called 'Cavalcade of Laughs,' here called 'Monkey Shines,' is very sad as the New Year opens. His is a fine unit, better by far than those hitting here regularly, but he finds little happiness in the prospect of pioneering on the Wilbur Cushman circuit. Situation as found here was that he'd brought a 22-people aggregation all the way from the Atlantic seaboard only to find he has but eight days on the route up to Duluth and no prospect of more right away. Also finds he is to think nothing of an average jump of 350 miles overnight.

Overhead on his show must be very close to the $125 net it'll get per day. It's well packed with capable people who give a real show. Heller and Riley were booked extra and put in here. A good act, but the show could handle the assignment well enough alone. Myles Bell is the m.c.

Two standouts in the Mack show are Charles Brugge, a business comic, and Murand and Girton, cyclists. Both rate plenty of handing. Brugge taking a string of bows. Dan and Ann Manos, straight hoofers, do the initial assignment after a fanfare of 'Happy Days' by the music section. Material is a good luller for the house and Manos' flips and nip-ups for the finish click.

Evans and Rudie, terp comedy, in the deuce. Ruth Rudie can do Zasu Pitts without doing anything, so similar are their antics, and she runs the audience wild with an eccentric step in the manner of Charlotte Greenwood, which, whether they remember Greenwood or not, is good. Myles Bell, and his partner, Nan Bedini, clown via gags and song, then it's a band ensemble with three femmes in a fan bit which is very pretty. Another girl trots on for a few acrobatic twists, which are fair.

Brugge raises the pace of the show when he takes over the rostrum. His pantomime and biz are fine and timed for the most laughs possible. He works with a couple of instruments, the last one standing on his head on a piano stool. He dances and talks and rates heavy mitting for the finish, which was hard for him to get to, so persistent was the audience. Pat Nemo is added to the Bell and Bedini combo for some other laughs before the traveler as the stage is being set for more room for the cyclists.

Top of this act is Miss Girton, although Murand helps out. She is more at home on the nice clean she is walking on the floor. Snap to the tough stunts which she accomplishes without a slip, can't help but be appreciated no matter how easy she makes it look. Heller and Riley close. Their's is the crossfire variety of fun, and the doll turns out to be a swell singer. Unit time this show was 49 minutes and Heller and Riley added 10.

The only thing Mack is not worried about now is hotel bills. He talked to a unit manager who said he'd been out 16 days and so far had slept $7 worth. The old adage about seeing the world through a porthole has been changed to lamping it by moonlight. Barney.

MIAMI BOUND

(ORPHEUM, LINCOLN)

Lincoln, Jan. 4.

Stiffened by the extra billing of Don Zelaya, comedy pianist, Chic Myers' 'Miami Bound' unit went over in fair shape here, though it packs no particular wallop and without Zelaya would be weak. Title no significance at all, and less boxoffice potentiality. Band was doubled in strength by union standbys here and sounded all right.

Opening has everyone involved, but sad. Immediately thereafter a band splurge which might as well be first, and then Janice Thompson, acrobatic dancer, who does some fast spins. She's nice enough to look at and her number is the first for any applause. Martin Sisters, harmony, are in and outers. Sometimes they harmonize, but more often they don't. It takes a discerning listener to find it's 'Double Trouble' they're singing. They took no chances bowing off, but stayed on for a second number regardless.

Crewe and Summers in a truckin' step are okay, and are followed by Meyers and Nolan, comedy. It looks weak and sounds weak, but the femme, heavy and wisecracking, nets good applause from the by this time, sleepy house. Capt. Harry Greenwood and his trained sea lion are next. Sea lion was temperamental this show and had his mind exclusively on the fish bucket. Did the stunts, which are about average, finally, however. A good novelty. Bill Crewe offers a baseball tap number in which a ball game is burlesked per taps, and good.

Zelaya is just ahead of finale and did nearly 17 minutes. Took four bows this show, and for a guy who opens and closes with anywhere near classic music in this house and expects anything, his reception was great. Finale and the time was an hour and five minutes.

Bert Melville agents this. Originally a Wilbur Cushman unit, it was cancelled out and played here for Frederick Brothers. Barney.

Grand O. H., N. Y.

With the host of adagio acts around today in vaude and niteries, a newcomer would have to be sensationally original to go places. This one show no promise of achieving prominence.

Blonde is tossed by three men in a meagre simulation of a butterfly caught in a spider's web. Stunts are all routine, with the boys showing plenty of raggedness. Girl is okay, though not taking any chances with anything outstanding in the way of a leap or fall. Costuming all around is poor, and the eye with web insert is drab.

Closed here to but fair applause. Echo.

DON TRENT

G.O.H., N. Y.

Material aimed primarily at the kids. Spotted here in the deuce.

Trent's opener is a Punch and Judy show, carried on with a portable and highly simplified prop depicting the facade of a house. Punch and his luckless mate are garbed in modern calico, but the lines are more or less from the Middle Ages.

Encore has Trent manipulating a large colored puppet through a soft shoe tap routine without any concealment of strings, etc.

15 YEARS AGO

IETY and Clipper)

Glad New Year on B'way. Tops from $6.50 to $11 and all crowded. Ziegfeld 'Frolic' got the top figure, but that included food. Real top was Fred Stone's 'Tip Top' at $7.70. Played to around $6,000.

Carl Hagenbeck had to close his famous zoo at Hamburg. Not possible to obtain food cheaply enough. Collection was dispersed. Barnum show got many of the trained animals.

Thieves stole the safe from the Grand theatre, in Harlem. Took it all the way to Flushing to blow it open. Netted them about $3,000. Taken out through the stage door only 150 feet from a police station.

Speaking of a possible theatre of his own in N. Y., Willie Collier remarked that 'the demand for houses by producers is so great that, as a business investment, it is good to control one or more.' Things were different then.

A. L. Erlanger added three more theatres to his chain and bought sites for two more.

Zoning plan for control of N. Y. theatre district put into effect. First establishment of one-way streets in the congested district around theatre time.

Bill Brady was in court lawing with his landlord over occupancy of the Playhouse. He still has it.

Sam H. Harris ordered all his shows dropped to a $2.50 top. Fgured that all B'way shows would have to make the same mark-down.

'Ermine' revival stated to have cost $30,000 against $22,500 for the original. Nut was now $12,500 a week instead of original $4,800.

There were 30 German acts about to sail for America. First since the war. More coming.

Keith's Colonial, N. Y., dropped from 55c. to 35c. top, and the Riverside went down from a dollar to

Pitt Alvin's Big Vaude

Pittsburgh, Jan. 7.

One of the highest priced shows to go into an indie vaude house in recent times opens at the Alvin here tomorrow (Wednesday) for four days. At a weekly basis, layout would cost close to $3,000.

Included in the show are Everett Marshall, Ray Bolger, Eddie Garr, Thelma Leeds, Harris, Claire and Shannon, Five Cabin Kids and the Six Danwells. O. L. Oz booked the acts out of New York.

Costly shows, however, will not be the Alvin's regular policy. House only recently resumed vaude.

3d Bowes Unit Topping Previous Grosses in Pitt.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 7.

Major Bowes' unit is beating its own record again this week at Stanley. In this case, it's even more remarkable because it's the third of the Bowes simon-pure shows to play Warners deluxer in less than five months.

First came in during August and despite heat and usual seasonal drooping turned in $22,000. Two months later, another troupe came through to roll up amazing gross of $29,000. But third and current will top them all, with $1,000 in prospect.

Stanley, which dropped Sunday midnight shows several weeks ago, was forced to shoot in one last Sunday (5) and management expects to run five shows daily for remainder of run. House now seriously considering using at least one of the Bowes its a month.

Behind the Keys

Charlotte daily newspapers, the Jesters club (composed of theatrical workers), the Elks, and others gave thousands of poor kids in this vicinity picture programs arranged especially for kids, and bags of goodies at the door.

Spartanburg, S. C., erald-Journal has just issued its second annual motion picture edition, with a 16-page tabloid supplement devoted entirely to stars and pictures.

North Carolina Theatres, Inc., with headquarters here, announces the purchase of the Granada and Carolina theatres at Lexington, effective Jan. 6. Roy L. Smart, district manager, announced promotions at the same time of M. S. Phillips, from manager of the State, Charlotte, to city manager of the Lexington theatres, and Nell McGill, manager of the Victory at Salisbury to manager of the State at Charlotte. Gene Street, manager of the Carolina, at Charlotte, and supervisor of the Imperial, also at Charlotte, will now assume supervision over the State also.

MIDWEST NAME COMPETISH

Vode Moves Forward in Canada, With FP-Can Leading the Way

Toronto, Jan. 7.

After a month's policy of double-bills at Shea's theatre here, when vaudeville was transferred to the Imperial because of the latter's extra 800 seating capacity, Shea's is currently back in the vaude fold. Since 1899 Shea's has been synonymous with vaudeville and, when the policy was guillotined, the loyal Shea-goers, who can sit in their shirt-sleeves there if they wish, refused to turn in their shekels to the ritzy Imperial and also refused to see pictures at Shea's.

Almost as revolutionary is the change of policy at the Imperial, 3,460-seater. Week starting Friday (10), the Jack Arthur showshop goes ultra hi-hat with a symphony orchestra of 60 under the direction of Reginald Stewart. Orchestra will play on stage. Obviously an experiment, in that Stewart is in for two weeks only.

In the straight vaude and road-show unit fields, Famous Players-Canadian shows an increasing number of spot bookings, particularly in the west, with subsidiaries opening up Ontario. Shea's, Toronto; Loew's, Montreal; Palace, Hamilton, and Capitol, Ottawa, are being booked through Lawrence J. Golde, of the William Morris office in New York.

Spot bookings have the Wilbur Cushman units out of Chicago going into such FP-C houses as Capitol, Winnipeg; Capitol, Calgary; Capitol, Edmonton; Capitol, Saskatoon; Capitol, Lethbridge; Capitol, Moose Jaw; Capitol, Regina; Orpheum, Vancouver. Jan. 21 will see stage shows back to the Orpheum, Winnipeg, from the Capitol, Winnipeg.

In Ontario, houses whose stages were dark for years are swinging into the spot-booking circuit when short a big picture. There's eight weeks for the 20-person units. All are Famous Players houses or in subsidiary chains and include: Capitol, Ottawa; Rideau, Ottawa; Capitol, Belleville; Marks, Oshawa; Academy, Lindsay; Tivoli, Hamilton; Lyric, Kitchener; Majestic, Stratford; Capitol, Peterboro. Affiliated Theatricals is handling, with F. Norman booking out of Montreal; Rose Frisco out of Boston, and Solly Berns out of Detroit.

SALLY RAND'S UNIT IN NORFOLK AT $2 TOP

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 7.

Sally Rand, and roadshow unit go into the Colonial theatre here Jan. 14-15 for two nights and one matinee. Others in show are William and Joe Mandel, Roy and Maye, Bennie Ross, The Thrillers, White and Lee, Marguerite Stone and Tung Fin Soo.

Top price for seats will be $2.

Loew's Singles

Loew's has spotted male singles for three weeks apiece in vaude.

Emile Boreo, who steps out of 'Folies Bergere,' which opens later this month at the French Casino in Miami, goes into the State, New York, Friday (10), with Baltimore and Washington to follow. George Givot opens in Washington Friday (10), following into the State and then to Baltimore. Herman Bernie set both deals.

COOGAN-GRABLE FOR PAR

Jackie Coogan and Betty Grable ('Hollywood Secrets' unit) get two weeks for Paramount.

Open at the Michigan, Detroit, Jan. 24, with the Oriental, Chicago, to follow.

SYR. VODE UP AGAIN

Syracuse, Jan. 7.

RKO-Schine pool is again weighing stage attractions for Keith's.

Likelihood is that they will be spotted in once or twice a month.

Guests Get the Rice At Ruth Morris Nuptials

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Jan. 7.

After the Ruth Morris-William White nuptials at the Morris family estate here Jan. 1, their New Year's and wedding guests returned to New York. The bride and groom accompanied them to the station and then reversed the usual process by throwing rice at their guests.

Seeing the rice shower, passengers on the train thought that Mr. and Mrs. William Morris, Jr., were the newlyweds, until their young son walked into the car and said, 'Hello mother.'

'MUSIC' WRITERS SET FOR P.A.'S

Riley and Farley, collaborators with Russ 'Red' Hodgson on 'Music Goes Round and Round,' new trick song click, go into the Paramount, New York, today (Wednesday) for their first stage appearance in some time. Their six-piece band at the Onyx Club, N. Y. nitery, is with them.

Riley and Farley will supplement the Casa Loma orchestra, which is being held over for a third week. Contract for the musician-song-writers is for initial nine days with options.

Another new addition at the Paramount will be Caroline Marsh, who replaces Deane Janis, singer.

Hal Kemp's orchestra, with additional acts, will follow the Casa Loma crew. No closing date set for the latter, however.

Chicago, Jan. 7.

Russ 'Red' Hodgson starts personaling at the Balaban & Katz Chicago, Friday (10). B. & K. has the songwriter and musician on a two weeks' deal. Hodgson originally started the tune some four years ago with the Earl Burtnett orchestra, with the tune later being revised by Riley and Farley in New York.

This is the second tunester booked by B. & K. recently, the other having been Pinky Tomlin several months ago. Al Borde set Hodgson.

JOE COOK UNIT'S 4 WEEKS ON RKO TIME

Joe Cook, with a surrounding cast of about 45 people, has been set for four weeks of vaude by RKO. Unit is being assembled by Morris Green (Jones & Green). RKO deal is on a guarantee and percentage.

Opening date is Jan. 24 in Providence, with Cook following into Keith's, [illegible]ton. After a week's layoff, during which Cook makes a short for Educational in New York, the unit goes to Chicago and Cleveland.

None of the supporting talent has been set. John Hickey will stage.

Nina Mae McKinney with Mills Unit on Int'state

Irving Mills has booked the Mills Blue Rhythm Band unit for a tour of the Interstate time opening in Houston, Feb. 7.

In addition to the band, unit will include Nina Mae McKinney, Harris and Howell, Chuck Richards and others.

Robinson at L. A. Par.

Los Angeles, Jan. 7.

Paramount theatre has booked Bill Robinson for the week of Jan. 9.

Others on bill include Al Lyons band, Judy Starr and Fanchonettes.

CHI TURNS ON B. O. CAMPAIGN

Houses Line Up Attractions in Mid-Season Drive for Business—B. & K., RKO, J. L. & S. Set Dates for Cream Monikers—Booked Far Into Feb.

2-WEEK STANDS

Chicago, Jan. 7.

Theatres in the loop and throughout the midwest have reversed their stand on attractions and have unloosed their purse-strings for the biggest orgy of spending for name attractions in many a month. This decision to vie for box-office results with powerful names follows a string of rather weak money sessions at the vaude houses of the loop, with even the top houses falling off into low figures.

Set budgets are being entirely discarded. RKO, Balaban & Katz and the indie State-Lake are scouring the entertainment field and are gobbling up attractions in one of the hardest competitive matches seen in this town in years. Both circuits are out for blood. And due to this intense rivalry such houses as the Chicago, Oriental, Palace and State-Lake find themselves booked up into late February and March, instead of being merely a week or two in advance as has been the custom around town for the past year or so.

The Chicago has Burns & Allen this week, following with Veloz and Yolanda, Ina Ray Hutton band and Libby Holman, Fred Waring's band, and the Horace Heidt band, which takes B. & K.'s flagship up to Feb. 21. At the Oriental, the bookings include the Olsen and Johnson unit, Three Stooges for an early repeat, and the Jackie Coogan-Betty Grable unit week of Jan. 31.

RKO's Flash

RKO has lined up dates at the Palace until Feb. 28. Starting off Friday (10), there are in immediate succession the Weaver Bros, Jane Froman, Wayne King's orchestra, Clyde Beatty, with 25 lions and tigers, Ruth Etting, Al Pearce and his Gang from the NBC-Pepsodent show now originating in Chicago, Joe Cook, who is dated for week of Feb. 21, with the following week being held open for the new Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers picture, 'Follow the Fleet' (RKO).

Even the State-Lake, which has gone along successfully on a nameless' policy, is starting to edge towards stronger name attractions as the other houses rush to big monikers. Indie State-Lake is bringing units topped by such people as Ed Lowry on Jan. 11, Mitzi Green on Feb. 1.

Two-Week Bookings

These topnotch tags on the stages has brought about a condition, especially at the Chicago, of the two-week stand rather than the one-week date. House of 4,000 seats has discovered it can do two weeks to a profit with a sock attraction, where a sluggish line-up of shows means a red splash on single-week engagements. Dated in for two weeks are Veloz and Yolanda dance team and the Fred Waring band, with other such fortnight bookings to follow, especially with pictures. Palace here proved that a strong show can do as high as four and five weeks with attractions.

Oriental is planning a holdover on Three Stooges and the Chicago may holdover Ina Ray Hutton orchestra. Both acts have been booked by Balaban & Katz on a four-week guarantee, which means that the turns will get three nabe weeks at the Uptown, Marbro and Southtown should the loop hold-overs fail to jell.

That C. C. C. Fan Dancer Matter Puts W.P.A. Boys in a Contradictory Mood

Washington,

Disclosure that a fan dancer was about to carry 'culture' to CCC camps under Federal auspices last week threw the Works Progress Administration into a whirlwind of contradictory statements winding up in repudiation by Washington executives of statements from Minneapolis subordinates about plans to include a fanner in a troupe scheduled to tour the sapling circuit in the northwest.

Washington put Minneapolis squarely on the spot, at the same time declaring that newspaper to-do was 'rather silly,' by denying that Ruby Bae, whose act at Coffee Dan's Minneapolis nitery, was stopped by Twin Cities gendarmes some weeks ago, ever had been on the government payroll. Furthermore, Washington spokesmen insisted, the fanner won't get a government post in the Federal theatre program.

Attitude of Washington officials leaves Miss Enza Alton Zeller, project director at Minneapolis, out on a limb, with local bosses declining to be embarrassed by conflicts between their statements and Miss Zeller's remarks in the press. While Minneapolis execs admitted the fanner was to be one of the CCC entertainers, local officials made at attempt to correct the inconsistency. All inquiries for further info were referred to Minneapolis.

Is She or Ain't She

Until Hallie Flanagan, theatre program boss, issued an unequivocal denial, W. P. A. went through a series of amusing changes of front. To start things off, the relief outfit press section freely admitted that Miss Bae had been given a berth, justifying the action by remarking that 'after all, even a fan dancer must eat.' Later Miss Flanagan personally denounced the Minneapolis yarns as 'deliberate fabrication,' saying the fanner had tried for a spot in the theatre program but had been turned down as ineligible. When statements attributed to Miss Zeller were called to their attention, W. P. A. officials threw up their hands and ducked any further inquiries.

Suspicion rose that Miss Bae was hired and then fired when Washington found out that the brawny—and homesick—forest workers were to have a close-up of Miss Bae's now-you-see-it-now-you-don't performance. But local bosses still insist the Minneapolis twister never was to have a chance to show her wares under U. S. colors.

Murray, Roth Bruised

Chicago, Jan. 7.

Couple of [illegible]ies caused some minor injuries to Ken Murray and Lillian Roth, co-headliners at the RKO Palace here last week. Miss Roth stumbled on the stairs leading from the stage to the audience. She continued with the show.

Murray got bumped around a bit when clowning with another act on the bill in an acrobatic burlesque bit.

MIDNIGHT TIME IN CAROLINAS FOR UNITS

Charlotte, N. [illegible], Jan.

Units playing through the Carolinas are more and more booking midnight shows. They can get plenty of this sort of time, as it does not interfere with the regular picture bookings, and gives the theatres the opportunity to pick up an extra show. Patrons have become pretty well educated to seeing their leg shows in the middle of the night. At that time, too, many of the companies go a bit more burlesq than earlier in the evening.

Earl Taylor's 'Oo-La-La Continental' unit has just crossed the two states with practically all bookings at midnight. Show was promoted as being 'Frenchy.'

Others include: Clifford's 'Manhattan Revue'; Uncle Ezra Jones' 'Barnyard Frolics'; Jack G. Van's 'Glorified Revue'; Paul Garden's 'Mixed Nuts'; Loretta Gray's '1936 Revue'; Tom and Joe Rollo in 'Just Foolin'; Ross Russell's 'Florida Nights,' also billed as 'Coral Gables Revue'; Bell's 'Hawaiian Revue'; 'Oriental Fantasies'; Jolly Leftwich and orchestra, and Dashington's trained dogs and monkeys.

RKO House Heightens Det. Vaude Competish

Detroit, Jan. 7.

Downtown vaude competish goes into high gear Friday (10) with resumption of stage shows by RKO at the Downtown. Fox and Michigan are other combo houses.

Opening Friday at the three theatres are 'Broadway Hollywood Restaurant Revue' at Downtown; Major Bowes' Amateurs at Michigan, and Toby Wing topping the show at Fox. As opposish to Clyde Beatty's animal act on Fox stage starting Jan. 17, Paramount has booked Wayne King and 'One Hour with You' unit at Michigan.

Wolfson Branching Out

With Dick Henry [illegible]ing back into the William Morris Agency's home office in N. Y. on foreign bookings, Lou Wolfson is extending his duties to work with Johnny Hyde, Lester Hammel and Ruth Morris' departments.

These embrace niteries, productions and pictures, with an occasional dip into the foreign dept., which Wolfson has been handling.

Markus Back

After being away from his home-ground 53 days, 15 of which were spent touring the larger municipalities of Brazil and the Argentine on biz, Fally Markus, indie vaude booker returned to New York Dec 25.

Itinerary took him to Rio de Janiero, Montevideo, San Paulo, Santos and Buenos Aires.

FIDLER PERSONALS AT $4,500 WITH PIC ACT

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Jimmy Fidler, Hollywood air gossiper and columnist, will go on tour late this month, personaling with a group of film names not yet selected. Set to open in Philadelphia.

Fidler will spend three days of each week on the road, fly back to Hollywood for remaining time. Seven week route has been arranged by Jack Sherrill.

Understood act will get $4,5 week.

Lowry Heading Unit

Pittsburgh, Jan. 7.

Ed Lowry will do a new unit which he'll head himself. Show breaks in for two days at Madison, Wis., Thursday (9) and hits the State Lake, Chicago, Saturday (11). Unit will include Elaine Arden, Helen Compton and her girl band, Lillian Dawson and Rita Royce.

Some talk here last week, following Lowry's date at the Stanley, that he'd be back later in season for run as m.c. He was at Stanley in similar post for six months about five years ago. Dick Powell followed hi

Depresh Hits China; Pic Biz Is 25% Off

Shanghai, Dec. 17.

During the past year American distribs have been up against it here. Business is worse now than ever. Five leading U. S. firms and one U. S. bank have closed local o ces. Midsummer business was down 40%; it's better now, but still 25% off.

Assessed valuation of imported films in 1934 was fixed at about $600,000. This past year it probably was about 20% less and is still slipping.

Major studios output is all brought here, except those pics with Oriental plots or inferences, but independents are almost entirely of the market.

FIVE PLAYS HIT $20,000

MOSTLY CHAT AT EQUITY MEET

First monthly discussion meeting held by Equity last Friday (3) was mild in conduct compared to the two previous gatherings of the association, but there were some wild proposals. All were vessed by the chair and virtually all those present, but that didn't mean anything because the session was informal.

Equity has issued 1,000 excuse cards to members in arrears of dues on the relief payroll of the Works Progress Administration Federal Theatre Project. They are entitled to attend meetings, make proposals and have all the privileges of paid-up members, except the right to vote.

Of the 450 persons at the meeting 80% were WPA actors and a number of the Actors Forumites were also on hand. Among the proposals submitted were: that all WPA members be permitted the right to vote; that a WPA branch be formed having the same relation to the association as Chorus Equity and the radio branch, both calling for lower dues; that WPA people receive the minimum wage as set forth by Equity—$40 weekly for seniors and $25 for juniors.

Another idea submitted was to charge dues in proportion to salaries earned.

While the council will receive a report on the proceedings there is little chance that any positive action will be considered for any of the proposals. Judged from the number of votes cast at recent meetings it was quickly perceived that were the WPA group enfranchised they would control Equity. Those with relief cards are mostly players who have not appeared professionally for from three to 12 years and that many will ever secure regular stage berths again is considered unlikely.

When Does a Season End? Davidow-Barton Arbitration on Issue

A technical question whether 'the seasons of 1934 and 1935' means two seasons, or just 1934-'5, will have to go to arbitration in a complaint by Ed. Davidow against James Barton.

Davidow booked Barton into 'Tobacco Road' on a reported $450 guarantee and percentage arrangement. When Barton took time out to go to the Coast for a picture, he claims, his obligation to Davidow were completed and he figures that his return to the show was on his own.

Besides, Barton contends, the contract covers 1934-5 whereas Davidow, through his attorney, Julius Kendler, charges that the 'seasons of 1934 and 1935, means 1934-5, and also 1935-6 (current season).

Under Equity rules of licensing to agents, Davidow must submit his case to arbitration. He has picked Walter Reade as his arbitrator. Barton has 10 days to answer and choose an arbitrator and then the American Arbitration Ass'n will select an umpire to decide the issues.

Just an Idea

Chicago, Jan. 7.

Group of lawyers got into a luncheon huddle here last week and thought maybe they'd like to get into show business on the production end by bringing 'Night of Jan. 16' to Chicago under their own auspices. Figured it a cinch for trade due to its court-room locale.

Looks like the luncheon plans will go to waste, however, since Al Woods is figuring to bring play in himself.

DRAMATISTS' FILM RIGHTS DEMANDS

ramatists Guild has definitely decided to try for 100% ownership by writers of the screen rights, rather than the present 50-50 arrangement with managers, but a sliding royalty arrangement for film rights' sales for the future is believed the likely outcome.

Story and details on page 3 in the film section of this issue.

2 GUILD PLAYS HIT FOR ROAD

Theatre Guild's duo of shows on Broadway will leave for the road late this month, 'Taming of the Shrew' exiting from the Guild theatre Jan. 18, and 'Porgy and Bess' from the Alvin on that date or one week later. Stated by the Guild that both shows must play the several key stands in order that its out of town subscription commitments can be met.

'Shrew' could remain in New York through the season, according to its draw, show being virtually capacity last week on takings of $17,000 without an extra holiday matinee. Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne played some out of town dates last spring in 'Shrew' and would not tour again this season but for the fact that Lunt is on the Guild board. Boston and Chicago will see 'Shrew,' the Lunts in the meantime rehearsing 'Devil's Disciple,' in which they will return to Broadway.

'Porgy' is costly to operate. Its booking contract for the Alvin calls for a stop limit of $20,000, show having dipped under that figure several times lately. Colored cast musical will appear in eastern stands, but Chicago is not definite.

Guild has two plays in rehearsal, 'Call It a Day' and 'End of Summer.' With 'Disciple' added, its six play production schedule for the season will be completed, 'If This Be Treason' being the first in (Music Box), but withdrawn after the subscription period. A seventh play, 'Love's Not So Simple,' was tried on the road but not brought in.

NEWMAN'S DATED WILL FORCES INCORPORATION

Ticket agency on Broadway that was conducted by the late Leo Newman will be reorganized and incorporated. That is ordered in the will made out in 1927, which bequeaths part of the stock to persons now deceased. Understood that Bernard H. Sandler, named as sole executor, will apply to the surrogate for permission to re-allocate the stock in light of the peculiar situation.

Newman's late wife was down for 49%. Broker's name was Oppenheimer, but he changed it to Newman on the occasion of his mother's second marriage. Morris Oppenheimer, a brother, and Bob Behm, former employee, also both deceased, were to get 5% each.

Philip Guyran, active head of the business, is down for 24%. Several additional employees were named to get 5% provided they were still in Newman's employ at the time of death.

Mary Young to Coast

Boston, Jan. .

Mary Young is taking her play 'Katy Did, So What?' to the Coast to angle for its production in Los Angeles and Hollywood and will fill an engagement at the Pasadena Community Theatre while there.

Around May 1 Miss Young plans to open a Hub school of dramatics and later line up a summer theatre for John Craig Productions.

B'WAY GROSSES STILL CLIMBING

Straight Plays Now Outshine Musicals—Best Holiday Business in Years—'Victoria' $28,500, 'Boy-Girl' $26,500, 'Lady' $24,500, 'End' $21,000, 'Pride' $20,000

'JUMBO' $88,000

Vastly improved legit business on Broadway was firmly verified during New Year's week, when several sock grosses were recorded. It is a complete reversal of form over last season.

Straight plays rather than musicals got most of the gravy, which is another strong indication of the trend theatreward. During Christmas week four non-musicals hung up new highs, while last week, with one new hit added, went on to even bigger coin.

Six straight shows figured in the clean-up. Five shows topped $20,000, one approximating $25,000. Last season had its hits, too, but only one got $20,000 (Katharine Cornell in 'Juliet').

The high scoring leaders: 'Victoria Regina' (Helen Hayes) in its first full week got $28,000 at the Broadhurst (one extra performance, that of New Year's eve, usually dropped because of a broadcast); 'Boy Meets Girl,' $26,500 (three extra matinees); 'The First Lady,' $24,500 (one extra matinee); 'Dead End,' $21,000 (one extra); 'Pride and Prejudice,' over $20,000; 'Taming of the Shrew,' virtual capacity at $17,000. All lifted prices for the eve performance.

There was a distinct falling off on New Year's and the night following, but the last two days of the week returned to the pace. Despite the drop, the hits were virtually unscathed because of advance sales. Ticket brokers were stuck, but that did not affect the box-office statements, specs taking it on the chin.

'Jumbo,' of course, was far ahead in the musical van, the gross being the largest on Broadway since the old days of Hipp specs. Takings were quoted at $88,000, that including the house end of concession money and other income sources.

'Jubilee' was best among the regular musical shows, getting $35,500 in eight times with a lifted New Year's eve scale. 'At Home Abroad' got around $34,000 with the eve biz a strong factor. 'Porgy and Bess' got little benefit from the holiday going.

Other than 'Regina,' the new shows do not line up as likely clicks. 'Scandals' registered $32,000 at the New Amsterdam with the holiday counting ($8.80 top) but could have drawn considerable more. 'Tapa y la Gray,' short, about $6,000; 'Hell Freezes Over,' hardly $4,000 at the Ritz; 'Tomorrow's a Holiday' taken off after one week at the Golden. Second week of

BARRYMORE TOUR FOLDS

Was Out 14 Weeks—Actress' Injury a Factor

Baltimore, Jan. 7.

Road tour of Ethel Barrymore in 'Constant Wife' closed here at the Indle Auditorium last Sat. (4). Show was operated by Steve Cochrane, manager of the National, Washington, D. C., legit house. Troupe was out 14 weeks.

Aside from the fact that a great deal of the one-nite and split-week time east of the Mississippi had already been played, and no immediate bookings loomed as available, another factor prompting the show's fold was a leg injury incurred by Miss Barrymore in Detroit the week before coming into Balto. During the engagement here she limped painfully.

Heller Suspended from Council For 10 Weeks; Van Dekker Cleared

Guarantee

Chicago, Jan. .

After reading a script of 'The Children's Hour' sent on by Herman Shumlin for inspection by city officials, Mayor Kelly, through the city's law office, has asked the producer for a sworn assurance that, if the play be permitted in Chicago, the text spoken will differ in no respect from the copy examined. As yet no reply has been received from Shumlin.

Mayor fears that the producer might switch to the okayed dialog only when presence in the audience of sleuths or reformers is suspected.

HOLIDAY NICKS HURT BROKERS

Despite the splendid grosses recorded by legit leaders on Broadway last week, which was punctuated by New Year's, ticket brokers declared they were badly hooked on the holiday and the following night, Thursday (2). Although the 'eve biz' was a bonrmally big, agency people insisted that they could not recoup on the week's final two days.

Both Christmas and New Year's eves fell on Wednesday, and in each case business dipped sharply, with the result that the agencies found themselves overboard on tickets bought outright. Box office statements for the hits showed capacity for performances that had empty seats—those tickets were bought and paid for by brokers.

Result was that on Wednesday night and Thursday the agencies dumped into cut-rates at about one-third the cost of ducats. Every attraction on the street could be had at bargain prices and Leblang's did its best trade in a long time. Some agencies sent clerks to the sidewalks near the theatres. Hippodrome ('Jumbo') was the most populous hunting ground on the bad nights, with the ticket people harried by staff and police.

153-SIDE PART

Irish Actor Learns Extra Long Script Enroute to N. Y.

One of the longest parts on record is the leading role in Liam O'Flaherty's 'The Puritan,' which Chester Erskin is due to present at the reconditioned Belmont theatre, N. Y., on Jan. 20. Part calls for 153 sides.

Denis O'Dea of the Abbey Players, Dublin, who arrived here last week to play the lead, is said to have mastered the script on the way across.

Anything over 100 sides is considered a long part, generally. One of the wordiest in modern times was the district attorney in 'The Trial of Mary Dugan,' part having 120 sides. Average leading part runs from 50 to 60 sides.

'De Lawd' a Prof

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 7.

Charles Winter-Wood, the last 'de Lawd' of 'Green Pastures' as a legit, has been appointed dramatic coach at Bennet College for Negroes, Greensboro. He took up his new duties Jan. 1.

In 1930 Professor Winter-Wood was called from Tuskegee Institute to act as understudy for the late Richard B. Harrison. After five years of not missing a performance, Harrison died suddenly and Winter-Wood took over. Since the play closed he has been lecturing on the religious element in drama.

the display of fisticuffs which almost became a free-for-all fight at Equity's quarterly meeting Dec. 20, was the suspension from the council of George Heller last week. He will not be allowed to attend council meetings for 10 weeks, although his standing as a member is not impaired. It was the first time since Equity was formed that charges were preferred against a councillor.

Heller, while addressing the meeting, was heckled by Lawrence O'Sullivan. Councillor suddenly jumped off the speaker's platform and made a flying tackle at O'Sullivan. Cooler heads separated the combatants before any damage was done, but other encounters sprung up all over the floor and the session ended in an uproar.

It was contended that the heckler hurled an oath at Heller which angered him so much that he sprang for O'Sullivan, a much larger man. There was no evidence, however, that O'Sullivan actually uttered the oath, with a racial prefix claimed to have been included. Council deemed Heller's conduct out of order, saying he should have appealed to the chair for protection.

Charges were also made against Albert van Dekker, also of the council. It was claimed that he walked to the edge of the platform when the rumpus started and said he'd 'take care of O'Sullivan' personally. These charges were not sustained.

Both actors are members of the Actors Forum, militant minority within Equity.

L. A. Purist Cops Snap Padlock on Jim Timony Show

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Police closed Jim Timony's show 'Ladies by Request,' at the Hollytown theatre Dec. 30, after a 27-day run, and then successfully fought off attempts by the producer's attorneys to obtain a court writ to reopen. Timony is undecided whether he will take the play to New York or not.

Producer and 14 members of the cast are due to appear for trial Jan. 16 on reported charges of conducting an indecent show. Lawyers tried twice to get a restraining order against the cops, and were skeded to make another effort yesterday (Mon.) by amending their original petition for the writ.

Solly Ward of 'Waltz' Mussed Up in Collish

Chicago, Jan. 7.

With two ribs busted, bandaged, and braced, Solly Ward, 'Great Waltz' comic, is not permitting the surgeons to interfere with his record of not having missed a show since New York premiere of the show.

Ward, fearing lateness for performance last week, urged the taxi driver to rush. river rushed until stopped in the cross street collision by another rusher.

Richardson Goes Home

Ralph Richardson, who came from London to appear with Katharine Cornell in 'Romeo and Juliet,' sails back today (8). He will produce and act in 'Bees on the Boatdeck,' by J. B. Priestly there.

It will be his first venture as an actor-manager.

Inside Stuff—Legit

Included in a program of three one-acters prepared as a WPA 'project' in Chicago is—or was—a piece named 'Salvation,' turned over to the sub-supervisor of 'cultural activities' by one of the actors, Lewis Ottway, as 'a forgotten piece by Eugene O'Neill, written before he became famous.' Script is said by Ottway to be 'one of the many little things that centered attention on the Wharf Theatre in Provincetown.'

But the supervisor mentioned the play to a writer known to be an authority on O'Neill's early efforts. He was told that none of that author's plays had been 'forgotten,' that typed or printed copies of all were available and that none was called 'Salvation.' Asking for an outline of the story, the authority on O'Neill was amused to be regaled with that of 'Lead, Kindly Light!' the first stage work of Jack Lait in which Frank Craven topped the cast.

Ottway explained that he obtained th a deceased fellow-actor.

In 'Victoria Regina,' at the Broadhurst, N. Y., Helen Hayes makes her face rounded to simulate that of the British Queen Victoria in her later years. The effect is attained with the aid of dental accessories.

Miss Hayes devoted mornings before rehearsal in practicing with the gadgets so that they would not impede her speech.

Instead of separate cards calling attention to the exceptionally early start of the premiere of 'Victoria Regina,' first night tickets were especially made wider and the announcement carried on the margin in red ink.

Curtain time was advertised for 8 o'clock sharp, at which time they could have hunted deer in the house. However, by 8:15 the lower floor was fairly well filled. After the curtain rose people were seated until Helen Hayes appeared. First night tickets were $5.50 top, regular nightly performances being $3.30.

Annually Brock Pemberton contributes an article on the legit theatre for the New York Times for which he was formerly dramatic editor. His recent yarn touched on the matter of Equity's rehearsal pay requirements, opinion being such outlays do not constitute a hardship on producers. Manager figures that had the rule been effective last season he would have saved $6,000 on the year in salaries, meaning he could have sliced the payroll of 'Personal Appearance' that much.

While rehearsal pay may not have materially reduced straight play production as yet, it is claimed the added cost is one pertinent reason why there have been fewer musicals on Broadway than listed when production plans were outlined last summer.

Death of Charles McClintock in New York marked the passing of one of the best known advance agents, James Reilly, of Paramount's Frohman office arranged for McClintock's hospitalization and other friends who came to his aid included Frank Hagan, Washington attorney; John Oliver LaGorce, president of the National Geographic Society; George Marshall, sportsman; Frank P. Morse, stock broker; George Moriority, baseball umpire; Francis Oulmet, former amateur golf champ, and Joseph Conway, sporting goods man of Boston.

McClintock was given three blood transfusions, two from Beauvais Fox, fellow publicist, and Al Duffy, of Columbia Pictures.

Dr. Otto Ludwig Preminger, of Vienna, although but 29, is one of Europe's leading stage directors. His first legit assignment over here was the staging of 'Libel,' which premiered at the Henry Miller theatre, N. Y., last week. Preminger speaks little English and used an interpreter. He is under contract to direct films for 20th Century.

Cast of play is virtually all British. Exception is Arthur Vinton, Ernest Lawford was born in Australia but is a naturalized American citizen.

Washington Square Players, with a repertory of seven Shakespearean plays presented at the Washington Place branch of New York University, is not the semi-pro group which formerly specialized in playlets. It is purely an amateur group composed of students and graduates of the dramatic school headed by Professor Randolph Somerville. Latter directs the presentations.

Members of the cast of 'Tobacco Road,' Forrest, N. Y., have been solicited to purchase land along the real tobacco road, the locale of Erskine Caldwell's novel upon which the play is based. Road is eight miles west of Augusta, Georgia's winter resort. Agent states the land for sale is a 690-acre undeveloped tract and he has an idea an actor's colony might be spotted there.

Two radio plugs for New York legit shows were aired last week, one cuffo and the other for cash. Billy Rose was willingly impressed into Freddie Rich's 'Penthouse' air program Sunday (Dec. 29), and in Philadelphia Max Gendel, in advance of Max Gordon's 'Ethan Frome' which opened at the Garrick Monday (6), bought enough time for 100 words nightly for five nights on WCAU.

Boxoffice staff of the New Amsterdam, N. Y., which theatre relighted with 'Scandals' for the first time this season, is manned by four men—George Morely, Norman Stein, Mike Donovan and Robert McCall.

During the show's long try-out period George White rented out of town theatres for the revue's showings, Donovan being the treasurer. McCall recently left the Belasco b.o.

Preferred stock of 'Dead End,' Belasco, N. Y., has been retired. Certificates were held by persons who backed the show. They got their money back before any dividends were declared.

Understood the production cost slightly more than $20,000, about one-third going for the setting. Drama is one of the best money getters on Broadway.

In sitting in on the board of the Theatre Guild, Alfred Lunt has injected some humor in the deliberations. Recently ways and means of reducing operating costs of 'Taming of the Shrew' were being discussed. Lunt stated that at least $1,500 weekly was being regularly saved on the Shakespearean piece.

Asked what that meant, he pointed out that no royalties are payable.

Billy Rose's invitation to out-of-town dramatic critics for a 'Jumbo' once-over in New York, all expenses paid, had the other legit managements scurrying to offer tickets for their own hit attractions.

In many instances this necessitated buying back from the brokerages to accommodate the visiting reviewers who generally wanted to see the smash shows.

Cornell Wilde recently hoaxed Judith Anderson and Ina Claire into believing him a Hungarian actor. Youthful player, familiar with five tongues, played the role into promises of assistance, until purposely lapsing into English for the subsequent expose.

Stars both enjoyed the laugh on themselves.

William Harris, Jr., son of the late producer, was reported financially interested in Robert Milton's production of 'The Season Changes.' Show closed after one week.

Something new in property manipulation for Eternal spectacle due at Manhattan Opera House, cenery and props will be moved by motorized cr ake mechanized shifting a Tremendous weight and number necessity.

Harpo Marx and Beatrice Kaufman each have 10% of 'Hell Freezes Over' which George Kondolf presents at Ritz, N. Y. Il male drama was tried out last summer at White Plains, N. Y.

Marx and Mrs. (George S.) Kaufman say they intend producing plays on their own, if they can find the right scripts.

Christmas eve the cast of 'Night of Jan. 16' summoned the producer, A. H. Woods, back stage at the Ambassador, N. Y., and regaled him with a travesty on the court room melodrama.

FIVE MORE EXIT

Five attractions were gated from Broadway's list last Saturday, none being in the hit class, but most having had better than average engagements. 'Remember the Day' departed from the National after 15 weeks of moderate takings, averaging $7,500 for the early months.

'REMEMBER THE DAY'

Opened Sept. 25, 1935. Most of the first-stringers were absent from this premiere, but Atkinson (Times) said it told 'a moving, truthful and disarming story about an adolescent boy's bewilderment and unhappiness in an adult world.' Gabriel (American) said it 'can be recommended to all troubled parents.'

Variety (Ibee) said: 'Should be cinch matinee draw and the engagement successful.'

'Blind Alley,' which played four theatres at various times during its 15-week engagement, closed at the Morosco. It averaged $5,000 weekly, but a profit was claimed.

'BLIND ALLEY'

Opened Sept. 24, 1935. Critics received this more or less favorably, and there were no pronounced pans. Anderson deemed it the 'first completely fascinating play of the new season.'

Variety (Kauf) said: 'Should eke out at least a moderate run.'

'Moon Over Mulberry Street' stopped at the 44th Street after sticking around 13 weeks. It also was a low grosser, rated around $4,000 weekly and ended in the red.

'MOON OVER MULBERRY STREET'

Opened Sept. 4, 1935. Critics lambasted this comedy of New York's Little Italy. Atkinson (Times) declared, 'If the incipient season turns up nothing inferior we may thank the gods for being kind.' Brown (Post) borrowed Lockridge's (Sun) expression, 'It opened like a yawn.'

Variety (Kauf) said: 'Won't stand a chance.'

'Squaring the Circle' stopped at the 48th Street after playing 13 weeks in three different theatres. It, too, was a cut-rater, average $4,000 or slightly more. Geared to operate at that pace, however.

'SQUARING THE CIRCLE'

Opened Oct. 3, 1935. First-stringers' opinions were mixed, though the majority thumbed the farce. Gabriel (American) termed Katayev's play 'a pretty tiresome oddity, a Zeppelin in a china closet.' Hammond (Tribune), however, called it's fun 'large and obstreperous.'

Variety (Kauf) said: 'It is antiquated.'

'Tomorrow's a Holiday' was withdrawn from the Golden Saturday after playing one week.

'TOMORROW'S A HOLIDAY'

Opened Dec. 30, 1935. Opinions on this one were mainly against, though kindly, with only two affirmative votes among the first-stringers. Gabriel (American) said, 'It never manages to work up to much genuine excitement.'

Garland (Telegram) sai , 'Provides a thoroughly entertai ing evening.'

MASS. REP PROPOSES CLEANUP FOR LEGIT

Boston, Jan. 7.

Representative Thomas A. Dorgan of Massachusetts, a former bus driver, aims to 'protect the legitimate stage' via his recently filed bill to eliminate any 'suggestion of homosexuality or incest.' Bill was filed on heels of banning 'Children's Hour' in this city by city officials.

'Subversive propaganda' clause is aimed to take care of red and pink plays. The representative is working to encourage similar legislation in other states. He believes that legit 'has failed to profit by the experiences of the movies' (Legion of Decency).

Double Up on Art Directors' Acad Vote

Hollywood, Jan.

Rules for nominating art directors for Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences award have been revised for next selections.

Instead of nominating one fil directors will be asked to name one from their studio and another from a different lot. Three productions receiving greatest number of votes will be presented to general Academy membership.

Huston's 'Dodsworth' Give LA. Biltmore Late Opening

Los Angeles, Jan. 7.

Walter Huston in 'Dodsworth' opens the Biltmore legit season on Feb. 3.

'Old Maid,' with Judith Anderson and Helen Menken are due in for a two-week stanza starting Feb. 25. 'The Great Waltz' is tentative set as the third attraction.

Woodstock Little Theatre

Woodstock, N. Y., Jan. 7.

Literary-art colony here has formed the Woodstock Community Players, non-profit organization, to produce plays at Fireman's Hall. Gaston Bell is stage director.

Backstage Pilfering

Attempt is being made to check pilfering backstage at the Hippodrome, N. Y., where 'Jumbo' is housed. Paul Whiteman's band has been the principal sufferer, five imported instruments having been lost recently. Total valuation of the band loss is estimated at $1,100. Three instruments were recovered in pawn shops, but two are still missing.

Somebody discovered where the show's midget, Carl Koscisky, hid $50, and, while he was in the ring, the money was copped last Saturday (4).

Capital Relights

Washington, Jan.

National relights this week with 'Personal Appearance,' first attraction on the Capital's only legitimate stage in two weeks. Both Eva Le Gallienne and 'Sketchbook' were cancelled, leaving the house dark during the holidays when it usually cleans up.

Miss Mignonette and company, having come all way from Brooklyn, wouldn't go on when money wasn't put up before performance, as guaranteed. Customers finally were given receipts good for postponed show to be presented Feb. 21.

Biltmore on B'way, Daly's, Manhattan, Just Outside, Set as WPA Theatres

Two Broadway theatres and one close to the theatre zone are now under lease to the Works Progress Administration theatre project in New York. Managers, through the Theatre League, have withdrawn objection to the use of the mid-town houses already engaged upon agreement with regional director Elmer Rice that there shall be a deadline—40th street on the south and 53rd street on the north—for the possible leasing of other road-way spots.

The Manhattan (formerly Hammerstein's), in which one of the sub-projects known as the 'popular price theatre' will present new plays, is at 53rd street and the main stem. Only other theatres in the district which could possibly be used are the Adelphi and Cosmopolitan (at Columbus Circle). The Casino de Paree, formerly New Yorker, would probably entail too much expense to re-convert it for play useage.

Only theatre south of 40th street available is the Maxine Elliott, unlikely for WPA relief show use. Across the same street (39th) is the former Princess, due to open soon as Labor Stage, a semi-pro project sanctioned by the American Federation of Labor, with no relation to the WPA.

In addition to the Manhattan, Daly's 63rd street and the Biltmore have been leased. Latter is the only relief house directly in the Broadway sector, but it counts as an exception and will be used only for the 'living newspaper'. That show is to consist of playlets dramatized from the news events of the day under auspices of the Newspaper Guild. It is to be given six times daily, two casts working, but not during legit show hours nor on Saturdays.

Daly's will house the 'experimental theatre' which, like the pop price unit, will try out new plays, but will be more highbrow.

Chances of either of the three projects competing with legit attractions on Broadway will be determined after the relief shows open. As yet the picture house managements are not known to have objected. Admissions will be either 50c or $1 top for the stage shows and 25c for the 'living newspaper'. Manner of operating the box offices and other details are yet to be worked out. Understood that the responsibility for relief theatre receipts will be put in the hands of one individual, to be known as the collector.
